INTRODUCTION.

THE purpose of this CONCORDANCE is to make the Theological Writings of Emanuel Swedenborg more accessible in all their fulness to every reader and student of them, whether learned or unlearned.

At present no one can feel sure that he knows or can find everything that is contained in the Writings on any given subject. And even when we are sure of the existence of some passage that we desire to find, how often, having none but the existing works of reference to aid us, are we overwhelmed and deterred from making an investigation by the dreary prospect of a search through from forty to fifty volumes of compact matter! A reader's attention may also be arrested by some statement which appears to be at variance with one or more other statements he has met with elsewhere in the Writings. Yet he has frequently no means of referring back; and even if he should find the passage or passages he remembers to have read, the apparent discrepancy may after all be explicable only by reference to another passage, which forms the connecting link, but on which he cannot lay his hands, and of the very existence of which he may indeed be ignorant.

The CONCORDANCE TO SWEDENBORG now offered to the Church is the result of between thirteen and fourteen years of labour,* and claims to be exhaustive and complete. Every theological work of Swedenborg has been gone over twice, word by word. The works not published by Swedenborg himself, such as the Apocalypse Explained, the Spiritual Diary, and the Adversaria, as well as the shorter treatises, have all been included within the scope of the CONCORDANCE. So have the small treatises and fragments of a theological nature of which Swedenborg was the author, and which have recently been published in the work entitled Documents concerning Swedenborg, by Professor R. L. Tafel, M.A.

A new translation has been made of the whole of the matter in the CONCORDANCE. Unity of style and system is thus maintained throughout. In making this translation two principal objects have been kept steadily in view. The first is reverent fidelity to the original. The second is the Queen's English. In all cases, however, the articles in the CONCORDANCE have been based upon the original Latin words, so that no changes in the translation would affect the matter they contain. For example, all passages containing in the original the word coelestis have been arranged in regular and consecutive order under one heading, whether that word in the passages placed under that general head be translated celestial or heavenly. And so, on the other hand, in cases where one English word has to do duty for two or more Latin ones, as in the case of the word man, the passages have been distributed into two articles, Man-homo, and Man-vir, according to the occurrence of the two Latin words in question. Therefore, while the CONCORDANCE is all in English, it is at the same time based upon the Latin of the original Writings.

The passages of the Word quoted in the extracts consist strictly of translations from the Latin of Swedenborg. The original Hebrew and Greek of the Scriptures have not been regarded, except to determine the precise sense in which Swedenborg has used his Latin terms. It has been considered to be no part of the business of this Work to furnish any translations of passages from the Word, except those made by Swedenborg himself rendered literally into English. The English Versions of the Scriptures have therefore also been disregarded whenever they could not be used as a translation of the Latin, but they have always been preferred to any other rendering when, as a translation of the Latin of Swedenborg, they were as good as any other. In relation to passages quoted from the Word, as in relation to all the rest of the Writings, fidelity to the Latin Originals of Swedenborg has been the paramount law of translation.

At the time when the CONCORDANCE was commenced, nearly the whole of the translations of the Writings into English were too imperfect for use. This rendered a new translation necessary. Since that time, however, a number of excellent translations have appeared, some in America and others in Great Britain; and in making the clean and revised copy for the press, these new translations have been introduced, so far as could be done without interfering with the unity of the Work.

Cross references are made use of whenever necessary. The reader, for instance, who turns to the word Heavenly, will find there a reference to Celestial.

In view of this system of cross references, it has been the constant aim to give as great a variety as possible of good translations of the Latin words which form the basis of the articles. A reader might think of one such translation and not of another; but whichever he thought of, he would always find either a reference or a cross reference under that heading. Take such a word as Inescare. This word has been translated in various passages quoted in the CONCORDANCE, addicted to, saturated with, given up to, made habitual, all of which are good translations in the places where they are used. The reader, therefore, will find a reference under Addict to all the passages where Inescare occurs in the original. But if he should not happen to think of the word addict, and instead there should occur to him any one of the expressions, saturated, given up to, or habitual, on turning to the particular expression he thought of, he would find there a cross reference to Addict.

A complete Vocabulary and Index of all the Latin words that occur in the headings of the various articles will be given at the end of the Work.

The CONCORDANCE contains nearly eight thousand articles arranged in the English alphabetical order, and ranging in length from a single line to many pages.

In order to render the work of reference to the Writings themselves easy for the reader, it has been found necessary to sub-divide all the longer sections of the original works. This has been done on one uniform plan throughout. The subdivisions have been made according to the sense, and have been indicated by the figures 2, 3, 4, and so on, placed at the upper right hand corner of the reference numerals. The reference is made thus, E. 701³⁰, which means that the passage thus marked will be found in the Apocalypse Explained, No. 701, subdivision 30. No. 701 of the Apoc. Ex. fills thirteen octavo pages, and reference to it without subdivision would probably involve much wearisome and vexatious searching. In order to make these subdivisions available to all, it is intended to give a complete list of them at the end of the CONCORDANCE, so that those who wish to do so can copy them into their own volumes. The Swedenborg Society has already adopted the subdivisions in the new translation of The Intercourse of the Soul and the Body, and it is hoped that they will be gradually introduced into the new editions of the Writings.

Several of the posthumous works of Swedenborg have never been published in English; as De Domino, De Athanasii Symbolo, De Ultimo Judicio, De Verbo, De Conjugio. The paragraphs of these works were either not numbered in a regular manner, or were not numbered at all, by Swedenborg; nor were they numbered by Dr Immanuel Tafel in his editions. It was therefore necessary to number the paragraphs of these works for the sake of reference in the CONCORDANCE. It is hoped that all these important works may soon be published in English, and that the numbering of the paragraphs made for the CONCORDANCE may be introduced, bracketed, into them. The Doctrine of Charity stands in a similar category. This Work has indeed been translated, in both America and England, but in both cases the paragraphs have been numbered in an irregular manner, according to the judgment of the translators. These numberings, therefore, neither agree with the actual paragraphs of the original, nor with each other. In these circumstances it has seemed best to number this work on the same system as the other unnumbered posthumous works; and, at the same time, to furnish a Key between all these numberings of the Doctrine of Charity, which will be found at the end of each volume of the CONCORDANCE.

The arrangement of the passages under one heading is consecutive, beginning with the Arcana Cœlestia, and running in chronological order through all the works quoted. As a general rule, each article in the CONCORDANCE is separated into two divisions, the first of which contains all quotations from the works published by Swedenborg himself, and the second, quotations from the works which have been published from the MSS. since the decease of Swedenborg. Each division is arranged in chronological order. The article Swedenborg, however, for obvious reasons, is arranged in absolute chronological order throughout, without respect to the fact of the quotations being from works that were published by Swedenborg himself, or otherwise. The inducement has been great to arrange all the articles in this order; but the consideration of the importance of the fact that Swedenborg did not himself publish certain of his works, has been held sufficient to entitle the works which were published by him to precedence of quotation in all cases except the one just referred to.

Capital Letters have been used at the beginning of words to mark a distinction in the sense. Thus, when the word 'Celestial' is used as a substantive in the singular, it is always so distinguished. In this way, 'the Celestial (principle)' is discriminated from 'the celestial (persons).' So with all other Latin neuter adjectives used as substantives, except those of which English equivalents have already become naturalized in our vernacular. By the use of a capital initial also, 'Heaven,' the abode of the Angels, is distinguished from 'heaven,' the sky; and 'Spirit,' a man after death, from 'spirit,' a man's mind. These two instances carry with them the correlatives 'Hell,' and 'Angel,' and render it necessary, on the ground of consistency, to distinguish these also with initial capitals. Other instances of the same kind will be easily understood. It may be useful, however, to explain a few instances of a different kind. When the word 'Own' stands for the Latin word proprius, it is printed with a capital in order to indicate that fact. A very important case is that of the word 'Knowledge,' which, thus printed, stands for cognitio; whereas, without the capital, it stands for scientia. A similar instance to this is 'Gentiles,' which, with the capital, is the representative of Gentiles; but without it, of gentes. 'Earth,' again, with the capital, indicates tellus; without it, terra. Finally, to this class belongs 'Power,' which, when printed with the capital, stands for potestas; but, when printed without it, for potentia.

While this CONCORDANCE claims to be complete, the fact must not be overlooked that it is a selection. A Concordance to Swedenborg cannot be anything more than that. In the first place, the words themselves have to be selected. It is evident that, in such a work, regular references to conjunctions, prepositions, and pronouns would be worse than useless. Yet, in some instances, references to even these classes of words are useful and necessary. While, for example, it would be absurd to refer regularly to the conjunction 'and,' there are still a few cases in which this word demands a reference; and if the reader will turn to the article And, he will find there five references which could not have been omitted from the Work. Out of tens of thousands of passages in which the word 'and' occurs, these five had to be selected. This is an extreme case, but the same rule is of universal application. The most important article in the CONCORDANCE is Lord; but even this word cannot be referred to in every instance. To do that, and give the extracts, would be to make the article Lord fill a volume; while to give the references without the extracts, would be to produce whole pages of mere figures that would be of no practical use to anyone. Every passage, therefore, nay, every word, has had to pass under judgment; and each reference or extract in the Work has had to be considered individually. This was inevitable, unless the CONCORDANCE were to fill forty volumes instead of four. The disadvantage is, that the CONCORDANCE, being the result of the judgment of one man, cannot be expected to satisfy the judgment of every other man; but the Compiler has always worked on this principle: to insert not only those references which he himself considered to be of consequence, but also to insert those which he thought it possible for anyone else to consider of consequence. In doubtful cases, the rule has been to give the reference. Still, with the most patient care, it cannot but be that in such a work many imperfections must exist. Omissions are inevitable. It is therefore intended to form an APPENDIX of any such omissions as may be discovered, and to print it at the end of the fourth volume; and all friends of the Work, who may notice anything of the kind, are kindly requested to make note of the same, and to forward all their notes to the Compiler in time for insertion in the Appendix.

While, however, it seems fair and necessary to say as much as this in regard to the inevitable imperfection of the Work, an imperfection which is a necessary characteristic of all human productions, it is by no means intended to convey the impression that the CONCORDANCE is, after all, an incomplete and unsatisfactory work of reference. The Work aims at being really complete, without being at the same time overloaded with matter which would be of no practical use to anyone. To make perfectly clear what is meant by useless matter, let us take the most familiar and best known passage in the Writings: 'All religion has relation to life, and the life of religion is to do good.' This passage contains twelve different words; but out of these twelve, only four are referred to in the CONCORDANCE. These are 'religion,' 'life,' and the words 'do good,' which are treated under one heading. The other eight words are not referred to at all. It could serve no useful purpose to refer to the word 'all' in this passage; the word 'relation,' although in itself an important word, does not occur in the original, being an invention of the translators; and the remaining words in the passage are mere particles. In a Concordance to the Word even particles ought to be referred to, because in that verbally inspired Work every jot and tittle are Divine. But that is not the case with the Writings. A mere mechanical construction of a Swedenborg Concordance would therefore result in the production of a work, which, from its very inception, would be doomed to be superseded. Probably three quarters of it would be absolutely useless, and would therefore, by their very presence, tend to defeat the purpose of the Work.

The paramount consideration which confronts anyone who undertakes a Work like this, remains, therefore, precisely that which ought to be the paramount consideration in everything: the consideration of use. 'What use can it be to insert this reference?' is the question which must be incessantly asked. Use must be the judge and the jury. In some cases, however, it may be of use to insert references which are intrinsically worthless, because they may be useful to the linguists, the critics, the translators of the New Church. In such cases, the word in question may occur only a very few times in all the Writings. It is clear, therefore, that every one of these occurrences must be faithfully recorded. Whereas, should a word of this order be of very frequent occurrence, being in itself a word of no significance in relation to its sense or meaning, it is sufficient to give a few specimens of its occurrence selected from various parts of the Writings.

Parallel with the consideration of use, and involved in it, is the consideration of honesty. Any dereliction in this respect would be simply infamous. The Works to which the CONCORDANCE is a humble handmaid are really Works of the Lord written through Swedenborg, as Swedenborg himself has said. Every statement in them is therefore of the highest consequence, and no one ought to be defrauded of access to it. No matter against whose opinions it may militate, the statement must be faithfully recorded. Even should one statement seem to contradict another, still, the dominant consideration must be perfect honesty. There is no use apart from this. And the same rule must apply also to those statements, so numerous in the Writings, which are likely to give offence by their plain outspokenness upon subjects which are usually avoided in works intended for general circulation. If it has pleased the Lord to speak to us on these subjects, that is a sufficient reason for making reference to everything He has been pleased to say, or to cause to be said. In this CONCORDANCE therefore nothing has been shirked, of any kind; nothing has been intentionally kept back. In a few cases the quotations have been made in the original Latin, but, either in the one language or the other, everything has been recorded.

The words which are to be referred to having been selected, there still remains to be made the selection of the quotations themselves. In a Concordance to the Word the making of this selection is easy, because the immediate context is all that is required. Very different, however, is the case with a Swedenborg Concordance. In some instances the immediate context is indeed all that is required, but this is far from being the general rule. What is required is the immediate sense. It is the ideas, not the mere words, which are of consequence. This is especially the case with the longer articles. As an example of this, take the article Angel, in which the word 'Angel' is referred to 1916 times. But if this article were constructed by means of an accumulation of short quotations such as are given in a Biblical Concordance, it would be of comparatively little use. The reader would have to refer to the Original Works so frequently that the use of the CONCORDANCE in saving time and labour would be to a great extent destroyed. It would take him many days to go through this single article. If he were studying the subject of the Angels, he would have to go through the Writings and make the extracts which are already made for him in this CONCORDANCE; whereas, with the help of the Work as it stands, he will be spared the impossible part of this labour. The extracts are sufficiently long and complete to indicate to him the nature of the statements in each case, and he will therefore only have to supplement the materials thus placed ready to his hand, by actual reference to those portions of the Writings which he sees from the CONCORDANCE to be necessary for his purpose. This has been the consideration kept in view during the making of the extracts. To quote all that would be useful, and no more, has been the guiding principle.

As a general rule, the extracts thus made for the CONCORDANCE have been given in Swedenborg's own words, translated into English, and have not been condensed by the use of any other words. In some places, labour and space could indeed have been saved by condensation; but any advantage thus gained would have been more than counterbalanced by the elements of uncertainty and untrustworthiness which would necessarily have been introduced. Where, however, the extract, if made in the very words of Swedenborg, would be extremely long, and at the same time would be of very little use in relation to the subject of the article, a brief description of what Swedenborg says has been given, but all such matter has been enclosed within curved brackets.

The following is a complete list of the works of Swedenborg referred to in the CONCORDANCE, including their Latin titles, and the dates of their composition. Reference to this list will enable the reader to place the extracts given in the second division of the Concordance articles in their right position relatively to those given in the first division.

1745. 'History of the Creation.' Historia Creationis a Mose tradita. The first treatise written by Swedenborg after the full opening of his spiritual sight, which took place in the middle of April, 1745. This work has never been translated, but it will be found in the original Latin at the beginning of the 'Adversaria,' in which work it occupies the first twenty-five pages.

1745 and 1746. 'Adversaria.' Explicatio in Verbum Historicum Veteris Testamenti. There are three MS. volumes of this work, in each of which the paragraphs are numbered independently, that is to say, each volume commences with the numeral 1. There are therefore three separate series of numbers in the 'Adversaria,' which have been indicated in the CONCORDANCE by the figures 1, 2, 3, prefixed to the ordinary numerals.

1746 and 1747. 'Adversaria.' Esajas et Jeremias explicati. As this work was printed by Dr Im. Tafel as 'Adversaria, Part iv.,' it is distinguished in the CONCORDANCE by the figure 4 prefixed to the ordinary numerals. Swedenborg did not number the paragraphs of this MS., but it is not very frequently quoted in the CONCORDANCE, and the pages of the Latin edition are therefore given in place of the usual paragraph numbers, in the same way as is done in the 'Index Général' of Le Boys des Guays.

1747 to 1765. 'Spiritual Diary.' The title given by Swedenborg is Memorabilia.

1747 to 1758. 'Arcana Coelestia.' Arcana Coelestia quae in Scriptura Sacra seu Verbo Domini sunt, detecta.

1750 and 1751. 'Diarium Minus.' Not translated. This work is really a portion of the 'Spiritual Diary.' During Swedenborg's journey to Sweden in 1750, he seems to have kept the record of his spiritual experiences in a little pocket volume which was published by Dr Im. Tafel under the name of 'Diarium Minus;' this little pocket volume he used until the close of November, 1751.* While using this little volume, Swedenborg suspended the use of the larger one, and when he returned to it, he continued the numbering of the paragraphs therein just as if he had never written the little volume at all. The consequence is that this little work has been crowded out of its right place. It really comes in after No. 4544 of the 'Spiritual Diary,' as is shown by the fact that the little volume commences with the number 4545, and it is called 'Diarium Minus' merely because it happens to have been written in a smaller book than the rest of the work.

1757 and 1758. 'Heaven and Hell.' De Coelo et ejus Mirabilibus, et de Inferno, ex auditis et visis.

1757 and 1758. 'On the White Horse.' De Equo Albo, de quo in

* 'Documents:' Vol. 2, p. 978; from which work the above list is chiefly taken.

Apocalypsi, Cap. xix. ; et dein de Verbo et ejus sensus spirituali seu interno, ex Arcanis Coelestibus.

1757 and 1758. 'On the New Jerusalem and its Heavenly Doctrine.' De Nova Hierosolyma et ejus Doctrina Coelesti: ex auditis e Coelo.

1756 and 1758. 'The Earths in the Universe.' De Telluribus in Mundo nostro Solari, quae vocantur Planetæ: et de Telluribus in Coelo Astrifero: deque illarum Incolis; tum de Spiritibus et Angelis ibi; ex auditis et visis.

1757 and 1758. 'The Last Judgment, and the Destruction of Babylon.' De Ultimo Judicio, et de Babylonia Destructa: ita quod omnia, quae in Apocalypsi praedicta sunt, hodie impleta sunt: ex auditis et visis.

1757 to 1759. 'The Apocalypse Explained.' Apocalypsis Explicata secundum sensum spiritualem, ubi revelantur Arcana, quae ibi praedicta, et hactenus recondita fuerunt.

1759. 'De Athanasii Symbolo.' Not now accessible in English.* The work printed in English under the title of 'The Athanasian Creed' is a mere collection of extracts from the 'Apocalypse Explained,' where it will all be found, commencing in No. 1091. Being really a part of the 'Apocalypse Explained,' it is of course referred to as such in the CONCORDANCE.

1759 and 1760. 'Summary Exposition of the Prophets and Psalms.' No title given by Swedenborg.

1760. 'De Ultimo Judicio.' Not translated.* Referred to in the CONCORDANCE as J. (Post.) The short treatise 'De Mundo Spirituali' has been numbered for the CONCORDANCE consecutively with the 'De Ultimo Judicio,' in the same way as was done by Swedenborg with the 'Continuation concerning the Spiritual World,' which he published as a continuation of the work entitled 'Continuation concerning the Last Judgment.'

1761 to 1763. 'The Doctrine of the New Jerusalem respecting the Lord.' Doctrina Novae Hierosolymae de Domino.

1763. 'A Continuation concerning the Last Judgment.' Continuatio de Ultimo Judicio: et de Mundo Spirituali.

* 'De Ath. Sym.' and 'De Dom.' are now being translated and published in America; while 'De Ult. Jud.' and 'De Verbo' were really translated eight years ago by Dr R. L. Tafel, but the translation has not yet been published.

1762 and 1763. 'On the Divine Love.' (Posthumous.) De Divino Amore.

1763. 'On the Divine Wisdom.' (Posthumous.) De Divina Sapientia.

1763. 'Angelic Wisdom concerning the Divine Love and concerning the Divine Wisdom.' Sapientia Angelica de Divino Amore et de Divina Sapientia.

1763 and 1764. 'Angelic Wisdom concerning the Divine Providence.' Sapientia Angelica de Divina Providentia.

1764. 'The Doctrine of Charity.' De Charitate.

1764 to 1766. 'The Apocalypse Revealed.' Apocalypsis Revelata, in qua deteguntur Arcana quae ibi praedicta sunt, et hactenus recondita latuerunt.

1766. 'Five Memorable Relations.' No Latin Title. These Relations will be found in the original Latin printed by Dr Im. Tafel at the end of his edition of the 'De Ultimo Judicio' (Post.), where they occupy pp. 124 to 133.

1766. 'Conversation with Angels.' Colloquia cum Angelis. Not translated; but will be found immediately after the preceding 'Five Memorable Relations' at the end of the 'De Ultimo Judicio.'

1767. 'De Conjugio.' Not translated; but printed in the Latin by Dr Im. Tafel.

1767 and 1768. 'Conjugal Love.' Delitiae Sapientiae de Amore Conjugiali; post quas sequuntur Voluptates Insaniae de Amore Scortatorio, ab Emanuele Swedenborg, Sueco.

1768. 'De Justificatione; Colloquia cum Calvino et 50 ejus Asseclis de Trinitate, de Persona Christi, et de Justificatione.' Not translated; but published in the original by Dr Im. Tafel.

1768 and 1769. 'Brief Exposition of the Doctrine of the New Church.' Summaria Expositio Doctrinae Novae Ecclesiae, quae per Novam Hierosolyman in Apocalypsi intelligitur, ab Emanuele Swedenborg, Sueco.

1769. 'The Intercourse of the Soul and the Body.' De Commercio Animae et Corporis, quod creditur fieri vel per Influxum physicum, vel per Influxum spirituales, vel per Harmoniam praestabilitam, ab Emanuele Swedenborg.

1769. 'Letter to Hartley.'

1769. 'Nine Questions.' Swedenborg's replies to the nine questions addressed to him by the Rev. Thomas Hartley. Usually printed at the end of the 'Doctrine of the Lord.'

1769. 'Canons of the New Church.' Canones Novae Ecclesiae seu Integrae Theologiae Novae Ecclesiae. As the original MS. of this work is lost, it is doubtful whether this title was given to it by Swedenborg.

1769 to 1771. 'The True Christian Religion.' Vera Christiana Religio, continens Universam Theologiam Novae Ecclesiae a Domino apud Danielelem Cap. vii. 13, 14, et in Apocalypsi Cap. xxi. 1, 2, praedictae, ab Emanuele Swedenborg, Domini Jesu Christi servo.

1771. 'An Ecclesiastical History of the New Church.' Historia Ecclesiastica Novae Ecclesiae. This little sketch constitutes Document 301 in the 'Documents concerning Swedenborg.'

1771. 'Invitation to the New Church.' Invitatio ad Novam Ecclesiam. Published in the original by Dr Im. Tafel, at pp. 142–160 of the 'Appendix' to the Diarium Spirituale; and since republished in America. Constitutes Section i. of the work entitled 'The Consummation of the Age; the Lord's Second Coming; and the New Church,' just published in London.

1771. 'Abominatio Desolationis.' This document occupies pp. 137–142 of the 'Appendix' to the Diarium Spirituale; and constitutes Section ii. of 'The Consummation of the Age.'

1771. 'Summary of the Coronis.' This document fills pp. 163–169 of Dr Im. Tafel's 'Appendix,' and is also printed at the beginning of the new American edition of the 'Coronis.' In English, it constitutes Section iii. of 'The Consummation of the Age;' but it is not treated in the CONCORDANCE as a separate work from the 'Coronis' itself, being distinguished by Roman numerals; thus, Coro. i, ii, iii, and so on.

1771. 'The Coronis.' Coronis, seu Appendix ad Ver. Christ. Religionem.

It is due to one of the most faithful and laborious workers in the New Church to say that the completeness of the CONCORDANCE has been considerably increased by means of the admirable Index Rerum to the Apocalypsis Explicata, recently issued by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, and the Compiler of which is Dr Samuel H. Worcester.

Many others have contributed either directly or indirectly to the perfection of the Work, and among these it is impossible to pass over without special mention the name of the Rev. Dr R. L. Tafel, to whom, in many ways, the CONCORDANCE owes a heavy debt of gratitude. The late Mr Frederic Pitman also, during the last few months of his life on earth, rendered invaluable assistance in connection with the seeing of the Work through the press. Lastly, the Committee of the Swedenborg Society, of London, have nobly undertaken the publication, and have assisted and supported the Work in every possible way; while the General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America have manifested the kind interest taken in the Work in that country by appointing a Committee to give the most practical aid in their power towards the successful completion of the CONCORDANCE.

CONCORDANCE TO SWEDENBORG.

A. The letter A, sounded as in father.

H. 241². (Words of the celestial class in the Hebrew Word are characterized by the vowels U (oo) and O, and to some extent by A.)

S. 90². The vowels A, O, and U (oo) are used in the third Heaven because they give a full sound. T.278.

A. 2826¹¹. 'The house of Aaron'=good of love. 9806³. Ill. E.696¹⁹.

3325⁹. The Levites were given to Aaron because Aaron =the Lord as to the priesthood; that is, as to Divine Love. 3858⁹. —¹¹. 5307².

4311⁴. Aaron at heart worshipped an Egyptian idol. 9806⁶. 10401.

6940. 'Aaron'=the law Divine as to truth; 'Moses,' as to good.

7053. 'And Jehovah said to Aaron'=the truth of doctrine, and perception therein from the Divine.

7058. 'And Moses told—indicavit—Aaron'=influx of truth that proceeds immediately from the Lord's Divine into truth that proceeds mediately.

7063. 'And Aaron spake all the words that Jehovah spake to Moses'=doctrine thence from the Divine.

7089. 'And afterwards came Moses and Aaron'=the Divine law and doctrine thence. . . By the Divine law that Moses reps. is understood the Word such as it is in its inward sense, thus such as it is in the Heavens; but by doctrine is understood the Word such as it is in its literal sense, thus such as it is on earth. Ex.

7104. 'Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, draw away the people from their works?'=that their Divine law and doctrine will not release them from troubles. 'Moses'=the Lord as to Divine law, and 'Aaron'=the Lord as to doctrine thence.

7184. Aaron and his families rep. those things that belong to doctrine.

7226. 'And Jehovah spake to Moses and to Aaron'=instruction anew from the law Divine and at the same time from doctrine.

7230⁴. 'Aaron took to himself Elisheba . . . for a woman'=doctrine of the Church, and how good and truth are therein conjoined.

7231⁶. 'Aaron'=what is outward of the Spiritual Church, and 'Moses,' what is inward. Ex.

7239. 'This Moses and Aaron'=that this was from the law, that is from the Divine, and from doctrine thence.

7269. 'And Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet'=doctrine thence. (i.e., from the law Divine.) 7270.

7285. 'And Aaron [was] a son of three and eighty years'=the state and quality of doctrine.

7381. 'Say to Aaron'=influx of inward law into outward law. The doctrine of what is good and true that Aaron reps. is nothing but outward law existing from inward law, that is, through inward law from the Divine.

—². Inward law that Moses reps. is truth accommodated to Angels, and outward law, that Aaron reps. is truth accommodated to men. Ex.

7390. 'And Pharaoh called Moses and Aaron'=presence of law Divine. . . Moses reps. inward, and Aaron outward law.

7517. 'And Jehovah said to Moses and to Aaron'=instruction anew. . . Truth that proceeds from Jehovah is rep. by Moses and Aaron, inward truth by Moses, and outward by Aaron. 7656.

7656. 'And Moses and Aaron returned unto Pharaoh'=presence of truth Divine thence.

7825. 'Jehovah said to Moses and Aaron'=information through truth Divine. . . Moses reps. truth proceeding from the Divine immediately; Aaron, mediately.

8404. '(They murmured) against Moses and against

Aaron'=[against] truth Divine. Moses reps. truth Divine proceeding from the Lord immediately, thus inward; and Aaron, truth from the Lord proceeding mediately, thus outward.

8437. 'And Moses said unto Aaron'=influx of truth Divine proceeding immediately from the Lord through truth Divine that [proceeds] mediately. 8529.

8441. 'Aaron spake to all the company of Israel'=instruction from the Divine through influx, (i.e.) from the Divine through truth proceeding from the Lord mediately, which is rep. by Aaron.

8588⁴. In the inward historical sense, Moses and Aaron do not rep. truth Divine, but the religiosity of that nation whose leaders and heads they were.

8603. 'Moses, Aaron, and Hur'=Divine truths in successive order. 'Moses'=Divine truth proceeding immediately; 'Aaron,' Divine truth proceeding mediately; and 'Hur,' Divine truth proceeding mediately through that again.

8681. 'And Aaron came and all the elders of Israel'=things of the church that are primary. Aaron reps. truth of doctrine.

8802². They who are intermediate between the celestial and spiritual kingdoms were rep. by Moses and Aaron, who were permitted to go up the mountain.

8841. 'Come up thou and Aaron'=conjunction with truth from the Divine, inward and outward.

9223². Aaron and his sons, who filled the office of the high-priesthood, represent the Lord.

9374. 'Thou and Aaron'=the Word in the inward and outward sense. Moses reps. the Word; and when Aaron, who was his brother, is joined to him, Moses then reps. the Word in the inward sense, and Aaron in the outward.

9403. 'And there went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu'=the Word in the inward and outward sense, and doctrine from both.

9424. 'Behold Aaron and Hur with ye' (the elders)=doctrine of truth from such a Word. Aaron here reps. doctrine of truth from the outward sense of the Word alone, because, by the elders, over whom Aaron was set as a head below the mountain, were sig. those who are in the outward sense of the Word.

—⁴. The doctrine here rep. by Aaron and Hur, being from the outward sense of the Word alone, without the inward sense, was merely idolatrous; wherefore it is said of Aaron, by whom such doctrine was represented, that he made an idol, or 'golden calf.'

9477. By Aaron as high-priest was represented the Lord as to good of love; and by his garments, especially by the ephod, was rep. truth of faith that is from good of love.

9506⁶. That man is heard and his worship received when he has been cleansed from evils, was represented by Aaron's not entering into the holy place within the veil until he had expiated himself and the people.

9670³. The priestly office that Aaron filled, rep. the Lord as to Divine good.

—. The process of the glorification of the Lord's Human even to Divine good, is described in the inward sense, and was exhibited before the Angels, when Aaron went through these [initiatory rites].

—^e. After these had been gone through, Aaron represented the Lord as to Divine good.

9786. 'Aaron and his sons shall set it in order'=perpetual influx from the Lord. . . By Aaron was rep. the Lord as to Divine good, and by his sons, as to Divine truth. 10000. E. 502⁴.

9806. 'And thou, make to draw nigh unto thee Aaron thy brother'=conjunction of Divine truth with Divine good in the Lord's Divine Human. Moses . . . reps. the Lord as to Divine truth, . . . Aaron, as to Divine good.

—. Aaron was chosen to fill the priestly office because he was the brother of Moses, for thus there was simultaneously represented the brotherhood of Divine truth and also of Divine good in Heaven.

9810. 'Aaron'=a representative of the Lord as to the Divine Celestial, . . . which is the Divine of the Lord in the inmost Heaven.

9813. 'Sons of Aaron'=the things that proceed from the Divine Celestial.

9900. 'And Aaron shall carry the names of the sons of Israel'=the preservation by the Lord of good and truth as to every quality. . . Aaron reps. the Lord as to Divine good.

9924. 'And it shall be upon Aaron'=a representative of the Lord. Aaron here reps. the Lord as to those things that concern evangelization and worship.

9928. By Aaron was rep. the Lord, and by his office, all the work of salvation; and on man's part, worship.

9936. 'And it shall be upon the forehead of Aaron'=from the Divine love of the Lord. Aaron reps. the Lord as to Divine good, which is the good of his Divine love.

9937. 'And Aaron shall carry the iniquity of the holy ones'=removal thereby (i.e. by the Divine love) of falsities and evils with those who are in good from the Lord. Aaron reps. the Lord as to good of love.

9939. 'And it shall be upon the forehead of Aaron constantly'=a representative of the Lord's love for ever. . . . Aaron reps. the Lord.

9952. 'And thou shalt put them on Aaron thy brother'=such a state of Divine good in the spiritual kingdom. . . . By Aaron was rep. the Lord as to Divine good, thus also Divine good that is from the Lord; and by his garments, the Lord's spiritual kingdom joined to His celestial kingdom.

9959^e. Aaron in his garments represented the Lord as to Divine good in the Heavens, Aaron himself, the Lord as to the Divine celestial there, and his garments, as to the Divine spiritual there, proceeding from the Divine celestial. A. 10067.

9985. In the inward sense of this chapter the glorification of the Lord as to the Human is treated of, which is sig. by the inauguration of Aaron and his sons into the priestly office.

10082. 'And thou shalt put all things upon the palms of Aaron, and upon the palms of his sons'=acknowledgment in the Heavens that those things are of the Lord and from the Lord. . . Aaron and his sons represent the Lord as to Divine good and Divine truth thence proceeding.

10118. 'And thou shalt do to Aaron and to his sons thus'=this representative of the Lord's glorification, and His influx into the Heavens and into the Church. Aaron reps. the Lord as to Divine good, and his sons, the Lord as to Divine good spiritual.

10198. 'And Aaron shall [burn] incense upon it'=the elevation by the Lord of worship that is from love and charity. . . Aaron as high-priest reps. the Lord as to Divine good, and as to the work of salvation. 10202.

10239. 'And Aaron and his sons shall wash out of it'=a representative of the purification and regeneration of man by the Lord. . . Aaron reps. the Lord as to Divine good celestial, and the sons of Aaron, the Lord as to Divine good spiritual. 10278.

10249². Since the Lord is understood by Aaron in a representative sense, therefore by 'the seed of Aaron' are specifically understood those who are in the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, and also by 'their generations,' those who are in His Spiritual Kingdom.

10278. 'And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons'=inauguration to rep. the Lord in both kingdoms.

10397. 'And the people was gathered together to Aaron'=that it betook itself to the outward things of the Word, of the Church and of worship, separated from what is inward. . . The reason why this is here represented by Aaron, is that he was the head of that nation in the absence of Moses. Ex. 10401.

10468. 'And Moses said to Aaron'=perception from what is internal about such an external.

10480. 'Because Aaron had made it (the people) dis-solute'=that this [will be done] by the outward things that they will love. . . Aaron reps. what is outward. 10512.

10692. 'And Aaron and all the sons of Israel saw Moses'=the perception—apperceptio—of those who are in the outward things of the Church, of worship and of the Word, without inward things.

10696. 'And Aaron and all the princes in the assembly turned back to him'=the principal ones who are in outward things, and yet might rep. inward things.

3641. That is below to the infernals which to the celestials is above, and that is above to the infernals which to the celestials is below.

5084°. What is spiritual and celestial is within or above nature. H. 1116.

5316. 'To set over' = dominion.

5352. 'Over' = serving and ministering.

6393. Such persons place blessedness in being over the Angels.

6692°. To elevate themselves above others . . .

7004°. The Divine truth that proceeds immediately is above all angelic understanding. 8443°.

7270°. The first two degrees of Divine Truth are above the Heavens.

7814-7821. Man is so created that he can look upwards, or above himself, and also downwards, or below himself. Ex.

8328. The Divine regarded in itself is above the Heavens . . .

9946. The Lord Himself is above the Heavens . . . His Divine above the Heavens cannot be represented, because it is infinite . . . 9956. 10579°.

H. 532°. If the higher things of the mind are closed above . . .

P. 162. The Lord appears above Heaven as a sun, but the truth is He is in it . . .

R. 809. The Lord being above the Heavens as a sun does not speak to the Angels thence, but flows in.

876°. These ancient Heavens are above the Christian Heaven.

T. 103. This limbus is below with those who come into Heaven and what is spiritual is above, but with those who come into Hell the limbus is above and what is spiritual below.

D. 4669. They who are above see and perceive all things below, but they who are below perceive and see nothing of the things above, that is, within.

5869. That they who are above give light to those who are below, when they agree.

Abraham. Abraham.

A. 64. The Church signified by 'Noah' continued to the time of Abram.

—, 'Abraham' represented saving faith.

66. The first style of the Word is used up to the time of Abram. . . The historical style is used from the time of Abraham. —2.

1025°. 'Abraham' represented celestial love, 'Isaac,' spiritual love; these are of the inward man; 'Jacob' represented the same, but of the outward man. Ill.

—4. Since 'Abram' represented love or saving faith, 'his seed' means all in the universe who are in love. Ill.

—7. Celestial love represented by 'Abraham' is as the father of spiritual love represented by 'Isaac,' for the spiritual is born from the celestial.

1032°. 'Abraham, Isaac and Jacob' mean all who are in love.

1197°. Because 'Abraham' represented the celestial things of faith, he sojourned in the land of the Philistines, and entered into a covenant with them.

1355. 'Abram,' 'Nahor,' and 'Haran' were persons, from whom nations also were named that were idolaters.

1358. 1362, Ex.

1356. Abram was an idolater and knew not Jehovah. 1360.

1359. 'Abram, Nahor and Haran,' as nations, = idolatrous worship. 1363.

1366. In consequence of being idolaters, and not knowing Jehovah, or what is the good and truth of faith, Terah and Abram were better fitted to receive the seed of truth than others in Syria with whom knowledges still remained . . .

1369. 'Abram and Nahor took wives; the name of Abram's wife was Sarai'=the marriages of evil with falsity in idolatrous worship.

1373. 'Terah took Abram his son, and Lot . . . and went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees to go into the Land of Canaan; and they came even to Haran, and remained there'=that those who were in idolatrous worship were instructed in celestial and spiritual things of faith, in order that a representative Church might exist therefrom.

1375. 'Terah died in Haran'=the end of idolatry and the beginning of a representative Church by Abram.

1401. What is said in this chapter about Abram reps. the Lord's state from earliest childhood to adolescence.

1402. What is said about the sojourn of Abram in Egypt=the Lord's first instruction.

1404. 'Abram,' in general, reps. the Lord; specifically, the celestial man.

1407. 'Abram' reps. the Lord. 1420. 1543. 1906. 2769. 2780. 2862. 2915.

1409². The Representative Church began with Abram.
—³. 'Abram' reps. the Lord, and therefore also the celestial man; Isaac, the Lord and thence the spiritual man, and Jacob the Lord and thence the natural man corresponding to the spiritual.

1410. 'Jehovah said to Abram'=the very first act of taking notice.

1411. The land of his birth, from which Abram went out, was idolatrous.

1426. By Abram is represented the Lord as to His human essence; afterwards as to both the human and the Divine essence, and then he is called Abraham.

1432. 'Abram took Sarai his wife'=good to which truth was adjoined. Ex.

1433. 'Abram' here means the Lord when He was a child.

1440. 'Abram went through the land to the place Shechem'=the Lord's second state. Ex.

1446. 'Jehovahseen by Abram'=that Jehovah appeared to the Lord when as yet a child.

1461. 'And Abram went down to sojourn in Egypt'=instruction in knowledges from the Word. 1479. 1502. Ill. 1542.

1485. 'Pharaoh treated Abram well for her sake'=that scientifics were multiplied with the Lord.

1491. 'And Pharaoh called Abram'=that the Lord remembered.

1535. The Lord's outward man or human essence is represented in this chap. by 'Lot,' His inward man or Divine essence, by 'Abram.' 1568. 1590.

1543. 'Abram went up from Egypt'=from scientifics, which left the Lord.

1545. 'Abram'=what was celestial in the Lord, thus 'he and his wife'=the celestial truths then in the Lord.

1549. 'Abram was very heavy-gravis-with cattle, silver and gold'=the goods, truths, and goods from truths with which the Lord was then enriched.

1563. 'Lot going with Abram'=the outward man that was with the Lord.

—^e. Signification of the separation of Lot from Abram.

1571. 'A dispute between the shepherds of Abram's cattle, and the shepherds of Lot's cattle'=that the inward man and the outward man did not agree. 1572.

1576. 'And Abram said unto Lot'=thus said the inward man to the outward . . . Abram reps. the inward man relatively to Lot, who is that in the outward man which is to be separated.

— The things that agree are 'Abram,' even those in the outward man, for these constitute one thing with the inward man, and belong to it.

1596. 'Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan'=that the inward man was in the celestial things of love.

1602. 'Jehovah said to Abram'=that Jehovah thus spake to the Lord.

1615. 'Abram pitched his tent and came and dwelt in the oak grove Mamre, which is in Hebron'=that the Lord came to a still more inward perception.

1655. 'Abram the Hebrew'=the rational man.

1700. 'Abram the Hebrew'=the interior man to which the inward or Divine man is adjoined. 1701. 1707.

1702. Why Abram is here called 'the Hebrew.' 1732^e.

1707. 'Abram heard that his brother was made captive'=the interior man perceived in what kind of state the outward man was.

—⁴. 'Abram' here=the inward man in the interior or middle man.

1713. (Abram)=the rational man. Ex.

1732. 'Abram blessed God Most High'=that the Lord's interior or rational man had enjoyment of goods from His inward man.

1741. 'Abram'=the Lord's rational.

— In the two preceding chapters 'Abram' represented the Lord and His state in childhood; in this chapter he reps. the Lord's rational, and is then called 'Abram the Hebrew.' No other Abram is understood in this chapter than 'Abram the Hebrew.' The Spiritual of the Lord that was adjoined to the inward man is 'Abram the Hebrew,' but the Celestial is represented by Melchizedek.

1749. Abram here reps. the Lord now a conqueror.

1750. 'Lest thou shouldst say, I have enriched Abram'=that hence the Lord derived no strength.

1785. 'After these words the word of Jehovah came to Abram in vision'=that after combats in childhood there was revelation.

1790. 'Abram said, O Lord Jehovah'=the Lord's perception; 'Abram' is the interior man, 'Lord Jehovah,' the inward relatively to the interior man.

1798. 'Abram said, Lo to me Thou hast not given seed'=that there was nothing inward of the Church.

1834. Abraham is not known in Heaven. 1876. 1989. 2658^o.

1835. 'Abram drove them away'=the Lord put them to flight.

1838. 'Sleep fell upon Abram'=that the Church was then in falsities.

1864. 'Jehovah made a covenant with Abram'=the conjunction of the Lord's interior with His inward man.

1865. 'The seed of Abram'=love and faith thence, thus all who are in charity and faith in the Lord.

1890. In this chapter 'Abram' is the inward man of the Lord, who is Jehovah. 1894. 1898. 1960.

1893. 'Abraham, Isaac and Jacob' rep. the inward, the rational, and the natural man. 1950, Ex.

1919. 'Abram said to Sarai'=perception. The Lord's perception is signified by 'Abram said to Sarai,' but thought from perception by 'Sarai said to Abram.'

1963. 'Abram was a son of eighty years and six years'=the Lord's state as to celestial goods acquired through the combats of temptations.

1965. Hence it is that 'Abram' also reps. the celestial Church and the celestial man, as well as what is celestial itself.

1988. 'Abram was a son of ninety years and nine years'=the time before the Lord fully conjoined the inward man with the rational.

—³. The reason of Abram's long waiting in the Land of Canaan before Sarai had a son was that he thereby represented the union of the Lord's Divine and Human Essence, and in fact that of His inward man, which was Jehovah, with His Rational. 2636^o.

1989. That Abram sigs. the Lord in that state and at that age is evident from what has already been said about Abram. In the inward sense Abram reps. the Lord, for no other Abram is understood in Heaven when he is named in the Word. They who have been born within the Church, and have heard about him from the Word, do indeed know of him when they enter the other life, but as he is like any other individual, and cannot be of any help to them, they no longer concern themselves about him; and they are informed that by Abram in the Word no other is understood than the Lord. But the Angels . . . are altogether ignorant of Abram, wherefore when the Word is read by man, and Abram is mentioned, they perceive no other than the Lord, and at these words they perceive the Lord in that state and at that age, for here Jehovah speaks with Abram, that is, with the Lord. 2077. 3703^d.

1992. 'I am God Shaddai,' in the sense of the letter, sigs. the name of Abram's god. Ex.

—³. Hence it is evident that Abram in his youth was like other gentiles, namely an idolater, and that even yet, when he was in Canaan, he had not rejected from his mind the god Shaddai, by which name the Lord was first represented to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. 1998. 2010. 2559. 3667.

1996. 'Abram' here reps. the interior man. Ex.

2009. 'Thy name shall no more be called Abram'= that He would put off the Human, and 'Abraham shall thy name be'=that He would put on the Divine.

2010. That Abram served other gods and worshipped the god Shaddai has been shown above, but as he represented the Lord, and in fact His Internal Man, thus the Celestial of His love, therefore his former quality was to be destroyed, that is, the name Abram was to be changed into another quality, by which he could represent the Lord. Therefore the letter H was taken from the name Jehovah, being the only letter in that name which involves the Divine, and signifies I AM, or TO BE, and was inserted in the name Abram. In like manner with Sarai. . . Hence it is evident that in the inward sense of the Word Abraham reps. Jehovah or the Lord. 1416². 3251.

2061. A new perception of the Lord is expressed by 'God said unto Abraham,' as in other places.

2098. 'God went up from Abraham'=the entrance of the Lord into the former state.

2106. 'Abraham a son of ninety and nine years'=the state and time before the union of the Lord's Divine essence with His human one.

2112. 'Abraham was circumcised and Ishmael his son'=that when the Lord conjoined His human essence to the Divine one, He also conjoined to Himself the rest who become rational by means of truth, and saved them.

2135^o. Abraham's speaking with Jehovah about the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah=the Lord's intercession for mankind.

2143. The subject here treated of in the inward sense is the Lord and His perception, which was represented by the appearance of Jehovah to Abraham (in the oak-grove of Manire).

2171. 'Abraham hastened towards the tent to Sarah'=the Lord's rational good conjoined to His truth. 2172. 2204.

2180^d. Sacrifices emanated from the Hebrew Church to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

2187^d. 'Many shall lie down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob'=they shall enjoy the celestial goods which these names signify.

2193. The coming of Jehovah to Abraham=Divine perception for which the Lord prepared Himself, thus conjunction.

2198. 'Abraham and Sarah were old' = that the Human with the Lord was to be put off.

2221. 'Abraham going with them' = that the Lord still remained in perception with those things, or concerning mankind.

2225. 'Shall I hide from Abraham what I am doing?' = that nothing ought to be hidden before the Lord. Abraham reps. the Lord in that state.

2227. 'Abraham in being shall be for a nation great and numerous' = that all good and all truth thence will be from the Lord.

2236. 'That Jehovah may bring upon Abraham what was spoken upon him' = that therefore the human essence will be adjoined to the Divine essence.

2247. 'Abraham, he was still standing before Jehovah' = the Lord's thought from the Human, that it was adjoined in the way that was said. 'Abraham' in this chapter is the Lord as to the Human. 2265. 2287.

2249. 'Abraham drew near and said' = the Lord's thought from the Human which adjoined itself more closely to the Divine.

2264. 'Abraham answered and said' = the Lord's thought from the Human.

2288. 'Abraham returned to his place' = the Lord returned into the state in which He was before He perceived these things.

2360¹. 'Abraham' in the inward sense is nothing but love itself, i.e., the Lord.

2456. 'Abraham rose up in the morning' = the Lord's thought about the last time.

— 'And God remembered Abraham' = salvation through the union of the Lord's Divine essence with His human essence.

2496. The sojourn of Abraham in Gerar = the instruction of the Lord in the doctrinal things of charity and faith. 2504.

2500. 'Abraham journeyed thence towards the land of the south' = the Lord's progress in the goods and truths of faith.

2501. 'Abraham' is the Lord in that state, as before. 2545.

2533. Abraham, when called 'the man'-vir = celestial truth, which is the same as doctrine from a celestial origin.

2559². Since the first scientifics and the rational things therefrom were human with the Lord, being imbued with what was hereditary from the mother, thus were not purely Divine, they are therefore represented by Abraham's first state. (I.e. when he was an idolater.) See also 1816.

2588. 'Abraham' = celestial good conjoined with spiritual truth (Sarah).

2604. Many of the Jews are there introduced to Abraham, Jacob, etc.

2622. Abraham reps. the Divine Celestial or Divine good.

2628. Abraham reps. the Lord as to the Divine Celestial or Divine good.

2630. Abraham reps. the supreme Divine; Isaac, the Divine Rational, and Jacob the Divine Natural.

2663. 'God said to Abraham' = the Lord's perception from the Divine.

2673. 'Abraham rose up in the morning' = the Lord's clear perception from the Divine.

2720. 'Abraham reproved Abimelech' = the Lord's indignation.

2726. 'Abraham sojourned in the land of the Philistines many days' = that the Lord adjoined many things from the science of human knowledges to the doctrine of faith.

2768. 'And God tempted Abraham' = the most grievous and deep temptations of the Lord.

2795. 'Abraham' here = the Lord's Divine, and 'Isaac,' His Divine Human. 2816.

2802. 'Isaac said to Abraham his father, and he said, My father, and he said, Behold me, my son' = colloquy of the Lord from the love of Divine truth with Divine good.

2816. 'And Abraham let go his hand' = temptation even to the last of power.

2818. Abraham inclined to the practice of sacrificing children.

2822. 'Abraham' here = the Divine good of the Lord's Rational or Human.

2829. 'Abraham lifted up his eyes and saw' = the Lord's thought and intuition from the Divine.

2833. 'Abraham went and took the ram' = their deliverance by means of the Lord's Divine Human... When Jehovah or the Angel of Jehovah speaks with Abraham, Jehovah or the Angel of Jehovah is the Divine Itself, and Abraham is the Divine Human. 2836. 3017. 3032. 3061. 3064. 3119.

2841. 'The Angel of Jehovah cried to Abraham a second time out of heaven' = consolation of the Lord still greater.

2842⁷. That Jehovah swore to give the land to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, or their descendants, in the inward sense sigs. confirmation that He would give the heavenly kingdom to those who are in love and faith in Him. These are they who are understood in the inward sense by the sons and descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

2856. 'Abraham returned to his boys' = conjunction again with the former Rational.

2859. 'Abraham dwelt in Beersheba' = that the Lord is the doctrine of charity and faith itself.

2909². That Hebron was the region where Abraham, Isaac and Jacob dwelt.

2910. 'Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her' = the Lord's state of grief on account of night as to the truths of faith in the Church.

2927. 'Abraham arose and bowed himself'=the Lord's joy on account of a kind reception.

2946. ('Not to receive silver from Abraham')=not to wish to be redeemed by the Lord, but by themselves.

2950. 'Abraham bowed himself before the people of the land'=the Lord's joy on account of the goodwill of those who were of the new Spiritual Church.

2974. 'To Abraham for an acquisition'=that they were accepted as being of the Lord alone, namely all the quality and quantity of regeneration, as to the good and truth of faith, and thus as to all knowledges both interior and exterior. 2985.

2979. 'Abraham buried Sarah his wife'=they received from the Lord truth conjoined with good.

2986². Abraham, when called, was a Gentile.

3016. 'Abraham being old came to days'=when the state was at hand that the Lord's Human should become Divine.

3017. 'Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things'=when all things had been arranged in Divine order by the Lord. . . 'Jehovah' is the Lord as to the Divine Itself, and then 'Abraham' reps. the Lord as to the Divine Human; wherefore when it is said that 'Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things,' it is meant in the inward sense that the Lord, from the Divine Itself, arranged all things in Divine order in His Human.

3019. 'Abraham said to his elder servant of his house'=the orderly arrangement and influx of the Lord into His Natural.

3030³. 'Abraham being old came to days, and Jehovah blessed Abraham in all things'=when the state was at hand that the Lord's Human would become Divine, and that all things would be arranged in Divine order.

3031. From this it is evident that the land from which Abram came was Syria, where was the second Ancient Church, which was called Hebrew.

3032. 'Abraham said to [his servant]'=the Lord's perception from the Divine. . . Abraham reps. the Lord as to the Divine Human, from which comes this perception.

3061. 'Jehovah God of my lord Abraham'=the communication of the Divine Itself which is the Father with the Divine Human which is the Son. . . Abraham reps. His Divine Human. 3064. 3119.

3122³. 'Jehovah God will give truth to Jacob, mercy to Abraham,' (Mic. vii. 20) where 'Jacob' stands for the Lord's outward man, 'Abraham' for the inward man as to the Human.

3235. 'Abraham added and took a woman'=the second state of the Lord which Abraham here represents. 'Abraham and Sarah'=the Lord as to the Divine Celestial, and 'Abraham and Keturah,' as to the Divine Spiritual.

3236. 'Abraham' here reps. the Lord as to Divine spiritual good.

3239². 'Abraham'=the Lord as to Divine spiritual good, 'Keturah,' as to Divine spiritual truth conjoined to that good; hence their sons=common lots of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. Ex.

3245. 'Abraham gave all things that he had to Isaac,' in the highest sense=all Divine things in the Divine Rational, and in the relative sense, the celestial things of love in the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, for 'Abraham' is the Lord as to the Divine Itself.

3246. 'And to the sons of the concubines that Abraham had, Abraham gave presents'=the spiritual [men and angels] adopted by the Lord's Divine Human.

3248. 'Abraham' here reps. the Lord as to the Divine Human.

3251. 'These are the days of the years of the lives of Abraham that he lived'=the [end of the] representative state of the Lord as to the Divine Itself by Abraham.

— 'Abraham' represented the Divine Itself called the Father, and the Divine Human called the Son, thus the Lord as to both, but it was the Divine Human from eternity from which existed and to which He reduced the Human born in time: this is the representation of the Lord by Abraham.

3253. 'And Abraham expired and died'=the end of the representation of the Lord by Abraham. See also 3230. 3259.

3263. 'Sons of Abraham'=those who are in truth from the Lord, for 'Abraham' reps. the Lord as to the Divine Human also.

3280. 'Abraham begat Isaac'=from the Divine Itself the Divine Rational.

3305⁷. 'To recline with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob'=to be with the Lord; and to be 'in Abraham's bosom'=to be in the Lord. 3708¹³.

3373². 'They said, We are the seed of Abraham; Abraham is our father; Jesus said unto them, If ye were sons of Abraham, ye would do the works of Abraham' . . . By 'Abraham' here, the Lord is understood, as everywhere in the Word.

3381. 'Abraham hearkened to My voice'=the union of the Lord's Divine essence with the human essence through temptations, for 'Abraham' is the Lord as to the Divine Human also.

3412. 'Abraham' here reps. the Lord's Divine Itself.

3419. Where 'days' denote states, 'Abraham his father' reps. the Lord's Divine Itself before He adjoined the Human to Himself; when they denote times, 'Abraham his father' reps. the goods and truths that were from the Lord's Divine before He adjoined the Human, thus which the Ancients had.

3439. 'I am the God of Abraham thy father'=that the Divine was there also; for 'Abraham' reps. the Divine of the Lord. 4352¹.

3441. 'For the sake of Abraham My servant'=from the Lord's Divine Human; for 'Abraham'=the Divine of the Lord and the Divine Human also.

3670. 'He shall give thee the blessing of Abraham'=the conjunction of the Divine Itself with good and truth natural (Jacob).

3686². The Most Ancient Church was in the Land of Canaan . . . and also the Ancient Church. . . Hence all the places etc. there became representative. . . This was the reason why Abraham was commanded to go there . . . 4447². 5136.

3703. 'I am Jehovah the God of Abraham thy father' = the Lord, and that from Him is that good. . . Jehovah is the Lord's Divine Esse itself, and is called the God of Abraham from Divine Good. . . Abraham reps. the Lord as to Divine Good. And since Divine Good is the source of all celestial and spiritual goods, and thence also of all truths, he is here called 'Abraham thy father,' that is, of Jacob, although he was the father of Isaac. Ill.

3712². 'Abraham' = the highest sense of the Word.

4112. After Abram had been called out of Syria, Syria put on the representation of a region outside of the Church.

4145. Abraham with Isaac reps. Divine good flowing in directly.

4180. 'The God of Abraham' = the Divine Itself which is called the Divine essence.

4206. 'The God of Abraham' = the Lord's Divine paying regard to those who are within the Church. . . For 'Abraham' reps. the Lord's Divine, consequently that which comes from the Lord directly; hence they who are within the Church are specifically understood by 'the sons of Abraham.'

4207. Hence, in the relative sense, 'Abraham' reps. the genuine Church, and 'Nahor,' the Church of the Gentiles. 3778, Ex.

4208. The family of Abraham were enjoined to acknowledge Jehovah as their God, but still they only acknowledged Him as another god . . .

4292². It was not [all] the descendants of Abraham that represented the Church. Ex.

4462². Circumcision was not enjoined to Abraham and his descendants as anything new, but as something intermitted that was to be restored.

4576. 'Abraham and Isaac' rep. the Lord's Divine; 'Abraham,' the Divine Itself, and 'Isaac,' the Divine Human; specifically, the Divine Rational of the Lord. Refs.

4615. 'Where Abraham and Isaac sojourned' = the Divine life; for 'Abraham' = the Lord's Divine Itself, and 'Isaac,' His Divine Rational. Ex.

5095. When 'Abraham,' Isaac and Jacob are mentioned, in the highest sense they rep. the Lord, namely, 'Abraham,' His Divine Itself, 'Isaac,' His Divine Intellectual, and 'Jacob,' His Divine Natural. 5307². 6098, Refs. 6185.

6098. Hence 'Abraham' reps. also the celestial with man, 'Isaac,' the spiritual, and 'Jacob,' the natural.

6185. Hence in the relative sense, with man, 'Abraham,' Isaac and Jacob' rep. what is inmost, which is celestial good; what is interior, which is spiritual good; and what is outer, which is natural good.

6276. In the highest sense, 'Abraham' reps. the Lord's Divine Itself, and 'Isaac,' His Divine Rational, thus the inward Human, for 'Jacob' = the Lord's Divine Natural, or His outward Human; but in the representative sense, 'Abraham' = inward good, and 'Isaac,' inward truth. 6284. 6434.

6434. In the relative sense 'Abraham and Isaac' rep. what is inward of the Kingdom and Church of the Lord.

6452. 'Abraham' reps. what is inmost, and 'Isaac,' what is interior, under what is inmost.

6458. In the highest sense, 'Abraham' reps the Lord. 6549.

6516. In the relative sense, 'Abraham, Isaac and Jacob' rep. the Lord's Kingdom as to what is inward and outward of it. 6589.

A. 2706. The Lord's presence with the evil is called absence. 6806², Ex.

3993⁶. Shade there is absence of light, thus a lack of intelligence and wisdom.

3994. Man is thus in absence from self.

6866. It is unlikeness there that makes absence.

7056⁶. The Lord is then as it were absent, but His absence is not perceived unless it is known from some perception what His presence is.

10146². In proportion as they do not desist from evils the Lord appears to be absent, the degree of His absence is according to the absence of truth and good . . . hence it is that they who are in Hell are in the Lord's absence.

—³. But still the fact is that the Lord is not absent from man, but man is absent from the Lord.

P. 326⁴. In proportion as anyone does not know the Lord, the Lord is absent . . .

M. 171. All presence and absence there are according to spheres . . .

T. 70². The absence of God from man is no more possible than the absence of the sun by heat and light from the earth . . .

105. In this state God appears to be absent.

A. 82. 'And the heavens and the earth were finished.' 84.

1573⁴. 'After the devil had ended all the temptation.'

3093. 'To leave off' involves the end of the act which precedes, and the beginning of the one that follows, thus what is successive.

6462. 'To leave off'=the effect of it.

9264. 'To justify'=to declare guiltless and to absolve.

10622. 'Absolving he will not absolve'=tolerance even to consummation; for 'to absolve' is to forgive sin, and when it is added 'he will not absolve,' it is to tolerate.

T. 539⁶. No harm in enumerating sins before a Minister of the Church for the sake of absolution.

E. 649. 'And when they have finished the testimony'=at the end of the Church; for 'to finish'=to end.

Absorb. Absorbere.

A. 571. Profanations of the Word make as it were a callosity . . . which absorbs the goods and truths of remains.

635. With those called 'Noah,' persuasions did not obstruct and absorb the Lord's operation through remains.

1042². Black in spiritual things is man's own voluntary, or evil, which absorbs and extinguishes the rays of light. 2492.

1736². 'He will swallow up death' . . .

5217. 'And they swallowed up the seven fat ears.' 'To swallow up' = to exterminate.

6000³. Thus is the light of truth absorbed and suffocated in darkness, as the light of the sun is in what is black.

6388³. Such are like objects which do not send back, but absorb the rays of light.

8306. 'The earth swallowed them' = damnation and Hell.

H. 466. The memory with such appears darksome, being of such a nature as to absorb the rays of light and turn them into darkness.

W. 336. Such things conduce to absorb malignities . . .

M. 510². They are then swallowed up and fall down into Hell among their like.

T. 312^e. In this world their bodies absorb and hide these things.

342^e. Used in the sense of swallowed up. 642.

564³. Absorbs and suffocates the rays of light . . .

569. The body absorbs them . . .

D. 1393. A black colour is such that it absorbs all the rays. . . In like manner evil absorbs all the rays of intellectual light.

M. 474. Times of abstinence required after childbirth.

529. These, if of will and understanding they abstain from one evil because it is a sin, they abstain from all.

T. 316. Abstinence from doing does not constitute chastity, but abstinence from willing, when he is able [to do], because it is a sin. Ex.

510. Everyone is regenerated by abstaining from evils of sin . . .

525^e. From fear of eternal punishment abstains from it . . .

530^e. If afterwards he abstains from one or another sin . . .

532². When he then resists and abstains . . .

A. 64. The Angels perceive, in the Word spiritual and celestial things altogether abstractedly from the words.

445. Occurs. 1361⁴. 1547. 1644. 1787². W. I. 42. 155. 196. 209. 134. 142.

1295. Drawn away by various matters of business . . .

1849. Goods, when spoken of abstractedly, are in a subject.

2232. In the abstract sense. 2233.

2275. It is spiritual to comprehend things abstractedly from the letter . . .

3726². Knowledges and truths are not abstract things. Ex.

3827. By the affection of genuine love, man is drawn away from bodily and worldly things.

3957². Man's state there is like that of those who are in interior thought through the abstraction of their mind from sensuous outward things.

4380. In Heaven they think and speak thus by abstract things because . . . To speak thus was also habitual to the Ancients. 9396, Ex.

4417². The taking away of their delight from falsity.

5036. When this ultimate truth is taken away.

5110². This can be said abstractedly concerning the Lord . . . but with man it cannot be conceived abstractedly from person, because . . . Yet if that which is comprehensible is abstracted, there remains the Esse and Existere itself.

—³. However, as man is such that he can have no idea whatever of abstract things unless he adjoins somewhat natural . . .

5287. In the other life, especially in the Heavens, all thought and thence all speech are effected by things abstracted from persons . . . 6040², Ex. 6653, Ex. 8843^e. 9007.

5434. In the inward sense all things are abstracted from persons.

6653. Reflection about any people etc. draws away the mind from a universal idea.

6814. The thought that is above the imagination requires for its objects things abstracted from material things.

7104. 'Wherefore do ye Moses and Aaron draw away the people from their works?' 'To draw away' = to release.

8711. 'Gain' = what draws away from truth and good.

8761. When things abstracted from their subjects are spoken of, the subjects in which they are, are perceived.

9125. The Word in the abstract sense has things for objects, without determination to persons and places.

9249. It is said in the abstract sense, because the Angels, who are in the inward sense of the Word, think and speak abstractedly from person. Refs.

9407⁴. He who cannot think intellectually, that is, abstractedly from material things, cannot comprehend anything of the spiritual sense.

9828⁹. What is natural keeps the mind fixed in itself, unless the intellectual sight can be elevated even into the light of Heaven and man can think almost abstractedly from natural things; when this is done, spiritual things enter that are imperceptible to the merely natural man.

10282. It is said abstractedly from persons, because the Divine things that proceed from the Lord make the Church, and nothing whatever of man's . . . This is why the Angels speak abstractedly from persons when they converse together. 3767.

H. 438. They who think abstractedly from the body, being then in the spirit, sometimes appear in their own society. Des.

535. They who live abstractedly from worldly things are inflamed with merit . . .

N. 39. To think spiritually is to think of things in themselves . . . and to see the qualities of things and perceive their affections abstractedly from matter . . .

112. Abstracted from what is natural . . .

W. 81. Abstract space, and deny a vacuum, and then think . . . with space abstracted.

189^e. The mere knowledge of abstract things is like something aerial that flies away, but if abstract things are applied to what is in the world, they are like what is seen with the eyes and remains in the memory.

210. From the fact that will and understanding, affection and thought etc. can be thought of abstractedly from the substances that are their subjects, it has come to pass that a just idea about them has perished . . . Sensations and actions are not things abstracted from the organs of sense and motion; abstracted or separated from them they are nothing but entities of reason . . .

228. Abstract things, being universal, are usually better comprehended than applied ones. Ex.

P. 46. What is infinite and eternal . . . can be comprehended, because there are abstract ideas by which it can be seen that things are, though not what is their quality . . .

R. 78. The spiritual sense is abstracted from persons. 96.

M. 66. There are no abstract goods and truths. Ex. 207⁵. You have formed an idea of what is spiritual abstracted from what is material, and that which is abstracted from what is material appears to you as nothing. T.694⁵.

267^e. Into this delirium is the man let after death who has abstracted his spirit from the body . . .

T. 37. Love abstracted from a form is not possible.

67. He can indeed revolve the end and the cause abstractedly in the mind . . .

178². The idea that those who are religious are recluses—homines abstracti.

347³. Truths abstracted from deeds are merely matters of thought . . .

361. So far he is drawn away from what is his own . . .

422. In a sense abstracted from persons . . .

449. They love what is within man abstractedly from what is without him.

469. Why Jehovah did not draw away Adam from eating.

483. Abstractedly from man's power of will in spiritual things, Holy Scripture is so much blank paper.

E. 653¹⁰. In the abstract sense, which is the genuine spiritual sense.

8644. This Divine good is not such as is in the sun, it is accommodated to reception in Heaven, for unless it were accommodated to reception, Heaven could not exist . . . but how the Divine good of the Lord's Divine love is accommodated to reception cannot be known even by Angels, because it is the accommodation of what is infinite to what is finite. 9946. 9956. 10196².

8731. A state of Divine truth accommodated. Sig. . . . After all things have been reduced into order, that is, accommodated.

8760². What is infinite cannot be conjoined with finite things except by the putting on of something finite, and thus by accommodation to reception . . .

8783. Truth Divine is not received by anyone unless accommodated to apprehension, thus unless it appears in a natural form . . . 8920⁴.

8814. 'The cloud' (on Sinai) = truth accommodated to those who are about to receive it . . . 8920. 9433.

8920. When Divine Truth descends through the Heavens to men, as the Word descended, it is accommodated on the way to all who are in the Heavens, as well as to all upon earth. 9400. 10322.

8921. 'Let not God speak with us' = truth in a form not accommodated.

8922. Divine Truth in a form not accommodated would cause spiritual death, because truth in a form not accommodated, such as it is in Heaven, transcends apprehension . . .

9433². 'Cloud by day, smoke by night, and a covering' (Is. iv. 5) = the veiling over of Divine Truth, thus accommodation according to apprehension.

10026. 'The blood of the bullock' = Divine Truth accommodated to the natural man.

10029. 'Its fat' = good accommodated to the natural man.

10126. When higher things fall down into lower, they are turned into like things, and so are presented to view before the outward senses, thus are accommodated to the apprehension of everyone . . . thus it is with the Word . . .

S. 40. The truths of the literal sense, partly, are not naked truths, but appearances of truth . . . thus are accommodated and adapted to the apprehension of the simple and also of little children. 51.

P. 202³. The Lord foresees how man leads himself, and continually accommodates.

M. 282. Conjugal semblances are for the sake of accommodations. Gen. art.

T. 6. Hence it is that the Holy Scripture is accommodated to the perception of Angels and men.

110⁵. Thus man accommodates his will to receive love from God.

125. Occurs. 137⁵. 142. 154⁵. 195^e. 503⁷. 504³. 517.

150. When man accommodates and disposes himself to reception . . . the active of accommodation is from the Lord.

370³. Jehovah being thus accommodated to man could then approach . . .

— There are three things that follow in order, accommodation, application and conjunction; there must be accommodation before there can be application, and application together with accommodation before there can be conjunction; the accommodation on the part of God was that He became a man.

641. Thus by what is adapted and accommodated . . .

A. 189. The acknowledgment of self . . .

206. They do not acknowledge the eternal life . . . the Lord they do not at all acknowledge.

226. That man may acknowledge and confess.

302^e. It is one thing to know, another to acknowledge; he who knows and does not acknowledge is as if he does not know, but he who acknowledges and then blasphemes and profanes is he who is here meant.

303. A man acquires for himself a life by all things of which he persuades himself, that is, which he acknowledges and believes. . . Wherefore no one can profane holy things unless he is so persuaded as that he acknowledges and yet denies . . . 1327³.

654. Faith is never the knowledge of the things that are to be believed . . . but is acknowledgment; but acknowledgment can never exist with anyone unless he has charity and mercy. When there is charity, then there is acknowledgment, and then there is faith. —. 2049⁴.

880. Then first do the truths of faith take root when man begins to acknowledge and believe.

896. To know is the first thing of regeneration, to acknowledge is the second, to have faith is the third . . . The worst men can know and still not acknowledge . . . Infidels also can acknowledge . . . They who have faith, know, acknowledge, and believe . . . To acknowledge what is of faith is a certain rational [principle] consenting, being induced to do so by certain causes, and for the sake of certain ends. . . There are many in Hell who acknowledge, because they have acknowledged in this life in certain states, but they acknowledge only when it is recalled to their memory that they have so preached.

963. The punishment of the veil is for those who, although they see truth, still from self-love are unwilling to acknowledge.

1150. These (nations), if they acknowledge the Lord and love the neighbour, have the Lord in their worship.

1153. Humiliation consists in the acknowledgment of himself . . . and in the acknowledgment that everything living and good is from the Lord; the more a man acknowledges this in his heart, the more he is in humiliation . . . 1999. 2327. 2694^o. 3469². 3886⁷. 5758².

1162. Faith is the acknowledgment of those things that belong to faith, and acknowledgment is never outward but inward, and is the operation of the Lord alone through charity in the man; acknowledgment is never of the mouth but is of the life; from the life of everyone may be known the quality of the acknowledgment.

1308. Everyone acknowledges a Supreme Being when he beholds the universe.

1321. At last acknowledges falsity for truth, and evil for good . . .

— . They do not acknowledge truth except in so far as self is in it . . . Such there not only do not acknowledge the truth they have professed here, but also hate and persecute it . . .

1326. Inward worship consists in the affection of good and the acknowledgment of truth.

1327⁴. This is why a man is permitted rather to live in pleasures and cupidities . . . than that he should come into the knowledge and acknowledgment of interior things and profane them . . . If the Jews had acknowledged they could not but have profaned . . .

1594^e. He recedes from this gift and its happiness in proportion as he recedes from the acknowledgment that it is the Lord's.

1712². Then man is to think, acknowledge and believe, that the Lord has operated this in him.

2156^e. They say that they acknowledge one Supreme Being . . . They do not acknowledge any God, still less do they acknowledge the Lord. 4733².

2196². In proportion as he views Divine things from scientifics he does not acknowledge them.

2228². Some suppose faith to be the acknowledgment of anything that is to be believed. . .

2261². With those who live in what is contrary to charity, there can never be acknowledgment, but some persuasion . . . thus in that acknowledgment there is not the life of faith . . . 3324⁵.

2326. 'He (Lot) rose up to meet them' = acknowledgment.

2329. Inward acknowledgment and confession of the Lord's Divine Human and Holy Proceeding. Sig.

2335². Good is the Lord's, and they who acknowledge this in life and faith are the Lord's . . . but they who do not acknowledge in life, thus not in faith, cannot be the Lord's . . .

2349². He who is not conjoined to the Lord cannot acknowledge Him. That they who are not in good are not able to acknowledge the Lord, that is, have faith in Him. Sig. 2354³. 3324⁴.

2353. 'By night' = the last time when they are no longer acknowledged.

2354^e. They who are in the life of good acknowledge the Lord, because Heaven flows in . . .

2357. They who are in the life of evil are not admitted to acknowledgment itself and faith . . . He who once acknowledges and believes, if he returns to a life of evil, profanes what is good and holy, but he who does not acknowledge and believe cannot profane, therefore the Providence of the Lord takes care that man is not admitted further into acknowledgment itself and faith of heart than he can be kept in it. 3398².

2401. To will evil and thence to do it, and [at the same time] to acknowledge truth in faith, can never be given.

2510. Doctrine is said to regard rational things when no other truth of doctrine is acknowledged than what can be apprehended by reason . . .

2542. What the rational acknowledges, for it acknowledges only from confirming proofs.

2776². Mankind then no longer even acknowledged celestial and spiritual things . . .

2891. They ought to think etc. from themselves, but still acknowledge that what is good and true is from the Lord.

2917. From this state the Lord rises again with man when He is acknowledged.

3102. Acknowledgment of Divine truth from illustration in general scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

3120. All acknowledgment and confession are from perception of influx.

3157. Truth is learned but not acknowledged without the consent of both will and understanding . . . consent is acknowledgment itself.

3158². Unless truth is received by good it is not the truth that is acknowledged. thus is not faith.

3160. Acknowledgment that it was of the Lord alone. Sig. 3161^e.

—². The affection of good in the natural man is what acknowledges.

3161³. Good acknowledges nothing else as truth but what agrees with it. 3324³.

3175². Good and truth mutually acknowledge each other. 3179.

—⁴. Truth must be confirmed and illustrated by many things before it is acknowledged.

3385^e. Everyone is permitted to believe truths as he apprehends them, otherwise there would be no reception, because no acknowledgment.

3398⁴. It is good that receives truth to inward acknowledgment.

3539⁴. Before man has been regenerated, he can see with his intellectual faculty, but not acknowledge with his voluntary one.

3762. Truths are not acknowledged, believed and imbed, unless the life is according to them . . .

3796. 'To see,' here, = to acknowledge.

3815. Spirits mutually know each other, not from natural relationship . . .

3905. Interior truth not yet acknowledged. Sig. . . 'To bring forth' = to acknowledge in faith and also in act. . . Spiritual bringing forth is the acknowledgment and faith of truth and good . . . nothing is acknowledged with faith until we live according to it. 3909.

3906. Indignation because interior truth was not acknowledged as outward truth was. Sig. and Ex. . . To acknowledge truth in faith and act is to have a perception of it.

3911. This acknowledgment and conjunction cannot exist from the outward, but only from the inward man. . . How the acknowledgment of truth in faith and act is produced.

3915. Acknowledgment by means of the affection of inward truth. Sig.

— . The Ancients acknowledged such offspring as legitimate.

—². The second degree of affirmation or acknowledgment is here signified . . . There must be affection in acknowledgment. 3919. 3925.

3922. 'To give a son' = to give this truth, which is the same as to acknowledge it, for all truth that is acknowledged is given by the Lord.

3923. This is the first general principle that is to be affirmed or acknowledged . . . Affirmation as well as acknowledgment is the first general principle with the man who is being regenerated, but the last with the man who has been regenerated . . .

—³. 'A lion's whelp' = the first of truth, which is affirmation and acknowledgment.

3928². This delight cannot be dissipated by any other means than an affirmation and acknowledgment of the holy things of faith and of the good of life . . .

3933. The acknowledgment of outward truth. Sig.

3967. 'To open the womb' = to give the faculty of receiving and acknowledging goods and truths.

3993⁹. One who loves himself above others . . . and yet acknowledges and adores God . . .

4015. Unless the acknowledgment of truth is from within, it is not acknowledgment.

— . Conscience is the acknowledgment of truth from within, and also from perception.

4031³. He first acknowledges and believes, and then denies . . . They who acknowledge in heart and then deny, are they who profane, not they who have not acknowledged in heart. Refs. 4289.

4151³. Until he comes to know, then acknowledge, and at last believe that it is of the Lord . . .

4215. Acknowledgment of these truths. Sig. 'To kiss' = conjunction from affection, thus acknowledgment, for conjunction by good and truth involves the acknowledgment of them.

4242. The first acknowledgment of good. Sig.

4358. Acknowledgment. Sig. . . Good is what acknowledges truths.

4601². The profanation of good by separated faith takes place when truth and good are acknowledged and believed, yet the life is contrary to them.

4733. That the acknowledgment and adoration of the Lord's Divine Human is the life of religion . . .

4774. 'Know now whether it is thy son's coat' = whether there is likeness.

4899². That nation did not acknowledge in doctrine, still less in life.

—³. They who acknowledge the Lord from doctrine, and not in the life, have not the Church in them.

4910. 'Know, I pray, whose seal etc. is this' = that it might be known.

4911. 'And Judah knew' . . . 'To know' = to affirm.

4919. 'To bring forth' (children) = to acknowledge in faith and act, and since what is acknowledged in faith and act is produced, 'to bring forth' = production.

5114⁴. As man can not only receive what is Divine, but also appropriate it to himself by acknowledgment and affection, thus by what is reciprocal . . .

5323. Acknowledgment through faith. Sig.

5421. 'And Joseph saw his brethren and knew them' = perception and acknowledgment by the celestial of the spiritual . . . 'To know' = acknowledgment from perception.

5427. 'To know' = to perceive, see, and thus to appear. 5477^e.

5758. No one can be admitted into Heaven until he acknowledges in his heart that nothing of what is good and true is from himself. 5759².

6475. Some Evil Spirits sought for Heavens where the Lord is not acknowledged.

6565. Repentance and acknowledgment of the Divine things of the Church. Sig.

6663. That he may fight against evils and falsities from himself, yet with the acknowledgment, if not at the time, still afterwards, that all the force of resisting is from the Lord.

6717. For nothing acknowledges and receives truth but good.

6779. They who are in evils never acknowledge that charity and its works contribute to salvation, for they cannot acknowledge what is contrary to their life . . .

6872. Perception and acknowledgment of the Divine from love. Sig.

6963⁴. He who knows internal truths but does not acknowledge or believe them, is not inwardly in profanation.

7290⁴. At this day, when not anything from the spiritual world is acknowledged . . .

7902^e. Innocence is to acknowledge that there is nothing but evil in oneself . . .

8390. He who only acknowledges universally that he is a sinner . . . N.162.

8640. The life of the regenerate cannot be given to man before he is in a state that he can acknowledge the truths of faith, and will them in the proportion that he acknowledges them.

8694³. In this state there is the acknowledgment that is of faith.

8708. Reception of the truths of faith does not take place by mere acknowledgment, but by acknowledgment conjoined with life, that is, as they are acknowledged in act.

8772². When truths are known, they are as it were in the door ; when they are acknowledged, they are in the court ; and when they are believed, they are in the bedchamber.

8780². When the understanding is illustrated by this Divine light, he . . . acknowledges truth inwardly in himself, and as it were sees it.

8882². 'The unclean spirit going out' = the acknowledgment and faith of truth.

9019. 'To be found in the hand,' when said of the truth of faith, = acknowledgment, for when that is acknowledged with faith it is found with him.

9020. The reason why they who apply the truths of faith to evils are condemned, is that they have formerly acknowledged them, for when once the truth of faith has been acknowledged, if it is afterwards applied to what is evil, it is mixed up with falsity from evil ; hence is profanation.

9093². To serve the Lord by faith, and the world by love, thus to acknowledge truth and do evil. Sig.

9193. The principal thing of inward worship is to acknowledge the Lord as the one and only God, and that everything good and true is from Him ; those in the Church who do not acknowledge Him cannot be in good, thus not in truth ; they acknowledge who are in faith and at the same time in good of life, but not they who are in evil of life. . . That to acknowledge and worship the Lord is to live according to His commandments.

9262. Innocence is to acknowledge in heart that . . . none can acknowledge this in heart but they who . . .

9264². To deny Divine truth when it has formerly been acknowledged and received with faith . . . is the sin against the Holy Spirit. 9818²⁷. 10287. —². Refs.

9356. They who acknowledge what is incomprehensible, fall in thought into nature and believe in no God. U.118.

9359. The Lord acknowledges and receives all who acknowledge and worship God under a human form . . . When they hear that God is actually a man, they . . . acknowledge. U.121.

10083. 'To agitate' = to vivify by acknowledgment, which is the first of life from the Divine with man ; knowledge does indeed precede acknowledgment, but there is nothing of the Divine life in knowledge until there is acknowledgment, and then faith . . . this Divine life first flows in through acknowledgment.

—⁵. A few words shall be said about this acknowledgment and faith . . . The first thing of all is to acknowledge that the Lord is the Saviour of the world . . . Hence that the Lord might be acknowledged, He asked them about faith. —⁶. —^e. 10089, Ill.

10084. The state after acknowledgment, which is a state of conjunction with good. Sig.

10093. Divine truth is acknowledged in the Spiritual Kingdom, but in the Celestial Kingdom it is perceived. . . . What is received in the intellectual part is said to be acknowledged.

F. 1. That faith is the inward acknowledgment of truth. Gen. art.

2. Faith itself is nothing but the acknowledgment that it is so because it is true . . .

4. They have an inward acknowledgment of truth who are in the spiritual affection of truth.

5. To be in illustration is to be in perception and thence in inward acknowledgment that this or that is true. Sig.

9. They call thought, separated from an inward acknowledgment that it is so, faith . . .

10. 'Blessed are they who have not seen and yet have believed' does not mean faith separated from the inward acknowledgment of truth, but . . .

11. It follows that an outward acknowledgment without an inward is not faith . . . such an acknowledgment is the faith of what is unknown . . .

12. How the inward acknowledgment of truth, which is faith, can be obtained.

13. That inward acknowledgment of truth, which is faith, is given with those only who are in charity. Gen. art. . . Thus does love produce faith which is the same as the acknowledgment of truth, and through this it produces charity . . .

30. There are also many who have not an inward acknowledgment of truth and yet have the faith of charity . . . but still they are in the acknowledgment of truth inwardly or in their spirit, because they are in the affection of it, wherefore when they are instructed by the Angels after death, they acknowledge truths and with joy receive them. But they who have not looked to the Lord and avoided evils from religion, inwardly are in no affection of truth, nor in any acknowledgment of it, wherefore after death, when they are instructed by the Angels, they will not acknowledge truths . . .

P. 87. So far as man through these two faculties can be brought to acknowledge that all good and truth are from the Lord. Gen. art. P.90.

90. When he becomes wise he will acknowledge that it is not from himself . . .

91. That the acknowledgment of the Lord and the acknowledgment that everything good and true is from Him, causes man to be reformed and regenerated. Ex.

—2. There is an acknowledgment of the Lord from wisdom, and there is an acknowledgment of the Lord from love, the acknowledgment of the Lord from wisdom, which, regarded in itself is only knowledge, is given from doctrine, and the acknowledgment of the Lord from love is given from life according to it; the latter gives conjunction, the former presence.

—3. That this is so is also known from the common idea that . . . he who does not acknowledge God cannot be saved.

131. When a mere miracle leads a man to acknowledgment . . . he acts only from the natural man . . .

175. Man is not to perceive the Divine Providence, but to know and acknowledge it. Gen. art.

205. They who have acknowledged only nature and human prudence constitute Hell, but they who have acknowledged God and His Divine Providence constitute Heaven. Gen. art. P.208.

209. Mistake of those who think, if I see Heaven I will acknowledge: their understanding acknowledges, but if their will does not, they still do not acknowledge . . .

227³. If a man first acknowledges the truths of faith, and lives according to them, and afterwards recedes and denies them. Ex. —. P.231⁷. Ex.

228. He who does not know cannot acknowledge and then deny . . . The Jews were unwilling to receive and acknowledge (therefore did not profane); it would have been otherwise had they received and acknowledged and afterwards denied . . . many of them acknowledge outwardly and deny inwardly . . . But they profane who first receive and acknowledge, and afterwards deny.

—². Their receiving and acknowledging in infancy does not matter, because then they do not receive and acknowledge from rationality and freedom . . . But when a man comes into the use of his rationality and freedom, if he then acknowledges truths and lives according to them, and afterwards denies them, he mixes holy and profane things together . . . But if a man is in evil . . . and afterwards acknowledges the truths of faith and lives according to them, he does not mingle holy things with profane . . .

231². They who understand and acknowledge Divine truths, yet live contrary to them. Ex. . . Those who not only understand, but also acknowledge, profane more grievously . . . for acknowledgment conjoins itself; for nothing can be acknowledged without the consent of the will. Examps.

—⁶. Profanation by those who acknowledge the Word yet deny the Divine of the Lord. Ex.

—³. That the Lord provides that a man should not inwardly acknowledge truths, and afterwards recede. Sig.

321. Man should think etc. as of himself, but still acknowledge that it is from the Lord. . .

—⁶. To believe and think (that all good and truth are from the Lord and all evil and falsity from Hell) is impossible to those who do not acknowledge the Divine of the Lord, and who do not acknowledge that evils are sins, but it is possible to those who acknowledge these two things. Ex. (The effect of making these two acknowledgments. —⁷.)

326. The acknowledgment of God effects the conjunction of God with man and of man with God. Gen. art. . . Some may think that they who do not acknowledge God can be saved equally as well as those who do acknowledge Him, if only they live a moral life, saying, what does acknowledgment do? Is it not mere thought? Cannot I easily acknowledge when I know for certain . . . This is their language when they reason freely with an acknowledger—agnitor—of God. But that the acknowledgment of God conjoins. Ex.

—³. In proportion as anyone acknowledges the Lord from the affection of love . . . Hence it is plain what the acknowledgment of God effects.

—⁶. That everyone acknowledges God . . . according to the good of his life. Ex. . . Only they who live well can acknowledge God in heart.

R. 25. 'Every eye shall see Him'=that all who are in the understanding of Divine truth from affection will acknowledge Him.(=that all who are in truths from good will acknowledge. E.37.)

— The rest see and understand but do not acknowledge.

102. 'Be thou faithful unto death'=the reception and acknowledgment of truths . . .

M. 62. Every universal truth is acknowledged as soon as it is heard. Ex.

T. 11. There natural faith, which is only persuasion, becomes spiritual, which is acknowledgment itself.

22². What is life according to His commandments but actual acknowledgment?

68². Unless a man lives according to order, that is, unless he acknowledges God . . .

98. That salvation depends upon the knowledge and acknowledgment of God.

105. This man does from himself, but still acknowledges that it is from God; this he acknowledges because . . .

129. Thus in Heaven He is acknowledged as the Saviour of both worlds.

136³. Who does not know and acknowledge that God is one? If ye acknowledge this in heart and spirit . . .

151. To believe in the Lord is not only to acknowledge Him, but also to do His commandments, 'for only to acknowledge Him is merely of thought from some understanding, but to do His commandments is also of acknowledgment from will . . . wherefore when a man only acknowledges from thought of the understanding . . . Such satans do they become after death who acknowledge the Lord, and do not do His commandments.

165. Truths that reason also acknowledges. —². All who do not acknowledge the Lord as the God of heaven and earth.

167. This everyone acknowledges.

170. A Divine Trinity before the world was created is acknowledged in the Christian Church.

172. Everything that is at this day known and acknowledged about God.

—². Everyone ought to confess or acknowledge that.

177. It is a trinity of gods that is acknowledged and worshipped.

180. This (trinity) they have not acknowledged in one person but in three.

193. Who does not acknowledge and assent when it is said?

246. Hence it was that they (the Jews) did not acknowledge the Messiah.

293. This is the reason why in heart they do not acknowledge any God.

296. All who acknowledge and worship any other God.

—². They who acknowledge and believe in one God.

338². For fourteen centuries the Church has not acknowledged any other faith.

339³. The Lord . . . draws near to everyone as he knows and acknowledges Him, which is as he knows and does His commandments . . .

342. Unless they had first acknowledged that He was the Son of God . . .

344. The Existence of the faith of the New Church is 1. Spiritual sight. 2. The harmony of truths. 3. Conviction. 4. Acknowledgment inscribed on the mind.

354³. Every true worshipper of the Lord, as soon as he hears any truth of faith that he had not known before, at once sees, acknowledges and receives it; the reason is that . . .

— He appeared simple because he had acknowledged the Lord alone.

367. He who acknowledges the Lord, and separates charity, does not acknowledge Him except with the lips; his acknowledgment and confession is only a cold one in which there is not faith . . . He however who does charity and does not acknowledge that the Lord is the God of Heaven and earth . . . does only natural charity. . .

379⁴. It is otherwise with those who do not acknowledge Him as the God of Heaven and earth . . .

380. From a polygamous marriage is all faith that acknowledges the Lord and adopts falsities of heresy; and the faith is from an adulterous one that acknowledges three lords of one Church.

—². Whether faith is a legitimate offspring may be known from these three marks; the acknowledgment of the Lord as the Son of God, the acknowledgment of Him as the God of Heaven and earth, and the acknowledgment that He is one with the Father . . .

416. Wherefore he who loves the Lord's Kingdom loves all . . . who acknowledge the Lord . . .

434². Charity is 'cold' now because the Church has not acknowledged the Lord God the Saviour as the God of Heaven and earth . . .

450. Heresies in which these three essentials, God, charity and faith, have been and are acknowledged . . .

456². The first table involves all things that belong to love to God, the primary of which are that we ought to acknowledge one God, the Divinity of His Humanity and the holiness of the Word . . .

457². God flows in with every man with the acknowledgment of Him in the knowledges that are about Him, and at the same time with His love towards men; the man who receives only the former . . . remains in knowledges without an inward acknowledgment of God . . . but the man who receives both . . . has an inward acknowledgment of God . . .

459¹⁸. Silence followed such as prevails when they see and acknowledge that it is so from the inward man, but not as yet in the outward man.

479. Particulars which everyone acknowledges at the first hearing . . .

496. The love acknowledges it as its own . . .

501. It is believed that everyone would acknowledge at heart . . .

504. Both could perceive truths and acknowledge the truths perceived . . .

508². In this light the acknowledgment of the Lord as the God of Heaven and earth is resplendent in its glory.

521. That this is so everyone acknowledges . . .

526. Know and acknowledge his sins . . .

528. Actual repentance is . . . to know and acknowledge one's sins. Gen. art.

539. There must be confession that he sees, knows and acknowledges his evils . . .

564. The evil that a man does not see, know, and acknowledge, remains.

568². You will then no longer be recognised by your companions, nor they by you.

574. Occurs. 587^e. 614.

580². The acknowledgment of the Lord. 608^e. 615. 637. 682. 766. 799^e.

591. No other inward man is acknowledged.

603. Everyone can see and acknowledge this.

607^e. He then recognises (his spiritual associates) there just as relatives recognise each other here.

636. Did not acknowledge three Divine Persons.

—². They acknowledged no other Son of God.

—^e. This creed has been recognised as truly Catholic by the whole Christian Church.

664^e. To acknowledge any other election is to charge Him with injustice.

681. That a Christian may know and acknowledge the Lord Jesus Christ. 684.

685. That he who acknowledges the Lord and is regenerated is saved. Sig.

699. What true Christian does not acknowledge that . . .

700^e. A New Church in which God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit will be acknowledged as one.

701^e. The preaching of it then becomes the acknowledgment of it.

722. That God is to be acknowledged, in order that anyone may have religion, or that anything of the Church may be in him.

795. The state of everyone there is according to the acknowledgment and worship of God; all who in heart acknowledge God, and henceforward all who acknowledge the Lord Jesus Christ [to be] God the Redeemer and Saviour, are in Heaven, but they who do not acknowledge Him are under Heaven, and are instructed there . . .

D. 2106. That Spirits could recognise themselves in my face when seen in a mirror.

4286. Merely to know is not to acknowledge, and effects nothing.

Aconite. Aconitum.

W. 339². In Hell appear . . . aconites.

T. 324. They who mix aconites with water.

380⁴. Their thoughts are like honey-wine made from aconites.

Coro. 33. Used in the sense of poison in general. 40^e.

Acquaintance. See under KNOW—Nosse.

Acquaintance. Notitia.

T. 698. Without acquaintance with correspondences.

Acquire. Acquirere.

Acquisition. Acquisitio.

A. 340. 'I have gotten a man Jehovah.' 347.

1435. 'All the substance that they had acquired' = all things that are sensual truths. All the Scientific from which a man thinks is called 'substance'; without acquired scientifics man as man cannot have any idea of thought.

1569. 'Their substance was great and they could not dwell together' = the things that have been acquired by the inward man cannot agree with those that have been acquired in the outward man.

1571. Possessions or acquisitions.

1581. Whatever a man has once acquired remains.

1667². (Acquirere and comparare used synonymously.)

1698. 'They took Lot and his substance = the outward man as to apparent goods and truths. 1717. 1718.

1738. Remains acquired in combats . . .

1742. 'Soul' = the life, 'substance' = the rest, which are not so properly the life.

1748. The substance of the king of Sodom = evil and falsity.

1851. 'They shall come out with great substance' = celestial and spiritual good. Ex.

2025. That the Lord acquired all things by His own powers. Sig.

2974. 'To Abraham for a possession' = accepted by the Lord alone. 'A possession' = what is His.

3408. 'Possession of flock and possession of herd' = as to interior good and as to exterior good.

3941⁷. 'Tradings' = acquisitions.

4105. 'He took away all his acquisition and all his substance that he had procured.' . . . 'Acquisition' = truth and 'substance,' good. . . 'Acquisition' in the Hebrew is a word that also sigs. cattle in general.

4106. The acquisitions that were bought were from another source.

4168. Which the Lord acquired by His own power.

4177. That he might acquire for himself the affections of truth.

4244. Acquisitions in their order. Sig.

4337. The acquirement of truth in the natural, treated of.

4391. 'Acquisition' [meaning cattle] = goods and truths in general. 4440.

4487. 'Acquisition,' when it is also cattle, = the good of truth.

6017. 'And they took their cattle and their goods which they had gotten,' . . . 'goods' = truth procured, and also good procured.

6049. 'Cattle,' in the Hebrew, is from a word that also signifies acquisition, and acquisition in the spiritual sense is also the truth from which is good, for good is acquired through truth.

6468. The form of the inward things that he has acquired.

7977. 'Flock and herd, very much acquisition' = good acquired through truth . . . that it has been acquired is signified by 'acquisition,' for all the good of those who belong to the Spiritual Church is acquired through truth . . .

8505. Good no longer acquired through truth. Sig. and Ex. 8516^e. Ex. 8539, Ex.

8510. They wished to acquire it, but it was not given. Sig.

9715⁶. Divine power acquired in the Human.

10019⁵. That He acquired this power when He was in the world. Sig.

Acquire. Comparare.

A. 1505. How these spheres are acquired. . .

1506. He acquired for himself a sphere of being more excellent than others.

1667⁴. Evil Spirits are only allowed to operate into those things which a man has actually acquired for himself . . . wherefore before a man acquires for himself such spheres, the Evil Spirits serve, but as soon as he acquires them, they infuse themselves into him.

3957³. The life which a man has acquired for himself in the world follows him . . . no one can put off the life that he has acquired for himself from infancy . . . as for example, he who has acquired for himself a life of deceit. . .

5402. 'That there was provision in Egypt' = the mind - animus - of procuring for itself truths through scientifics.

—². There are two ways of procuring the truths that are of faith. . .

5664². 'Your silver came to me' = that it will seem like truth procured by them. Their silver coming to him denotes that they bought it, thus that they procured it for themselves; for to buy is to procure . . . and since the truth that is of faith is never procured by any man, but is insinuated and given by the Lord, and yet it seems as if it were [procured] by man, it is said that it will seem like truth procured by them.

—². Nevertheless it appears that the truths which are of faith are procured by man.

—³. They who only know the truths of faith, commit them to memory like any other things of any science; these a man can procure for himself without such influx.

—⁴. These are what a man cannot procure for himself even in the smallest degree. Compare with 6822^e.

S. 59. The first thing with these is that they procure for themselves doctrine from the literal sense of the Word . . . but after doctrine has been procured they see the Word from it. But they who do not procure for themselves doctrine . . .

H. 356. They who through knowledges and sciences have procured for themselves intelligence and wisdom . . .

T. 276. They who believe that they can from their own intelligence procure for themselves knowledges about God . . .

349. That man can contribute something towards the acquiring for himself of faith . . .

356. That a man is able to acquire faith for himself . . . faith in its essence is truth, and truths from the Word can be acquired by every one, and in proportion as any one acquires them for himself, and loves them, he initiates faith into himself . . . unless a man were able to acquire faith for himself, all things that are commanded in the Word concerning faith would be vain . . .

357. That a man is able to acquire charity for himself.

358. That a man is also able to acquire for himself the life of faith and of charity.

588. Man is prosperous and blessed if he acquires for himself wisdom.

Act. Agere. See REACT.

Act. Actus.

A. 99. In this state all man's words, actions etc. are open.

161. How what is inward and what is outward act as one . . . take as an example an action, which unless it has charity or love and faith in it, and the Lord in them, is not an action that can be called a work of charity.

363. Anciently, action and will made one, from the action they plainly saw the will.

1667. Treated of. 3293.

1936³. No one is ever rewarded there for good acts if he has placed merit in them . . . and no one is ever punished for evil acts, if he has acted from an end truly good; it is the ends that are regarded, the acts thence.

2184⁴. They are predicated according to the subject that is treated of.

2294. Infants there are thus taught that they are not to think, speak and act from another.

2301. Infants there who are of a celestial genius, think, speak and act more softly.

2335². Such are therefore judged according to the acts of their life.

2364⁸. Although acts are not good in themselves, still they derive something of good from the end. . .

2818. To the endeavour, but not to the act.

2979. Thus he acts or seems to himself to act from what is good . . . and when truth and good act as one . . .

3183². Of the giver and the receiver, as of the agent and the patient, a like state is perceived.

3203. It then as it were spontaneously flows forth into act.

3451². Disagreement in doctrinal things does not prevent the Church from being one if only there is unanimity as to willing well and acting well. Examp.

3573⁴. When it is believed to be a matter of civil prudence to speak one thing and act another.

3632. Divine order is terminated with man, in his actions, etc. . . the actions that flow from the will are not such things in the body as they are in the will.

3635. The heart and lungs are the two founts of every action etc. of the body. 3887². Ex.

3671. To know and to do good and truth is of the natural . . . when he perceives a delight in doing them . . .

3701⁵. So far as they receive from this new will, so far they receive also from these knowledges, and carry them into act, and believe; but so far as they do not receive from this new will, so far they are indeed able to learn such things, but not to carry them into act.

3727. Man's thought, speech and action, which are the ultimate things of order, are nothing but truths from good.

3741. The will flows into actions through muscular forms.

3748². The will moves the muscles of the whole body, and thousands of scattered fibres to [produce] one action.

— Endeavour produces acts and motions, and endeavour must be in an act or motion for it to exist and subsist.

3843². What is implanted in man from childhood does not become his own until he acts according to it, and this from affection . . . it is no longer carried into act from knowledge or doctrine . . . he then no longer acts from memory, but from his own bent, so that at last they as it were spontaneously flow into act.

3887². Embryos and newly born infants cannot have any . . . voluntary action until the lungs have been opened.

— The influx of the one into the other (good and truth) causes them (spirits) spiritually to feel, and spiritually to act . . . hence is all perception and sensation, and all force and action.

3905. 'To bear' (children)=to acknowledge in faith and in act. Ex. . . The truths of faith not learned for the sake of acting . . . are inwardly against faith.

3913⁵. Man then begins to be delighted with truth, first that he knows it, then that he acts according to it. Examp.

3934². A regenerate man does what is good from the affection of it . . . but one who is to be regenerated does what is good from the affection of truth . . .

—³. The case is the same with every act of the body relatively to the inward things that are of thought and will ; man's internal lives in his external by act or by acting ; if the act or acting is not according to his internal, it is a sign either that it is not the internal that is producing the act, but a movement recurring from custom and habit ; or . . .

393^{8e}. Love is the willing of man, thence it is his thinking, and so it is his acting.

4047. The influent action of these Spirits.

—^e. These Spirits suffer themselves to be acted upon—agi.

4206. Life with man flows in and acts into the various organs . . . the lungs act in one way and the heart in another, and so on ; but still it is one life that actuates all so variously because it is differently received, for it is the form of anything according to which the action is determined.

4247². Good is in the first place and is what principally acts . . .

— . Such is the perpetual circle with man ; everything of knowledge and of thought is insinuated through either sight or hearing into thought, thence into the will, and from the will through thought into act . . . There is a similar circle from the memory, namely, from that sight through thought into the will, and from the will through thought into act ; or if anything stands in the way while in the endeavour of acting, as soon as that is removed, it goes forth into act.

—³. Thus do the truths of faith proceed from the will through thought into act, and if they cannot proceed into act, they are in endeavour ; endeavour itself is inward act, for whenever the opportunity is given it becomes outward act.

4269². Man then no longer acts from truth, but from good, that is, from charity, and he acts from charity when he lives according to the truths of faith, and loves doctrine for the sake of life.

4289². The Israelites were required only to act what was representative of the Church.

4292¹. Man's speech reps. his thought, and his action reps. his will.

4337². Truth in the will and thence in act is called the good of truth . . . Id. 4353². 5295. 5820. Id.

4353². Act precedes, the willing of man follows, for what a man acts from the understanding he at last acts from the will . . . he then no longer does what is good from truth, but from good.

4380. Good is what acts and truth suffers itself to be acted upon. 5194.

4928. Man then acts from good.

4984. Truths of doctrine become goods when a man acts according to them ; action itself so qualifies truths, for all action descends from the will.

5036². When Evil Spirits and Angels combat, [the combat] is carried on about man and his eternal welfare, and it is carried on from the man . . .

5077². It is all over with him—actum est. 5135¹.

5128². Whether a man is natural or rational cannot be known to others from his speech, nor from his action, for the life of the thought that is in his speech and the life of the will that is in his action do not appear to any bodily sense . . . but in the other life that which is in speech and that which is in action are distinctly perceived by those who are in good.

—¹. If a man is rational he speaks from good thought and acts from good will, that is, he speaks from faith and acts from charity ; but if a man is not rational he can then indeed by simulation act as rational, but . . .

5130². He who is in any love continually thinks of the things that belong to it although he is in other things as to thought, speech and action.

5131². In order that end, cause and effect may . . . act as one . . . since they correspond, the end can be in the cause, and actuate the cause, and the cause can be in the effect and actuate the effect, consequently the end through the cause can actuate the effect.

—³. They then act as one ; as for example, when heavenly love is the end, will the cause, and action the effect ; if there is correspondence, then that love flows into will, and will into action, and thus they act as one, so that the action by correspondence may be as it were the love . . .

5173². In everything of nature inwardly there is something acting from the spiritual world ; unless this were so, nothing in the natural world would actuate the cause and the effect ; that which is from the spiritual world in natural things is endeavour, on the ceasing of which action or motion ceases.

—³. The case is the same as with the movements of the muscles, whence comes action . . . that this force or endeavour in action or motion is something spiritual in what is natural is clear, for to think and will is spiritual, whereas to act and to be moved is natural . . . That however which is in the will and thence in the thought is not similar in form to the action that it produces, for the action only represents that which the mind wills and thinks.

5189^e. Thoughts are represented by the fibres, and the actions therefrom by the nerves, which [are formed] from the fibres.

5323. All things of inward endeavour that are of the will . . . have outward acts or gestures corresponding to them, these acts or gestures flow from the correspondence itself.

5337². In like manner it may be said of thought that it goes forth or proceeds when it becomes speech, and of the will when it becomes action. Ex.

5428². The notion that freedom consists in thinking and willing from self, and in being able to act as one thinks and wills without check. Id.

5820. He who has learned truths not in order to will and do them . . .

5862. Those things that are determined from thoughts into speech, and from will into acts in the body, flow ordinarily into act by general influx, according to correspondences with the Grand Man.

5895. The man who acts from truth is in truths through which is good, but he who acts from good is in truths that are from good.

5928. It appears as if truths act of themselves, when they act reciprocally or re-act, but still truths do not act of themselves, but from the good that flows in.

5949³. So with him who in heart fears and honours God; that fear and honour are present in every single thing that he thinks, speaks and acts.

5986. No one either in Heaven or Hell thinks, speaks, wills and acts from himself, but from others. Ex.

6211. I wondered why speech and action are not ruled by particular Spirits, like thought and will, but I have been instructed that speech follows from thought, and action from will, and that this flows from order, thus by general influx; but still there are Spirits assigned to every member of speech and to every member of action, but those Spirits do not know it. H.296.

6396. Good . . . actuates them to live according to truth . . . since they do not act from good but from truth . . .

6405. As soon as a man who is in truth and not yet in good carries anything into act from a religious principle he afterwards defends it . . . for by act he imbues it and loves it. Examp.

6423. The reason why truth is strong is that good acts through truth. Id.

6495. Lest therefore a man, when in such a state, should act as he desires and speak as he thinks, he is kept in bonds . . .

6587³. The internal of the Church consists in willing what is good . . . and its external in doing it . . .

6622. The movements of myriads of motor fibres concur to [produce] one action . . . and yet that little action -actiuncula-appears simple and single. P.199³.

6717. Since what is inward acts into what is outward, and not contrariwise, it is good that acts into truth.

—². Then because he wills the truth that he acknowledges, and acts according to it, it is appropriated to him.

6724². That which acts inwardly prevails immensely over that which acts outwardly. Ex.

6904^e. When truth becomes of life it is called good, but it is truth in act.

7022. There is an image of marriage where there is an agent and a passive, and these must both be present for anything whatever to exist.

7230². 'The sons of Simeon' = the things of faith in act.

7270^e. Unless this single substance reigned in the formations . . . that which is formed could not possibly subsist and act.

7945. 'So did they' = act from the will, for 'did they' is repeated, and the first time it is mentioned it = act from the understanding.

8002⁵. The end is what determines actions, and gives quality to them.

8159. (In temptations) Spirits from Hell excite and bring forth to view all the evil acts and thoughts of the man . . .

8387. He who wants to be saved must . . . perform repentance. N.159.

8389. To perform repentance is . . . to carry on a new life . . . N.161.

8391. He who leads a life of faith daily performs repentance. N.163.

8394. After a man has performed repentance . . . N.169.

8439. Influx from the Divine passes first into perception, thence into will, and then into act, that is, into good work which is use, and there it stops.

8495³. 'Not to do any work on the Sabbath day' = not to do anything from what is their own, but from the Lord, for the state of the Angels is that they will and do nothing from themselves.

8505². Before regeneration, man acts from truth, and through it good is acquired . . . but after regeneration he acts from good, and by it truths are procured. Ex. 8510, Ex. 8516. —³. 8539^e. Ex.

8513. That they did not act according to Divine order. Sig. and Ex.

—². Divine order is that the Lord should flow . . . through man's will into his action . . . 8516². Ex.

8620². 'Books' here = the recollection of all that they had done, for everyone carries with him into the other life the memory of all his acts . . .

— . No one however can judge any man according to his acts but the Lord, for all acts proceed from final causes that lie deeply hidden . . .

—^e. Hence it is evident that the 'book written' = the presence of the acts of each and everyone.

8643². When he begins no longer to act from truth but from good . . . when he acts from truth he is tempted . . . he then wills truths and does them . . .

8648. In the first state when there is action from truth and not from good, good is as it were absent, but in the second state, when there is action from good, good is present . . .

8658. When a man acts from truth and not as yet from good, he is in a state of undergoing temptations; through these he is progressively carried towards the second state, namely that he should act from good . . .

8692. They do not will and act from anything but that the Word has so said. Sig.

8701². Man is not regenerated until he acts from an affection of good . . .

8708. 'The work that they shall do'=faith in act, for it=action, here action from the light of intelligence . . . Acknowledgment in act.

8719. Hence the appearance that they act from themselves, but the perception that [they act] from the Lord . . .

8745. The outward man then makes all good to consist in speaking well about the neighbour and in acting well towards him . . .

8772³. For then he no longer looks from truths [to see] what is to be believed and what is to be done . . .

8987. They who suffer themselves to be regenerated, act from affection according to the precepts of faith, but they who only suffer themselves to be reformed, do not act from affection but from obedience. The difference Ex. . . The latter do not do truth for the sake of truth, nor good for the sake of good. Treated of and Ex. in 8988. 8991.

9012. 'To act from purpose'=from previous thought.

9140. The more a man acts from the body, the less he acts from reason . . .

9393. When truth . . . from the will goes forth into act, it becomes of man's life, and is called good.

9473. Living motion which is action. No action can exist without will; the moment will ceases, so does action, wherefore the internal of action is will.

9812². Will is the soul and the all in action, for when will ceases so does action.

10236⁶. Sensual men are cunning and dexterous in acting and reasoning.

10738⁴. For act is endeavour acting, and thus the two are one . . . endeavour acting is called action . . .

H. 112². So far as a man lives in Divine order . . . so far his acts are uses in form, and are correspondences, by which he is conjoined with Heaven.

483. Love in act is what remains, thus it is the life of man . . . love in act is work and deed.

536. Heaven and Hell . . . two opposites that act against each other, from whose action and reaction there results equilibrium . . . H. 537.

589. Without equilibrium there is not action and reaction, for equilibrium is between two forces of which one acts and the other reacts; rest from a like action and reaction is called equilibrium. Ex.

—². In the natural world that which acts and reacts is called force, and also endeavour, but in the spiritual world that which acts and reacts is called life and will . . .

— . There exists a spiritual equilibrium between good acting on the one hand and evil reacting on the other, or between evil acting and good reacting; the former equilibrium exists with the good, the latter with the evil.

J. 36. The doctrinal things of the Church do not enter a man's life until they enter into his will and thence into his actions . . .

S. 62. The Word treats of the Lord alone.

W. 68. In everything created by God there is reaction; in life alone is there action, and reaction is excited through the action of life, this reaction appears as if it were of the created thing, from the fact that it exists when it is actuated.

— . Hence man from his hereditary evil reacts against God; but if he believes that all good of life is from the action of God, and all evil of life from the reaction of man, reaction thus becomes of action, and man acts with God as if from himself. The equilibrium of all things is from simultaneous action and reaction.

166. For what is natural to act into what is spiritual is altogether against order.

167^e. It appears as if the agent or efficient exists by itself, but this is an appearance . . .

214. In a series of similar degrees are also affection, thought and action; because all affection has relation to love, thought to wisdom and action to use . . . all things of thought and affection are present in action.

215. The ultimate of each series, which is use, action, work and exercise, is the aggregate and containant of all the prior things. Ex.

—². Thus everything of the will and thought are in the action . . .

219. Living motion in man is action, which is produced by these forces from the will united to the understanding . . . the forces are not in power except through the action of the body.

—². The appearance that sometimes there is endeavour and force without action. Ex.

220. From the action alone, done by the hands, the Angels with a man know his whole quality . . . 279, Ex.

263. In the greatest and least things of the universe, both living and dead, there are action and reaction;

hence is the equilibrium of all things, which is taken away when action exceeds reaction, and contrariwise. (This principle applied to the action and reaction of the natural mind and the action and reaction of the spiritual mind, and fully Ex.)

277. That all things of the three degrees of the natural mind are included in works done by acts of the body. Gen. art. The acts or works themselves appear [simple] but there are innumerable things in them. Ex. 278, Ex.

279. Before the Angels, every act of a spiritual man is like delicious, useful and beautiful fruit.

316². Acts and works are ultimates. —⁴.

340². The Spiritual impels nature to act, as a living thing impels a dead one.

424². How it is that those who are in infernal love can speak and act like those who are in spiritual love.

P. 71. It is a law of the Divine Providence that man should act from freedom according to reason. Gen. art.

108. The effects of the spirit, even if they do not come into the act of the body, are still as if in act when there is consent.

131. When a mere miracle moves a man to piety, etc., he acts merely from the natural man . . .

227. Whatever a man . . . acts from will is appropriated to him. . . Ex.

285. The Lord's presence . . . is in the smallest particulars of man's speech and action. Ex.

308². All man's action also flows in. Ex.

321. See SELF at this ref.

R. 484⁴. (The solidifian idea of the act of justification or of faith in act. Ex. and refuted.) T. 505.

875⁷. Will and understanding are nothing without action. Ex. T. 387⁴.

—⁸. Will or endeavour is act in itself, because it is a constant effort to act, which also becomes outward act when a determination is come to; wherefore endeavour and will, as an inward act, are accepted by every wise man, because they are accepted by God, altogether as an outward act, if only it does not fail when opportunity is given. T. 387⁶.

—¹⁴. What is a man's action unless it is the mind acting? . . . Wherefore when the mind is led by the Lord, the action also is led, and the mind and action therefrom are led by the Lord when we believe in Him. . . If the mind is charity, the action also is charity, but if the mind is faith alone, the action also is that faith. . . T. 461¹⁴.

M. 36. Wherefore the speech and action that flow forth from thought, do not flow forth from thought, but from love through thought.

220. From the will, which in itself is spiritual, flow forth actions. . .

293⁵. In all conjunction by love there must be action, reception and reaction; the delicious state of a wife's love is acting or action, the state of a husband's wisdom is recipient or reception and is also reacting or reaction according to perception, and this reaction is perceived by wives with delights in the bosom. . .

B. 64. The enormity that God pays no attention to a man's acts, but to faith only. . . 67.

I. 7³. Influx into speech takes place from the will through the understanding, but influx into actions from the understanding through the will.

T. 105². In a state of conjunction with God, man acts as in the former state, but now from God, and it is not necessary that he should now, as before, attribute to God all the good that he wills and does . . . because this is inscribed on his heart, and thence is inwardly in every action.

154³. This may be illustrated by the action of the heart in the lungs and into them, and by the reaction of the lungs of themselves from the heart . . . it is the same with the action of the heart in and into all the viscera.

—⁴. Hereditary evil acts in man and into man, in like manner good from the Lord . . . if they were to act through man, he would not be reformable, but since both depend on man's free choice, he becomes guilty when he acts of himself from evil, and guiltless when [he acts] of himself from good . . .

—⁵. So also does the internal of man act in the external and into it, but it does not act through the external . . .

— When the Word is in some degree of fulness in the internal of a man, he speaks and acts of himself from the Word, and not the Word through him . . . The Lord also from Himself or from the Word acts in man and into him, but not through him, because man acts and speaks freely from the Lord when [he acts and speaks] from the Word.

—⁶. The soul acts in the body and into it, but not through it, and the body acts of itself from the soul. Ex.

340². When the inward man wills well and the outward acts well, both make one . . . but if the inward man wills evilly, and still the outward acts well, he nevertheless acts from Hell . . .

—³. They can act as one actually, and they can act as one apparently . . .

371⁵. Action and reaction produce this conjunction of the heart with the blood . . . There is a like action and reaction between the embryo and the uterus.

—⁶. But the conjunction of the Lord and man is not effected by act and react, but by co-operations, for the Lord acts and man receives action from Him, and operates as of himself . . .

—⁷. Such is the conjunction of will and action.

395⁶. In operating, these three loves are like will, understanding and action; the will flows into the understanding and there looks out for itself means, by which it produces action.

420. All man's action and speech proceed from the lower region of the mind directly, and from its higher region indirectly. —².

510. It is acts of repentance that form-efficient—the Church with a man; acts of repentance are . . .

532. That true repentance is to examine not only the acts of one's life, but also the intentions of one's will. Gen. art.

— . Action is the will acting. . .

576². In all motion, and thence in all action, there are an active and a passive, that is, the agent acts, and the patient acts from the agent, hence there is one action from both. Examps. . . As to charity and faith, the Lord acts and man acts from Him, for the active of the Lord is in the passive of man, wherefore the power of acting well is from the Lord, and thence the will of acting is as of the man, because he is in free determination, from which he is able to act together with the Lord, and so to conjoin himself, and he is [also] able to act from the power of Hell, which is outside, and so to separate himself. The concordant action of man with the action of the Lord is what is here understood by co-operation.

577. Action and co-operation such as have been described, may be seen in everything that is in any activity and mobility; such is the action and co-operation of the heart and all its arteries; the heart acts, and the arteries co-operate. . . Other examps. given.

588^e. The Lord alone acts, and man suffers himself to be acted upon, and co-operates to all appearance as from himself, although inwardly from God.

593^e. Hence it is that from a single action of man the Angels perceive the quality of his will. . .

607². As will is in action. . .

778. Wherefore all things that proceed from man, whether action or conversation, make the man, and are the man himself.

D. 1252. On the multitude of Spirits who concur to one single action of man.

E. 616. In order to appropriation and conjunction there must be action and reaction. Ex. —².

1146⁵. Nothing can act or move unless it is between two forces, of which one acts and the other reacts.

D. Love (Post.) xix². Hence it is that the will and the act are one.

D. Wis. (Post.) iii². Hence love acts and wisdom reacts, and by this reciprocity every effect exists.

Active. Activus.

Activity. Activitas.

A. 454. No happiness of life without active life. H. 403. Ex.

456. Praising the Lord is not such active life, but is an effect of that life.

718. In the simplest organic [forms] of man there is a passive and an active, and unless these were coupled as it were in a marriage like that of man and wife, they could not be there, still less produce anything. In like manner in universal nature.

1285². Diverse activities of forces and motions in the body.

1504. Man's inward [substances] are in a certain unknown activity . . . the activity of this sphere extends itself . . .

1561. The activity (of that celestial state) is thus described. Worship itself is nothing but a certain activity existing from the celestial within; the celestial itself can never be without activity; worship is the first activity . . . all good of love and of charity is the essential activity itself.

1589². The rational in itself is nothing unless affection flows into it and makes it active . . .

1831^e. Since they correspond to each other, as active and passive, it is called correspondence.

6410. Delight from good and pleasantness from truth, which constitute blessedness in Heaven, do not consist in idleness but in activity . . . Delight and pleasantness endure permanently, and are continually elevated in activity, and constitute blessedness. Activity with those in Heaven consists in performing uses . . .

6482^e. The reason why the Angels are His ministries is that they may be in active life, and thence in happiness.

6987. Man's thought is active and passive. Ex. 'The mouth of man'=active, or speaking thought. —². Ex.

—^e. Active thought is the speech of man's spirit.

—⁶. This influx of love and wisdom is the activity itself from which is all the delight that is called Good.

I. 11. Both an active and a passive are necessary to every operation; it is the same with the spiritual and the natural, the spiritual, being a living force, is active, and the natural, being a dead force, is passive. T.607².

T. 110⁶. Attributes all activity to the Lord. 150.

188¹⁰. Man's activity does not proceed from the soul through the body, but out of the body from the soul.

471. Life is the inmost activity of the love and wisdom that are in God, and are God . . .

472. Activity itself, regarded in itself, is not creatable. . . Sound, which is the activity of the atmosphere, is not creatable; neither is heat, which is the primary activity . . .

—². It is from creation that where there are actives there are also passives; if the actives were creatable, like the passives, there would have been no need of a sun . . .

—³. The (natural) sun consists of created substances the activity of which produces fire.

A. 164. No one can be admitted into Heaven unless he has something of innocence in him. Sig.

453. Some have so gross an idea of Heaven as to suppose it to be mere admission, indeed that it is a chamber into which they are admitted by the door.

537. To be admitted into Heaven is of the Lord alone.

1755. The Lord provides and disposes each and all things, but some from permission, some from admission, some from leave, etc.

2039⁷. They with whom this circumcision was rapidly represented in the World of Spirits wished to be admitted into Heaven, and before they were admitted, this was represented.

2357². Therefore care is taken of the Lord's Providence that a man is not admitted into acknowledgment itself and faith of heart further than he can be kept in them.

2359. No one can be admitted into the Lord's Kingdom, that is, into Heaven, unless he is in the good of love and of charity.

2816. The preparation of the Divine Human to admit and support these temptations treated of . . . The Lord admitted temptations into Himself in order to expel thence all that was merely human. . . That the Lord admitted into Himself temptations. . .

3938⁸. Every one can be admitted into Heaven, because Heaven is denied by the Lord to none, but whether they can live there they can know if they are admitted. Some who had constantly believed this were also admitted, but . . . when they came there they began to be tortured . . . 8945⁵. H. 525. 526. R. 611³.

4225². But they are only admitted to the first entrance, that is, to those who are still simple. . .

4226. Recently arrived Spirits have sometimes complained . . . that they are not admitted into Heaven, for they have had no other opinion concerning Heaven than of admission from grace; but it has sometimes been replied to them that Heaven is denied to none, and if they desire they will be admitted, some also were admitted into the heavenly Societies that were nearest to the entrance. . . 4674³. 4721². 4783³. See also D. 4260.

4255⁴. The dividing of the Jordan and their going through on dry ground signified the removal of evils and falsities and the admission of those who are in goods and truths.

4287. He admitted into Himself all the Hells in their order. . .

4295². Nor is any one admitted into Heaven unless he knows and believes these things. . .

5058. A certain deceitful one . . . was admitted into a Society where were simple good, who in less than an hour began to lament that he had taken away from them the perception of good and truth . . . then somewhat of light from an interior Heaven was admitted, in which he appeared there like a devil. . .

5342⁴. The man of the Church . . . supposes that Heaven is only admission; but he is much mistaken, for no one can be admitted and received into Heaven unless he has received spiritual life. . .

5553. The Societies to whom the cuticles correspond are in the entrance to Heaven; and to them there is given a perception of the quality of the Spirits who approach the first limit, whom they either reject or admit.

5758. Man after death cannot be admitted into Heaven until he acknowledges in his heart that there is nothing of good and truth from himself, but from the Lord, and that whatever is from himself is nothing but evil.

6427². Hence it is evident that . . . the spiritual cannot be admitted into Heaven except through Divine means. . .

9506². That it is worship from the good of love that is received is because no one is admitted into Heaven, thus to the Lord, but he who is in good . . .

10225¹⁰. Wherefore a man is not admitted into temptations . . . before he is in a state of intelligence. . .

H. 2. Those who have the idea of three Divines cannot be admitted into Heaven. . .

535(ee). That no one is admitted into Heaven by merely thinking, but by at the same time willing and doing what is good.

L. 55³. No one can be admitted into Heaven who thinks of three gods.

61². The universal Heaven acknowledges the Lord alone, and he who does not acknowledge is not admitted into Heaven. R. 469³.

S. 61³. I have also seen these admitted into Heaven, but when they found there that they were without truths they were cast down. . .

P. 231⁶. Therefore they who deny the Lord's Divine cannot be admitted into Heaven, and be in the Lord.

338³. It is also concluded from this natural state that salvation is only admission to the Angels in Heaven, and that admission is of immediate mercy. . .

W. 7². Man can comprehend this with natural thought if he will only admit into it something of spiritual light. 8.

Adolescence. Adolescentia.

Young. Adolescens.

A. 553. They who are in mutual love in Heaven, continually advance towards the springtime of their youth. . .

1401. These things rep. the Lord from His first childhood even to adolescence.

1472². On account of this end the Lord insinuates the delight which childhood and youth perceive in the sciences.

1616⁴. The celestial things which are of love are insinuated from first infancy even to childhood, and also to adolescence as man is then and afterwards imbued with sciences and knowledges. If the man is such that he can be regenerated, these sciences and knowledges are filled up with celestial things which are of love and charity, and thus are implanted in the celestial things with which he was gifted from infancy to childhood and adolescence, and thus his outward is conjoined to his inward man. They are first implanted in the celestial things with which he was gifted in adolescence, afterwards in those with which he was gifted in childhood, and at last in those with which he was gifted in infancy.

1661. This treats of the Lord's first combat, which was in His childhood and first youth.

1872. Afterwards a young girl flew to the right cheek.

1906⁶. Afterwards, when he grows up, little by little this good, innocence and peacefulness recede.

—³. When he grows up he is imbued with truths.

2289. Infants there grow up as they advance in intelligence and wisdom.

3067. Affections of good and truth are called 'infants,' 'girls,' 'young women'—adolescentulae—and 'daughters,' but everywhere with a difference as to state . . . 'young woman' = affection in which there is charity.

3081⁷. 'Young women playing with timbrels' = affections of truth. Young women are distinguished from virgins by means of innocence, virgins are so called from marriage love, thus those who are in innocence, for marriage love is innocence itself.

3131³. As man progresses from infancy and grows up and matures in judgment.

3254. The Angels have no idea of the things of time, as the ages of man, namely infancy, childhood, youth, adult age and old age. . . Instead of the time of childhood and youth they have the idea of a state of affection of good and truth. . .

3308. 'The boys (Esau and Jacob) grew up' = the first state, namely of conjunction of good and truth. . . 'To grow up,' when predicated of good and truth, = the first state of progress. . . Good and truth . . . are conceived, are in the womb, are born, grow up, and advance in age even to the last one; their conception, gestation and birth belong to the state of arising; their growing up and advancing in age belong to the state of progress. The state of progress follows from the birth, and is a state of conjunction of good and truth. The first of this state is what is here sig. by growing up. This state commences after birth and is continued to the end of life. . .

3309. Sensual things are those in which children are, scientific things are those in which they are when they grow up.

3701⁶. This is the state of infancy and childhood as to the new life . . . but the state of its adolescence and youth-juventutis-is. . .

4760²³. (Why man grows up so slowly.)

4792. Spiritual food is knowledge, intelligence and wisdom . . . and by means of this food Spirits and Angels grow up.

4845. 'Until Shelah my son grows up' = when it is time. 'To grow up' = to be of that age, thus when it is time.

5135². Man from infancy up to childhood, and sometimes to the first adolescence, imbues goods and truths through instruction from parents and masters. . .

5280³. Into this state (of reformation) are introduced many who are in the Church from infancy up to adolescence, yet few are regenerated.

—⁴. As soon as they come to the age of adolescence they suffer themselves to be carried away by the world.

5342². When the age of childhood commences, he by degrees puts off the state of innocence, but is still kept in a state of charity through the affection of mutual charity towards his like, which state with many lasts up to adolescence, he is then among the spiritual Angels, afterwards, because he begins to think for himself. . .

5470. When a man grows up, and begins to rule himself from himself . . .

—². When therefore a man betakes himself to evils, as takes place with most in adolescence.

5497. As soon as he grows up and forms conclusions from sensual things to causes, thus begins to think from the interior natural . . . But when he becomes a youth, as he then matures . . . he forms reasons. . .

6751. Man advances in the things of faith during his regeneration, almost as he does in the truths not of faith, while he is growing up. While he is growing up sensual things are the first plane, afterwards scientific things. . .

6766^e. Those who are in the age of adolescence and early youth . . . believe the doctrinal matters of their Church to be real truths, and hence decide upon falsities, but are not able, as yet, to settle disagreements between those things that are matters of faith within the Church.

6959². Those who are of the Spiritual Church, in their childhood, and afterwards in adolescence, have faith in the doctrinal matters of their own Church, but at that time they have faith from parents and masters.

10225. The third state is from the twentieth to the sixtieth year of age, which state is a state of intelligence, and is called adolescence, youth and manhood.

H. 4. That infants grow up in the Heavens. 340.

295. The Spirits are changed with man according to the changes of his affections, hence there are some Spirits with him in infancy, others in childhood, others in adolescence and youth, and others in old age. . . In adolescence and youth Spirits are present who are in affection of truth and of good, and thence in intelligence, thus who communicate with the Second or Middle Heaven.

340². That infants as they are perfected in intelligence and wisdom, appear more mature (in Heaven), thus as youths and young men and women, is because intelligence and wisdom are spiritual nourishment itself. . . Infants in Heaven do not advance in age beyond early youth. . . M.411².

533³. The difficulty of resisting evils increases in proportion as a man does evils from the will . . . but this takes place with those who in mature age rush into evils without check, and at the same time reject Divine things from the heart.

P. 79². If a man in childhood and youth has appropriated to himself any evil by doing it from the delight of the love of it . . .

277⁴. As he becomes a child or grows up he comes from that external to interior things, and at length to the reigning love of his father. . .

M. 42³. The husband appeared in a middle age between adolescence and youth.

90. The affection of the male . . . is the affection of knowing in childhood, the affection of understanding in adolescence and early youth, and the affection of being wise from this youth even to old age.

185. The general states of the life of man are called infancy, childhood, adolescence, youth, and old age.

411^e. That I might know for certain that infants (in Heaven) grow and mature in stature as they do in intelligence, it has been granted to speak with some while they were infants and afterwards when they were grown up, and they were seen grown up, in a like stature to that of grown up youths in the world. Compare H.340^e.

444². We came as infants into this Heavenly World, and were educated under the Lord's auspices, and after I had become adolescent . . .

—⁸. That those who die as infants grow up in Heaven, and when they attain the stature of youths of eighteen years in the world, and of virgins of fifteen years, they stop in it.

446. That the love of the sex, from which is fornication, commences when a youth begins to think and act from his own understanding, and the tone of his voice begins to be masculine.

T. 42. The second region of the mind . . . is opened from childhood to adolescence, and this is effected through thoughts from sciences; and the highest region . . . from adolescence to youth. . .

106. The first state is represented with every man by his state of infancy and childhood even to his youth—ephebatum, adolescence and youth—juventutem, which is a state of humiliation before his parents.

344. Infant faith, adolescent faith, adult faith.

443. Moral life with children even to the first adolescence is natural.

T. 329². No one can be adopted by the Lord before he is separated from the devil.

380. Adopts falsities.

383. Man can choose, adopt and appropriate to himself good or evil.

503⁵. Concerning redemption we have adopted purely natural ideas.

536. All such are accepted by the Lord and are adopted after death.

Adore. Adorare.

Adoration. Adoratio.

A. 14. Jesus Christ is acknowledged and adored as Lord in universal Heaven.

66^e. The style of the Most Ancient Church, which they adored.

349. 'From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants,' (Zeph. iii. 10.)

1094. Outward adoration without the adoration of the heart.

—². Such are very prone to adore any god or idol that favours their cupidities.

1150. The essential of worship is the adoration of the Lord from the heart . . . in charity the Lord is present, and then He can be adored from the heart; thus adoration is from the Lord, for the Lord gives all the posse and all the esse in adoration; hence such as is the charity with a man such is the adoration, or worship; all worship is adoration, because the adoration of the Lord must be in it to make it worship.

1153. All the differences of both outward and inward worship are according to the adoration of the Lord in it, and adoration is according to love to the Lord and towards the neighbour.

—². All true worship consists in the adoration of the Lord, the adoration of the Lord (consists in) humiliation . . . the more a man is in humiliation the more he is in adoration, that is, in true worship.

1286. Inward worship, from which is adoration.

1690⁴. 'Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God.'

1999. 'Abram fell upon his faces' = adoration. This was a rite of adoring in the Most Ancient Church . . . True adoration or humiliation of heart has in it prostration on the earth upon the face before the Lord . . . it is otherwise with adoration that is not from humiliation of heart.

—². That the Lord adored and prayed to Jehovah His Father . . . In His state of humiliation He adored Jehovah as another than Himself. 2159².

2327. So far as a man is in the acknowledgment of self, so far he can be in true humiliation, and so far in adoration when he is in worship; if humiliation is separated from worship there is nothing of adoration, thus nothing of worship.

2329⁴. They who are truly men of the Church . . . adore the Lord alone . . .

2412. A dissimilar state of humiliation and thence of adoration (in these two cases).

2423. How greatly the adoration, and thus the worship, of those who are in the affection of truth differs from that of those who are in the affection of good: for in order that there may be worship there must be adoration, and that there may be adoration there must be humiliation in all and every single thing of worship.

2604. The Gentiles who have adored another god . . . They also who have adored men . . . How instructed? H.326.

4221^e. They who are in self-love only adore themselves as gods, and so also will to be adored by others, in all that they do being intent upon that.

4687². The Most Ancient Church adored the Infinite Esse, and thence the Infinite Existing, and because they could have no perception of the Infinite Esse . . . they adored the Infinite Existing in which was the Infinite Esse.

4688. Adoration signified by the bowing of the sheaves. 4689.

4724^e. They who live the life of faith adore the Lord on bended knees and with a humble heart as God the Saviour. 4731^e.

4733. The acknowledgment and adoration of the Lord's Divine Human is the life of religion.

4766². The adoring of a trinity that is not a unity. . . When three gods are adored where is the Church then?

5323. 'Bend the knee'=adoration.

— If adoration is from genuine humiliation . . .

—². The ceremony of this adoration arose when it was known what was represented, and kings did not then attribute the adoration to themselves . . . royalty with them was the law, which, because it was from Divine truth, was to be adored in the king as its guardian . . . adoration other than that of the law in the king would be idolatry.

5957. The Lord does indeed require humiliation, adoration, etc., but only for man's own sake. Ex.

6266. They who are in adoration of God from the heart thus bow themselves.

6396⁴. They who are in truth and not yet in good adore outward things, and do not care for inward ones.

6700. They adore the Divine not as a Divine utterly incomprehensible . . . and since they adore the Divine under a human form they adore the Lord . . . They said that they adore with most holy worship the Divine that shines as a sun in Heaven. . .

6876³. That in ancient times they adored Jehovah under a Divine Human.

7272³. They who approach dead men with supplication as holy, and thus adore them . . .

7801. (A kind of Spirits from Jupiter who suffer themselves to be adored by others.)

8869. Those of them who love themselves, adore what belongs to themselves, and also will that they should be adored by others, yea as gods . . .

9377. Humiliation and adoration from the heart.

Sig. The essential of all adoration and of all worship is humiliation . . .

—². The Israelitish people were not in such humiliation and adoration, but only represented it . . . They who adore from the love of God from themselves, adore from the love of self . . .

9475. 'Incense'=those things of worship that are gratefully perceived, as confessions, adorations, prayers.

10143⁴. They who place all worship in adoration and in prayers . . . when yet the Lord regards nothing else in the man who is in adoration and prayers but his heart . . .

10424. 'To adore'=to worship as good itself, 'to sacrifice'=to worship as truth itself.

10559². If those who are in mere externals venerate and adore God it is for their own sake . . . this is the fire that excites their veneration and adoration.

10625. 'To adore'=worship.

825. Gehenna, where there are shameless women who have placed all their delight in adulteries and have accounted adulteries not merely as allowable but also as honourable. Their Hell Des. D.3194. 3206.

826. Some, of both sexes, from the so-called Christian world, who in the life of the body thought adulteries not only allowable, but even holy, and have had common marriages, as they wickedly called them, under a show of holiness. Their lot. D.3466.

827. They who ensnare by marriage love and by love towards infants, working so that the husband has no suspicion, commit adultery more safely. They are in Hell under the buttocks, in the most filthy excrements, and are devastated until they become like bones, because they are deceitful. Such do not even know what conscience is. I spoke to them, and they wondered that any one should have conscience, and should say that adulteries are against conscience. It was said to them that it is as impossible for such adulterers without conscience to go to Heaven as it is for a fish to go into the air, because when they only approach, they feel suffocation, and such delight is turned into a stinking smell; therefore they cannot but be thrust down into Hell, and become at last like bones, with but little life, because they have acquired such a life that when they let it go very little indeed of life truly human remains. See also below at 5060.

831. Self-indulgent and worldly women who place the whole life in outward decorum and a life of pleasures, and who can insinuate themselves into the cupidities and pleasures of others with the end of ruling . . . are very prone to adulteries so far as they can be hidden. Des.

1008. He commits profanation who knows the truths of faith, and still more he who acknowledges and preaches them, and yet lives in hatreds, cruelty, adulteries, etc. and confirms such things from the Word.

—². When the idea of marriage occurs, then, if he has been an adulterer, all filthy and obscene things of adultery, even of thought, come forth; in like manner all the things by which he has confirmed adulteries . . .

1032³. From the so-called Christian world come the worst of all . . . adulterers before all in the whole world; not so much so from the other parts of the world, for very many of those who have worshipped idols are of such a disposition that they feel horror at hatreds and adulteries, and fear Christians, because they are such. 1866, Preface ^e.

1096^e. With such there is not good, but only what counterfeits it, as the delight of hatred and adulteries, which, regarded in itself, is nothing but an excrementitious delight, into which also it is turned in the other life. 1514.

1106. Have not lived in adulteries etc. like others.

1307. Adulteries, like all evils, are derived from selflove. 2045.

1773^e. Evil Spirits can produce heat . . . but it becomes putrid and goes into what is excrementitious, like the heat of adulterers.

1798². The commandment 'Thou shalt not commit adultery' is of charity, for he who is in the life of charity does rather guard the neighbour's wife, and regards adultery as a crime against conscience and destructive of marriage love.

2116³. They who have thought and exercised adulteries etc., and thus have lived in no charity; the life thus contracted remains with them after death, yea, all and every single thing of it, which successively return; hence their torment in Hell.

2220. Abominations springing from self-love are represented in the Word by adulteries of various kinds. 2322.

2243. The falsity from evil is all that a man thinks when he is in evil; as when he is in adultery, he then thinks about adultery, that it is allowable, decorous, the delight of life, and promotes offspring.

2313. This good still more adulterated and falsified. Treated of.

2354². Account adulteries as nothing.

2466. Adulterations of good and falsifications of truth are generally described in the Word by adulteries and whoredoms, and are so called.

—². When celestial and spiritual things are perverted in a lower sphere, they are turned into such things as belong to adulteries and whoredoms, hence it is that contaminations of good and perversions of truth are described in the Word by adulteries and whoredoms. Ill. 2729.

—⁸. 'To commit adultery with the wives of companions' = to teach what is false as from them.

2483. The adulteries etc. of a Siren, that had been known to hardly anyone here, were opened and recited in a series, to almost a hundred.

2727. On marriages and adulteries. Gen. art.

—¹. Adulterers perceive their own stench when they merely approach heavenly Societies, and precipitate themselves towards Hell.

—^e. He himself would have detested adulteries if anyone had so treated his own wife.

2741. The influx of marriage love is turned into adulteries by adulterers.

2744^e. Sirens are they who are in the persuasion that it is honourable to commit whoredom and adultery, and who have been held in esteem on that account, and because of their elegant way of living. Most of them come from Christendom. Refs.

2747. Since adulteries are contrary to marriage love, adulterers cannot be with the Angels in Heaven . . .

—¹. Adulterers are in the disposition of destroying societies; many of them are cruel, thus in heart they are against charity and mercy. Their religious principles described. This is because adulteries are altogether against good and truth.

2748. Spirits who had carried on a life of adultery in the world came to me. (The filthiness of their thoughts perceived.)

2749. They who through adulteries have contracted a loathing for marriages. When anything delightful, blessed and happy comes from Heaven, it is turned with them into what is loathsome, then into what is painful, and at last into stench, so that they precipitate themselves thence towards Hell.

2750. When anyone commits adultery on earth Heaven is at once closed to him, and he afterwards lives merely in worldly and corporeal things . . . 8904². Ex.

3310³. When he is in good he begins to be averse to adulteries, etc.

3398. 'To lie with'=to be perverted or adulterated. 3399.

3399. Adulteries etc. in the Word=perversions of good and falsifications of truth, because adulteries are altogether against marriage love so as to be destructive of it, and marriage love is from the marriage of good and truth, hence those things that are against good and truth are called 'adulteries.' But they who are of the Spiritual Church are not able to adulterate good so as to profane it . . .

3402. They who are in the Spiritual Church can adulterate, yea profane, truth, but not good.

3469⁴. They who are in the natural good of the love of evil are, from that good, compliant to filthy pleasures, adulteries, even to cruelties; but they who are in the natural good of falsity have a proclivity to every kind of falsity.

4214⁴. They who love adulteries and laugh at those who believe marriages to be holy are among those who are in fatuous light and believe themselves to be more enlightened than others.

4434. Adulterations of good are understood by 'adulteries,' and falsifications of truth by 'whoredoms.' Ill. 6348². 6432⁵. 8904². P.233¹⁰.

4464². The sphere of one who is in pleasures from hatred, adulteries etc. is as bad as a natural sphere of the smell from carcasses, dung, etc.

4552⁹. 'To commit whoredom'=to falsify truths, and 'to commit adultery'=to pervert goods.

4601. 'To commit adultery'=to pervert or adulterate goods.

4631. An excrementitious mingled with a cadaverous odour exhales from the Hell where are adulterers who are also cruel.

4843². 'Daughters-in-law committing adultery'=the doctrine of falsity from which is the life of evil.

5051². A great dog seen that signified a guard lest a man should pass over from heavenly marriage love to the love of adultery, which is infernal. D.2614. De Conj. 104, Ex.

5057. Such dwell under the left heel where are adulterers who are also cruel. D.2621. See also below at D.2611.

5059. They who have lived in adulteries cause a pain in the loins . . . their Hell is under the hinder part of the loins, under the buttocks, where they pass their time in dirt and excrement, for these things are delightful to them because they correspond to their pleasures. De Conj. 110.

5060. They who are in what is contrary to marriage love strike pain into the testicles. These are they who act insidiously through love, friendship and kind offices.

—². (A cohort of such Spirits seen and described.)

—³. (Their insidious arts in the world described.) They wondered that anyone should have conscience about adulteries . . . Such are, with rare exceptions, from the Christian world. D.4082 et seq. De Conj. 63 et seq. 111.

5084⁷. A sensual man believes from fallacies that adulteries are allowable. The reasonings by which he so concludes.

5345⁶. Truth can only enter into marriage with good; if with anything else, it is not marriage, but adultery, and what is multiplied from that adultery is spurious, thus not true.

5714. (One who had been a great adulterer seen and described.) He inflicted pain on the periosteums and the nerves there and on the toes of the left foot . . . and also on the inside of the teeth. His sphere also induced a great oppression in the stomach.

5990. There are at this day very many spirits who wish to flow not only into the thoughts and affections of man, but also into the speech and actions . . . these have been adulterers, that is, they have perceived delight in adulteries, and have persuaded themselves that they are allowable; also such as had been cruel, the reason is that both the former and the latter are corporeal and sensual above all others . . .

6203. (The progress of a man in adultery etc. described.)

6310^e. In this gross sensual lumen are especially misers, adulterers, etc.

6311. Sirens, because they have been adulteresses above all others . . . are not able to see other Spirits except those who are in sensual lumen.

6666³. Adulteries are now held to be honourable and they who deem otherwise are laughed at . . .

8468. 'A woman, an adulteress'=the Church among the Israelites.

8904. 'Thou shalt not commit adultery'=that the things of faith and charity are not to be perverted; thus the Word is not to be applied to confirm falsities and evils, also that the laws of order are not to be inverted. Ex. and Ill.

—². They who find all the delight of life in adulteries cannot receive anything of faith.

— . In kingdoms where the Church is, adulteries are now accounted as nothing. Why?

—⁶. That to commit adultery and whoredom is to pervert the goods and truths of the Church. Ill.

—¹⁰. 'To commit adultery'=from one's own heart, that is, from proprium, thus as the loves of self and of the world persuade, to explain and to pervert the truths of the Word.

—¹². Adulteries are in themselves so wicked, and are called abominations, because they correspond to the marriage of falsity and evil.

9188⁶. 'Adulterers'=those who destroy goods.

9324. Protection from falsifications of truth and adulterations of good. Sig.

— . 'Disease'=adulterated goods.

9961⁴. Adulteries are so profane that nothing is more so, since they are destructive of Heaven and the Church with man.

10174. Adulteries are profane . . . the delight of adulteries ascends from Hell.

10175. They who take delight in adulteries can no longer receive good and truth from Heaven; hence it is that they who take delight in adulteries afterwards lightly esteem and also deny in heart the things of Heaven and the Church, the reason is that the love of adultery is from the marriage of evil and falsity.

10624^e. He who has confirmed with himself that adulteries are not evils, and thence does them, is in the evil of falsity.

10648². 'To commit adultery'=illegitimate conjunction with good.

H. 374. More adulteries committed and also confirmed within the Church than out of it, although their delight is nothing but the delight of the love of falsity conjoined with evil.

384. The Angels regard adulteries as profane, because they are contrary to marriage love, and because in adulteries they regard the marriage of falsity and evil, which is Hell, therefore as soon as they hear adultery mentioned they turn themselves away; which also is the reason why Heaven is closed against a man when he commits adultery from delight.

—². The reigning delight in Hell is the delight of adultery, and the delight of adultery is also the delight of destroying the conjunction of good and truth . . . Hence it follows that the delight of adultery is an infernal delight altogether opposite to the delight of marriage, which is heavenly delight.

—(s). Refs. on the subject of adultery.

386. How the delights of adultery progress towards Hell, and by degrees to the lowest one where there is nothing but what is direful and horrible. Such a lot awaits adulterers after their life here. By adulterers are meant those who perceive delight in adulteries, and not in marriages.

488⁶. They who have taken delight in adulteries spend their time in brothels, where all things are sordid and squalid . . .

489⁷. They who have reputed adulteries as wicked, and have lived in chaste love of marriage are pre-eminently in the order and form of Heaven and thence in all beauty. (Their happy lot described.)

531². Although such a man does not commit adulteries, he is a perpetual adulterer because he believes them to be allowable . . .

N. 18. If good is adjoined to the falsity of evil, it is no longer good, but evil, because adulterated.

S. 67. 'Thou shalt not commit adultery.' Man, by committing adultery, understands to commit adultery, to commit whoredom, to do obscene things, to speak lascivious ones and to think filthy ones. A Spiritual Angel, by committing adultery, understands adulterating the goods of the Word and falsifying its truths. But a Celestial Angel by committing adultery understands denying the Divine of the Lord and profaning the Word. Life 74. 78. 79. Ill. T. 236².

Life 74. So far as any one shuns adulteries of every kind as sins, so far he loves chastity. Gen. art.

— Adultery is so great an evil that it may be called diabolicalness itself, for he who is in natural adultery is also in spiritual adultery, and contrariwise. But they are in adulteries of every kind at once who from faith and life do not make adulteries to be sins.

75. That so far as anyone shuns adulteries, so far he loves marriage, or what is the same, so far as anyone shuns the lasciviousness of adultery, so far he loves the chastity of marriage, is because the lasciviousness of adultery and the chastity of marriage are two opposites, wherefore so far as he is not in one, so far he is in the other.

76. No one can know the quality of the chastity of marriage except he who shuns the lasciviousness of adultery as sin . . . The lasciviousness of adultery and the chastity of marriage stand in the same relation to each other as do Heaven and Hell, and the lasciviousness of adultery makes Hell with man, and the chastity of marriage, Heaven.

77. He who does not from faith and life make adulteries to be sins, is not a Christian, nor has he any religion : and contrariwise, he who shuns adulteries as sins, and still more he who on that account is averse to them, and still more he who on that account abominates them, has religion, and if he is in the Christian Church, is a Christian.

111. He who abstains from adulteries and whoredoms from fear of the civil law and its penalties, from fear of the loss of reputation and honour . . . from poverty, from avarice, from impotence, and other such external reasons, yea, if he abstains from them from any natural or moral law, and not at the same time from a spiritual law, is nevertheless inwardly an adulterer and whore-monger, for none the less does he believe that they are not sins, and hence before God does not make them unlawful in his spirit, and so in spirit he commits them . . . wherefore after death he openly speaks for them. M.153. 494^e. T.316. E.1009.

F. 49. There are two evil religious principles into which every Church degenerates, one that adulterates its goods, and one that falsifies its truths ; the former arises from the love of ruling, and the latter from the pride of man's own intelligence.

P. 109. Such (hypocrites) are adulterers, when from the rationality that every man has, they speak about the chastity of marriage.

144². When a man is in the cupidity of adultery, his will, which is in the delight of his love, impels his understanding to confirm it, saying . . .

— Adultery destroys this form of love, and with it the image of the Lord, and what is horrible, an adulterer mingles his life with the life of the husband in his wife, and since this is profane, Hell is called adultery, and moreover the love of adultery communicates with the lowest Hell.

225. As an adulterer loves a noble courtesan . . . his inward man is that adulterer . . .

231³. He who confirms evil loves, does violence to Divine goods, and he who confirms false principles does violence to Divine truths, the latter violence is called the falsification of truth, the former the adulteration of good : both are meant by 'bloods.'

233¹⁰. If good with its truth were to be received by the will before a man had removed evil in the outward man, the will would adulterate the good and the understanding would falsify the truth by mingling them with evils and falsities thence derived. When the will is in evil it adulterates good in the understanding, and adulterated good in the understanding is evil in the will. . . Adulterations of good and falsifications of truth are produced by reasonings from the natural man who is in evil, and also by confirmations from the appearances of the sense of the letter of the Word.

—¹¹. The love of self surpasses all other loves in the genius of adulterating goods and falsifying truths . . .

296⁴. The delight of adulteries would also go on increasing, unless it were provided that that evil should decrease in potency according to abuse . . .

318⁷. Who can feel the spiritual uncleanness of adultery except he who is in the spiritual cleanness of chastity ?

R. 134. 'To commit whoredom' = to adulterate the goods and falsify the truths of the Word. Ill. . . They who have confirmed faith alone even to the exclusion of the works of charity are in the lust of the adultery of a son with his mother. This adultery is signified by the adultery of Reuben with Bilhah. D.4230. 4235.

315^e. 'A woman an adulteress' = truth falsified.

620. 'Not defiled with women' = they had not adulterated the truths of the Church.

719. 'I will shew thee the judgment of the great whore' = revelation of that religiosity as to its profanations and adulterations of the truths of the Word.

— That by committing harlotry, adultery-moechari-, whoredom, and adultery = to falsify and adulterate the Word. Refs.

—². To apply the truths of the Word to obtain dominion over the holy things of the Church is to adulterate them.

720. 'With whom the kings of the earth have committed whoredom' = that it has adulterated the truths and goods of the Church that are from the Word. 'To commit whoredom' = to falsify and adulterate truths.

721. 'The inhabitants of the earth drunk with the wine of her whoredom' = insanity in spiritual things from the adulteration of the Word with those who are in that religiosity. . . 'Whoredom' = the falsification and adulteration of the Word. R.758.

M. 54. With all those married partners who are are merely natural, the love of marriage after death grows cold, and the love of adultery grows warm . . . The man is then given to some harlot and the woman to some adulterer, which takes place in an infernal prison.

77⁵. If adulterers invade that Heaven they are cast into the fire-places of the west, and if whoremongers, into the fatuous lights of the south.

79^e. All there are spiritual and natural adulterers.

80². All who make light of adulteries, i.e., who believe in and do them from confirmation and set purpose that they are not sins, are at heart evil-doers and impious . . .

130⁴. Marriage love binds itself with wisdom by this, that it shuns the evil of adultery as the pest of the soul, of the commonweal, and of the body.

137^e. No one knows the blessed delights of marriage love except he who rejects the horrible delights of adultery, and no one can do this but he who is wise from the Lord, and this no one can be unless he does uses from the love of uses.

152. That chastity cannot be predicated of those who do not believe adulteries to be evils of religion, and still less of those who do not believe adulteries to be hurtful to society. Gen. art.

153. Nor of those who only abstain from adulteries from various outward causes. Gen. art.

— Hence it follows that they who abstain from adulteries in the body but not from the spirit, and they who abstain from them in spirit from the body, are not chaste.

—². Outward causes of abstinence from adulteries enumerated.

— Among these there are also some who, because they are not able or do not dare to commit adulteries in the body, condemn them also in the spirit, and thus speak morally against them and in favour of marriages; but if they do not in spirit, and the spirit does not from religion, hold adulteries as accursed, they are still adulterers, for they commit them in spirit, wherefore after death, when they become Spirits, they speak openly for them. An impious man can shun adulteries as hurtful, but only a Christian can shun them as sins.

240. They who reject the holy things of the Church have not any good love . . . their intrinsic or proper love is in favour of the love of adultery. Des.

243. Hence comes the insane notion residing in the minds of many that adulteries are not evils of religion.

247. In this case the husband is an adulterer in spirit if not in the body.

255. That adultery is the cause of divorce. Gen. art. Marriages are holy and adulteries profane, thus marriages and adulteries are diametrically opposite to each other, and when opposites act upon each other the one destroys the other. This is the case with marriage love when a married man commits adultery from confirmation and thus from set purpose. Marriages are in Heaven and from Heaven, and adulteries are in Hell and from Hell, and the two can no more be conjoined than can Heaven and Hell.

339. That if a Christian has more wives than one he commits both natural and spiritual adultery. Gen. art. 465.

356. The Angel said, Shun adulteries as infernal, and approach the Lord, and you will have it (perpetual vigour) . . . but you cannot shun adulteries as infernal evils unless you shun all other evils too, because adulteries are the complex of all.

423. By scortatory love opposite to marriage love is here understood the love of adultery when it is not held to be sin, nor to be anything evil and wrong against reason, but as allowable with reason.

425². To shew that adultery is the opposite of marriage love, it may be mentioned that when they who have been adulterers in the natural world from confirmation perceive the sphere of marriage love flowing down from Heaven, they either at once flee into caverns and hide themselves, or if they harden themselves against it, become like furies.

427. Because the delight of evil in outward things counterfeits the delight of good, therefore also the delight of adultery is like the delight of marriage, but after death, when outward things are put off, and inward things are laid bare, then it is made manifest to sense that the evil of adultery is a glome of concupiscences of evil.

428. Thence the spiritual origin of adultery is the marriage-connubium-of evil and falsity. . . Hence it is that he who is in that marriage confirms adultery, and commits it so far as he dare and can.

432². It follows, 1. That adulterers are not spiritual, but are in the highest degree natural . . . 2. That adulterers are not wise except in speech and gestures when in company . . . but when alone by themselves are insane, holding as of no account the Divine and holy things of the Church, and defiling the moralities of life with shamelessness and unchastity . . . 3. That adulterers become more and more not men, and after death, when seen in the light of Heaven, have faces like pustules, bodies like hunchbacks, grating speech, and theatrical gestures.

—³. But such are adulterers from set purpose and confirmation; for there are four kinds of adulterers. Enum.

433². This spiritual sufficiency will not be wanting in the natural also with those who approach the Lord, and abominate adulteries as infernal. The contrary happens to adulterers from set purpose and to adulterers from confirmation; with them the virile faculty grows weaker and weaker, until it ceases altogether, and then commences cold towards the sex, followed by loathing even to nausea. This is the case with these adulterers in Hell.

444a. Fornication distinguished from adultery. 445.

448. That fornication is lust, but not the lust of adultery. Gen. art.

449². If an adulterer who is one of set purpose or confirmation enters into marriage, what is natural lies hidden within with its lasciviousness and obscenity, and an appearance of what is spiritual veils it over.

—^e. Hence reason can see that the lust of restricted fornication is in respect to the lust of adultery as the first warmth is to the cold of mid-winter in northern regions.

453. That the lust of fornication is grievous in proportion as it looks to adultery. Gen. art. All those in the lust of fornication look to adultery who do not believe adulteries to be sins, and think of marriages as they do of adulteries, with the sole difference of what is allowed and what is not.

454. The lust of varieties and the lust of defloration are accessories of adultery . . . there are mild adulteries, grievous ones, and more grievous ones; depending upon the degree of opposition and thence destruction of marriage love.

460³. Pellicacy must not be contracted with a married woman, because this is adultery.

463. They who are in the love of adultery cannot see in themselves from themselves any difference between fornication, pellicacy, the two kinds of concubinage, the degrees of adultery and marriage. —².

—². It is otherwise with those who in the ideas of their thought have accounted adulteries as sins. . .

466. Concubinage conjointly with a wife is whoredom more opposed to marriage love than common whoredom which is called simple adultery. Ex.

477⁷. When those who have been whoremongers and adulterers are allowed to ascend into Heaven and are held in their externals, they can see the heavenly things there, but when their internals are opened, instead of heavenly things they see infernal ones. (A case of this kind described.)

478. On adulteries and their kinds and degrees. Gen. art.

—². The public law believed to make the only difference between marriages and adulteries.

—³. But adultery is spiritual evil, and thence moral evil and civil evil, and is diametrically contrary to the wisdom of reason, and the love of adultery is from Hell and returns to it.

479. That there are three kinds of adulteries, simple, duplicate, and triplicate.

480. That simple adultery is that of a single man with the wife of another, or of an unmarried woman with the husband of another. By adultery here and in the following pages is understood whoredom opposite to marriage. . . Adultery does not dissolve the union of man and wife, because it cannot be dissolved, but it closes it up, like one who blocks up a spring and fills its basin with feculent and rotten things . . . There then rises up from below the love of adultery, which as it grows becomes fleshly, and rises up against marriage love and destroys it. Hence is the opposition of adultery and marriage.

482. That duplicate adultery is that of a husband with the wife of another.

—². That nothing closes and blocks up the seat, origin and vein of marriage love but adultery, is evident from the Lord's words that only for adultery may a man put away his wife; also that he who marries her commits adultery. Ex.

483. Some find all their delight with the wives of others. (The English lords.) This is duplicate adultery, and such adultery ravages all spiritual good in a man. D.6103². 6110⁷. —⁷³.

484. That triplicate adultery is with blood-relations. Gen. art.

485. That there are four degrees of adulteries according to which take place their predications, blame, and imputation after death. Gen. art.

486. That adulteries of the first degree are adulteries of ignorance, which are committed by those who cannot as yet, or cannot at all, consult the understanding and thus prevent them. Gen. art.

487. That adulteries committed by these are mild. Gen. art.

488. That adulteries of the second degree are adulteries of lust, which are committed by those who indeed can consult the understanding, but from accidental causes at the moment are not able. Gen. art. Since the love of marriage is of the spirit and the love of adultery is of the flesh, there takes place a combat between them, and if the love of marriage conquers, it masters and subjugates that love of adultery . . .

489. That adulteries committed by these are imputatory according as the understanding afterwards favours them or not. Gen. art.

490. That adulteries of the third degree are adulteries of reason, which are committed by those who confirm from the understanding that they are not evils of sin. Gen. art.

—². (Adulteries of the reason or understanding distinguished from adulteries of the will.)

—³. Adultery of the reason is less grievous than adultery of the will. Ex.

491. That adulteries committed by these are grievous according to confirmations. Gen. art. If the mind takes its confirmations from the higher region which communicates with Heaven, it confirms marriages and condemns adulteries; but if from the lower region which communicates with the world, it confirms adulteries and makes light of marriages. . . Hence the mind is turned towards Hell if its confirmations are for adulteries.

492. That adulteries of the fourth degree are adulteries of the will, which are committed by those who make them allowable and pleasing, and who do not think them of sufficient importance to consult the understanding about them. Gen. art. . . The origin of these adulteries is from the depraved will conate to man, or from hereditary evil which a man blindly obeys after he is capable of exercising his own judgment, but judging nought about them as to whether they are evils or not. The origin of those adulteries that are called adulteries of reason is from a perverted understanding, and they are committed by those who confirm that they are not evils of sin. With these the understanding acts first, with the former, the will.

493. That adulteries committed by these are grievous in the highest degree, and are imputed to them as evils of set purpose, and rooted in them as guilt. Gen. art.

494. That adulteries of the third and fourth degrees are evils of sin according to the quantity and quality of understanding and of will in them, whether they come into act or not. Gen. art. . . That they are in like manner grievous if they do not come into act is evident from these words of the Lord, 'I say unto you that if any one has looked on the woman of another, so as to lust after her, he hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.' To commit adultery in the heart is to commit it in the will.

—². There are many causes of an adulterer's not being an adulterer in act and still one in will and understanding. Enum. T.316.

495. That adulteries from set purpose of the will and adulteries from confirmation of the understanding render men natural, sensual and corporeal. Gen. art.

496^e. The above-named adulteries turn men into these degenerate degrees, one into this, another into that, each according to what is pleasurably agreeable (to his peculiar genius).

497. That adulterers of set purpose and of confirmation reject all things of the Church and of religion. Gen. art. . . The love of adultery, being opposite, acts as one with those things that are against the Church.

—². The reason is that as marriage love opens the interiors of the mind . . . so the love of adultery closes them up, and thrusts down the mind itself as to the will into the body . . .

498. How it is that such adulterers enjoy human rationality like others. Gen. art.

—^e. But after death they become stupid . . .

499. That adulterers use that rationality when they are in externals, but abuse it when they are in their internals. Gen. art.

—⁶. These adulterers were admitted into Heaven, where the interiors of their minds were opened, and then they openly denied the existence of God. The Angels said to them, Believe that as soon as a man actually becomes an adulterer Heaven is closed against him, and then God is not acknowledged ; hear the reason, all the uncleanness of Hell is from adulteries, and this stinks in Heaven like the stinking mire of the streets.

—^e. Afterwards they came where there was a way leading to Hell, from which breathed forth the delight of adultery, by which those who were adulterers of set purpose and those who were so from confirmation, were so vivified that they went down as it were dancing, and immersed themselves in unclean things there like hogs.

520. Hence he who is in spiritual adultery is also in natural adultery, and contrariwise.

— Therefore the whole Hell is called adultery.

521. A crowd of satyrs seen in a forest. . . They said, What are marriages but allowed adulteries? . . . This satyrlike form was that of dissolute adultery. . . I told them that I had also seen adulterers like hogs . . . I asked them whether they had ever thought that adultery is sin ? They replied, What is sin ? I asked them whether they had ever remembered that adultery is contrary to the sixth commandment of the decalogue ? They replied, What is the decalogue ? Is it not the catechism ? What have we men to do with that childish tract ? . . . A great serpent was shown them bent into a spire and breathing out poison, with doleful birds in the branches above it. This was a representative of adultery in the fragrance of its lust.

I. 14⁵. Like an adulterer who hides a harlot in a cellar.

T. 122. Like a bridegroom or husband who sees an adulterer . . .

314. 'To commit adultery'-moechari=to adulterate the goods of the Word and falsify its truths.

316^e. Adulterers compared to covenant breakers, satyrs and priapuses, he-goats that smell, and dogs. Their virility compared to the evanescent flowering of tulips.

345. One kind of faith is named meretricious faith, from falsified truths, and adulterous faith, from adulterated goods.

398⁷. The conjunction of evil and falsity inwardly regarded is not marriage, but adultery.

D. 1787. On lascivious Spirits who in the life of the body had accounted adulteries as nothing.

2572. On Evil Spirits who are in the interior sphere ; adulteries are their pleasures, and to destroy marriage love, their gratifications. Index.

2621. On David ; on those who are in the delight of adultery and of cruelty.

2622. The delight of adultery and cruelty is now so general as to extend itself to and affect little children. Index.

2624. But their delight is turned into the stink of human dung. . .

2643. This Hell is at this day multiplied by those who delight in adulteries and cruelty, many of whom here appear to be modest and gentle.

2656. They who are delighted with adulteries and cruelty desire more than others to obsess man and so return into the world ; they are most acute, so as to be able to pervert good affections, penetrating with their poison into the interiors of ideas. Index. 2665, Gen. art.

— They who are delighted with adulteries are contrary to love towards the neighbour, for the one follows from the other, wherefore they are cruel. 2666.

2843. That adulterous and cruel Spirits love nothing more than filth and excrement ; they directed my eyes to such things in the streets.

3190. When anyone commits adultery on earth,

Heaven is at once closed, that is, the interiors that open towards Heaven are closed, and he is afterwards in externals only . . .

3191. Gustavus Adolphus spoke with me for some days. I perceived from his sphere that he was an adulterer; his quality was shown first by a little yellow dog that was turned into a cat; afterwards by a fox with white froth in its mouth; then by a great serpent, a panther, and part of a lion. Afterwards it was shown how defiled he was with filthy adulteries. Index.

3307. A woman who had carried on adulteries promiscuously, chastised by a long serpent. Index.

3319. When breathing was separated from the loins, signifies that marriage love and love towards offspring was separated from the interiors, such as succeeded in the descendants of the Ancient Church, with whom were adulteries, to which cruelty was adjoined. Index.

— Therefore also adulterers, or those who account adulteries as nothing, are at the same time cruel . . . in a word, the sphere of adulteries and of cruelties is one. 3598.

3532°. If the common people do not abhor adulteries, still they abstain from them from a certain law of conscience.

3594. An immense number of adulterers who are able to excite by a persuasion like that of the Antediluvians . . . Christendom is full of them. 3595.

3598. The Christian world is worse than the Antediluvian one in that it regards adulteries as nothing, and when this is the case they wish to destroy societies, because they are against them, besides that they are cruel, adulteries are also attended with this . . .

3599. They entice wives and virgins to adultery and whoredom by exciting pity, supposing that they lose nothing, whereas thus marriage love is destroyed, thus all other loves, and thus the happiness of eternal life.

3611. They who argue, are prone to adultery when the opportunity offers.

3673. The pulsation of adulterers and of the cruel is only in the outermost skin of the breast.

3843. The interior Evil Spirits especially inspire adulteries and hatreds.

3910. They who have had no conscience, and especially they who have accounted adulteries as nothing, appear there as it were without bond, thus without connexion with Heaven. They cannot be amended so as to come among the Celestials, except so as to be scarcely self-conscious, like bones.

4038. (The lot of adulterers there. See under CONSCIENCE at this ref.)

4091. This adulterer said that he could not be in the sphere of Spirits who are in marriage love, because he was tortured and as it were compressed; he also said that he could not possibly desist.

4098. Spirits who had been adulterous wives described. They dwell in the sutures of the skull, and endeavour to get into the brain, and are a species of Sirens.

6051. On adulteries. De Conj. 16.

— Hardly anyone at this day believes that they are so infernal, and that adulterers cannot be saved. The reasons are that Heaven is marriage and Hell is adultery; that marriage love descends from the marriage of good and truth, adultery from the marriage of evil and falsity; that in Heaven they abhor adulteries, and therefore Heaven is closed and Hell is opened wide; that man by marriage love receives the form of love, within and without, by adultery the form of Hell; that there is doctrinal adultery with preachers in Hell that differs from natural adultery; the origin of wisdom is the marriage of good and truth, and that of the Lord and the Church, wherefore no one can be wise in spiritual things who is an adulterer; hence in proportion as anyone is an adulterer he is blind in spiritual things, and is inwardly a devil; examples are to be produced that adulterers are cast into Hell however morally well they have lived and however piously.

6053. Adultery, the love of ruling, and deceit, will be especially shunned by those who will be of the New Jerusalem.

6054. The reason why adulteries now reign so greatly in the Christian world is that they are in the marriage of falsity and evil.

6110⁵. A mere conclusion in the mind that adultery is not sin makes the man an adulterer. —³⁸. Ex.

—⁶. I have said to adulterers that in Heaven there is perpetual potency, and they said that if they had known this in the world they would never have committed whoredom, in order that they might come into Heaven. But I said that in Heaven it is not allowable to love anyone except the spouse, in Hell to commit whoredom ad libitum; would they rather be in Hell or in Heaven? and I could not extort an answer.

—⁷. If a man concentrates his love upon his wife, shunning adultery as sin, then love grows from day to day with its potency; but if they take from that love and consume it with harlots, marriage love becomes like chaff, and dies.

—¹⁰. Married partners together, or marriage love, is the very image and likeness of God. Adultery destroys it.

—¹². Adultery is in the whole body in endeavour when it is thought allowable.

—²⁵. Within marriage love there is Heaven even to its ultimates, and within the love of adultery there is Hell; the ultimates of both appear to be alike as to delights, but are not so; the differences are only felt from marriage love.

—²⁷. If marriage love does not have regard to two being one, it is the love of adultery.

—³⁶. An adulterer is unjust, unfaithful, insincere, a wicked violator of a covenant, a liar, immodest. He has no inward justice, fidelity, sincerity, truth, modesty; thus no inward honesty or virtue.

—⁴¹. All concupiscences of evil are from adultery, because it is the very form of them.

— An adulterer who is confirmed by [the idea] that it is allowable, and by doing it, cannot acknowledge God at heart, nor be conjoined to the Lord, thus not to Heaven, because his delight is altogether opposite to spiritual delight. At last he becomes in the highest degree sensual, corporeal and material, and thinks and speaks from visible and audible things, which alone he stores up in the memory.

—⁶⁶. Adultery with the wife of another destroys all the delight of life between husband and wife, and induces aversion towards each other; it also destroys the care of children, at the same time induces separation. It destroys the marriage principle. This an adulterer does not see, unless he thinks of his own wife, if another adulterer should contaminate her.

—⁶⁹. The excitation of adultery is outward, from lust, from bodily touch . . .

—⁷⁶. With those who have lascivious marriage, as also with adulterers, with whom the woman's love is not communicated to the man, it is the man's own proper affection that effects it. Hence it is soon burnt up. —⁷⁷.

J. (Post.) 136. All who falsify the Word to confirm evils and falsities, account adulteries as nothing, and are as it were carried into them.

J. [Post.] 343. On marriage and adultery.

— . Adultery is Hell itself, thus the Devil and Satan himself: all in Hell are adulterers and rage like furies when they perceive marriage love. So far as a man detests adulteries as diabolical sin, so far he is in Heaven.

344. He who is in adultery is in evil and falsity, and adultery is all sin against the decalogue, for he who is in it, is in all the evil of the decalogue, and contrariwise.

— . The reason why at this day there are more adulteries in the Christian world than in any other religion, is that they separate good from truth, or charity from faith, and when these are separated, then from the influx they can know no better; they therefore confirm adulteries and not marriages. . . Modern faith separates them, and thus falsifies the Word; it also perverts the Rational of man; thence come adulterous delights . . .

345. Adultery is the wickedness of all abominations, because the seed of man is his life, which is conjoined with the life of the wife, so that they are not two, but one flesh; but when the lives of several men are introduced into one woman, there results such filth that it is too abominable to be described; such is the case before the Angels. E. 1005², Ex. De Conj. 37.

E. 141⁸. 'To commit adultery etc.' = to pervert truths.

376³⁵. 'The land full of adulterers' = all adulteration of good and falsification of truth in the Church.

434¹⁶. The adultery of Reuben = to reject the good of charity from the truths of faith, for truth is profaned when it is not conjoined with its own good, for thus it is conjoined with self-love, which is adulteration.

511². Conjunctions of truth with merely natural affections correspond to 'whoredoms' and 'adulteries' of various kinds.

540⁴. 'To commit adultery' = to profane good and thence truth.

710²⁷. The conjunction of falsity and evil is spiritual adultery.

817⁵. The correspondence of the adultery of a son with a mother. Ex. and III.

981². On the commandment concerning adultery. 982⁵ et seq.

— . The delight of adultery is Hell with a man, and the delight of marriage is Heaven with him, consequently so far as a man is in one delight so far he is not in the other.

— . The love of adultery is the fundamental of all infernal and diabolical loves, consequently so far as a man is in the love of adultery so far he is in all love of evil, if not in act, still in endeavour.

— . He who is in the love of adultery believes nothing of the Word or of the Church, yea, in his heart he denies God . . . the lasciviousness of adultery makes one with naturalism.

— . When the Church is at its end, and devastated as to truth and good, the man of the Church, from influx from Hell, comes into the persuasion that adulteries are not detestable things and abominations, and he also comes into the faith that marriages and adulteries do not differ in their essence.

— . Hence it is that the rejection of all things of the Church is understood by adulteries and whoredoms in the spiritual sense of the Word.

— . Since adultery is Hell, it follows that unless a man abstains from adulteries, and shuns and is averse to them as infernal things, he closes Heaven to himself, nor does he receive the least influx thence. He afterwards reasons that marriages and adulteries are similar, but that marriages are guarded in kingdoms for the sake of order and the education of the offspring, and that adulteries are not criminal, because offspring are also born from them, that they are not hurtful to a woman, and so on; not knowing that such reasonings in favour of adulteries come up from the stygian waters of Hell, and that the lewd and ferine nature of man, that is in him from birth, attracts and sucks them in with delight, as a hog does ordure.

983⁴. The origin of adultery is the marriage of evil and falsity, which Hell is in its essence.

— . Hence it follows that marriage and adultery are opposite to each other, as Heaven and Hell are.

984³. Man is born into the love of evil and falsity. This love is the love of adultery, and it cannot be changed into spiritual love, and still less into celestial love, except by the marriage of good and truth from the Lord, and not fully except by the marriage of two minds and of two bodies.

—^e. Adultery is the image of Hell, and the love of adultery is the image of a Devil, and so actually appears in the spiritual world.

985². How profane and detestable adulteries are, may be seen from the holiness of marriages.

—³. Since the members of generation in both sexes correspond to the societies of the Third Heaven, it is evident that they are holy from creation, and are therefore dedicated to chaste and pure marriage love only, and are not to be profaned by the unchaste and impure love of adultery. By so doing a man converts Heaven with himself into Hell, for as the love of marriage corresponds to the love of the highest Heaven, so the love of adultery corresponds to the love of the lowest Hell.

— The love of marriage begins from the Lord in the inmost of man . . . but the love of adultery begins from the ultimates of man, and from an impure lascivious fire there, and thence, contrary to order, penetrates towards the interiors, always in the things that are properly man's own, which are nothing but evil; and from them it induces the form of Hell, which is the image of a Devil; wherefore the man who loves adultery, and is averse to marriage, is a Devil in form.

—⁴. The members of generation also correspond to the Word . . . hence also it is evident how profane and diabolical adulteries are. And hence it is that adulterers make nothing of Divine truths, and thus of the Word, yea, if they speak from the heart, they blaspheme the holy things in the Word, as also they do after death.

986°. The love of adultery is represented in the spiritual world by an anus, the deformity of which is such that it inspires into the beholder frigidity and death of all the delight of life; hence it is that in the Hells the deformity of the Spirits is according to the quality of their love of adultery . . .

—^e. The delights of the love of adultery are there sensibly represented by bad smells from dung and corruption of various kinds; they are also actually turned into such things, because all adulteries are spiritual dirt.

988°. The earth could indeed be filled with inhabitants through fornications and adulteries, but not Heaven, because Hell is from adulteries, and Heaven is from marriages. That Hell is from adulteries is because adultery is from the marriage of evil and falsity, from which Hell in the whole complex is called adultery.

—⁶. By adultery is meant where the love of it, which is called the love of adultery, reigns, whether within matrimony, or out of it.

—^e. The men of the golden age felt inward horror at adulteries, as at the abominations of Hell.

989°. The hereditary evil into which man is born is derived from the parents, on account of the adulteration of good and the falsification of truth, thus on account of the marriage of evil and falsity, from which the love of adultery exists. . . If the parents' love is the love of adultery, it is also the love of evil for falsity and of falsity for evil. . . Hence it is evident that there is Hell in man from adulteries, unless he is reformed by the Lord through truths and a life according to them, nor can anyone be reformed unless he shuns adulteries as infernal, and loves marriages as heavenly. Thus and no otherwise is hereditary evil broken, so as to become milder in the offspring. E.1002°.

—³. But still every man who is born from adultery is adopted by the Lord if he does not himself become an adulterer. By becoming an adulterer is meant living in the marriage of evil and falsity, thinking evils and falsities from the delight of them, and doing them from the love of them; every man who does this also becomes an adulterer.

990°. The delights of the love of adultery derive their [existence] from the delights of doing evil uses. Such therefore as is the delight of evil men in doing evil, such is the delight of their love of adultery, because the love of adultery descends thence . . . hence it is evident that the delight of adultery ascends from the lowest Hell.

—³. Yet it is believed that the delight of marriage and the delight of adultery are alike . . . but he who is in the delight of marriage love clearly feels that there is nothing impure in the delight of marriage, and that in the delight of adultery there is nothing but impurity and lasciviousness; he feels that it ascends from below unchaste. But he who is in the delight of adultery cannot feel this, because he feels what is infernal as celestial to him.

— Hence it follows that the love of marriage, even in its ultimate act, is purity itself, and that the love of adultery in its acts is impurity itself and unchastity itself.

— Since the delights of both these kinds of love appear alike outwardly, it is provided by the Lord that the delights of adultery should not ascend to Heaven. But still there is some correspondence of Heaven with prolification in adulteries, although not with the delight itself in them.

991°. The love of adultery, which is natural, exists from the love of evil and falsity, which is spiritual, hence this Spiritual is in the natural love of adultery, as cause in effect; therefore from the marriage of evil and falsity through love there exists the love of fructifying, to wit, evil by falsity and falsity from evil, from which love descends the love of prolification in adulteries, in which is all the delight and pleasure.

—⁴. Thence also is the pleasure and delight of adultery, but since prolification by it corresponds to the production of evil by falsity and of falsity from evil, that pleasure and delight become less and cheaper by degrees, until at last they are turned into loathing and nausea.

— Since the delight of adultery is infernal delight, the delight of adultery is from some impure fire that while it lasts counterfeits the delight of the love of good, but in itself is the delight of the love of evil, which in its essence is the delight of hatred against good and truth, and because its origin is thence, there is no love between an adulterer and an adulteress, except such love of hatred, which is such that they can be in conjunction in externals, but not in internals, for in externals there is fire, but in internals ice, wherefore after a short time the fire is extinguished, and the ice takes its place, either with impotence, or with aversion as for filth.

—⁵. It has also been given to see this love in its essence. It was such that within it was internecine hatred, but without it appeared like fire from burning dung, corruption, and stinking substances, and as this fire with its delight died down, so by degrees expired the life of mutual conversation, and hatred came forth, first under the guise of contempt, afterwards of aversion, then of rejection, and at last of reviling and fighting, and, what was wonderful, although they hated each other, still by turns they could come together, and then feel the delight of hatred as the delight of love, but this from the itch of the flesh. . . It is therefore the delight of hatred which in the extremes has become fiery, injected into the lascivious flesh, that in a moment becomes the delight of adultery, the soul, in which the hatred is stored up, then drawing itself back. —⁶.

—⁶. Hence it is that Hell is called adultery. From this also it is that incorrigible adulterers are unmerciful, savage and cruel.

— Since adultery is fiery in externals, but frigid in internals, and since therefore the internal does not produce the external, as is the case in marriages, but they mutually act against each other, the man feels impotence if the woman is willing, for the internal, which is frigid, then comes into endeavour, and flows into the fire that is in externals, and extinguishes it.

[E.] 993³. From the happinesses of marriages we may draw conclusions in respect to the unhappinesses of adulteries, namely, that the love of adultery is the fundamental of all infernal loves, which in themselves are not loves, but hatreds. Therefore the love of adultery is the source of hatreds of every kind, both against God and the neighbour; in general, against every good and truth of Heaven and the Church, hence all unhappinesses are in it, for a man is a form of Hell from adulteries, and from the love of them becomes an image of the devil.

1003³. The evils that follow adulteries seen by opposition from the goods that follow chaste marriages. Enum.

—^e. The ultimate lot of those who are in adulteries, is that from the utter impotence into which they at last reduce themselves, they become devoid of all the fire and light of life, and pass their time solitary in deserts, as it were inert, and weary of their life. De Conj. 30.

1006². Adulteries are more infernal and abominable or less so. Adulteries arising from the more grievous evils and derivative falsities are also more grievous, and those from the milder ones are milder, for adulteries correspond to adulterations of good and the derivative falsifications of truth. Adulterations of good in themselves are evils, and falsifications of truth, falsities. . . The cadaverous Hells are for those to whom violations of wives have been delightful; the excrementitious ones for those to whom debaucheries of virgins have been delightful; foully sticky ones for those to whom varieties and changes of harlots have been delightful, etc.

—³. From those who believe sins to be remitted through the Holy Supper, and not through repentance of life, there breathe forth adulteries as of a brother with a sister; from those who altogether deny the Divine, wicked acts with beasts.

1007. From every conjunction of evil and falsity in the spiritual world there flows forth a sphere of adultery, but only from those who are in falsities as to doctrine, and in evils as to life. . . Especially does this flow forth from priests who have taught falsely and lived evilly, for these have also adulterated and falsified the Word. Although they have not been adulterers in the world, still adultery is excited from them, the adultery that is called sacerdotal adultery, which is distinguished from all other adulteries. De Conj. 18. 82, Ex.

1008². The reason why adulteries are less abhorred by Christians than by any barbarous nation, is that in the Christian world at this day there is not a marriage of good and truth but a marriage of evil and falsity. . . From this origin there flows in from Hell the lust and favour of adultery; hence it is that adulteries are believed to be allowable, and are carried on without shame in the Christian world. De Conj. 77. 80.

1010¹. Adulteries are all whoredoms that destroy marriage love. The whoredom of a husband with the wife of another, or with any woman, whether widow, virgin or harlot, is adultery, when it is done from loathing or aversion to marriage. In like manner the whoredom of a wife. The whoredoms of any unmarried man with the wife of another, or of any unmarried woman with the husband of another, are also adultery, because they destroy marriage love, by turning away their minds from marriage to adultery. The delights of varieties even with harlots are also delights of adultery, for the delight of variety destroys that of marriage. The delight of the deflowering of virgins without marriage as an end is also the delight of adultery. In a word, every whoredom that destroys the marriage principle and extinguishes its love, is adultery, or of adultery.

1099. Goods are said to be adulterated that are applied to evils. Examps.

De Conj. 9. On those who in marriages have lasciviousness like that of adultery for an end.

— Women who enter into matrimony merely in order to commit adultery safely. Rep. Their terrible lot described.

— Men with whom adulteries are the end of matrimony, and who have afterwards lived as adulterers, are seized with such a nausea for a wife that they flee from them; they at last become impotences, and all life of thought and speech perishes with them in the company of wives, especially in that of their own wife.

54. In Hell there are not marriages, but there are adulteries. In the infernal Societies the men are separated from the women, and when they think that they will speak to the wife, from custom acquired in the world, the man goes to the women, and a persuasion is given him that this or that is his woman; but this persuasion is varied, which is of no consequence, because in Hell marriage has no existence, but adultery.

71. No one can be in any mutual love of good and truth except he who shuns and is averse to adultery as to Hell, although he may have lived in marriage and loved his consort for the sake of cohabitation, the delight of earthly life and for the sake of the children.

81. On the influx of adultery from Genii.

— I passed through a Hell where there were deceitful and inwardly vastated adulterers, who were permitted to flow into my affections, and with subtlety, art and genius to invert, pervert and extinguish my thoughts in favour of chastity, and to induce the delight and lust of adultery. They directed their attention to every particle of thought from affection, persuading tacitly. This was done that I might know that man from himself could not possibly resist the delight of adultery unless [assisted] by the Lord.

94. They who are spiritually adulterers are distinguished from those who are naturally adulterers. The latter, if they have perceived delight in adulteries, and none in marriages, are excluded from Heaven, and are all sent into Hell. Spiritual adulterers however, although they may feel nothing illicit in adulteries, are examined. Some are amended, and others are allotted places according to their life.

121. Adulterers feel aversion for their own wives, but as soon as they see the beautiful wife of another, burn with desire, as the other does for his wife, and each finds a delight in every particular that the other as a husband feels aversion for.

2397. Since the evil perished through the Lord's advent into the world, it is said according to the appearance that two Angels were sent to Sodom to destroy it.

2405⁸. Since 'morning' in its own proper sense = the Lord. His advent, thus the drawing nigh of His Kingdom, it is evident that 'morning' also = the rise of a new Church, for this is the Lord's kingdom on earth, in general, in particular, yea, even in singular. Ex. For in this is the Lord's advent.

2513. 'God's coming' = perception, for perception is nothing but the Divine advent, or influx, into the intellectual faculty.

2523. Unless the whole process of the Lord's glorification had been presented to view before the Angels in the Word, and in the rites of the Jewish Church, the Lord would have had to come into the world immediately after the fall of the Most Ancient church, for a prophecy was then immediately made concerning the advent of the Lord.

2554. That Divine good might be conjoined with both sensual truths and rational truths, was the cause of the Lord's advent into the world . . .

2661². The Lord did not come into the world to save the celestial, but the spiritual. If the Most Ancient Church had remained in its integrity, the Lord would have had no need to be born a man, wherefore as soon as it began to fail, the Lord foresaw that the Celestial Church would utterly perish from the world ; therefore a prediction was at once made concerning the advent of the Lord into the world. 2716. 2776². 6427.

2788. 'In the third day (He will raise us up)' = the advent and resurrection of the Lord.

2795⁶. The Lord came into the world and put on the human state itself with its infirmity in order that He might be tempted as to the Human, and thus subjugate the Hells. Ex.

2818. That the Lord would come into the world, and suffer death, was known from the most ancient time. Shown.

2906². (Passages of the Word in which the Lord's advent is treated of.) —⁶, —⁷. 3242². 3322³. 3448⁶. 3654⁷. 3703³. 3881⁸. 5037². 5201². 5321⁶. 5354⁷. 9331⁴.

3353². It is the end of the Church that is here and elsewhere called 'the coming of the Lord,' and 'the consummation of the age.'

3398⁴. Why the Lord did not come sooner. 3757, Ex.

3419². How the ancients knew that the Lord would come into the world.

3588. 'Esau came from his hunting' = the truth of good and its advent. 'To come' = advent.

3637. The necessity of the Lord's advent into the world explained.

3736. 'I have come into the world' = that He was as a man.

3652². By Daniel is signified everything prophetic concerning the Lord's advent and the state of the Church.

3900⁹. 'So shall the coming of the Son of Man be.' . . The coming of the Lord is not according to the letter, that He would again appear in the world, but it is His presence in each one, which takes place as often as the gospel is preached, and its holiness is thought about.

3969⁹. The two Kingdoms were made one by the Lord's advent into the world. Sig.

4060⁵. They have understood that the Lord would come into the world anew, not knowing that He comes as often as the Church is devastated, but not in person. as when He assumed the Human.

4060⁷. 'They shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds,' etc. = that then the Word will be revealed as to its inward sense . . . It is the Lord's advent that is here understood, but not that He would literally appear in the clouds.

4180⁵. Before the Lord came into the world, the Divine itself flowed into universal Heaven, and since Heaven was then chiefly composed of the celestial, light was produced from that influx ; but after mankind had removed themselves from the good of love and of charity, that light could no longer be produced through Heaven, thus no wisdom and intelligence that could penetrate to mankind, wherefore on account of the necessity that they should be saved, the Lord came into the world . . . 6373².

4230. The time when there is the end of an old Church and the beginning of a new one is signified by the 'Last Judgment' and also by the 'coming of the Son of Man.' 4332. 4333. 4535.

4231. Why the advent of the Lord is compared to the fig-tree. —².

4240⁶. 'The morning cometh' = the Lord's advent. 6000⁶.

4333. Because on that occasion (namely, the destruction of Jerusalem) the consummation of the age was subsequent to the advent of the Lord, many things that the Lord said about it are applicable to that nation, but the end of the Christian Church is what is especially treated of.

4334⁷. 'So shall the coming of the Son of Man be' = that they will not accept Divine truth.

4489³. Abrogation of representatives after the Lord had come into the world. 4835⁴. 5136².

4535³. The last time of an old Church and the beginning of a new one is what is called 'the consummation of the age' and 'the Lord's advent,' for then the Lord recedes from the former Church and comes to a new one.

4636. The parable of the ten virgins describes the Lord's advent.

4712. 'Joseph's going to see the peace of his brethren' = every advent of the Lord . . . It is said, every advent, when truth flows into the thought from the Word.

4835². When the light of Heaven appears in its clearness, then is dissipated the darkness, or representative images ; this was done by the Lord's advent.

6000³. The Divine Human before the Lord's advent. See under DIVINE HUMAN at this ref., and at 6280. 6720. 6831.

6306². About the time of the Lord's advent, the infernals had occupied a considerable part of Heaven, and the Lord by His coming into the world, and making His Human Divine, expelled them thence and cast them into Hell, and thus delivered Heaven from them, which then became the inheritance of those who belonged to the Spiritual Kingdom. (Represented by the occupation of Canaan by the sons of Israel.) 6558, Ex. 6914². —³. —⁴. Fully Ex.

6371². Before the advent of the Lord into the world, there was influx of life with men and Spirits from Jehovah through the Celestial Kingdom, . . . but when the Lord came into the world He put on that which had been with the Angels of the Celestial Kingdom . . . (Sig. by 'the sceptre not departing from Judah until Shiloh come.') 6373. 'Till Shiloh come'=the advent of the Lord, and the tranquillity of peace then.

6588⁵. 'The day of visitation'=the Lord's advent, and enlightenment then.

6854². Only the spiritual were saved by the Lord's advent into the world; the reason is that the Divine passing through Heaven, which was the Divine Human before the Lord's advent, could not reach them, because their doctrinals were for the most part not true. 8621. Refs.

6895. 'Visiting, I will visit you'=His advent to those of the Spiritual Church. 'To visit'=the Lord's advent, which precedes the last time of the Church. . . That this is called the Lord's advent, is evident from these words, 'What shall be the sign of Thy coming and of the consummation of the age?' 7066.

—². That by the Lord's advent is not meant His appearance in the clouds, but the acknowledgment of Him in hearts by love and faith; also His appearance from the Word, whose inmost sense treats of Him alone. Refs. This advent is meant by the Lord's advent, which takes place when the old Church is rejected, and a new one is established by the Lord.

—^c. 'Visiting to visit'=deliverance from falsities, and thus initiation into those things that belong to the Lord's Church and Kingdom; thus the Lord's advent in love and faith with those who will be of the New Church.

6945³. There was not so great a force from the Lord to withhold men from falsities before the Lord's advent as after His advent, when He had made the Human in Himself Divine.

6988³. All the miracles done by the Lord=the state of the Church and of mankind saved by His advent into the world . . . 7337, Ex.

7093². The three feasts were instituted to commemorate the deliverance from Egypt, i.e. in the spiritual sense, deliverance from infestation by falsities, through the Lord's advent into the world.

—⁶. The Lord delivered them by His advent, and raised them with Him into Heaven when He rose again. Hence the Passover was instituted. 7828².

7313^e. The Sons of Israel were led into the wilderness to represent the state of the spiritual before the Lord's advent.

7417. The representatives that existed before the Lord's advent. Ex.

7686. Those are here treated of who before the Lord's advent were in the Lower Earth, and could not be raised into Heaven before the Lord came and assumed the Human.

—². They who belonged to the Church before the Lord's advent, and were evil as to life, were in such falsity as there had not been before, nor will be afterwards. Ex.

7844³. Hence primarily by 'evening' is signified the Lord's advent, for then there is an end of the former Church and the beginning of a new one, the first state of which is also called 'eve' . . .

—⁴. That the Lord's advent into the world is signified by 'evening' and 'morning.' Ill.

7986. (The time of the Exodus)=the time of the Lord's advent, when the spiritual were saved.

8054². Before the Lord's advent Heaven was not distinguished into three Heavens, as after His advent, but it was all one. Ex.

8137. The Lord, by His advent into the world . . . cast all evils and falsities into the Hells and reduced the Heavens into order, and also delivered the spiritual from condemnation. Refs.

8261³. The ancients felt a joy exceeding all joys in the contemplation of the Lord's advent and the salvation of mankind by Him.

8289. 'The enemy said'=the thought of those who were in evils and falsities before the Lord's advent; for the infernal crew then ranged freely about, and infested and endeavoured to subjugate all there.

8294^e. The nations who then possessed Canaan=those who before the Lord's advent occupied a region of Heaven that was afterwards given to the spiritual.

8311². They who were cast into Hell when the Lord came into the world, treated of.

8321. In order that they who are in good and truth might be delivered from such Spirits the Lord came into the world.

8346. The spiritual underwent temptations after the Lord's advent into the world, but could not do so before. (Signified by the Sons of Israel going forth into the wilderness.)

8427. 'In the morning ye shall see the glory of Jehovah'=the advent of the Lord in the beginning of a new state. 'The glory of Jehovah'=presence and advent. Ex.

—⁴. 'The coming of the Lord'=the acknowledgment of truth Divine by those of the New Church and its denial by those of the Old Church.

8625². The Genii represented by the Amalekites could not be warded off from the spiritual until the Lord came into the world.

8783. Blindness of those who lived before His advent.

8792. 'Jehovah will come down to the eyes of all the people'=the Lord's advent, and enlightenment then; for 'to come down,' when said of the Lord,=His presence through influx, thus His advent.

9405. 'And they shall see the God of Israel'=the Lord's advent and presence in the Word. Ex.

—². Because in the inward sense of the Word the Lord alone is treated of, and also His Kingdom and Church, hence is the holiness of the Word, and hence the advent and presence of the Lord with those who, when they read the Word, keep Him and the neighbour in view, and not themselves.

9428. 'He called unto Moses on the seventh day'=the Lord's advent with truth conjoined to good.

9684. That the spiritual especially were saved by the Lord's advent into the world. Refs.

9807⁴. 'The coming of the Lord' is the revelation of truth Divine at the end of the Church. —⁵.

10026. The Lord came into the world to subjugate the Hells and reduce all things into order, even in the Heavens.

10276^o. Wherefore unless the Lord had come into the world and opened the interiors of the Word, communication with the Heavens through the Word would have been broken, and then mankind on this earth would have perished

10355⁵. When no natural good was left with the man of the Church, the Lord came into the world, and reduced all things in the Heavens and Hells into order, so that man could receive influx from Him out of Heaven . . .

10655³. (Why the Lord came into the world, fully explained.) 10828. N.293.

H. 1². 'The coming of the Lord in the clouds of heaven with power and glory'=His presence in the Word, and revelation. Refs. S.14². T.198².

—^e. That at this day such an immediate revelation exists, is because this is what is meant by the Lord's advent.

N. 300. That the Lord came into the world to glorify His Human. Refs.

J. 10. Mankind on this earth would have perished, so that not one would have been left, unless the Lord had come into the world . . .

28. By 'the coming of the Lord in the clouds,' is not meant such an appearance as that, but appearance in the Word, for the Lord is the Word, because it is Divine Truth.

46. (The second of the three last judgments was effected by the Lord when He was in the world. Sig.)

—³. For this end the Lord came into the world . . .

L. 3. That the Lord came in the fulness of times, which was when He was no longer known by the Jews, and thus when there was nothing of the Church left, and unless He had then come and revealed Himself, man would have perished in eternal death. Sig. L.5. Ill.

—². The Lord came into the world to perform a last judgment, . . . to glorify the Human, . . . to establish a new Church.

4. (Passages quoted in which 'that day' and 'that time'=the Lord's advent.)

12. That the Lord came into the world to subdue the Hells and glorify His Human. Gen. art.

14. That the Lord came into the world to reduce all things in the Heavens and thence in the earths into order. Ill.

17. The Lord came into the world that He might be able to save man; without His advent no mortal could be reformed and regenerated, thus saved.

26. That the Lord is also called the 'Son of Man' where His advent is treated of, because He comes into the world as the Word. Ill. L.23.

—'. 'Coming in the clouds of heaven with glory'=the opening of the Word, and manifestation that the Word is written about Him alone.

33. Before the Lord's advent the Hells had grown up to such a height that they had begun to infest the very Angels of Heaven, and also every man coming into the world and going out of the world . . . Hence it was that unless the Lord had come into the world no man could have been saved.

42^e. His advent is called 'the Gospel of the kingdom.' R.664.

S. 14^e. 'The day of Jehovah'=the Lord's advent, which was when there was no good and truth left in the Church, and no knowledge of the Lord. Sig.

98. That the Lord came into the world to fulfil all things of the Word and thus to become Divine Truth or the Word in ultimates also. Gen. art.

99. All Churches before His advent were representative Churches, that could only see Divine truth in shade, but after His advent into the world, a Church was instituted by Him that saw Divine truth in light. The state of the Church before His advent is called 'evening,' and the state of the Church after His advent is called 'morning.' Before His advent, the Lord was indeed present with the men of the Church, but mediately through Heaven; but after His advent into the world He is present with the men of the Church immediately. T.109.

F. 35. It is a universal of faith that no mortal could have been saved unless the Lord had come into the world; also that He came into the world to remove Hell from man; also that He came into the world to glorify His Human. R.67. B.116.117. T.2.3.

W. 221². The second arcanum is that the Lord came into the world, and assumed the Human, that He might put Himself into the power of subjugating the Hells, and of reducing into order all things both in the Heavens and in the earths.

—^e. Hence after His advent into the world He appears as a sun in the angelic Heavens in stronger beam and in greater splendour than before His advent. 233², Ill.

233². This was the reason why all the Churches in the world before His advent were representative of spiritual and celestial things, but after His advent became spiritual and celestial natural, and that representative worship was abolished.

—³. The mediate enlightenment of men through the angelic Heaven, which there was before the Lord's advent, may be compared to the light of the moon, which is the mediate light of the sun; and which, because it became immediate after His advent, is called 'the light of the moon as the light of the sun.' T.109³.

P. 124³. The Lord came into the world that He might be in first and ultimate principles simultaneously.

R. 4. 'The consummation of the age'=the last state of the Old Church, and 'the coming of the Lord,' the first state of the New Church.

17³. The Lord said of John that he should remain until He came, thus to the present day, which is the Lord's advent. Ex.

33. 'The patient expectation of Jesus Christ'=the Lord's advent . . .

— . That the goods and truths of the Church are infested by evils and falsities that will be removed by the Lord when He will come. Sig.

53. 'That day' = the Lord's advent, when the Old Church has been destroyed, and the new one is to be established.

145. 'Hold fast till I come' = until there be a new Heaven and a new Church, which are the Lord's advent. (= vastation. E. 173.)

151^r. It is called 'the morning star' because 'morning' = the Lord's advent, when there is a New Church. Ill.

187. 'I come quickly' = the Lord's advent, and a New Church then from them.

281. That Jehovah Himself came into the world. Ill.

519. 'The seventh Angel sounded' = examination and manifestation of the state of the Church after consummation, when it is the advent of the Lord and of His Kingdom.

574. The Lord's advent and then the destruction of that Church, and the establishment of a new one, are described in Dan. vii. 9 to end.

612. Pref. Evangelization concerning the Lord's advent and then a New Church, treated of in Rev. xiv.

618^r. From these words it is clearly evident that the Lord's advent into the world, and the glorification of His Human, had for an end the conjunction of men with God the Father in Him and through Him ; thus that He Himself might be approached.

626. 'The everlasting gospel' = the announcement of the Lord's advent, and of a New Church that will descend out of Heaven from Him.

— . The Lord's advent involves two things, the Last Judgment, and after that a New Church.

642^r. 'His coming in the clouds of heaven' means that when He will come to judgment He will appear in the sense of the letter of the Word, and because He has come now, He has appeared in the Word by this, that He has revealed that there is a spiritual sense in every single thing of the sense of the letter, and that He alone is treated of therein, and that He Himself is the only God of Heaven and earth.

705. 'Behold I come as a thief' = the Lord's advent. E. 1005.

798^r. The advent itself of the Lord into the world was only for the sake of the salvation of man . . .

820. 'I saw Heaven opened, and behold a white horse' = the spiritual sense of the Word revealed by the Lord, and thereby the inner understanding of the Word unfolded, which is the advent of the Lord.

— . That this is the advent of the Lord is because by that sense it manifestly appears that the Lord is the Word, that the Word treats of Him only, that He is the God of Heaven and earth, and that the New Church exists from Him alone.

829. The Lord came into the world to subjugate the Hells, which had then grown up to such an extent that they began to infest the Angels . . . and since man is in consort with Spirits as to his affections and thoughts thence derived . . . therefore when the Lord subjugated the Hells, He not only delivered the Angels from infestation, but also the men of the earth. Sig.

932. Pref. The Lord's advent and conjunction with those who believe in Him and live according to His precepts, treated of in Rev. xxi.

944. 'Behold, I come quickly' etc. = that the Lord will certainly come, and will give eternal life to those who keep and do the truths or precepts of this Book now opened by the Lord. R. 949.

947. The Lord's advent when there is the Last Judgment and the New Church has [only] now appeared and existed after seventeen centuries.

955. 'And the Spirit and the bride say, Come' = that Heaven and the Church long for the advent of the Lord.

956. 'And let him that heareth say, Come' etc. = that he who knows anything about the advent of the Lord, and about the New Heaven and New Church, should pray that it may come.

960. 'Yea, I come quickly, amen, even so come Lord Jesus' = that in His Divine Human which He took up in the world, and glorified, He comes as the Bridegroom and Husband, and that His Church longs for Him as the Bride and Wife.

— . 'The gospel' = the advent of the Lord to His Kingdom. Refs.

M. 81. A glorification of the Lord in Heaven on account of His advent. Des. T. 625.

B. 70. That the last state of the present Church is meant by the consummation of the age, and the Lord's advent then. Gen. art.

71^r. That by the advent of the Lord is meant His advent in the Word, and then the establishment of a New Church in place of the former consummated one, is evident from these words of the Lord.

100^r. In all these places the advent of the Lord is treated of, especially His second advent. T. 782⁵.

T. 109^r. After He came into the world these representations vanished, the interior cause of which was, that the Lord in the world put on the Divine Natural also, and from this He enlightens not only the inward spiritual man, but also the outward natural one . . .

115. At this day is the Second Advent of the Lord. T. 121^r.

121. At the time of the Lord's first advent, the Hells had grown up on high so as to fill the universal World of Spirits, and had not only thrown into confusion the Heaven called the Ultimate Heaven, but had also assaulted the Second Heaven, which they infested in a thousand ways. Sig. T. 123.

123. The height and inundation of the Hells over the universal World of Spirits, such as it was at the time of the Lord's first advent, has not been made known to anyone, because it is not revealed in the sense of the letter of the Word ; but such as it was at the time of His second advent, it has been granted me to see with my eyes . . .

126. There are two things on account of which the Lord came into the world, redemption and the glorification of His Human . . .

200^e. By 'day,' mentioned twice, is meant the first and second advents of the Lord.

224³. Why God came into the world as the Word.

501². Miracles were performed before the Lord's advent because men then were natural.

579. The Lord came into the world principally on account of these two things, to remove Hell from Angel and man, and to glorify His Human, for before the advent of the Lord, Hell had grown up so as to infest the Angels, and by interposition between Heaven and the world, to intercept the communication of the Lord with the men of the earth . . .

—³. That the Lord's advent is to be expected. Ill.

766. The Lord is present with every man, and is urgent to be received, and when a man receives Him, by acknowledging Him as His God, the Creator, Redeemer and Saviour, it is His first advent, which is called 'dawn.'

768. That the advent of the Lord is not His advent to destroy the visible heaven and the habitable earth. Gen. art.

772. That this advent of the Lord, which is the second, exists for the sake of separating the evil from the good, and of saving those who have believed and will believe in Him, and of forming from these a New Angelic Heaven, and a New Church on earth; and that without it no flesh could be saved. Matt. xxiv. 22. Gen. art.

773. That the Lord's advent is to form a New Heaven from those who have believed in Him, and to establish a New Church from those who after this will believe in Him, is because these two things are the ends of His advent.

774. The Lord's presence is perpetual with every man both evil and good . . . but His advent is only with those who receive Him, who are they who believe in Him and do His commandments. The perpetual presence of the Lord causes man to become rational, and to have the ability to become spiritual; this is done by the light proceeding from the Lord as a sun, which man receives in the understanding; but the advent of the Lord is with him who conjoins heat to that light . . . The mere presence of the Lord, and consequent enlightenment of the understanding, may be compared to the presence of the solar light in the world . . . but the advent of the Lord may be compared to the advent of heat in the spring-time.

776. That this Second Advent of the Lord is not in person, but that it is in the Word, which is from Him, and is Himself. Gen. art.

779. That this Second Advent of the Lord takes place by means of a man, before whom He has manifested Himself in person, and whom He has filled with His Spirit, to teach the doctrines of the New Church through the Word from Himself. Gen. art.

8. The words Adventus Domini inscribed on these books (the Brief Exposition) in the spiritual world. I wrote the same by command on two copies in Holland.

Adversary. Adversarius.

T. 408. The zeal of charity is appeased as soon as the adversary repents.

409. That good is to be done to an adversary and an enemy from charity. III.

Adverse. Adversus.

A. 6202. Spirits who are let out from some infernal Society into the sphere of a man's life converse together about things that are adverse to the man; hence there generally flow in sadness, anxiety, etc. Such have often been with me, and infused anxieties into the region of the stomach, of which I did not know the source, but when detected, I heard that they had conversed about things that were adverse to my affections.

P. 219⁴. Man's will runs counter to the Lord's.

T. 338². Paradoxes adverse to sound reason.

Advert. Advertere.

Advertence. Advertentia. See ANIMADVERT.

A. 2387. 'The men said to Lot' = that the Lord turns to those who are in the good of charity.

3614. 'Until thy brother [Esau's] wrath goes away' = until the state takes a turn.

4086. 'Lift up thine eyes' = advertence from what is his own; as is evident from the signification of 'lifting up the eyes,' which is to think and intend, thus to advert to.

5798⁵. Evil and punishment cohere together there, for as soon as an Infernal Spirit does evil above his wont, punishing Spirits are at hand, and punish him, and this without advertence.

6727. 'To know what would be done to him (Moses)' = advertence.

7568. 'Stretch out thy hand towards heaven' = the advertence and drawing nigh of Heaven. 'To stretch out the hand' = to advert to, for a thing is adverted to and shown by the stretching out of the hand . . . And since when Heaven is adverted to and shown, one directs the sight and thought thither, it also sigs. drawing nigh.

8514. 'See ye' = that they should advert to, and reflect.

Advertize. See ANIMADVERT.

Advocate. Advocatus.

T. 603². Cases quoted by an advocate.

Adytum. Adytum.

A. 2363². Then wisdom and intelligence enter and fill up the recesses of his mind.

10261⁹. 'The oracle of the temple' = the Inmost

Heaven, where there is celestial good; therefore all the things that were in it signified celestial good; the ark that was there, and for the sake of which the oracle was constructed, signified the Inmost Heaven where the Lord is.

S. 33. Without the sense of its letter the Word would be like a temple with its adytum in the middle, without roof and walls. T. 213.

M. 98. An inclination that lies hidden in the recesses of his mind.

T. 9². Like temples and adyta for the worship of one God.

55⁹. Like a temple stripped of its walls so as to expose the adytum, altar and pulpit.

163. A just idea of God in the Church is like the adytum and altar in a temple.

174. Like thieves breaking through the door into the adytum of a temple. By a temple is meant the Church; by the door, the Lord God the Redeemer; and by the adytum, His Divinity.

209. The Word kept in the adyta of the temples in Heaven. As soon as the adytum is opened, the Word shines like a great star.

283⁹. The ark was afterwards introduced by Solomon into the temple, where he made its oracle.

508. I saw a magnificent square temple, in the middle of which there was an adytum with a veil before it, but which was now withdrawn . . . This temple represented the New Church . . . The adytum in the middle of the temple represented the conjunction of that Church with Heaven.

E. 277⁵. 'The oracle of the temple' = the inmost of Heaven and of the Church.

638². 'The secret place' = where the Lord is.

700¹⁴. The oracle of the temple where the ark was, represented the Lord as to Divine Truth, and hence the Third Heaven.

Afar. Longinquus.

Remoteness. Longinquitas.

A. 1396. (A Spirit who said he was nothing, detected from afar.)

2790. 'To see from afar' = to foresee.

2851¹⁰. 'A nation from afar, from the extremity of the earth' = evils and falsities, or those who are in them.

3708⁸. 'To come from afar' = that they are remote from the light that is from the Lord.

4723. 'They saw him (Joseph) afar off' = perception of the Lord's Divine Human remotely.

6740⁹. 'Sons from far' = truths with the Gentiles.

8918. 'They stood afar off (from Sinai)' = remoteness from inward things.

— The reason of the signification of 'afar off' explained.

—³. 'Afar off' = remoteness from the good and truth which are from the Divine, thus from inward things. Ill. 8927.

[A.] 9377. 'Bow yourselves afar off'=humiliation and adoration from the heart, and then the influx of the Lord.

— The reason why 'afar off'=from the heart is that they who are in humiliation remove themselves from the Lord . . .

9666⁶. 'Sons from afar'=those who are in obscurity as to truths.

— 'Extremity' is predicated of good, and 'afar,' of truth.

9967. A still more remote Earth visited . . . Remoteness there is from difference of state.

M. 207. I inquired from afar. T.694.

D. 4316. Such are heard speaking as if they were afar off.

E. 403¹³. 'From far'=distant and removed from goods and truths.

406⁷. 'From afar' is said of goods in the natural man ; 'near,' of those in the spiritual man.

—⁸. 'Afar off'=remote from truths of the Church that are spiritual.

453¹¹. 'They shall look upon the land of lengths.' . . 'Land'=the Church and Heaven, and 'length,' extension there.

675⁶. 'A far country'=the Lord's departure from the world, and as it were absence.

724²⁰. 'Far' and 'the end of the earth'=removal from the light of truth, because in falsities from ignorance, because they have not the Word, or do not understand its meaning.

1133. 'Afar off'=what is outward. Ex. —². Ill.

—⁴. 'Afar off,' in the opposite sense, = what is evil. Ill.

M. 16⁶. Men of urbanity and affability. T.744⁶.

T. 660. A Minister of the Church is estimated from his will and love, and also from his understanding in spiritual things, and not from his affability and dress.

A. 41. Every word, idea, and grain of thought belonging to Angelic Spirits is alive ; in every single particular of them there is affection proceeding from the Lord, who is life itself.

149². Such as is the organ, such is the affection of life.

155². The Angels perceive that they live from the Lord . . . there is a general affection which is of such a character that when they recede to the slightest extent from good of love and truth of faith they perceive the change.

268. It is the outward man, or his affection and memory, in which the seeds of good and truth are implanted.

318. Being affected with anxiety.

357. Anger is a general affection resulting from everything that is contrary to one's own proper love and its cupidities.

545. To give some idea of the nature of heavenly joy. It is an affection of innumerable delights and joys that present a general simultaneous something, in which general, or in which general affection, there are harmonies of innumerable affections that do not come distinctly to the perception, but obscurely, for the perception is very general. . . There are innumerable things within, arranged in indescribable order. They flow from the order of Heaven. There is such order in the single and smallest particulars of affection which are presented as only one most general thing, and are perceived according to the capacity of him who is their object. . . There is nothing that does not live and affect.

549. There is given there a most exquisite communication and perception of all affections and thoughts . . .

751². There are evil Genii who in a moment infuse themselves into the life of a man's cupidities, so as to turn and bend almost instantly an affection of good and truth into an affection of evil and falsity . . .

803. 'Birds'=affections of falsity, 'beasts,' cupidities. . . The persuasions of the Antediluvians are here fully described ; namely, that there were in them affections of falsity, cupidities, etc. . . Every affection of man draws its existence and nature from his intellectual things and from his voluntary things at the same time, so that the whole man is in every one of his affections as to all his intellectual and voluntary things, yea, he is in every most single or most minute particular of his affection. Proved from experience. . . Hence it is evident that every idea of a man, and every affection, yea, every bit of his affection is an image of him, and an effigy of him . . .

831. Such (Sirenic women) enter there into all the affections of others by simulating honesty, piety, etc.

—². One of the wicked arts prevalent there is to inspire into another an affection for oneself by insinuating oneself into the very state of his affection.

913. The fructification of good takes place in the affections of the outward man, the multiplication of truth, in his memory.

994. Man's affections are signified in the Word by clean beasts, but since they are not perceived, except in his pleasures, so that the man calls them pleasures, they are here called 'creeping things.'

—². No pleasure ever exists in the body unless it exists and subsists from some interior affection, and no interior affection ever exists except from an affection still more inward in which there is the use and the end.

—³. Pleasures are only the ultimate effects, and the inward things manifest themselves only in the other life, which they do in the order in which they are elevated by the Lord towards Heaven; the interior affections with their delights manifest themselves in the World of Spirits, the more inward ones with their pleasantnesses in the Heaven of Angelic Spirits, and the still more inward ones with their happinesses in the Heaven of Angels.

—⁴. Since the affections more and more inward in order are felt in the extremes or in the body as pleasures, they are called 'creeping things,' but they are only corporeal things that are affected by inward ones. Examps.

995². Pleasures of various kinds enum. They are extreme or bodily affections arising from interior affections; the interior affections, which are alive, draw all their delight from good and truth . . .

1016. Nothing grows and is multiplied with man unless there is some affection, the delight of affection causes it not only to take root, but also to grow. All things take place according to the aspiration of the affection. What a man loves he freely seizes upon, retains and guards; thus all things that are favourable to any affection . . . Such as the affection is, such is the multiplication. With a regenerate man there is the affection of what is good and true bestowed by the Lord by means of charity, wherefore he seizes upon, retains and guards whatever favours the affection of charity. 1017, Examp.

1029. Interior things are rational things, which are here signified by 'bird;' and they are affections, which are signified by 'beast;' outer things are scientifics and pleasures, which are here signified by 'wild beasts of the earth.'

1285². In Heaven there is one single influx which is an influx of affections from the Lord, His mercy and life.

1391. The Angels perceive what is within an idea, what affection, what origin of affection, etc.

1412. There are with man bodily and worldly things exterior and interior, the exterior are those which are proper to the body, as pleasures and sensual things; the interior are affections and scientifics. Sig.

1435. Scientifics are vessels of spiritual things, and affections from the good pleasures of the body are vessels of celestial things. Sig.

1588^e. It is not the paradisiacal beauties that affect there, but the celestial spiritual things that live in them. 4528.

1589. 'As the land of Egypt in coming to Zoar' = scientific things from affections of good.

—². The Rational in itself is nothing unless affection flows into it and makes it active, hence it follows that the Rational is such as the affection is. When the affection of good flows in, it becomes in the Rational the affection of truth; and contrarily when the affection of evil. Since what is scientific applies itself to what is rational, and is its instrumental, it follows that the affection also flows into what is scientific and arranges it: for nothing but affection ever lives with the outward man, the reason of which is that the affection of good descends from what is celestial, that is, from celestial love, which vivifies everything into which it flows, even affections of evil, or cupidities. Ex.

1622. The objects there affect not only the sight with pleasure, but also the mind with happiness.

1713. With the exterior man there are affections and scientifics; the former are from the goods of the interior man, the latter are from his truths.

1718. Scientifics of memory and affections of love properly constitute the outward man . . .

1745. 'The elevation of the hand to Jehovah' is a gesture of the body corresponding to an affection of the mind, therefore it sigs. the mind, or an affection of the mind.

1756². The ancient writers put together historicals to the end that all affections whatever might be presented as gods and goddesses.

1758. Affections make the life of speech.

1759. Celestial Spirits rarely flow into speech otherwise than through affections, which like a stream or aura, soften the expressions.

1820². As soon as Evil Spirits perceive anything of conscience, they form for themselves an affection from the false and infirm things with the man, and through this they bedim the light of truth, and so pervert it; or else induce anxiety and inflict torture.

1890. The first Rational with the Lord, that was conceived from the influx of the inward man into the affection of sciences of the outward, is treated of in this chapter.

1895. 'An Egyptian handmaid' = the affection of sciences. See HAGAR.

— Rational truth is born from sciences and knowledges vivified through the affection corresponding to them, which affection, being of the exterior man, ought to serve the intellectual truth that is with the inmost man . . . wherefore that affection is represented by the handmaid Hagar.

— The Rational is not born from sciences and knowledges, but from the affection of them; for nothing rational can ever come into being unless it breathes some delight or affection of sciences and knowledges; affection is the maternal life itself, and the celestial and spiritual itself in affection is the paternal life; hence man becomes rational in proportion to the quantity and quality of the affection. Scientifics and knowledges in themselves are nothing but dead things or instrumental causes that are vivified through the life of affection.

1900. The influx of the inward man is into the knowledges and scientifics of the exterior man, by means of affection. Before these come into being, there is indeed a communication, but only through the affections through which the outward man is ruled. . .

1909. There are many affections of the exterior man all allotted to their own uses, but pre-eminent before all is the affection of knowledges and sciences, when he has for an end that he may become truly rational . . . The very life itself of the inward man flows into all the affections of the natural man, but is varied there according to the ends. Examps.

[A.] 1983. Sirens ensnare especially in the night-time, and try to infuse themselves into the interior thoughts and affections of man . . .

—³. They are chiefly from the female sex who in the life of the body have studied to allure to themselves their associates through interior cunning . . . entering into the affections and delights of each one . . .

2077. The Lord's affection or love described.

2146. All affection is signified by growing warm.

2157. The affection of humiliation that is in these words.

— . There are both affection and thing in every single particular of the Word; the Celestial Angels perceive the Word as to the affection; the Spiritual, as to the thing.

2158. The affection of longing is here expressed.

2209. In one affection of man, yea in one of his sighs, there are indefinite things, which are perceived by the Angels, but can never be described.

— . Every affection of a man, yea, every idea of his thought, is an image of him, and is of such a character that all things of his life are marvellously within it.

2216. Laughter is an affection of the Rational, and in fact an affection of what is true or false in the Rational; hence is all laughter. So long as there is such an affection in the Rational as goes forth into laughter, so long there is something bodily or worldly . . . Sarah's laughing sighs, with what affection rational truth, when separated from good, regards what is said here.

2231^o. Angels and Spirits are affected inwardly with spiritual light according to the life of love and charity with them.

2275. This signification is evident not so much from the words themselves as from the affection that belongs to them; for there are two things in the inward sense of the Word, the Spiritual and the Celestial . . . and the Celestial is that only the affection of the things that are in the inward sense is perceived. In this are the Celestial Angels. They who are in this, or in affection, at once perceive from the affection alone what the letter involves when it is read by man, and from this they form celestial ideas for themselves, and this with innumerable variety and in an ineffable manner, according to the concord and succession of the celestial things of love that are in the affection.

2311^o. The life of the Lord flows through the internal of the Word into the literal sense according to the affection of him who reads.

2363^o. There remains with everyone after death the life, or what is the same, the affection; all thought then is according to this . . .

2367. When man lives in the body, affections, like perceptions, are very general, thus very obscure; there are myriads of myriads of things in each little affection—affectionacula—of him.

2422. The Angels are in every good affection of man. . . . According to these affections, and according to the quality of them, the good are distinguished into Societies.

2474. Whatever man hears and sees, and is affected with, unknown to the man, is insinuated as to ideas and ends into the interior memory, and remains therein.

2480^o. It is the affection itself that gives life, the affection of evil to falsities, and the affection of good to truths; everyone thinks from affection, and no one without affection.

2541^o. The Lord reduced rational and scientific things to obedience, not these things themselves, but the affections rising up adverse to the celestial and spiritual things of doctrine . . .

2543. Fear, like every affection, involves many things, although it appears simple. Enum.

2592². A Gentile who was inwardly affected by the Word.

2641. 'To hear' is predicated of those things that belong to affection; 'to see,' of those that belong to thought.

2671. That those who become spiritual have light from the Lord's Divine Human into their affection of sciences and of apparent truths. Treated of.

2675. The life of the outer man is the affection of sciences, which is signified by Hagar. With those who become spiritual, good and truth are implanted by the Lord in the affection of sciences . . . for the affection of sciences is the mother through whom is born the Rational in which is the Spiritual.

2689. The life of every one is nothing but affection or love.

—³. The affirmative strengthened even to affection with those who become spiritual men. But those who do not become spiritual men, admit negative things even to the affection of what is false.

2691. Ishmael reps. the man of the Spiritual Church; Hagar his mother, his affection of knowledges of truth, which is what feels grief.

2694³. Unless the affection is broken, the thought remains in its own state, for thought has its faith and its life from affection.

2701². 'The left eye' = what is intellectual, 'the right eye' = the affection thereof; 'the right eye being plucked out' = that the affection is to be mastered if it gives cause of offence.

2704. When they come into a state of illustration, they are then in the affection of knowing and of learning truths, and when they are in that affection, they are imbued with truths easily and as it were spontaneously.

2718. 'A wife from the land of Egypt' (for Ishmael) = the affection of sciences that the man of the Spiritual Church has.

2780. Singulars derive their character from the general affection.

2802. The affection that is in these words. 3134-3839. 3973^o. 4132. 4140. 4897.

2873°. Lives are nothing but delights, and these are nothing but affections, which are of loves.

2874. Freedom is to think and will from affection, and such as the affection is such is the freedom. 2875.

2875. Nothing can be conjoined except to one who is affected, affection is the receiving [agent] itself; to receive anything against the affection is to receive it against the life . . . such as the affection is such is the reception.

2876. It is an eternal law that every one be in freedom as to interior things, that is, as to affections and thoughts, so that the affection of good and truth may be insinuated into that freedom.

2877. Whatever is from affection is free.

2878. Man is thus introduced by the Lord into truth and good through affections, and one man quite differently from another . . . and because he is continually introduced into truth and good through affections, thus through freedom, and at last into the affections of spiritual truth and of spiritual good, the Lord alone knows those times and states . . .

2879. Unless man is inwardly in freedom as to all affections and as to all thoughts, he can never be so disposed as that good and truth can take any root.

2880. Nothing appears to man as his own but what flows from freedom; the reason is that all affection, which is of love, is the veriest life itself of man, and to act from affection is to act from the life, that is, from the self, thus from what is his own, or what is the same thing, from proprium.

2886. With man, as to his affection and as to his thoughts, the case is this. No one can will and think from himself, but from others, and these again from others, and so on; what is disconnected does not exist; evil and false things, and good and true things, have connection with the Hells and with the Heavens respectively, and that is the source of the willing and thinking and thence of the love, affection and delight, thus of the freedom, of those who are in them.

2988. The things of the mind show themselves in the face; the affections more than the rest; the interior affections from and in the eyes.

3020°. Of the natural mind also are all natural affections that man has in common with brute animals. But of the rational mind are all spiritual affections which are properly human, and by which man is distinguished from brute animals.

3024. 'Thou shalt not take a woman for my son (Isaac) from the daughters of the Canaanites' = that the Divine Rational be not conjoined with any affection that disagrees with truth. 3683.

— All conjunction of truth with good is effected through affection, for no truth ever enters into the rational of man, and is conjoined there, except through affection, for in the affection is the good of love, which alone conjoins.

3049. General scientifics are not good in themselves, nor alive, but the affection of them causes them to be good and alive, for then they are for the sake of use; no one is affected with any scientific or truth unless on account of use.

3077. Truth is not truth unless there is life in it, the life in it is the affection which is of the love.

3080. No one is affected by the face of anyone, but by the affection that beams therefrom; and they who are in good are affected by the affection of good therein; thus it is what is spiritual in what is natural that affects.

3086. Affection exists through influx from the Divine; first the general affection of truth.

3138. No illustration or apperception without affection or love, which is spiritual heat, and gives light to those things that are illustrated by light.

3186. Goods and truths that are not genuine do not affect man and make him happy; the affection of love and of charity, with happiness, which is its soul, is given by the Lord when a man is being regenerated.

3189. 'Rebecca's damsels' = serving affections; for 'a damsel' = affection in which there is innocence.

— Every affection appears like something simple or one, but contains innumerable things; all the things that are therein are affections consociated in an incomprehensible form; they are also mutually subordinated to each other . . . the Societies of Heaven are in such a form . . . The form of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom exists according to the ordination of the affections in His Divine Human. Treated of.

3218. When the Angels are in affections and are at the same time conversing about them, such things fall in a lower sphere among Spirits into representative species of animals. Des.

3264. The birth of the spiritual man from the influx of the Divine into the affection of sciences. Sig. . . That the birth or regeneration of the spiritual is from Divine influx into the affection of knowledges. Refs.

3313°. Since the good of truth is outward, namely in the natural affection proceeding from truth, it is said that it was 'in the mouth of Isaac.'

—³. Doctrinal things of truth enter into the memory in the same way, and what first brings them in is the affections of various loves. The genuine affection, which is of the good of charity, is not then perceived, but still it is present, and in proportion as it can be present it is adjoined to doctrinals of truth by the Lord and in the same proportion also they remain adjoined. When therefore the time comes that the man can be regenerated, then the Lord inspires the affection of good, and through it excites the things that have been adjoined to that affection by Him, which things are called 'remains,' and then through that affection of good, He successively removes the affections of other loves, and therefore also the things that have been coupled with them. And so the affection of good, or, what is the same thing, the good of life, begins to have the dominion.

3343. Spiritual things come into being through modifications of heavenly light, in which are affections that are wonderfully varied in indefinite ways; and celestial things through variations of heavenly flame or heat. Thus do all affections move.

3348. Spirits from another Earth represented in a wonderful manner the human mind as a heavenly form, and its affections as spheres of activity agreeing with it. They also represented how the Lord bends those affections which are in themselves undelightful into delightful ones.

3365^o. Since the Divine is in doctrinal things, they affect; hence is the conjunction of the Lord with Angels and men.

3463². He who acts from command, thus not from the affection of the heart, as often as he acts, begins from self, and also thinks of merit when he does what is good; but he who does not act from command, but from charity, that is, from affection, acts from the heart, thus from freedom.

3539². Even in the other life man has with him what belongs to the outward man, namely natural affections and also doctrinal things. 3679².

3552. 'Arise, sit and eat' = the truth of the affection of such good . . . For the things signified by to arise, to sit, and to eat, in the inward sense, are of affection, wherefore affection is alone mentioned for them.

3570⁶. The desire and affection of knowing truth correspond to appetite and relish. The soul, which is the good of the Rational, causes us to desire and to be affected with them, thus it introduces the things of science and of doctrine through delight that is of desire and through good that is of affection.

3603⁴. The reason why good was apparently in the posterior place is because it lay hidden in every affection of him.

3610². This can never be apprehended by those who are in the affection of self and of the world, for they do not believe in the existence of any other life, when yet the fact is that when they are deprived of the affection of self and of the world, life flows in from the Lord like the angelic and heavenly life.

3614². Whatever resists any affection produces anger.

3639. What Societies they are and to which provinces they belong is known from their situation in respect to the human body, but still better from their genius and nature as to affections.

3665^e. Since the Angels are affected with these things, their affection is communicated, and produces the delight and pleasure that a child has from these things.

3671². When a man is affected with scientifics that confirm good and truth, then scientifics and works are as ground.

3679⁵. There are Spirits who are rational and who think spiritually, and there are those who are not rational, and who do not think spiritually, just according to their affections and thoughts thence derived when here.

3688⁴. When a man is being regenerated, he does good only to the good and pious, because then it is not the man but the good in him that he is affected with; and since the Lord is present in what is good and pious, he thus, through his affection towards what is good, testifies his love to the Lord.

3701⁷. The things of the old will and understanding are separated from those of the new understanding, not according to the affection of knowing them, but according to the affection of doing them.

3741. The affections of the mind-animus-that present themselves to view in the face.

3762. These truths are not acknowledged, believed and imbued unless the man is in a life according to them, for then he comes into affection; and he comes into affection by means of life in the proportion that they are implanted in his Natural.

3804. Truths form the face of good, the beauty of which is from the form of truth, but good is what affects.

3825. All understanding of a thing is according to affections, by which the idea is varied even if it is clear.

3835. 'Zilpah the handmaid' = outward affections, or outward bonds, that are subservient means. Its being said that 'Laban gave her' = that such affections are from the good of a common collateral stock. They are called outward bonds because all affections are bonds, (Refs.) for nothing holds a man in bonds but his affection. The affection of anyone does not indeed appear to him as a bond, but still is so called from the fact that it rules the man and holds him as it were bound. But inward affections are called inward bonds, as the affections of truth and good, the bonds of conscience. To these outward bonds or affections correspond. That such subservient affections were outermost ones of the same quality as those called affections of the body, is evident from the fact that Leah reps. affections of outward truth.

3839. There are two things that constitute the inward sense of the Word, namely the affection and the thing. The affections that lie hidden in the words of the Word are not manifest to man, but are inmost stored up therein. Nor can they be manifest, because while man lives in the body he is in worldly and bodily affections which have nothing in common with those affections which are in the inward sense of the Word. For the affections therein are those of spiritual and celestial love, which man can the less perceive because few are in them, and those few are for the most part the simple who are not able to reflect about affections. The rest do not even know what genuine affection is. These affections are in charity towards the neighbour and in love to God. They who are not in them believe that they are not anything, although these affections fill the universal Heaven, and that with unspeakable variety. It is such affections with their varieties that lie hidden in the inward sense of the Word, and are there not only in every series, but also in every word, yea in every jot, and they shine forth before the Angels with indefinite variety when the Word is being read by those who are in simple good and at the same time in innocence.

—⁴. The Angels are in ends only (ends are nothing but loves or affections), and therefore they are in the affections of the things that are in the Word, and this with all variety according to the kinds of the affections in which they are.

3849. 'Bilhah the handmaid' = exterior affections, which are bonds or subservient means. Exterior affections are natural affections subservient to inward ones.

E

The reason why these affections are subservient means for the conjunction of truth with good is that nothing of doctrine, or even of science, can enter into man except through affections, for the life is in the affections, but not in truths of doctrine and of science without them. For a man cannot even think, or utter a single word, without affection. He who attends will perceive that a voice without affection is like the voice of an automaton, thus only a sound without life, and that the quantity and quality of life that is in it is in proportion to the quantity and quality of the affection that is in it. Hence it is evident that in truths there is an affection from good. . . The reason why truths appear to be animate even although there is no good of charity, is from the affections of the love of self and of the world.

— By affection is meant what is continuous of love.

—². Hence it is evident that affections are the subservient means for the conjunction of truth with good, and that affections are what introduce truths and also are what arrange truths in order; genuine affections which are those of love to the Lord and of charity towards the neighbour into heavenly order; and evil affections, which are those of the love of self and of the world, into infernal order. The outermost affections are those which belong to the body, and are called appetites and pleasures; those which are one degree less outward are of the mind-animus-, and are called natural affections, and the inward ones are of the rational mind and are called spiritual affections. The truths of doctrine are introduced to the spiritual affections of the mind through the more outward and outermost affections. . . The truths that are first learned cannot be at first insinuated through any other affections; genuine affections will come in time, but only when the man acts from good.

3870. The first life that flows from the Lord manifests itself through obedience, which is the first of will; the second through the affection of doing truth, which is a further progression of will, and which is present when delight and bliss are perceived in doing truth. Unless such a progression of faith as this takes place, truth does not become truth . . . for it couples itself with man's evil affection or cupidity. 3905.

3884. The right part of the brain corresponds to affections, or to voluntary things.

3906. Inward truths are conjoined with spiritual affection that cannot flow in until outward truths have been fitted to correspondence with inward ones. Examp.

[A.] 3909. The reason why 'to be kindled with anger' = to be indignant, is that every natural affection becomes milder as it ascends towards interior things or towards Heaven, and is at last changed into heavenly affection.

3913. 'A maidservant' or 'handmaid' = the affection of the knowledges that belong to the exterior man. This affection is the means of conjoining interior truths with natural or outward truths. Sig.

3927°. Leah = affection of the outward man; Rachel, affection of the inward man.

3928°. If a man does not perceive in himself anything of affection for what is just and fair in his function, and for what is true and good in company and in life, he may know that he is in the same quality of delight as the infernals.

3938°. 'Blessedness,' in the outward sense, = delight of the affections.

—⁴. But it is the delight of the affections of truth and of good that is here signified. All affections have their own delights, and the quality of the delights is according to that of the affections. Affections of evil and falsity also have their own delights, and before man is being regenerated and is receiving from the Lord affections of truth and of good, those delights appear to be the only ones there are.

—⁶. People believe that they can come into Heaven in whatsoever affection they have lived through the whole course of life. . . Some who had believed this were admitted, but as soon as they came there, they began to be sensible of the filthiness of their affections, thus of infernal torment.

—⁸. Since affection is mentioned so often, it shall be said what is understood by affection. Affection is nothing but love, but it is what is continuous of it. For a man is affected with either evil and falsity or with good and truth from love, but this love is not perceived as love, because it is present with and is within everything that belongs to the man, and is varied according to circumstances, and according to states and their changes, and this constantly in every single particular that the man wills, thinks and does. It is this Continuous of love that is called affection, and it is this Continuous that reigns in the man's life and that makes all his delight, thus his very life, for a man's life is nothing but the delight that is of his affection, thus is nothing but affection that is of his love.

3939. 'Asher' = that delight of the affections which corresponds to the happiness of eternal life. . . When a man begins to perceive this delight, or this affection, he begins to become a Church.

3941°. 'No peace' = no good affecting.

3956. The affection of charity described. See under CHARITY.

3986°. Varieties of good exist from truths and also from affections that are of each one's love, and which are being rooted in and appropriated to man through his life.

4018. 'They grew warm in coming to drink' = even to the ardour of affection that they might be conjoined. 'To come to drink' is the affection of truth. The reason why 'over-against the flocks' = that truths and goods might be conjoined to the Natural, is that it involves a view, and thus an excited affection; for thus are spiritual things conjoined. Moreover all implantation of truth and good, as well as all conjunction [between them], is effected through affection. Truths and goods that are learned, but with which a man is not affected, do indeed enter the memory, but stick as lightly there as a feather does to a wall. The case stands thus with the things that enter the memory. Those that enter without affection fall into the shade of it, but those that enter with affection come into light there, and these are seen and appear clearly and vividly upon any excitation of a similar thing. Not so however those that lie in the shade round about. Hence it is evident that all implantation of truth and its conjunction with good is effected through affection, and that the greater the affection is, the stronger is the conjunction. The ardour of affection here referred to is inmost affection. But truths can never be implanted and conjoined with good except through affections of what is true and good, which affections gush out from charity towards the neighbour and from love to the Lord as from their springs. But evils and falsities [are implanted and conjoined] through affections of what is evil and false, which affections gush out from the loves of self and of the world as from their springs.

4029. 'To grow warm' = the ardour and the effect of affection.

—¹. Whatever is from affection is spontaneous, and especially what is from the ardour of affection.

—^e. All that is of affection is free. 4096°.

4031. Whatever is not from affection is from what is not spontaneous, or from what is not free. When the ardour of affection is deficient, what is free ceases. Treated of.

—³. Whatever forces man does not instil into him any affection, or if it does instil any, it ties itself to an affection of evil. It appears as though it infused something holy, and also does so, but still when the state is changed, the man returns to his former affections, namely to evils and falsities. (The consequence is profanation) for he first acknowledges and believes and is also affected with what is holy, and then he denies, yea, has aversion for it.

4042. The brain is the source of the thoughts that are of the understanding and of the affections that are of the will.

4044. Representations may be understood from the way in which affections are able to act into the face and there to present images of themselves.

4046. Lights—lumina—seen there indicate the affections and also the degrees of intelligence (of Spirits).

4054. I perceived from the dullness, sluggishness and deprivation of affection that Societies of such Spirits were present.

4063°. The new man is in the affection of spiritual and celestial things, but the old man is in the affection of worldly and earthly things. . . And in order for a man to be brought from the state of the old man into that of the new, the concupiscences of the world must be put off and the affections of Heaven must be put on. . . . And since the states of his life are to be so greatly changed, it cannot be otherwise than that he should be long held in a certain middle good, namely in a good that participates of the affections of the world as well as of the affections of Heaven.

4067². The association of men, as to their thoughts and affections, with Spirits and Angels described.

4121. 'Brethren'=those who are in like good and truth, that is, in like affection of good and truth, for all are associated together there according to affections.

— For then affections are manifest as in clear day, in their true quality, and also in what quality of affection one had been towards another.

4136². With those who are not being regenerated, there are not goods that are being changed, but there are affections and their delights.

4151⁶. If they had believed that everything good and true is from the Lord, the evil that entered into their thought and will would not have affected them, in fact there would not have come out of it evil but good; for the things that enter in do not affect, but the things that go out, according to the Lord's words in Mark vii. 15.

— Spirits of that sort have sometimes been with me, and when conjoined with me by somewhat of affection they knew no otherwise than that my [affections and thoughts] were theirs. It is the same with all men. Every man has Spirits with him, who, as soon as they come to him and enter into his affection, know no otherwise than that all things of the man, namely all things of his affection and thought, are theirs.

4211³. The conjunction of the Lord with man is according to the state of his thought and thence of his affection. Ex.

4224. There are purer and interior organic forms that present the inward senses and also produce interior affections. The interior Heavens correspond to these forms, because they correspond to their senses and to the affections of these latter.

4245². The things that a man thinks, and from which he thinks, affect him.

4249². All man's thought and all his affection are either from Hell or from Heaven. When he thinks and wills evil things and is delighted with false ones thence derived, he may know that his thoughts and affections are from Hell; and when he thinks and wills good things and is delighted with true ones thence derived, that they are from Heaven, that is, through Heaven from the Lord. But the thoughts and affections that are with man, for the most part appear under another form. Examp.

4299. 'Faces'=thoughts and affections, for these are interior things, being of the mind-animus-and of the mind-mens-and manifesting themselves in the face.

4301³. The delight felt from seeing beautiful objects is not of the eye but of the mind-animus-and its affection, and in proportion as a man is affected with them in the same proportion he sees them, and in the same proportion also retains them in his memory. But what the eye sees from no affection slips away and is not inserted into the memory.

4351. 'To embrace'=affection.

4364. We know that others are led to their verdict, or to what they call good and true, through both reasons and affections.

—². The Lord leads everyone through his affections, and thus bends him through a silent Providence, for He leads through freedom.

4367. 'Not so I pray'=the origin of affection, for refusal to accept a gift insinuates affection.

4404. The sense of touch in general corresponds to the affection of good, taste to the affection of knowing, smell to the affection of perceiving, hearing to the affection of learning and also to obedience, and sight to the affection of being intelligent and wise.

4407². Man's natural affections effigy themselves representatively in the face, but the interior affections, that are of thought, appear in the eyes by a certain flame of life and a play of light thence that flashes forth according to the affection in which the thought is.

4459⁴. They who are in mere outward things cannot apprehend what inward ones are, thus cannot be affected by them, for no one can be affected with what he does not apprehend. Examps.

4464. Unless a man is in Heaven as to his thoughts and affections, he cannot go there after death, because there is no communication.

—². A spiritual sphere envelopes man according to the life of his affections. —³.

[A.] 4529^e. Some Spirits were taken up into a Heaven where they could scarcely subsist on account of the bliss of interior affection prevailing there.

4633. The affection of everyone is plainly manifest there.

4788⁴. They who do what is good from good, do it from inward affection, but they who do it from truth, do it from a certain outward affection.

4793. Since taste corresponds to the perception and affection of knowing, understanding and being wise, and the life of man is in that affection, no Spirit or Angel is permitted to flow into man's taste. . . Vagabond Spirits, however, who in the bodily life have imbibed the habit of entering into a man's affections for the sake of doing harm, retain that cupidity there, and study in every way to enter into the taste with man, which being done, they possess the life of his thoughts and affections . . .

4797. Changes of the state of the affections also appear to the life in the faces of the Angels. . . I have seen the successive variations according to the affections of the Societies with which they were communicating. . . I have seen that they varied their faces by means of changes from one limit of an affection to the other, still however retaining the same face in general, so that the dominant affection always shone forth with its variations. Thus were shown the faces of the whole affection in its extension. 6604.

—². There were also shown the changes of the affections from infancy to adult age by means of variations of the face.

4799. (Spirits from another orb who converse by means of variations of the face and express affections by those parts of the face that are around the eyes.)

4884. When a man does a truth frequently, it then recurs not only from habit, but also from affection, and thus from freedom.

4925. The good in a man who is being born again does not appear, but only manifests itself in a certain affection that does not fall manifestly into the sense of the outward man.

4985^e. When the Angels appear in their beauty, they affect the inmost principles. It is the good of love from the Lord with them shining forth through the truth of faith that by penetrating affects.

5002^e. When outward bonds are relaxed in Heaven they are more inwardly in affection and thence in freedom, consequently in blessedness.

5036⁵. Evil Spirits enter especially into the affections that a man has had before and excite them.

5079². When a man dies, he has with him all natural affections and cupidities.

5096². Such Spirits do not even know that they are in bonds, for they are affected by their own falsity, and hence suppose themselves to be in freedom, for whatever is of affection appears free. But they who are not in confirmed falsity, easily admit truths and are affected by them.

5102. 'Why are your faces evil to-day?' = an affection from which there is sadness.

5114⁴. Man is able not only to receive what is Divine but also to appropriate it through acknowledgment and affection, thus through what is reciprocal.

5145⁶. Voluntary things are said to be 'perforated' or not terminated when there is no affection of what is good and true, or of what is just and fair. Affections are what terminate and close, wherefore they are also called bonds, affections of what is good and true inward bonds, and affections of what is evil and false outward bonds. Outward bonds are affections of gain, honour, reputation, etc.

5247^e. The inward sense affects even if it is not understood, because the affection of the Angels is communicated.

5432³. Such persons do not believe the doctrinal things of their Church from any affection of truth, but from the affection of capturing honours or gain. In the other life they are in the sphere of their own affections and thoughts thence derived wherever they go.

5433². The affection of gain is an earthly affection and the affection of truth is a spiritual affection. One or the other must have the dominion, wherefore where one affection is, the other is not. . . Man must therefore be either in earthly affection or in heavenly affection.

5489. The scientifics that enter into the memory are always introduced through some affection. Those not introduced through some affection do not stick there but slip away. The reason is that there is life in affection, but not in scientifics without affection. Hence it is plain that scientifics always have conjoined with them such things as are of affection.

5492. In the Inmost Heaven everything of the Word passes into affections that are of love and of charity.

5977. Genii act into the affections and concupiscences of man.

5992. The Angels especially regulate the affections, for these make man's life and freedom.

6024⁴. 'The sons of Asher' = the delight of the affections and their doctrinal things.

—⁵. 'The sons of Rachel' = what was from celestial affection.

—⁷. 'Jacob's sons' women' = the affections that were not from that marriage.

6159. The dominant affection is present in every single particular of the will and of the thought. The reason why it does not always appear in the thought is that it is then clothed with the affections that are insinuated by means of objects. As soon as these affections are put off, the dominant affection presents itself to view.

6183°. The man then comes into a state of interior thought and affection.

6191. For many years all my thoughts and affections as to the smallest atoms have flowed in by means of Spirits and Angels . . . and still I thought and willed as before. 6307.

6195. The Spirits who enter into the affections of another, possess him.

—2. I could only be loosed from those who were tied to me through even light affections by means of intermediate loves. The separation was marked by means of changes of the state of the affections, for they receded as the affections were changed.

6261. Every spiritual affection has a gesture corresponding to it in the body, and which is its representative.

6307. Influx from the spiritual world into the affections and thoughts. See above, 6191.

6320. When Angels flow in they adjoin affections also, which contain innumerable things, few of which however are received by the man.

6323. Brute animals act no otherwise than through the loves and their affections into which they were created; every animal is carried whither its affection and love draw.

6326. All operations of the mind are variations of form . . . and these variations exist according to the changes of the state of the affections.

6408. 'Asher' = the delight of the heavenly affections that are of love to the Lord and of charity towards the neighbour. See under BLESSED at this ref.

6413. 'A hind let loose' = freedom of natural affection. Ex. and III. See STAG.

—5. 'A hind bringing forth in a field' = to conjoin natural affections with spiritual things of the Church, but because those affections were devoid of truths and goods, it is said that 'she forsook because there was no grass.'

6567°. That the man has become a Spiritual Church is known from the fact that he does from affection what the truth teaches, and that he does not act against that affection, however much the Natural may desire. The affection itself and reason thence derived have dominion.

6600. The faculty of understanding and perceiving is according to the extension of the thoughts and affections into Societies. Ex. . . The statement that the thought and affection circumscribe themselves into Societies is made according to the appearance; the influx of thoughts and affections being really from the Societies.

6601. What innumerable things there are in every idea and little affection—affectiuncula—, also that they penetrate into Societies, shown by experience.

—e. The quality of a man's life is just according to the Societies into which his thought and affection extend themselves, and according to the quality and quantity of the extension.

6602. The fact of the extension around of the spheres of the thoughts and affections into the spheres of Societies, shown by experience.

6603. The thoughts and affections however that penetrate into Societies do not move them to think and will specifically as does the person from whom the thoughts and affections go out, but they enter into the universal sphere of affection and of thought thence derived of those Societies, so that the Societies know nothing about it. Ex. . . All thoughts and affections enter into the spheres of the Societies with which they agree.

—e. The affection of knowing what is true and good corresponds in the spiritual world to a serene atmosphere.

6604. The extension of the affections and thoughts has its limits. Within the limits of this common sphere the thoughts and affections can be varied, and may sometimes be nearer to one Society and sometimes to another. When they are in the midst of one, the rest of the Societies are in the circumferences.

6605. Hence it is that every Spirit and Angel appears in a form according to the communication of his thoughts and affections with Societies. Des.

6606. When speaking with Angelic Spirits, I have noticed that the affections and thoughts appeared like a river around, and that the subject of thought was in the midst, encompassed by that river, which extended itself thence in all directions; from which also it was made manifest that the thoughts and affections extend themselves in every direction to Societies.

6607. When thoughts with affections diffuse themselves, they circulate almost according to the form of the circunvolutions of the cineritious substance of the brain. Des.

6610. With those who are being regenerated, the thoughts and affections are continually being insinuated into new heavenly Societies, and the extension grows. The former thoughts and affections are also divided, and are then associated with ideas which are again put into communication with new Societies.

6751. The first truths are born from scientifics, and thus are as sons by a mother which is the affection of scientifics. (Signified by Moses being as a son to Pharaoh's daughter.)

6996°. The speech of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven is not speech of ideas, but of affections that are of celestial love.

7002. 'And he shall be glad in his heart' = the affection of love, for all gladness proceeds from the affection of love.

7337°. The state of the affection and thought make the idea of place and of distance there.

7342. When the will is mentioned, there is understood the affection that is of love, for the will of man is nothing else. That affection it is which rules the man, for the affection of love is his life. If the affection of self and of the world is in a man, then his whole life is nothing else; nor can he withstand it, for that would be to withstand his own life. Principles of truth are of no account. If the affection of those loves has the dominion, it draws truth to its own side. Hence it is that the principles of the truth of faith are of no efficacy whatever with a man unless the Lord insinuates affection of spiritual love, that is, of love towards the neighbour. In proportion as a man receives this affection, in the same proportion he receives the truths of faith. It is the affection of this love that makes the new will. Hence it is that the infernals, being in the affection or cupidity of evil, cannot receive the truths of faith, consequently cannot be amended.

7360. With the inhabitants of Mars, the affection itself of their speech is represented in the face, and its thought in the eyes, for thought and speech, and also affection and face, with them make one.

7648°. The spirit regarded in itself is the affection in form; the dominant affection is its very form itself, and the rest of the affections apply themselves into it.

7780. 'A handmaid behind the mills'=an affection of sciences that is in the highest degree outward.

7839. They who are in the obedience of truth, and they who are in the affection of doing it, compared. 7840. 7857. 8234, Ex. 8330°. 8399, Rep. 8505. See also below at 8505 and 8690.

7967. Delights of affections adhering to truths. Sig. and Ex.

—. The Angels with a man continually flow in with good affections, and then excite the truths that have been conjoined with them. And so (contrariwise.) But if the truths have not been conjoined with good affections, the Angels labour in vain to excite the things of faith and charity.

8033. Charity is an inward affection which consists in this, that a man wills from the heart to do good to the neighbour, and that this is the delight of his life, without recompense.

8034. Faith, however, is an inward affection which consists in this, that a man wills from the heart to know what is true and what is good, not for the sake of doctrine, but for the sake of life. This affection conjoins itself with the affection of charity by this, that he wills to do according to the truth.

8035. They who are in the genuine affection of charity and faith, believe that they will nothing of good and understand nothing of truth of themselves, but that the will of good and the understanding of truth are from the Lord.

8068. The affection that gives life to discourse.

8168°. The forces in the spiritual world are affections that are of loves.

8248. With the inhabitants of Jupiter, the affections that are of love are manifested through the features and their changes.

8337°. The correspondence of every sound with affec- tions. These natural affections are expressed through some kinds of musical instruments, and they actually move deeply those affections by means of them. Ex.

8367. 'They came to Elin'=a state of illustration and of affection, thus of consolation after temptation. For after every spiritual temptation there come illustration and affection, thus what is pleasant and delightful; what is pleasant, from illustration through truth, and what is delightful, from the affection of good. The cause of this illustration and affection is that when temptation is finished, communication with Heaven is opened.

8452. When it is evening there, good Spirits and Angels are remitted into the state of the natural affections in which they had been here.

8505. Before regeneration, man acts from obedience, but after it from affection. When a man acts from affection, it is not allowable for him to look back and to do good from truth. Sig.

8522°. Whatever a man wills from affection, he is conscious of as being good.

8593°. Genii, who are in more inward evil, do not attack the truths of faith, but the goods of faith, for they act through depraved affections, through which they pervert good thoughts. . . They act in a most secret manner into the conscience, and pervert it by means of wafts of depraved affections. 9013°.

—e. 'Thy sword (Agag's) hath bereaved women'=that their falsity does violence to good affections. 'Thy mother shall be bereaved more than other women'=that there would predominate with them evil affection from the voluntary, and not from the intellectual.

—f. That 'women'=affections. Refs.

8622. Infernal Genii do not flow into the thoughts that are of the understanding, as Infernal Spirits do, but into the affections that are of the will.

8625°. Malignant Genii . . . do not act into the truths of faith that are in the conscience, but into the affections themselves, and whenever they perceive anything of affection of good, they pervert it in a moment.

8631. Spirits of Jupiter represented how the Lord converts depraved affections into good ones. Des.

8690. Obedience is from the will, but it is the will of doing the truth from command, and not from affection. . . . Man does good from freedom when he does it from affection, for everything that flows from affection that is of love is free. When a man is in the former state, the Lord flows in immediately, but the Lord's immediate influx does not come to perception, because it is in man's inmost principles only, whereas the influx of the Lord that is at once immediate and mediate comes to perception and gives affection.

8700°. What is implanted in freedom is permanent, but not what is implanted under compulsion. The reason is that those things which are implanted in freedom are insinuated into the affection and thus into the will, and so are appropriated . . . For freedom is of affection.

8725. The truths with which good can be conjoined are confirmed truths, and have also been consociated with many things that delight the intellectual sight. Thus do these truths enter into the affection, which causes the man to will them.

8750². There are in general two states of life, namely a state of thought, which is of the understanding, and a state of affection, which is of the will . . .

8885. With the good, intellectual ideas make one with the affections that are of the will. With the evil, however, it is otherwise.

8910². To the understanding pertains thought, to the will, affection that is of love. Thought without affection that is of love does not produce anything of life with man, but thought from affection that is of love [does].

8974³. He who does what is good only from obedience, and not from affection that is of love, cannot be regenerated as they can who do what is good from affection of love. He can be reformed indeed, but not regenerated.

8979². For he who acts from affection that is of love acts from freedom. Refs. 8987.

8988. The latter act from affection, because they act from good, and they who act from affection, act from the will, thus from themselves . . .

8994¹. It is according to Divine order for men to be in sciences, but women only in affections . . . This is why sciences and knowledges are represented by men, and affections by women. . . It is the other way about, however, with those who belong to the Celestial Kingdom. In this Kingdom, husbands are in affection, and wives, in the knowledges of what is good and true.

9003². Natural affection conjoined with spiritual truth . . . constantly needs the support of its life from the spiritual truth with which it is conjoined. Sig. For affection without support therefrom perishes. The case with man's affection is the same as with man himself. Unless it is supported with sustenance it dies. (9005.) For man inwardly is nothing but affection; a good man is affection of what is good and thence of what is true, but an evil man is affection of what is evil and thence of what is false. Proof of this fact is especially afforded by man when he becomes a Spirit. The sphere of life which then pours forth from him is one either of affection of what is good, or of affection of what is evil.

9009². Only that evil is rooted in and appropriated which passes . . . from the thought that is of the understanding into the affection that is of the will, and thence into act.

9055. 'Burning for burning'=if [they should hurt] anything of affection that is of love inwardly in the Voluntary.

9056. 'Wound for wound'=if [they hurt] anything of affection that is of love outwardly in the Voluntary.

9057. 'Blow for blow'=if anything of affection in the Intellectual be hurt.

9096. Bonds, in the spiritual sense, are nothing but affections that are of love, for these are what lead a man and what restrain him. If affections of what is evil lead him, there must be affections of truth from good to restrain him. Inward bonds are affections of truth and good . . . outward bonds are affections of the love of self and of the world. If these latter affections descend from inward bonds, which are affections of truth and of good, they are good affections . . . But if they do not descend thence, they are evil ones, and are called cupidities.

—e. The Lord instils affections for what is good, and aversion for what is evil.

9127^e. Truth Divine affects none but those who are in innocence. Refs.

9143. 'When fire shall go forth'=anger from affection of what is evil. It is said affection of what is evil, because by affection is understood what is continuous of love.

9176. The truths that have their own good with them are those that affect when they are heard, but those which have not, are those that do not affect.

9184. Unlawful conjunction in the spiritual sense is conjunction of truth with affection from delight of gain or of honour; in which sort of affection are they who learn truths of the Church for the sake of these delights. Sig. But this conjunction does no harm to those who are afterwards regenerated by the Lord, since these affections [do indeed] remain with them, but subordinated to the affection of truth for the sake of the good of use and of life, and they are also of service.

9202. Not only do thoughts speak in Heaven, but especially do affections that are of what is good and true. . . If they are ardent they cry out. But affections of what is evil and false are not at all heard in Heaven, even if the man who supplicates from them, cries out loudly . . . But these affections are heard in Hell, and there too as shouts, if they are ardent.

9230^e. When a man does what is good from the good of faith, he does it from obedience, but when he does what is good from the good of charity, he does it from affection.

9272. 'To plant plants of delights'=such things as favour affections.

9550. If affection that is of love be withdrawn, thought is extinguished at once, for affection is the very life or soul of thought. All affection that is of love belongs to good, and all thought thence belongs to truth.

9841¹. Truths of faith from love are not naked knowledges of such things in the memory and thence in the understanding with a man, but are affections of life with him . . .

9877. All affections that are of love, and thence all thoughts that are of faith, flow according to the heavenly form. H.266.

9938². The Lord instils the affection of doing what is good from love, and the affection of speaking what is true from faith. But the affection itself flows in from the Lord and appears as if it were in man, for whatever a man does from affection that is of love, he does from life.

10076². All Spirits and Angels are human forms, the character of which is determined by the quality of their affections that are of love and of faith.

10517^o. Man is of such a character as to love those things that correspond to his inner affections, although he does not know it while he lives in the world.

10585. Affections and thoughts are what conjoin and disjoin Spirits and Angels . . .

10604³. Angels are with men, and they dwell in their affections.

10625. 'To hasten' = affection (refs.), here, reception through influx, because all influx from the Divine takes place into man's affection.

10651. Conjunction with truths of affections of what is evil. Sig.

10661. There is no such thing as an affection of what is unknown.

H. 47. In the Heavens, all the interior affections appear and shine forth from the face, for the face there is their outward and representative form. It is not permitted in Heaven to have any face but that of their affections.

49. The sphere of the life is a sphere of affections that are of love and faith. It extends itself into societies far and wide in proportion as the affections are more inward and perfect. . . All extension of affections and thoughts proceeds according to the heavenly form. 203, Ex. See also under EXTENSION.

55. (The Angels) are affected at the sight of the Lord according to the quality of their love. They who love Him most deeply are the most deeply affected, they who love less are less affected.

210. The thoughts and affections . . . of the Inmost Heaven are never perceived in the Middle Heaven, because they are so transcendent. Ex.

236. The language of Heaven flows from their very affection and thought. The sound of the speech corresponds to their affection, and the articulations of the sound . . . to the ideas of thought that are from affection. . . Hence their language is spiritual, for it is affection sounding and thought speaking. He who attends, may know that all thought is from affection which is of love, and that the ideas of thought are various forms into which the general affection is distributed, for there is no such thing as thought and idea without affection. It is from this that the Angels know the quality of another from his speech alone, the quality of his affection from the sound, and that of his mind from the articulations of the sound. The wiser Angels know the quality of the dominant affection from a single course of speech.

—³. (Various affections enum.) But the dominant affection or love is in them all.

237. Angels can only utter what entirely agrees with [their] affection.

239. The inner thought of the Angels is wisdom, as their inner affection is love.

—³. The ideas of thought of the Angels, from which come their words, are modifications of the light of Heaven, and the affections, from which come the sound of the words, are variations of its heat. Ex.

261. This writing, which is produced by means of characters of a heavenly form, is in use in the inmost Heaven . . . Affections are expressed by these characters, from which thoughts flow and follow in order according to the subject treated of.

295. Spirits are adjoined to a man of the same quality as he is himself as to affection, or as to love. . . The Spirits with a man are changed according to the changes of his affections. Ex.

298. The Spirits who are with a man . . . never flow in from their own memory and thence thought . . . but still there flows in through them from Heaven, affection which is of the love of what is good and true, and from Hell, affection which is of the love of what is evil and false. So far therefore as the man's affection agrees with that one which flows in, so far it is received by him in his own thought, for a man's interior thought is entirely according to his affection or love. So far however as it does not agree, so far it is not received. Hence it is plain that the choice lies with the man, because thought is not infused into him through Spirits, but only affection of what is good or affection of what is evil. . . That which he receives in thought from affection is also appropriated to him, but that which he does not receive in thought from affection is not appropriated to him.

336. It was observed that the influx of little children was so tender and soft as to be almost one of affection only.

349. Whatever a man acquires in the world remains, and he takes it with him after death. It is also augmented and made full, but within the degree of his affection and longing for what is true and good, and not beyond that. They who have had but little affection and longing receive little, but they receive as much as ever they are able to receive within that degree. They who have had much affection and longing receive much. The degree of affection and of longing is itself as it were the measure. Sig. 469².

358. There is no need to give to the poor except so far as affection leads a man to do so.

368. A man acts from reason, but a woman from affection. . . There is a similar difference between understanding and will, or between thought and affection. Des.

391². Angels of every Society are sent to men, to watch over them and draw them away from evil affections and thence thoughts, and to inspire good affections as far as they receive from freedom. . . The Angels who are with men as it were dwell in their affections.

457. The face of a man's spirit is from his affection, the image of which it is. . . A man's spirit regarded in itself is nothing but his own affection, the outward form of which is the face. The cause of faces being changed is that in the other life no one is allowed to counterfeit affections which are not properly his own . . . Hence it is that the faces of all become forms and effigies of their affections.

461. That man after death is in every sensation, memory, thought, affection in which he was in the world. Gen. art.

517. Spirits are affections, and hence are in a human form like their own affections.

552. In the spiritual world there is a communication in every way of affections and thence of thoughts.

579. Genii do not operate and flow in into thoughts, but into affections, which they observe and smell out as dogs do wild animals in forests. When they observe good affections, in a moment they turn them into evil ones. Ex.

N. 74. Such know that (the pretence of) loving the public and the neighbour inwardly affects all men . . . The reason it affects them is that Heaven flows into that love.

C. J. 23^e. All visible things of the spiritual world are correspondences of affections that are with Spirits and Angels.

L. 48. By 'spirit' is understood the varying affection of the life with a man. Enum. and III.

S. 74. The marks or signs in the Word of the Celestial Kingdom are affections, but in that of the Spiritual Kingdom they are perceptions.

F. 15. Affection . . . produces nothing of itself except through thought, and contrariwise. For anything to exist they must act in conjunction. Ex. W. I.

W. 33. From the Divine love and from the Divine wisdom . . . arise all affections and thoughts with man, affections from Divine love, and thoughts from Divine wisdom, and each and all things of man are nothing but affection and thought. These two are as it were the fountains of all things of his life. All delights and pleasantnesses of his life are from these; delights from affection of his love, and pleasantnesses from thought thence derived.

41. Odour affects the nostrils . . . there is an affection of the nostrils from the odoriferous particles.

—³. The affection of a substance and of a form, which causes sensation, is not anything separate from the subject, but only produces a change in it. Ex.

42. Thoughts, perceptions and affections are substances and forms, and not entities flying and flowing out of nothing, or abstracted from real and actual substance and form, which are subjects. 210.

52. There is a correspondence of man's affections and thence of his thoughts with all things of the animal kingdom; of his will, and thence of his understanding, with all things of the vegetable kingdom; and of his ultimate life with all things of the mineral kingdom.

74. In cases where thought does not join itself to its proper affection in man, as in sleep, the lapse of time is not noticed.

130. The Lord interiorly leads the affections and thoughts of the Angels, and turns them constantly to Himself.

176. Thought and affection are not possible except by means of still purer atmospheres.

191. The organic substances which are receptacles and habitations of thoughts and affections in the brains.

192. The organic substances which are receptacles and abodes of thoughts and affections, from the most simple to their general aggregate, which is the brain, are homogeneous.

202². The difference between the affections and thoughts, and consequently the speech, of the Angels of the higher and lower Heavens, is such that they have nothing in common; and communication takes place only through correspondences.

209². Affection and thought . . . are not possible outside of subjects which are substances, but are states of subjects, or of substances. 224.

214. In a series of similar degrees are also affection, thought and action, because all affection has relation to love, thought to wisdom, and action to use.

223². The least of affection, and of thought . . . consists of degrees of both kinds . . .

277. Since all things of the mind (are included in works) so also are all things of the will, that is, all affections of man's love, which constitute the first degree.

291^e. It is not a separate sphere of affections and of thoughts therefrom that goes forth from an Angel continuously, although it is so called; since the affections are mere states of the forms of the mind in him.

304. The states of the fibres and vessels are sensations, thoughts, and affections. Ex.

316⁴. There is a like progression of all affections and thoughts, which are changes and variations of the state of these forms and substances. Ex.

343^e. The Spiritual World is not in space, but is where there is corresponding affection.

344. He knew that it was nothing but an affection of some Angel represented outside of the Angel as a bird, and that it would vanish or cease with the affection that produced it . . .

363². There are many things pertaining to love which have obtained other names, because they are derivations; as affections, desires, appetites, and their pleasures and delights. . . All these pertain indeed to both love and wisdom, but they are designated from the more prevalent and immediate of the two.

364. When love of the will passes over into wisdom of the understanding, it first goes into affection, and so passes over; and affection is not perceived, except by a certain pleasure in thinking, speaking and acting, to which attention is not paid.

365⁶. Hence it is that affections . . . appear in the face, and thoughts . . . in the eyes.

372. By the mind, nothing else is meant than the will and understanding, which in their aggregate are all things that affect man, and all that he thinks, thus all things of man's affection and thought. The things that affect man are of his will . . . This is not so well known because when a man is thinking, he does not attend to affection, but only to what he is thinking . . . when yet affection in thought is in a similar case as sound in speech ; wherefore the affection of the speaker is known from the sound, and his thought from the language. That affection is of the will, is because all affection is of love . . . He who does not know that affection is of the will, confounds affection with understanding, for he says that it is one with thought, yet they are not one, although they act as one. Ex.

[W.] 410². As the heart produces such things for the sake of the various functions that it is afterwards to discharge in the body, so the love, in its receptacle, called the will, produces like things for the sake of the various affections that constitute its form, which is the human form. Now as the first and nearest of the love's affections are affection of knowing, affection of understanding, and affection of seeing what it knows and understands, it follows, that the love forms the understanding for these affections, and comes actually into them when it begins to feel, act, and think. . . Hence it is evident that science which the love acquires to itself from affection of knowing, and perception of truth which it acquires from affection of understanding, and thought which it acquires from affection of seeing what it knows and understands, are not of the understanding, but of the love. Ex.

—⁶. Man's life is qualified accordingly as he has exalted his affections through truths, i.e., accordingly as he has perfected his affections from wisdom. For affections of love are exalted and perfected through truths, thus through wisdom. Then love acts conjointly with wisdom, as though from it ; but it acts from itself through wisdom, as through its own form, which derives nothing whatever from the understanding, but everything from some determination of love called affection.

411. Love calls all those things its truths which as means lead to its goods, and because these are means they are loved and come to be of its affection, and thus become affections in form ; wherefore truth is nothing but a form of affection that is of love. The human form is nothing but the form of all affections of love . . . These (truths) are what love disposes into the form of its affections, which forms exist in much variety.

412. When the heart corresponds to love, its determinations, which are the arteries and veins, correspond to affections, and in the lungs to affections for truth. . . The understanding does nothing of itself . . . but does everything from affections which are of love, and which in the understanding, are affection for knowing, for understanding, and for seeing truth.

—². Love through its affections conjoins itself to the understanding, and the understanding does not conjoin itself to any affection of love, but is reciprocally conjoined by love.

—³. Affection that is of love produces thought, for thought without affection is precisely like breathing without a heart, which is not possible. Hence it is plain that affection which is of love conjoins itself to thought which is of the understanding . . . in the same manner as the heart does in the lungs.

413³. When the understanding is elevated above its proper love, it does not recede from it, but derives from it what is called the affection of knowing and of understanding for the sake of somewhat of honour, etc.

420. The arteries and veins of the lungs correspond to affections of love, and their respirations to perceptions and thoughts of the understanding.

P. 4². That which is not in a form is not of any affection, and that which is not of any affection has no reality.

28³. Love conjoins itself to wisdom by affection for knowing, from which comes the affection for truth ; by affection for understanding, from which comes perception of truth, and by affection for seeing what is known and understood, from which comes thought. The Lord flows in into all these affections, for they are derivations from the love of each one's life, and Angels receive this influx in perception of truth, and in thought, for in these does that influx appear to them, but not in affections. Now since perceptions and thoughts appear to Angels as their own, when yet they are from affections that are from the Lord, therefore there is this appearance that Angels reciprocally conjoin themselves to the Lord ; when yet the Lord conjoins them to Himself, for affection itself produces those perceptions and thoughts, for affection that is of love is their soul. Truly no one can perceive and think anything without affection, and everyone perceives and thinks according to affection.

33. The derivations of the love of evil, which are its affections, are as many as are the evils into which it has determined itself.

—². Now since the Lord flows in into the life's love of each one, and through his affections into his perceptions and thoughts, and not contrariwise, it follows that He is not able to conjoin Himself more closely than as the love of evil with its affections, which are concupiscences, has been removed.

—³. (In the same way) the influx of the Devil, that is of Hell, is into the love of evil and its affections which are concupiscences, and through these into perceptions and thoughts.

44. The Lord does not flow immediately into the things that are of the perception and thought from wisdom of the Angels of the Third Heaven, but into the affections of love of good, and through the latter into the former, and they perceive the influx in the affection from which they have their wisdom.

50. Since Angels and Spirits are affections which are of love, and thoughts therefrom, they therefore are not in space and time, but only in the appearance of them . . . which is according to the state of the affections and of the thoughts therefrom. Wherefore when anyone thinks about another from affection . . . he is forthwith present . . . Hence it is that with every man there are Spirits present who are in like affection with himself ; evil Spirits with one who is in affection of like evil, and good Spirits with one who is in affection of like good. . . Space and time have nothing to do with the presence, because affection and thought therefrom are not in space and time, and Spirits and Angels are affections and thoughts thence.

57. The variety of affections and perceptions is infinite and eternal; in like manner their fructifications and multiplications, which are spiritual. No man enjoys an affection and perception so like another's as to be the same; nor can such ever be. . . Not only are affections, perceptions and knowledges such in general, but also every single thing in them, even the most minute, in particular. . .

61. All the spirit of a man is affection and thence thought. . . which is the reason that when a man thinks solely from his spirit. . . he thinks from affection that is of his love. Hence it is evident that when a man becomes a spirit. . . he is the affection of his own love, and is not any other thought than that which is of his affection. He is an evil affection, which is cupidity, if the love of evil has been in him, and a good affection if the love of good. And everyone has good affection just as he has shunned evils as sins, and everyone has evil affection just as he has not done so. Now since all Spirits and Angels are affections, it is plain that the universal angelic Heaven is nothing but the love of all affections of good, and thence the wisdom of all perceptions of truth.

62. The Angels constitute as many Societies as there are general affections of heavenly love, and every Angel in each Society is distinctly his own affection, and the form of Heaven is from so many affections in general and in particular.

63. From this it is plain that affection which is of the love of good makes Heaven with man. Ex.

66. Every affection for good and at the same time for truth is in its form a man; for whatever proceeds from the Lord, derives from His Divine love the fact that it is affection for good, and from His Divine wisdom that it is affection for truth. Affection for truth that proceeds from the Lord, appears as perception and thence thought of truth in an Angel and in a man, because attention is paid to perception and thought, and but little to the affection from which they come, when yet they proceed with affection for truth as one from the Lord.

67. As Heaven consists of as many affections as there are Angels, and every affection in its form is a man, it follows that it is the continual [effort] of the Divine Providence that man may become a Heaven in form, and hence an image of the Lord, and because this is effected through the affection of good and truth, that he may become this affection.

74². Every affection has its own peer as a consort; affection of natural love has science, affection of spiritual love intelligence, and affection of celestial love wisdom; for an affection without its own peer as a consort is not anything. Ex. In beasts there is a marriage of affection and science. . . (which two) with them act quite as one. . . the natural affection which they have is affection for feeding themselves etc. . . They are carried along by means of their affection, through science. . .

75. It is otherwise with man, who has not only affection of natural love, but also affection of spiritual love, and affection of celestial love. . . wherefore man can be raised from natural science into spiritual intelligence, and thence into celestial wisdom. . . But this elevation as to affection could not be, unless he possessed from rationality the faculty of raising the understanding, and from freedom that of willing to do so. Ex.

76. Without the appearance that it is of himself, man cannot be in any affection of knowing, nor in any affection of understanding; for all delight and pleasure, thus everything of the will, is from affection that is of love. . . and who can have this pleasure of affection, unless that by which he is affected appears as his own? . . . If anyone from his own affections should infuse something into the mind of another who had no affections of knowing and understanding as of himself, would he receive it?

105. The internal of thought is from the life's love and its affections and thence perceptions. . . From infancy to youth man is in what is outward of thought from affection of knowing, which at that age constitutes his internal. . . but afterwards, as he lives on, there comes into being his life's love, whose affections and thence perceptions constitute the internal of his thought.

106². The life's love of anyone cannot exist without derivations which are called affections. The derivations of infernal love are affections for what is evil and false, properly concupiscences; and those of heavenly love, are affections for what is good and true, properly loves-directiones. Affections of infernal love. . . are as many as there are evils, and affections of heavenly love. . . are as many as there are goods. Love dwells in its affections like a lord in his own domain. . . A man's life's love rules the whole man through its affections and thence perceptions, and through its delights and thence thoughts; the internal of his mind, through affections and thence perceptions, and the external of it through delights of affections and thence thoughts. 194.

107. Heavenly love with affections for what is good and true and perceptions thence derived, and at the same time with delights of these affections and thoughts thence derived, may be compared to a stately tree. . . The life's love is that tree, its branches with leaves are affections for what is good and true with their perceptions, and its fruits are delights of affections with their thoughts. But infernal love with its affections for what is evil and false etc. . . may be compared to a spider surrounded by its web. . .

108. The life's love in a man is the end, affections with their perceptions are the cause, and delights of affections with their thoughts are the effect; for as end comes into effect through cause, so does love come to its delights through its affections, and to its thoughts through its perceptions.

178². Affection of the will is the end from which, thought of the understanding is the cause through which, and action of the body, speech of the mouth, or outward sensation are effects of the end through thought.

193. That all man's thoughts are from affections of his life's love. . . Gen. art.

194. The life's love produces from itself subaltern loves, called affections, which are exterior and interior, and which taken together constitute one domain or kingdom in which the life's love is the lord or king. . .

These subaltern loves or affections adjoin to themselves consorts, each one its own ; the more inward affections, consorts called perceptions, and the more outward affections, consorts called thoughts, and each dwells together with its own consort and discharges the functions of its life. Ex.

—². Sound corresponds to affection . . . therefore a man's affection of love is known from the sound of his voice, and his thought, from the variation of the sound, which is speech. Hence the wiser Angels perceive his life's loves, together with certain affections which are derivations, merely from the sound of his voice. (This shows) that affection without its own thought and thought without its own affection are not possible.

[P.] 195. Now since the life's love has its own delight . . . so in like manner has every affection, which in its essence is a subaltern love derived from the life's love, as a stream from its own spring, or as a branch from its parent tree, or as an artery from its own heart. . . The vital heat is from the delights of the affections and pleasantnesses of the perceptions and thoughts. . . Good to each man is that which is the delight of his affection . . . and evil is that which destroys the delight of his affection . . . (This shows) what affection and thought are in their own life.

196. Now as it is man's mind that thinks, and that thinks from the delight of his own affection . . . and since man's mind is his spirit . . . it follows that man's spirit is nothing but affection and thought thence derived. That thought without affection is utterly impossible, is palpably evident from the case of Spirits and Angels . . . who all think from affections of their life's love, and each of whom is encompassed by the delights of those affections as by his own atmosphere : also, that all are conjoined there according to these spheres which have been exhaled from their affections through their thoughts. . . Hence it is evident that every thought is from affection, and that it is the form of its own affection.

197. That the affections of man's life's love are known to the Lord alone. Gen. art.

198. Since a man sees his thought, and cannot see his affection, for the latter he feels, it follows that it is from sight, which is in appearance, that he comes to the conclusion that his own prudence does all things, and not from affection which does not come into sight, but into feeling. For affection only manifests itself through a certain delight of thought . . . Ex.

199. A man is indeed able to reflect upon the delight of his own outward affection when it acts as one with the delight of any bodily sense, but still he does not reflect upon the fact that this delight is from the delight of his affection in the thought. Examps. . . Thoughts are nothing but affections compounded into forms by his life's love in order that they may appear in light, for all affection is in heat, and all thought in light. These are the affections of the outward thought, which do indeed manifest themselves in bodily sensation, but rarely in thought. But affections of inward thought, from which the outward ones exist, never manifest themselves before the man. A man knows no more about these than a sleeper in a carriage about the way. Ex.

200. Now since the delights of man's affections, from inmost things through inner to outer ones, and at length to outermost ones which are in the body, carry a man along as the wind and tide do a ship, and nothing of them appears to the man, except what takes place in the outermost things of mind and body . . . it follows that the affections of man's life's love are led by the Lord through His Divine Providence, and then at the same time the thoughts.

201. That the Lord, through His Divine Providence, compounds affections into one form, which is the human. Gen. art.

224³. In the spiritual world there is a communication of affections and thence of thoughts . . . Everyone there also changes his face and becomes like his own affection.

279². Man is such that he can come from one affection into another, and sometimes into an opposite one, and so from one middle into another ; a man's affection constitutes the middle while he is in it.

—³. Myriads of affections enter into and compose each good, and these myriads are in such order and connection . . . that one cannot be changed unless all are.

—⁶. That affections . . . are mere changes of the purely organic substances of the mind, and that thoughts . . . are mere changes and variations of their forms. Gen. art. 319, Ex.

—⁸. The nature of the changes and variations of state and form of the organic substances of the mind, which are affections and thoughts, cannot be demonstrated to the eye ; but still they may be seen as in a mirror from the changes and variations of the state of the lungs in speaking and singing. Ex.

287. The Divine Providence is in the most minute particulars of man's thoughts and affections. Ex.

288. Everything of thought and affection with Spirits of Hell also flows in from Heaven, but what is good flowing in there is turned into what is evil, and what is true into what is false.

289. In Hell . . . thoughts and affections advance in order from Society to Society without anyone's knowing that they are not from himself. Examp.

296⁶. As sound together with speech diffuses itself around in the air in the natural world, so does affection with thought diffuse itself around into Societies in the spiritual world. There is also a correspondence, for affection corresponds to sound, and thought to speech.

300. All in Heaven are nothing but affections of good and thence thoughts of truth, and all in Hell are nothing but concupiscences of evil and thence imaginations of falsity, which are so arranged into order on both sides, that the latter are precisely opposite to the former. . . Those who are in Hell make concupiscences of evil the head, and affections of good the feet, but those who are in Heaven make affections of good the head and concupiscences of evil the soles of the feet. . . It is said that in Heaven there are affections of good . . . and in Hell concupiscences of evil . . . and it is meant that there are Spirits and Angels who are such ; for everyone is his own affection or concupiscence. 301, Ex. 303, Ex.

302. The orderly arrangement of affections in Heaven, and of concupiscences in Hell, is wonderful, and known to the Lord alone. Both are distinguished into genera and species, and are so conjoined as to act as one. Ex.

305. New comers there complain that they had not known that their life's lot would be according to the affections of their love . . .

310⁴. The Genii at once applied themselves to my neck, beneath the occiput, and thence entered into my affections, not wishing to enter my thoughts. These they dexterously avoided, and varied my affections one after another, with the intent to bend them insensibly into their opposites, which are concupiscences of evil; and as they did not touch the thoughts, they would have bent and inverted the affections without my knowledge, unless the Lord had averted it.

312³. One Spirit is able to infuse his thoughts and affections into another without the other's knowing that it is not of his own thought and affection. Ex.

R. 153². All Societies in the World of Spirits, which are innumerable, are wonderfully ordered according to natural affections of good and evil. Societies ordered according to good natural affections communicate with Heaven, and societies ordered according to evil natural affections communicate with Hell.

—³. A novitiate Spirit is led away to various Societies, both good and evil, and is explored to see whether and how he is affected with truths, or whether and how he is affected with falsities.

—⁴. If he is affected with truths, he is led away from evil Societies and inducted into good ones, and also into various ones, until he comes into a Society corresponding to his own natural affection, and there he enjoys good accordant with that affection, and this until he puts off natural affection and puts on spiritual, and then he is raised up into Heaven.

—⁵. But because they who have confirmed themselves in faith alone in doctrine and life, are not affected with truths but with falsities . . . they are led away from good Societies, and inducted into evil ones, also into various ones, until they come into a Society corresponding to the concupiscences of their love.

—⁶. But they who . . . have simulated good affections outwardly, although inwardly there were none but evil affections or concupiscences, are at first held by turns in outward things. Ex. T. 281.

242. 'The second animal like a calf' = Divine Truth of the Word as to affection . . . 'A calf' = affection of knowing-sciendi. Ill.

278. 'Prayers of the saints' = thoughts that are of faith from affections that are of charity with those who worship the Lord from spiritual goods and truths. . . Fragrant odours correspond to affections of what is good and true.

526. 'Fire' = happiness of eternal life arising from delight and pleasantness of love, and of affection of good and truth; for every affection of love has with it its own delight and pleasantness, and affection of love of good and truth, delight and pleasantness such as have the Angels of Heaven; and every affection remains permanently with man after death, because affection is of love, and love is man's life.

611. All who have been prepared for Heaven advance through opened ways between Societies in Heaven until they find a Society that exactly agrees with their affections, and there they dwell for ever, for there they are among their own . . . whom they love from the heart, because they are in a like affection. Ex.

—^c. There is a communication of affections in the spiritual world, since man is then a Spirit, and the life of the spirit is affection, and thought is from it and according to it: and homogeneous affection conjoins and heterogeneous affection disjoins. . . Wherefore all there are duly separated according to the diversities, varieties, and differences of the affections that are of love.

655⁶. The wise man said, Is not affection primary, and thought derived thence? The emissary of the dragon said, I deny it. But reply was made, You cannot deny it. Does not man think from affection? Take away affection and can you think anything? It is just as if you took away sound from speech . . . sound moreover is of affection and speech is of thought, for affection sounds and thought speaks. 875². T. 386². 388.

792. 'The voice of harpers and musicians, and of fifers and trumpeters shall be heard in thee no more' = that there shall not be with them any spiritual affection of truth and good, or any celestial affection of them. By 'voice' is meant sound, and all sound corresponds to affection that is of love, since it arises therefrom. From this it is, that the sounds of a harp etc. sig. affections. But affections are of two kinds, spiritual and celestial; spiritual affections are affections of wisdom, and celestial affections are affections of love. . . There are therefore musical instruments whose sounds have relation to spiritual affections, and there are those that have relation to celestial affections . . . Instruments whose sounds are separate and distinct like stringed ones, pertain to the class of spiritual affections, and instruments whose sounds are continuous, like wind instruments, pertain to the class of celestial affections.

—². None desire truths from spiritual affection but they who approach the Lord. . . The outward affections in which they are when they hear masses etc. . . are merely natural, sensual and corporeal.

875². The derivations of love are called affections, and through these are produced perceptions, and so thoughts. . . Thought in its origin is affection . . . being nothing but the form of affection. This is not known, because thoughts are in light, but affections in heat, and therefore we reflect upon thoughts, but not upon affections. Ex.

—7. (Affection and thought are nothing without operation. Ex.)

[R.] 883². All Societies in Heaven are distinguished from one-another according to differences of affections that are of love in general and in particular, each Society is one species of affection, and they dwell there in a distinct manner according to the relationships and affinities of that species of affection. Ex.

908. This is why the learned have attributed all things to thought and not to affection.

—e. Since good of love is everything of Heaven and the Church, the universal Heaven and the universal Church are ordained according to affections of love, and not according to anything of thought separate from them, for thought is affection in form.

937². In the spiritual world, knowledge and acknowledgment produce all presence, and affection that is of love produces all conjunction, for spaces there are but appearances according to likeness of dispositions, that is, of affections and of thoughts thence derived.

943^e. Consociation through correspondences causes Angels and Spirits to be together with men in affections, but not in thoughts; wherefore one knows nothing about the other; that is, man does not about the Spirits with whom he is as to affections, nor the Spirits about the man, for that which is not in thought, but only in affection, is not known, because it does not appear, or be seen.

M. 6^e. There is a certain hidden current in the affection of the will of every Angel which draws the mind to do something, whereby the mind tranquillizes itself.

17². Sweetest songs of maidens and girls are heard from the houses around the public places every morning. The whole city resounds with them. One affection of spiritual love is sung each morning; that is, is sounded through the modulations of the voice of the singer, and that affection is perceived in the singing as though it were itself.

33^e. The masculine in the male is masculine in . . . every idea of thought, and in every spark of affection; in like manner the feminine in the female.

36. After death, man is not his own thought, but his own affection and thought thence derived. . . Hence it is that universal Heaven is ordained according to all varieties of affections of love of what is good, and universal Hell, according to all affections of love of what is evil.

42³. All Angels are affections of love in human form; the regnant affection itself shines forth from their faces, and garments are allotted to them from and according to affection, wherefore it is said in Heaven that each is invested with his own affection.

55. Heavenly songs are nothing but sonorous affections, or affections expressed and modified in sounds, for as thoughts are expressed through speech, so are affections through singing. The Angels perceive the object of the affection from the symmetry and flow of the modulation. Examp.

—6. The love of a woman for a woman is like the love of an affection of the understanding of men for another such affection. Ex.

56³. Women have been created by the Lord affections of the wisdom of men, and affection of wisdom is beauty itself. . . Woman was created by the Lord through the wisdom of man, because from man; and thence is she a form of wisdom inspired with affection of love, and since affection of love is life itself, woman is the life of wisdom; but the male is wisdom, and the life of wisdom is beauty itself.

90. The affection of the male is the affection of knowing, of understanding and of being wise; the affection of knowing in childhood, the affection of understanding in adolescence and early manhood, and the affection of being wise in old age.

91. The affection of the woman is the affection of loving science, intelligence and wisdom, not in herself, but in the man.

166. For the sake of this conjunction there is given to the wife a perception of the husband's affections, and also the highest prudence in regulating them. That wives know their husbands' affections and regulate them prudently, is one of the secrets of marriage love concealed with wives. They know them through the three senses of sight, hearing and touch; and regulate them without their husbands knowing anything about it. 208³, Ex.

173. That so the wife receives an image of her husband into herself, and hence perceives, sees, and feels his affections. Gen. art.

175⁴. Men cannot enter into duties proper to women and discharge them aright, because they are not in the affections of women, which are quite distinct from the affections of men. Ill. In the Spiritual World all are clothed according to their affections; and the two affections of woman and of man can only be united between two, and never in one.

186. All man's affections and thoughts are in forms and thence from forms, for forms are their subjects; if affections and thoughts were not in subjects that are formed, they might also exist in skulls devoid of a brain.

197. That this formation on the part of the wife takes place through the appropriation of the husband's affections. . . Affections are of the will; for affections, being derivations of love, form the will, and constitute and compose it. But these affections are in the understanding with men, and in the will with women.

208². The wives said, Our wisdom is pre-eminent above yours, because it enters into your inclinations and affections, and sees, perceives and feels them; you know nothing whatever about the inclinations and affections of your love, and yet they are what your understanding thinks from, and according to which it thinks.

272. That in the natural world almost all can be conjoined as to outward affections, but not as to inward affections, if these disagree and appear. Gen art. . . The inward affections, which are of the mind, do not appear with many; hardly a grain of them shows through, for the body absorbs them . . . or else the man conceals them from the sight of others by dissimulation learned from infancy, whereby he puts himself into the state of every affection that he notices in another and allures his affections to himself, and so they conjoin themselves; the reason they conjoin themselves is that every affection has its own delight, and delights bind minds-animos-together. It would be otherwise if the inward affections were to appear before the sight in the face and gesture, and before the hearing in the sound of the voice, as the outward ones do, or if their delights were smelt, as is the case in the Spiritual World.

273. That in the Spiritual World all are conjoined according to inward affections, but not according to outward ones, unless they act as one with inward ones. Gen. art. The reason is, that then the material body, which was able to receive and produce the forms of all affections, is thrown off, and when man is stripped of this body, he is in his inward affections, which the body had before concealed.

—². Since Angels and Spirits have inward and outward affections just like men in the world, and since inward affections cannot be concealed there by outward ones, they show through and manifest themselves, so that with them both kinds [of affections] are reduced into likeness and correspondence, and then their inward affections are effigied in their faces through their outward ones, are perceived in the sound of the voice, and also appear in their manners. Examp.

274. That there are outward affections according to which matrimony is commonly contracted in the world, is because inward affections are rarely consulted, and if they are, the likeness of them is not seen in the woman, for she, from a native gift, draws back the inward ones into the recesses of her mind. Outward affections that lead men to contract matrimony are many. The first affection of this age is increase of property by wealth . . . the second is aspiring to honours. . . These leave no room to explore agreements of inward affections.

275. But if inward affections, which conjoin minds, are not within, matrimony is loosed at home. Gen. art.

277. In matrimony where inward affections do not conjoin, there are outward ones that simulate inward ones, and consociate. Gen. art. By inward affections are meant mutual inclinations which are in the mind of each from Heaven; and by outward affections are meant inclinations that are in the mind of each from the world. These latter affections, or inclinations, are indeed equally of the mind, but occupy its lower region; the former its higher one. Ex.

301. Consent is to be secured . . . by solemn betrothal . . . in order that the more inward affections may be mutually known, and conjoined through attachments in inward cheerfulness of love.

320. Hence it follows that what is natural separate from what is spiritual with two consorts . . . produces only conjunction of some outward affections that cohere with the bodily senses.

—². Such are free to tie their sensuous affections (in repeated matrimony).

—³. Outward affections follow the dead body and are entombed with it, those only remaining that cohere with inward ones.

329². Every grain of your thought, and every bit of your affection are divisible ad infinitum.

T. 64². All affection of love and thought of the understanding thence derived are in space without space, and in time without time.

66. All kinds of animals appear in the spiritual world, and are likenesses of affections of love and of thoughts thence derived . . . It is given to know what affection this or that object reps. . . and because affections and thoughts thence derived are various and manifold with every man, and some of them relate to the affection of one animal and some to another, therefore the images of these affections are thus presented to view.

78³. God is love itself and wisdom itself, and there are infinite affections of His love and infinite perceptions of His wisdom; and correspondences of these are each and all things that appear on earth . . . and since He is omnipresent, there are such correspondences of the affections of His love and wisdom in the whole natural world, but in the spiritual world there are similar correspondences with those who receive affections and perceptions from God; the difference is that such things in the spiritual world are created instantaneously according to the affections of the Angels from God.

178². Thoughts (believed to be) modifications of the ether . . . and affections of love, occasional changes of state from the influx of the sun into them.

365⁴. Sympathies and antipathies are exhalations from minds that affect another according to likenesses.

589. He is reformed who is in affection of truth for its own sake, for this affection conjoins itself with the will, and if it goes on, it conjoins the will to the understanding, and then regeneration begins.

593^o. The Angels perceive the affection of man's thought from the sound of his voice.

597. When the outward man is subdued, concupiscences are dispersed, and affections of good and truth are implanted in their place.

607. Angels and Spirits are not conjoined with man as to thoughts, but as to affections . . . conjunction through affections of love between men and Angels and Spirits is so close, that if it were severed the men would at once fall into a swoon.

—³. Everyone after death seems to himself still to live in the world, for he then comes into company with his like as to the affections of his will.

D. 1568. To be affected, defined and distinguished from will, desire, etc.

3127. On variations of affections without ideas of thought.

3496. On those who act through the good affections of men and bend them to their side. 3497.

3712. Sirens insinuate themselves through the affections. 4304. 5464⁸.

4059. That affections have with them all knowledge —scientia.

[D.] 4266. That everything is included in affection. It is merely variations of affection that produce ideas, and thus speech.

4280. On spheres of affection.

4311. On affections not instructed . . . There are Spirits who are affected with good and holy things without understanding or discrimination ; such increase the power of the deceitful.

4399. That Spirits and Angels dwell in man's affections.

4821. All man's good affections are heard in Heaven, and all his evil affections in Hell. 4822.

4845. The affections of the Angels are according to the changes of state in Heaven.

4867. Angels who are conscious of innumerable things in themselves and in others in a single affection and also in a single idea of a thing, enunciate also to the likeness of the affection, or of an accordant affection.

5940. That all things from the Spiritual World are affections that are of love.

—². The varieties of affections are indefinite ; few come to man's knowledge.

— . The government of the Lord's Providence is through affections, thus through affections into thought.

6000. That a Spirit is his own affection, and that faith is according to affection.

E. 444³. Affection is said of love and its continuity, for affection is what is continuous of love. 547².

674³. In the Spiritual World there is a communication of all affections and sometimes of thoughts, and within every Society there is a general communication. Des. 675³.

— . The variations of the affections . . . exist from the influx of affections from other Societies, which are either above or at the sides, also from the new-comers who enter the Society and also from few or many being taken away from the Society.

790³. Affection is love in its continuity.

817. Affection itself alone cannot speak, it can only make a sound and sing.

942². Then man receives the same affections as the Angels have . . . The first affection then given is affection of truth, the second is affection of good, and the third is affection of fructification.

943. Man is affection of truth when he loves truth and is averse to falsity ; affection of good when he loves good uses and is averse to evil uses, and affection of fructifying when he loves to do good things and be of service.

1174². Man's affections have extension into Societies there ; within these is man as to his spirit, tied to them as with outstretched cords . . . and as he proceeds from one affection into another, so he proceeds from one Society into another.

1175². What affection is. Affection has a similar meaning to love, but love is like a spring and affections the streams thence flowing, thus its continuations. Love as the spring is in the will, affections which are its streams, flow into the understanding by continuity, and there, by means of light from truths, they produce thoughts. . . The Societies of Heaven, which are innumerable, in their essence are affections . . . they are not thoughts but affections, consequently to be led through these Societies is to be led through affections, or to be led through affections is to be led through Societies ; wherefore in what follows, affections are mentioned for Societies.

—⁴. Why man is led by the Lord through affections and not through thoughts. When man is led by the Lord through affections, he can be led according to all the laws of His Divine Providence, but not if he is led through thoughts ; for affections do not manifest themselves before man as thoughts do : affections also produce thoughts, but thoughts do not produce affections ; they appear to produce them, but it is a fallacy. Since affections produce thoughts, they also produce all things of man, because they are his life. If you hold a man in his affection you hold him bound, and lead him where you like, and then one reason is as good as a thousand ; but if you do not hold a man in his affection reasons avail nothing, for the non-concordant affection either perverts, rejects, or extinguishes them. So it would be if the Lord were to lead man immediately through his thoughts, and not through his affections. When the Lord leads man through his affections, it appears to him as if he thinks etc. freely from himself.

—⁵. If a man knew all things of the Word . . . and were to think and speak them, but if at the same time his affections were concupiscences of evil, he still could not be led by the Lord out of Hell.

D. Love (Post.) 9. That there are as many uses as there are affections. Gen. art. The spirit of man is nothing but affection, and hence man after death becomes affection ; and hence Heaven and Hell are distinguished into Societies according to the genera and species of affections. By affections are meant continuations and derivations of love, for love may be compared to a spring, and affections to the streams from it ; it may also be compared to the heart, and affections to the vessels thence derived and continued. Ex. From which it is plain that affection is love in its essence, and use is love in its form.

—². From this it results that the objects or ends of affections are uses, and that therefore their subjects are uses, and that the very forms in which they exist are effects which are their effigies, in which they advance from the first end to the last, and from the last end to the first, and through which they perform their works etc. In itself, affection alone is not anything, but becomes something by being in use, and affection of use is not anything unless it is in a form, and affection of use in a form is nothing but power; but affection first becomes something when it is in act; this is the use itself which is meant, which in its essence is affection. Now since affections are essences of uses, and uses are their subjects, it follows that there are as many uses as there are affections.

10. There are genera and species of affections and differences of species ad infinitum. Gen. art.

11. There are degrees of affections and of uses. Gen. art.

12. From every use flow in the necessary, useful, and delightful things of life according to the quality of the use, and according to the quality of its affection. Gen. art.

15. Man is not of a sound mind unless use is his affection or occupation. Gen. art.

—². Of those who come from the natural into the spiritual world there has not as yet been found one who knew that he was affection; few indeed knew what affection was; and when I have said that affection was love in its continuation or derivation, they asked what love was, saying that they perceive what thought is, but not what affection. When I have said to them that thought is nothing whatever by itself, but through the affection that is of man's life's love, being from it, as what is formed from that which forms it, and that the reason why thought is perceived and not affection, is because what is formed is perceived and not that which forms it, they were amazed. Ex.

—³. All things of thought are from affection and according to it; we cannot think without it, nor contrary to it; and every one is such as his affection is; and therefore all are explored from their affection, and none from speech, for speech proceeds from the thought of outward affection, which consists in a desire to favour etc., and this for the sake of the ends of inward affection. Nevertheless, the affection itself is heard from the sound of the voice. Ex.

17. Man has eternal life according to his affection of use. Gen. Art. As affection is the man himself, and use is its effect . . . and since affection is not given without its subject . . . so the affection of man's life is not given without use; and since affection and use make one, so the quality of man who is affection is discerned from use. . . The heat and light of Heaven discover affections of uses as the heat of the sun discovers objects of earth by means of odours and flavours, and as its light discovers them by means of colours and shades.

—² The reason why man has eternal life according to affections of use, is that that affection is the man himself. . . But affection of use in general is of two kinds, spiritual affection of use and natural affection of use; both are alike in outward form, but quite unlike in inward form, for the spiritual affection of use gives Heaven to man, but the natural affection of use without the spiritual gives Hell; for the natural affection of use is solely for the sake of honour and gain, but the spiritual affection of use is for the sake of the glory of God and of His use. Examp.

—⁵. The spiritual affection of use is inward and at the same time outward, and so far as it is outward or natural, so far it is also spiritual . . . The spiritual affection of use is obtained by shunning evils because they are sins. Ex.

18. Man's will is his affection. Gen. Art.

D. Wis. v^e. The changes of state of these receptacles are affections, the variations of their form are thoughts.

vi². The variation of the pulse according to the affections . . .

x. The conjunction of affection and thought is reciprocal. Gen. Art. . . Affection is the life of thought, and such as the affection is, such is the thought. Ex.

x. 5. The formations of the love from the will in the understanding are first affections, then perceptions, and finally thoughts. x. 7².

C. 185. In the Spiritual World the very affection of everyone is communicated and its quality shown, and such as is a man as to affection, such are all things that proceed from him. Thus is he led to the Society where his affection is.

De Dom. 21. The affection itself that is of love is from the father, which also is the very life or soul of man. 293.

255. Spirits do not see man, but only his affections.

Affection of Good. Affectio boni.

Affection of Truth. Affectio veri.

A. 892. There is slavery when cupidities and falsities have command, freedom when affections of good and of truth.

1326. Inward worship consists in affection of good and acknowledgment of truth, but in proportion as love of self comes in, affection of good and acknowledgment of truth go out.

1525. A lucid appearance beautifully varied with rays of golden flame for those who are in affections of good, and a lucid appearance varied with rays of silver light for those who are in affections of truth.

1762. Variations around the left eye when truths and affections of truth were communicated, around the right eye when goods and affections of good.

1802. Then first are they heirs, when they are in affection of good, that is, in mutual love, into which they are introduced through knowledges of good and truth and their affections.

1820². Evil Genii are they who fight against those things that are of affection of good, and evil Spirits against those things that are of affection of truth.

[A.] 1824. The exterior Celestial is all affection of good, yea it is also all pleasure that is from affection of good. . . . But the Celestial Spiritual is all affection of truth in which is affection of good, or affection of truth that is generated from affection of good.

1904. 'Sarah the wife of Abraham' = affection of truth. . . There are two affections that are distinct from each other, affection of good and affection of truth. While man is being regenerated, affection of truth takes precedence, for he is affected with truth for the sake of good; but when he has been regenerated, affection of good takes precedence, and he is affected with truth from good. Affection of good is of the will, affection of truth of the understanding. . . The most ancient people instituted as it were a marriage between the two affections. Ex. 3033.

1935. The Lord's interior thought was from affection of intellectual truth, and this affection from His Divine Good.

1940. Man's Rational is formed by the Lord from truth or affection of truth; this affection is his good, from which he acts.

1947². The heavenly proprium becomes more and more free, till it becomes affection of good and of truth thence derived.

1997. Fructification of affection of truth ad infinitum. Sig.

— . Affection of good is to do what is good from love of good, affection of truth is to do what is good from love of truth. At first sight these two affections appear as if they were the same, but they are really distinct, both as to essence and as to origin. . . Affection of good is from celestial love, but affection of truth from spiritual love: affection of good can only be predicated of the celestial man, but affection of truth of the spiritual man.

—². The Most Ancient Church was in affection of good, but the Ancient Church was in affection of truth. . . . Celestial Angels are in affection of good, Spiritual Angels in affection of truth. . . The Lord united affection of truth to affection of good . . . when He united the human essence to the Divine.

2072. 'He laughed' = affection of truth. . . The origin of laughter is no other than affection of truth, or affection of falsity. Ex. 3392.

—³. Truth is the chief thing in the Rational; there is also affection of good in it, but it is in affection of truth as its soul. Affection of good that is in the Rational does not put itself forth by laughter, but by a certain joy. 2083.

2180. In the genuine Rational there is affection of truth, and affection of good, but its primary is affection of truth. 2189.

2184¹. The Celestial Spiritual, or what is the same . . . affection of truth within which is affection of good, or what is still the same, affection of knowledges and also of sciences from affection of charity . . .

2202. 'Sarah laughed within herself' = affection of truth of that Rational did so. (For it was not the affection of that truth that it should change the state. 2203.)

2268. The Angels as it were dwell in man's truths, and insinuate affections of good from the Lord.

2313. The third state of the Spiritual Church treated of, in which they no longer act from affection of good, but from affection of truth. 2422. In the fourth state, affection of truth perishes, which is Lot's wife made a pillar of salt.

2329. Interior confession is of the heart, and exists in humiliation, and at the same time in affection of good.

2336^e. Affections of truth treated of.

2362. Lot's 'two daughters' = affections of good and of truth. . . Affection of good constitutes the Celestial Church, and is called 'Daughter of Zion,' but affection of truth constitutes the Spiritual Church, and is called 'Daughter of Jerusalem.' Ill.

2363. Blessedness from affections of good and of truth. Sig. and Ex.

2422. When affection of good begins to lessen, and as it were to recede, good is indeed present, but it withdraws itself more deeply, and is thus in obscurity, but manifests itself in a certain affection, which is called affection of truth.

2423. 'Grace' . . . = humiliation from affection of truth; 'mercy' . . . = humiliation from affection of good. Ex.

2425². With those who are in affection of truth there is affection of good in their affection of truth, but so obscurely that they do not perceive it, so that they do not know what affection of good is. . . Nevertheless since there lies dimly hidden in their affection of apparent truth affection of good, through which the Lord leads them so to do, they are at the same time inwardly in good, in which Angels are with them, and are there delighted with the appearances of truth with which they are affected.

—³. But they who are in good of charity, and thence in affection of truth . . . are in light. Ex.

2429². They who are in affection of truth have but little truth compared with those who are in affection of good. Ex.

2432. They who are in affection of truth, that is, who are in faith, are saved, provided it is faith of good. Sig. 2438.

2439. 'Zoar' = affection of good, namely of good of science, that is, affection of truth. 'Zoar' means 'little,' for they who are in affection of truth, relatively to those who are in affection of good, have little truth, because they have little good. Ex.

2455. 'Salt' = affection of truth; in the opposite sense, the vastation of affection of truth, that is, of good in truth.

2465. 'The firstborn' (daughter of Lot) = affection of such good, 'the younger,' affection of such falsity.

2466⁴. 'Samaria' is the Church that is in affection of truth; 'Jerusalem,' that is in affection of good.

2503. 'Kadesh' is affection of interior truth proceeding from rational things, and 'Shur,' affection of exterior truth proceeding from scientific things. . . Hence it follows that there are two affections of truth.

2526. From affection of truth, and thus from every faculty. Sig.

—'. 'Clean hands,' which are predicated of truths, cannot be, unless there is good in the truths, that is, unless there is affection of truth.

2529. In affection of truth, which is signified by 'cleanness of hands,' there is something of what is human.

2574^e. In the other life ideas inspired with affection of good conjoin.

2657³. The Rational after regeneration is formed by the Lord through affections of spiritual truth and good, which affections are in a wonderful manner implanted by the Lord in truths of the former Rational. Ex.

2689. They who can be reformed . . . are held by the Lord in affection of good and in thought of truth. —³. Ex.

2692. The influx of the Lord into affection of truth, when this affection is in the utmost grief on account of the deprivation (of truth), is consolation. Sig.

2697. The good of truth does not appear, it only manifests itself in affection of truth, and afterwards in life according to truth.

2698. With those who are in affection of good, good longs for good as a hungry man for bread, but with those who are in affection of truth, good longs for truth, as a thirsty man for water.

2708. The celestial are in affection of good, the spiritual, in affection of truth.

2712. 'To dwell,' is predicated of good of truth, or of affection of truth. Ill.

2717. (Ishmael's) 'mother' = affection of truth, because 'mother' = the Church, and since the Spiritual Church, which is here represented, is in affection of truth, and is a Church from affection of truth, therefore by 'mother' is here signified that affection.

2718. The man of the Spiritual Church is illuminated by the Lord's Divine Human, from which illumination there exists in his Rational affection of truth, and in his Natural affection of sciences. The reason why, with the spiritual man, affection of good cannot exist, such as there is with the celestial, but in its stead affection of truth, is that with him good is implanted in the intellectual part, and that it is relatively dim. Ex.

—². What it is to be in affection of truth, and what in affection of good. They who are in affection of truth . . . debate whether it is so . . . but they who are in affection of good know and perceive that it is so from the good itself in which they are. Examp.

—³. Affections of good are as innumerable as the Societies in Heaven, and are all conjoined by the Lord into a heavenly form, so as to constitute as it were one man.

—⁷. Hence it is evident whence comes the obscurity of those who are in affection of truth, that is, of the spiritual, relatively to those who are in affection of good, that is, to the celestial. Ex.

2731. Wives are affections of good that are of the will, and men are thoughts of truth that are of the understanding.

2763². The heart corresponds to affection of good.

2781⁵. 'She-ass' = affection of natural truth.

—⁷. 'She-ass' = affection of natural good and truth; 'she-mule,' affection of rational truth.

2865. 'Bethuel begat Rebecca' = from good their affection of truth.

2875. Good of life, or affection of good, is insinuated by the Lord through an inward way, man knowing nothing about it, but truth . . . through an outward way, and is brought into the memory, whence it is called forth by the Lord in its time and order, and is conjoined to affection of good.

—^e. Affection of truth and of good is the only thing that receives truth of faith; for they agree.

2877. As often as affection of truth and affection of good are insinuated by the Lord, which is effected while man knows nothing whatever about it, so often he imbues and does what is good in freedom, because from affection.

2890. Angels, through whom man communicates with Heaven, consider him as a brother, and insinuate into him affections of good and of truth.

2928^e. The spiritual do what is good from affection of truth.

2930³. Affection of good that is of the will, and affection of truth that is of the understanding . . .

—'. 'Soul' = affection of truth; 'spirit,' affection of good.

—⁴. 'Soul' = affection of truth and of good.

—'. 'Soul' = life of affection of good and of truth.

—⁵. It is said that 'soul' = affection of truth from the heart, because there are affections of truth not from the heart. Ex.

2937. The spiritual man is affected with truth as with good.

2979. The spiritual man is first instructed in truths that are of faith, and is then held by the Lord in affection of truth; good of faith is at the same time insinuated into him, but so that he hardly knows it, for it lies hidden in affection of truth . . . In process of time affection of truth of faith grows, and truth is regarded for the sake of the end, namely for the sake of good. Ex.

3012. 'Laban' is affection of good in the natural man.

3024². 'Daughters,' as 'Daughter of Zion,' etc. are affections of good and of truth . . . and because they are affections of good and of truth, they are also Churches, for Churches are Churches from these affections; hence it is that by 'Daughter of Zion' is signified the Celestial Church, and this from affection of good; but by 'Daughter of Jerusalem,' the Spiritual Church, from affection of truth.

3033. Affection that does not agree with truth cannot be conjoined with good of the Rational.

—². When a man has affection of good, that is, when he wills what is good from the heart . . . But when man has not affection of good, but affection of evil, that is, when he wills what is evil . . .

—³. Such have been with me and were not susceptible of any affection of good from truth, however much truths were recalled into their minds. . . But they who had been in affection of good from the heart are receptive of all truth, according to the quantity and quality of the good that had been with them.

[A.] 3040. 'Thou shalt take a woman for my son from thence'=that affection of truth is indeed thence, but from a new source. . . All affection of truth in the natural man exists through influx from affection of good out of the rational, or through the rational from the Divine. Affection of truth that exists in the natural man through this influx, is not in the beginning genuine affection of truth. Ex.

3042. 'If the woman will not go after thee'=if the affection of truth should not be separated . . . from the Natural and be conjoined to the Rational.

3048². 'Camels'=general scientific things that are in the natural man, from which is affection of truth that is to be initiated into affection of good in the rational.

3066. 'Daughters of the men of the city were going out to draw water'=affections of truth, and instruction through them. . . No one is ever instructed through truths, but through affections of truth. Ex.

3067. Affections of good and of truth are called 'infants,' 'girls,' 'damsels,' and 'daughters,' but everywhere with a difference as to state; when 'daughters' are mentioned, affection in general is signified, when 'damsels,' affection in which there is charity, and when 'girls,' affection in which there is innocence.

3074. Influx of Divine love into the Human, from which is affection of truth in which there is innocence. Sig.

3077. 'Lo! Rebecca came out' (of the city)=affection of truth from doctrinal things. Ex.

3078. The first affection of truth did indeed derive its origin from Divine things acquired by the Lord in the natural man, but still there were maternal things there that could not be separated in a moment, from which also the affection was. Sig.

3081. In the spiritual sense, marriage love is affection of good in truth, and affection of truth from good, from which affections conjoined as it were in marriage is marriage love. Refs.

3084^e. Divine love inflows into affection of good, and thence into affection of truth . . .

3085. In these two verses affection of truth is described as to origin, as to quality, and as to the first of initiation.

3086. All light, life and order in the natural man are from influx from the Divine . . . affection exists through this influx, first a general affection of truth.

3089. The first affection of truth had something in it from the maternal, that was to be separated. . . Man's first affection of truth is very impure, for there is in it affection of use and of end for the sake of self. . . Such affection must needs precede . . .

3095. The separation of affection of truth that was being initiated into good Divine. Sig. . . Since real truth is never conjoined with good except through its own affection, for in affection there is life through which there is conjunction, therefore it is affection of truth that is here understood.

3096. 'And she ran again to the well'=a lower affection of truth. . . Since the initiation of truth is here treated of, a lower affection of truth is signified . . . Natural truth is lower truth, and affection of natural truth is affection of lower truth.

3106. 'The hands' (of Rebecca)=the power of affection of truth.

3111. 'Bethuel'=good of charity such as there is with upright Gentiles. The very origin of the affection of truth that Rebecca reps. was from such good. . . Exploration concerning the origin of affection of truth as to innocence and as to charity is described in the inward sense. Ex.

3112. The whole origin of the affection of truth that is represented by Rebecca. Sig.

3115. The state of the affection of truth and from what origin it was. Sig. Its origin is described by those things that are represented by Bethuel, Milkah, and Nahor, and its relationships by Laban in what follows. Since its origin is obscure, its state is signified by 'a place to spend the night.'

3129. 'The brother of Rebecca'=affection of good in the natural man . . . 'Brother' is affection of good, and 'sister,' affection of truth. 3130. 3132. 3166. 3303.

3131. 'Laban ran out to the man to the spring'=the disposition of affection of good towards truth that was to be initiated into truth Divine.

3132. Divine good and Divine truth in the power of affection of truth. Sig. and Ex. . . As it is in the power of a girl to be betrothed, and afterwards as a wife to be conjoined to her husband, so it is in the power of affection of truth to be initiated into Divine truth, and so to be conjoined to Divine good.

3133. Inclination on the part of affection of truth, which is here represented by 'Rebecca the sister' . . .

3145. It is affection of truth from good that produces freedom; unless truth is learned from affection, thus in freedom, it is not implanted, still less exalted inwardly, and there made into faith.

3146. Freedom is for this intent, that man may be instructed in affection and from affection of truth . . .

3149. Affection of good in the natural man willed that Divine things be appropriated. Sig.

3159. Good from the Lord continually inflows through the inward into the outward man, and in the first age appears in the outward man in the shape of affection of truth. In proportion as a man regards celestial and spiritual good as an end, truth is initiated and conjoined to good, or what is the same, affection of truth to affection of good.

3160. By Laban as a brother is represented affection of good in the natural man, and by Bethuel the origin of affection of good. Affection of good and affection of truth in the natural man are like brother and sister ; and affection of truth called forth from the natural man into the rational and there conjoined with good, is like a married woman.

—². When good from the rational man inflows into the natural, it does not inflow immediately into truth there, but into good there, and through good into truth ; unless there is this influx, affection of truth cannot exist. Affection of good in the natural man is that which acknowledges, thus which first consents. Ex.

3164. 'Vessels of silver, and vessels of gold' are here mentioned because they are predicated of affection of truth, which is here 'Rebecca.'

3165. 'And he gave to Rebecca' = which then belonged to affection of truth, for by 'vessels of silver,' etc. affection of truth is described as a bride.

3176. 'He said to them, do not detain me' = will of affection of good.

3179. 'Let us call the girl, and let us interrogate her mouth' = consent of affection of truth alone. Ex.

3182. 'They sent Rebecca their sister' = separation from affection of truth Divine. Ex.

3183. When man is first born, he is introduced into a state of innocence . . . this state is signified by a 'suckling ;' then into a state of affection of celestial good, that is of love towards parents . . . this state is signified by 'a little child ;' afterwards into a state of affection of spiritual good, or of mutual love . . . this state is signified by 'children ;' when he grows still older, into a state of affection of truth, this is signified by 'youths.'

—². It is said that they sent Rebecca's 'nurse' also, in order that affection of truth may be described, namely, that it is from innocence ; for affection of truth is not affection of truth, unless there is innocence in it, for the Lord inflows through innocence into that affection, and indeed with wisdom.

3185. Illustration inflows into the natural man through affection of truth, which is 'Rebecca,' when it is initiated into good, which is 'Isaac.'

3186. 'Thou our sister be for thousands of myriads' = fructification of affection of truth ad infinitum.

3188. 'Rebecca arose' = elevation of affection of truth to the Rational, and its separation from the Natural.

3202. 'Rebecca lifted up her eyes and saw Isaac' = reciprocal intention of affection of truth.

3203. 'She dropped off the camel' = its separation from scientific things in the natural man . . . Affection of truth is separate from the natural man, when it becomes no longer of science, but of life. Ex.

3207. With the ancients, brides represented affections of truth, and bridegrooms, affections of good.

—¹. Affection of truth can only approach affection of good through appearances of truth. Sig.

—². At the first sight of affection of good, truth is separated from scientific things, puts on appearances of truth, and so makes its approach to good. Sig.

3263². From affection of good they (gentiles) do works of charity, and from affection of truth worship the Supreme.

3309. 'A man skilful in hunting' = those who are in affection of truth, for 'a skilful man' is predicated of affection of truth, or of those who are in affection of truth.

—². 'Hunting' = sensual and scientific truths in which they who are in good of life are instructed, and with which they are affected. Ex.

—³. 'To hunt' is to teach, and also to persuade, in both senses ; namely, from affection of truth and from affection of falsity. III.

3310³. They who are being regenerated, at first do what is good from doctrinal things . . . when they are in this state, they are in affection of truth, and are called 'men-vir-of the field.'

3316². When good first has an appetite and a longing for doctrinal things, with the end of conjoining them to itself, it appears in the shape of affection of truth. Sig.

3325³. The Spiritual Church is of such a character, that it is to be introduced into good through truth, without at that time perception of good, except such and so much as lies hidden in affection of truth. Neither can it be at this time distinguished from delight of love of self and of the world, which is at the same time in that affection, and is believed to be good. 3330.

3332². When the spiritual man is being regenerated, he first learns doctrinal things of truth, then is affected with them, which is the good of doctrinal things ; afterwards, through insight into doctrinal things, he is affected with the truths that are in them, which is the good of truth.

3339. Angels live in the light of Heaven, and also in its heat ; from the light they have intelligence, from the heat affection of good.

3408. Natural good signified by 'herd,' is not that which is born with man, but that which is procured through knowledges of truth joined to affection of good.

3447. Internal men are they who are in affection of good, and external, they who are in affection of truth.

3494. 'He called his elder son Esau' = affection of natural good or good of life . . . Affection of good in the Natural, and thence good of life, is what is called 'the elder son ;' but affection of truth, and thence doctrine of truth, 'the younger.' Ex.

3508. 'Esau went into the field to hunt game-venatio' = endeavour of affection of good to procure truth . . . 'Esau' represents good of the Natural, hence he is affection of rational good in the Natural. Ex.

3510. 'I heard thy father speak to Esau thy brother,' = that Divine good of the Divine Rational willed affection of good.

3539. 'She put it on Jacob her younger son' = affection of truth, or life of good from truth.

—⁶. With the evil there is not any affection of truth for the sake of life, that is, for the sake of good of life from truth, wherefore they cannot be reformed ; but with the good there is affection of good for the sake of life, that is, for the sake of good of life, and therefore they can be reformed.

3546. 'Into the hand of Jacob her son' = such was affection of natural truth.

3563⁴. When man is affected with truth not for the sake of ends of life, but for the sake of other ends, as for instance, that he may become learned, and this from a certain affection of emulation, or from a certain affection of childish envy, and also from a certain affection of glory, then are good of the Natural and truth of the Natural in such order as is here represented by Jacob. . . But in the state after regeneration . . . not only is man affected with truth for the sake of ends of life, but he is still more affected with good itself of life, and the former affections of emulation etc., separate themselves.

[A.] 3589. Affection of good is that which desires, and then affection of truth is that which delights. Sig.

3597⁴. 'All his brothers have I given to him for servants'=that at that time affections of good are as to appearance subordinated to affection of truth.

3603². When man comes into the state in which he does what is good from affection of good, that is, when he is regenerate, he then comes into the state that is described in the blessing given to Esau.

—³. In man's second age . . . he is in affection of truth from a certain worldly love, which is the means of his learning things that without it would have been left unlearned.

3609. 'She called to Jacob her younger son, and said to him'=a state of perception-appereption-of affection of truth from influx through Divine truth.

3610. When they who are in truth, or in affection of truth, do not live according to the truth that they know, and with which they are affected, there is then a certain delight from the love of self or the love of the world that adjoins itself to affection of truth, which appears as good . . . When truth is in this state, that is, they who are in affection of truth, then truth is said to have life from itself. . . When truth, that is, they who are in affection of truth, are deprived of that life, they then first receive life. They who are in affection of self and of the world can by no means apprehend these things. Ex.

3612. 'Flee thou to Laban my brother, to Haran'=to affection of outward or corporeal good.

3621. 'Daughters of Heth'=affections of truth from what is not genuine, or what is the same, truth; for truth without affection is not conjoined.

3653. There are within the Church men of three kinds; they who are in love to the Lord, they who are in charity towards the neighbour, and they who are in affection of truth. Sig.

3681. 'To take for himself thence a woman'=conjunction thus through affection of truth.

3686. 'Esau saw that the daughters of Canaan were evil in the eyes of Isaac his father'=the Lord's providence and foresight that the affections of that truth with which natural good had been conjoined heretofore would not conduce to conjunction. Ex.

3691⁴. They who are in charity . . . only from affection of truth so that they have no perception of charity itself, except from the truth with which they are affected, are in a still lower degree of good and truth, and are in the outer or first Heaven . . . and are called good Spirits.

—⁵. They who are in affection of truth, and thence in a certain form of charity, are also images of the Lord, but still more remotely.

3768³. All good is from the Lord, and it inflows with man and produces affection of good, and this affection is called charity.

3793². Since all conjunction of truth with good is effected through affection, it is affection of truth coupling with good that 'Rachel' reps.

3795. Affection of interior truth is that which teaches, for the Church is the Church from this affection. Sig.

3796. 'When Jacob saw Rachel . . .'=acknowledgment of affection of that truth as to its origin.

3816. Affection of good, or love to the Lord and love towards the neighbour, has in itself blessedness and happiness . . . They who are not yet initiated into good and its affection, that is, who are not yet fully regenerated, cannot but think of reward, because they do not do what is good from affection of good, but from affection of blessedness and happiness for the sake of themselves, and also from fear of Hell; but when a man is being regenerated, this is inverted, and he becomes affection of good, and then no longer looks for reward. Examp.

3820. 'The eyes of Leah were weak'=affection of outward truth such, as to understanding. Ex.

3829. 'Jacob said to Laban; give me my woman'=conjunction from common good with affection of interior truth.

that a general affection of truth precedes, and the truths that are insinuated into it are none but general truths.

3839². There are especially two kinds of affections that shine forth from the Word before the Angels, namely affections of truth and affections of good; affections of truth before Spiritual Angels, and affections of good before Celestial Angels. Affections of good, which are of love to the Lord, are . . . incomprehensible to man, but affections of truth, which are of mutual love, may be in some measure comprehended as to their most general things, but only by those who are in genuine mutual love, and that not from any but dim inward perception. Examp.

3843. 'Not . . . to give the younger before the first-born'=that affection of external truth must precede affection of interior truth.

3848. 'And he gave him Rachel his daughter for a woman to him'=conjunction then of good with affection of interior truth. Affection itself that is of truth flows in from good. Conjunction of good with affection of inward truth takes place for the first time when good of the Natural is conjoined with rational truth, and through this with rational good. Sig.

3855. 'Leah was hated'=affection of outward truth not so dear, because further from the Divine.

3913⁵. Good afterwards manifests itself through affection, namely, through man's being affected with truth . . .

3915. 'Let her bear upon my knees'=acknowledgment by affection of interior truth, from which there is conjunction.

—². Without affection, truths have no life. Examp.

3928³. 'A hind let loose'=affection of natural truth in a free state.

3934². A regenerate man does what is good from affection for it, thus from willing what is good, but a man who is to be regenerated does what is good from affection of truth, thus from knowing what is good.

3963³. The Church is from affection of truth in which there is good, and of good from which there is truth, but not from affection of truth in which there is not good, nor from affection of good from which there is not truth. Ex.

3982². Man is led by the Lord through many affections of good and of truth which are not genuine affections of good and truth, but are of use merely to obtain them . . . and are afterwards given to oblivion.

3986². Hence rarely are affections of truth genuine.

4017. 'To come to drink'=affection of truth. Ex.

4073. 'Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah'=adjunction of affections of truth by good.

4096. 'Rachel and Leah answered. . . '=reciprocal of affections of truth. Ex.

4104. 'He lifted up his sons and his women upon camels'=elevation of truths and of their affections, and arrangements in general principles. Ex.

4134. 'Thou hast taken away my daughters'=no affections of truth as before. 4135.

4145². (How man is initiated into affection of doing what is good, and at last is affected with good from good.)

4148. (Fear lest there be injury as to affections of truth.) Sig. and Ex.

4177. 'Fourteen years in thy two daughters'=the first period, that he might acquire for himself thence affections of truth.

4200. 'If thou afflictest my daughters, and takest women over my daughters'=that affections of truth should remain within the Church . . . 'women'=affections of truth that are not genuine, thus that are not of the Church, for affections of truth constitute the Church.

4205². All truths whatever . . . enter into the memory through affection, that is, through some delight that is of love; without affection, or without delight that is of love, nothing can enter with man, because his life is in these things. . . Hence it is evident how the case is with affection of truth. The truth that has entered with affection of good is reproduced when a like affection recurs, and also the affection when a like truth does so. Hence also it is clear that no truth can ever be implanted with genuine affection, and inwardly rooted, unless the man is in good, for genuine affection of truth is from good . . .

4215. 'He kissed his sons and his daughters'=acknowledgment of these truths, and of the affections of the same.

4231. 'Fig tree' is natural good, 'branch' is affection of it.

4243. Truth is apparently in the first place when man learns truth from affection, but does not yet live according to it; but good is in the first place when he lives according to the truth that he learns from affection.

4245. The quality of the state when inversion takes place is here described, that is, when they who have been in affection of truth begin to be in affection of good.

4247². When man is in affection of truth, in which he is in the beginning before he is being regenerated, at that time also good continually inflows . . . and produces affection of truth, for affection of truth is from no other source than from the continual effort of Divine good to flow in. But when man is being regenerated . . . good manifests itself, for then he is not so much in affection of knowing truth, but in affection of doing it.

4257. Man altogether perishes when the Church and that which is of the Church with him perishes, that is, when affection of truth, which is properly signified by 'mother,' is destroyed.

4270. 'He rose up in that night, and took his two women, and his two handmaids, and his eleven sons—natos—and passed over the ford of Jabbok'=first insinuation of affections of truth with truths acquired. 4301.

4274. There cannot exist any temptation unless the man is in good of truth, that is, in the love or affection of it. Ex.

[A.] 4286². They who are in the Ultimate Heaven . . . are in affection of good and in knowledge of truth.

4299³. The Lord's presence is nearer to man in proportion as he is in affection of good or of truth: if it is nearer than this, the man comes into temptation. Ex.

4301². They who have perception . . . are affected with truths that are conjoined with good, as the eye . . . is affected with flowers in gardens and meadows in springtime; and they who are in more inward perception are affected with them as with the fragrance exhaled from them. Ex.

4335. 'They who grind'=those within the Church who are in truth from affection of good, (or from affection of evil).

—³. 'The firstborn of the handmaid that is behind the mills'=affection of such truth, whence come falsities.

4342. 'He divided the sons-natos-upon Leah'=the arrangement of outward truths under their own affection.

4343. 'And upon Rachel'=the arrangement of more inward truths under their own affection.

4345. 'The handmaids'=affections of sciences and knowledges; 'Leah,' affection of more outward truth, and 'Rachel' affection of more inward truth. Affections of sciences and knowledges are outward in the highest degree . . . affection of outward truth follows thence, and is more inward, and affection of more inward truth is still more inward. Rep.

4361. 'Leah approached also and her sons-nati-, and bowed themselves'=affection of truth of faith as to more outward things, and their truths, and their submissive introduction.

4362. 'And afterwards there approached Joseph and Rachel and bowed themselves'=affections of truth of faith as to more inward things and their submissive introduction.

4364². When man has been led to good in freedom, then truths are accepted, and are implanted, and then he begins to be affected with them. Ex.

4366. 'Esau said, I have much, my brother; be that to thee which is thine'=tacit acceptance, that he might thus insinuate affection of good from truth.

4368. 'If now I have found grace in thine eyes, and thou dost accept my present from my hand'=reciprocal of affection that it may be insinuated.

—². By reciprocal of affection, which is insinuated from good that is 'Esau' into truth that is 'Jacob' is meant affection of truth. For there are two affections, which are heavenly, namely affection of good and affection of truth. Affection of truth derives its origin from no other source than from good, the affection itself is thence, for truth has not life from itself, but receives life from good; wherefore when man is affected with truth, it is not from truth, but from good that inflows into truth, and produces the affection itself. This is meant here by reciprocal of affection that it may be insinuated.

— . It is known that many . . . are affected with the Word . . . but still few have for an end to be instructed about truth; . . . these appear as if they were in affection of truth, but are not. Only they are in affection of truth who love to be instructed about truths . . . No one is in this affection but he who is in good . . . With such, good inflows into truth and produces affection. Examp.

—⁴. They who are in affection of truth from love of self and of the world . . .

4373. 'And he urged him, and he took it'=that that [affection] was insinuated from good of truth through affection inspired from Divine good.

4427. 'Dinah'=affection of all truths, and the Church thence derived. The Church is so entirely from affection of truth that whether you say affection of truth, or the Church, it is the same thing, for a man is the Church from affection of truth.

4433. The truth of the Church from ancient time ('Shechem') could only be conjoined illegitimately with the affection of the truth that was signified by her (Dinah's) brethren. Sig. 4439.

4502. ('Simeon and Levi) took Dinah away from the house of Shechem, and departed'=they took away affection of truth from those who were of the remains of the Most Ancient Church.

4510. 'Females,' 'women' and 'wives'=affections of truth, when their married partner is mentioned, or when he is called 'husband'; affections of good when their married partner is not mentioned, or when he is called 'man-vir.' Here 'females'=affections of good, because they were the females of the men of the city, by whom truths were signified. Affection of spiritual good is the same as charity, therefore by 'females' is here signified charity. 8338.

4522. 'Should he make our sister as a harlot'=on account of their having no affection. 'Dinah,' when polluted and made a harlot,=affection of falsities, thus the Church corrupted, consequently they no longer had any affection of truth.

4593. 'Rachel died'=end of the former affection of interior truth. 6243.

—². The hereditary was the human affection of interior truth, which Divine affection expelled . . . in human affection from the mother is the hereditary in which there is evil, but in Divine affection there is nothing but good . . .

4623. They who are in affection of good and truth are in the Lord's life, thus in real life, for the Lord is present in good and truth through affection, but they who are in evil and falsity through affection, are in the life of proprium, thus in life not real.

4627². Things that belong to affection of good seen represented by appropriate little flames, and things that belong to affection of truth, by variations of light.

—⁴. Affections of good were represented there by veins of golden flame, and affections of truth by veins of silvery light.

4643. 'Esau took his women-foemina—from the daughters of Canaan'=the first conjunction of natural good with affection of apparent truth.

— . 'And Bashemath the daughter of Ishmael the sister of Nebajoth' = a second conjunction with affection of truth from a Divine stock.

4686°. 'To come with singing' = the gladness of affection of truth.

4791. The tongue in general corresponds to affection of truth, or to those in the Grand Man who are in affection of truth, and afterwards in affection of good from truth.

4844¹⁶. 'The virgins' whom the priests were to marry represented affection of truth; 'a widow of a priest,' affection of truth from good.

4906°. Good of love is spiritual fire, and affection of that good is spiritual heat. Ex.

4956. The essence of charity towards the neighbour is affection of good and truth, and acknowledgment that self is evil and falsity. Indeed the neighbour is good and truth itself; to be affected with these is to have charity. 5132.

4966°. The three maidens who were called the Graces were affections of good, and the maidens who were named the Muses were affections of truth.

5006°. When life is not preached, man comes into no affection of good, and when he is in no affection of good he is in no affection of truth either.

5044°. It is not this truth itself, but affection of this truth through which the Lord governs those who are in temptations, for the Divine only inflows into those things that are of affection. The truth that is implanted and inrooted in man's interior principles is implanted and inrooted through affection, and not at all without affection. The truth that is implanted and inrooted through affection, adheres, and is recalled through affection, and when this truth is recalled, it presents the affection that is conjoined with it, which affection is the reciprocal of the man.

5159°. When a man begins to be affected with what is good and just, he is then at the end of the former state, and at the beginning of a new one. Examp.

5280°. In a state of temptation . . . the affections of truth and of good that from infancy have been insinuated in a state of innocence, and afterwards stored up more inwardly and preserved for this use, are excited by Angels.

5313°. 'Seven lamps burning with fire' = affections of truth from good, which also do harm to those who are not in good.

5355. In proportion as a man is in good, he is affected with truth, for good is in truth as the soul in its body.

5639°. The Spiritual in its essence with man is the very affection of good and truth for the sake of good and truth and not for the sake of self, also affection of what is just and fair for the sake of what is just and fair and not for the sake of self. . . In a word, affection of charity and faith, that is, of good and truth, and delight and pleasantness, and still more good fortune and blessedness thence derived that are felt inwardly, and that make a man truly Christian, are the Spiritual.

5816°. Affection of truth from good determines the inward sight thither (to truths), and draws him away from worldly and bodily things.

5826°. When truth has been implanted in the will, which is perceived from the fact that he is affected with truth for the sake of the end that he may live according to it, then are good and truth inward. 5827°.

5877°. When conjunction of the inward Celestial ('Joseph') with truths in the Natural ('the sons of Jacob') takes place, there is given a faculty of perceiving, namely, through affection of truth and thus of good.

5946. 'Women' = affections of truth, for when 'men-viri' = truths, then their women = affections of truth . . . affections of truth, which here are 'women,' do not know the interior things of the Church except through truths, which are 'men'; affections without these, are like will without understanding.

5954°. 'King's daughter' = affection of truth.

6047°. When the Word is searched from affection of truth to see whether doctrinal things are true, then man is illustrated by the Lord so as to perceive, he knows not whence, what is true, and is confirmed in it according to the good in which he is.

6195. Truths do not conjoin, but affections of truth.

6207°. Conscience is the plane into which the Angels flow, and in fact into affections of good and truth and also of what is just and fair there, and thus hold man bound, but still in freedom.

6222°. All affection of good and truth, through which there is illustration, flows in from nowhere else, thus is born from nowhere else, than from the Internal, that is, through the Internal from the Lord.

6247. 'That is Bethlehem' = a state of new affection of truth and of good in place of the former. Ex. The rejection of the former affection of truth and reception of a new one are here treated of. The former affection of truth is while man is being regenerated, and the latter, which is new, when he has been regenerated. In the former state man is affected with truth for the sake of becoming intelligent, in the latter, that he may become wise; or what is the same, in the former state he is affected with truth for the sake of doctrine, but in the latter, for the sake of life . . . when man is affected with truth for the sake of doctrine in order to become intelligent, he is also at the same time affected with reputation and glory, at that time this affection cannot but be there, and it is also permitted, in order to introduce, because man is of such a character. But when he is affected with truth for the sake of life, he then rejects glory and reputation as ends, and embraces good of life, that is, charity towards the neighbour.

6260. 'He kissed them' = conjunction from affection of truth. 'To kiss' = conjunction from affection. The reason why it is affection of truth is that it follows that he 'embraced them,' by which is signified conjunction from affection of good, for 'to embrace'=a deeper and closer affection than 'to kiss,' as affection of good is deeper and closer than affection of truth.

[A.] 6376. They who are in what is external of the Church are not so much affected with good of charity as with truth of faith, but they who are in what is internal of the Church are affected with good of charity and thence with truth of faith. The latter are they who are signified by the 'choice vine;' the former, by the 'vine.'

6393. The reason why it said 'to bear a burden' is that they do not do what is good from affection of good, thus not from freedom, but from affection of self, which is slavery.

6396. By 'Dan' are meant those who are in good of life from truth, but not yet from good. Good with them lies hidden in truth as yet deeply stored up, and gives them affection of truth . . .

6413³. 'Hart'=affection of truth.

—⁴. 'Daughter of Zion'=affection of good that is of the Celestial Church.

—⁵. 'Hind'=affection of natural good.

6432. 'The breasts'=affections of good and truth. III.

—^o. Affections of truth are with those who hear the Word of God, and affections of good with those who 'keep,' or 'do it.'

6499. 'Joseph fell upon the faces of his father'=influx of the Internal into affection of (spiritual) good. Ex.

6600. He who is in good of charity and of faith has extension into Societies of Heaven . . . but there are some Societies into which affection of truth reaches, and others into which affection of good; affection of truth reaches to Societies of Spiritual Angels, and affection of good to Societies of Celestial Angels. On the other hand, thought and affection of those who are in evil and falsity have extension into infernal Societies. See under AFFECTION at this ref.

6601². As what is flaming diffuses itself far around in the world, so does good and its affection in the Spiritual World, for flame corresponds to affection of good.

6916. 'A woman shall ask of her neighbour' . . . 'woman'=affection of good of charity . . . 'neighbour'=affection of truth which those who are in scientific things have.

7012. Everyone has illustration according to the affection of truth that he has, and the affection of truth is according to the good of life. Hence it is that they who are in no affection of truth for the sake of truth, but for the sake of gain, are not at all illustrated when they read the Word, but are only confirmed in doctrinal things . . .

7055². They would then have affection of knowing truth for the sake of truth, and especially for the sake of life, and thence would be gifted with a perception whether the doctrinal things of their Church were truths . . .

7056². Hence it is evident that conjunction of truth proceeding mediately from the Divine with truth that proceeds immediately is not possible except in good, consequently unless man is affected with truth for the sake of truth, especially for the sake of good, thus for the sake of life, for then man is in good.

7343. He who is in affection of truth applies truths to himself according to the state and quality of the affection: he who is in affection of falsity, when he applies truths to himself, perverts and falsifies them.

7442³. When a man has been regenerated as to the Natural also . . . there is then sensibly felt by him affection of truth that is of faith, and affection of good that is of charity.

7770. It is believed that scientific things of truth and of good are the very truths and goods that are of faith, but they are not these; affections of truth and of good are what make faith. These inflow into scientific things as into their vessels.

8337². In general by wind instruments the Ancients expressed affections of good, and by stringed ones affections of truth, and this from the correspondence of each instrument with affections.

8339. 'Timbrel' is predicated of affection of spiritual good, or of good of truth . . . 'dance,' of affection of spiritual truth.

8349. 'They could not drink of the waters, for bitterness . . .'=that truths appeared undelightful to them because without affection of good . . . The reason why affection of truth derives its origin from good is that good loves truth and truth good . . .

—². There are indeed some who live evilly, and yet wish to be instructed in truths, but there is not affection of truth with them, but only affection of confirming the doctrinal things of the Church on account of their own glory. . . Genuine affection of truth is to wish to know what is true for the sake of life in the world, and for the sake of eternal life.

8352². Affection of good continually inflows through the inward man from the Lord, and excites in the outward man what is consonant with it, which before had caused the delight of affection of truth.

8356. That a man is affected with truth is from good . . . hence it is evident that the delight of affection of truth originates only from good. Ex.

8367^e. Affection of truth from good and delight thence are signified by the 'seventy palm trees.'

8369. Since by 'palm trees' goods are signified, affection of good is also signified by them, and delight thence, for all delight is from affection of good.

8408^e. Food of all kinds=such things as nourish the soul, thus affections of good and of truth.

8521³. No others are able to see whether anything doctrinal of their Church is true but they who are in affection of truth for the sake of the use of life . . .

8562². All genuine affection of truth is from good.

8568. 'Beautiful virgins'=those who are in affections of good, and 'youths,' those who are in affections of truth.

8701². Man is not regenerated before he acts from affection of good, for he then wills what is good, and is delighted and happy to do it . . .

8780². This revelation is effected through illustration of the inward sight, which is the understanding, when a man who is in affection of truth from good reads the Word . . . But those who are in affection of truth from evil, that is, who desire to know truths merely for the sake of honors, gain, reputation, and the like, do not see them, but only see things confirmatory of the doctrinal matters of their own Church, whether they are true or false.

8912. 'Man-servant'=affection of spiritual truth; 'maid-servant', affection of spiritual good; 'ox,' affection of natural good; and 'ass,' affection of natural truth.

8986^c. Such are not able to be affected with truth for the sake of good, but for the sake of delight. Sig.

8993. 'When a man shall sell his daughter for a maid-servant'=affection of truth from natural delight. Ex.

—². Genuine affection of truth is to will and to desire to know the very truths of faith themselves for the sake of good use as an end, and for the sake of life; but affection of truth that is not genuine, is to will and to desire to know truths for the sake of self . . . They who are in affection of truth from this origin care not whether the truths they know are genuine . . . They who are in genuine affection of truth, in the representative sense, are the daughters of the men of the Israelites, but they who are in affection of truth that is not genuine, are 'maid-servants' from the daughters of Israel.

8994. 'Men-servants'=those who are in truth without affection.

—². There are some who are in truth and not in its affection, and there are some who are in affection. The former are represented by 'men-servants' from the sons of Israel, and the latter, by 'maid-servants' from the daughters of Israel . . .

—³. The difference between those who are in truth without affection, who were represented by the 'man-servants,' and those who are in affection of truth, who are represented by the 'maid-servants,' is like that between knowing truth and willing truth . . . wherefore the difference is such as that between science and affection. They who are in science of truth and good and who in the representative sense are 'man-servants' or 'men,' are not affected with truth and good, but are affected only with the science of them, thus are delighted with truths for the sake of science. But they who are in affection of truth and of good, and in the representative sense are 'maid-servants,' or females, are not affected with science, but with the truths and goods themselves when they hear and perceive them with others. There is such a general affection with good women, but affection of sciences of truth is general with men. Hence it is that they who are in spiritual perception, love women who are affected with truths, and do not love women who are in sciences. See also under AFFECTION at this ref.

8995. 'If she be evil in the eyes of her lord'=if affection of truth from natural delight does not agree with spiritual truth. Ex.

—². 'A maid-servant' or 'handmaid' is affection of truth from delights of love of self or love of the world, and that this affection can be conjoined with spiritual truth may be evident from the fact that affection of spiritual truth is inward affection, or is in the inner man, but affection of truth from natural delight is in the outward man. Inward affection, which is of the spiritual man, is continually being conjoined with outward affection that is of the outward man, but still so that inward affection of truth is dominant, and outward affection of truth subservient.

9001. 'He shall do to her after the judgment of daughters'=that it shall be as genuine affection of truth. Ex.

9002. 'If he shall take another to himself'=conjunction with affection of truth from another stock. Ex.

9049⁶. 'Cheek-bone'=affection of interior truth, 'the right cheek-bone'=affection of truth from good.

9057. 'Wound'=extinction or injury to affection in the Intellectual, that is, to affection of truth.

—². By 'the Samaritan' is meant the man who is in affection of truth . . . because 'Samaria' = that affection.

9059. 'Or the eye of a maid-servant'=or affection of truth (in the outward man).

9062. 'If he shall strike out the tooth of his man-servant, or the tooth of his maid-servant'=if he shall destroy truth, or affection of it in the Sensual.

9094³. All truths with man have their life from affections that are of some love . . .

9096². He who acts from affection that is of love of good acts from freedom, but he who acts from affection that is of love of evil appears to himself to act from freedom, but does not act from freedom, because he acts from cupidities that are from Hell. He alone is free who is in affection of good, because he is led by the Lord. Ill. . . For the Lord instils affections for good, and aversion for evil . . .

9133². So long as general affection of good remains, there is always a surplus by which any particular good that has been taken away can be restored. Sig.

9162 and 9163. Injury or loss of any affection of good and truth in the memory. Sig.

9210⁴. The reason why it is said that 'Jehovah blesses those who do not do it (take usury)' is that they are in affection of good and of truth, thus in the happiness of Angels; for in that affection, or in good of that love, man has Heaven.

9276. 'Beasts that are of the flock'=affections of inward good and truth, and 'beasts that are of the herd,' affections of outward good and truth, but 'wild beasts,' such affections as are of the most outward truth, for these affections, relatively to inward affections, are wild beasts, for they are affections of sensual things, which are called pleasures and delights.

—³. Through this good (good of charity) the Lord conjoins himself with those who are in affection of truth, for affection of truth is from good, and good is from the Lord. . . For the Lord inflows into that good, which is the internal of the Church, and through it into affection of truth, which is its external, and through this affection into the delights of outward truth, which are in its extremes.

[A.] 9279³. Knowledges of truth and of good . . . are what open the intellectual things of the inward man, and affections of truth and of good that are of love from the Lord, and thence of love to the Lord, are what open its voluntary things . . .

9281². When a man dies, outward breathing ceases, and inward breathing . . . remains; this breathing is altogether according to affection of truth, thus according to his life of faith.

9297³. He who is affected with truths merely for the sake of the reputation of learning, that he may be enriched with honours and wealth, and not for the sake of good use of life, is in persuasive faith, which is from himself and not from the Lord.

—4. He who regards theoretical truths for the sake of practical ones, and sees the former in the latter, and thus good use of life from both conjoined, and is affected with both the former and the latter for the sake of this end, is in faith from the Lord. Ex.

9300⁵. Hence it is evident that the Intellectual is illustrated with those who are in affection of truth from good, but not with those who are in affection of truth from evil. Ex.

9325⁴. 'Dry paps' = no affections of good and of truth, but in their stead cupidities of perverting them.

9335². The man who is being regenerated is kept in affection of truth . . .

9382². Everyone is illustrated and informed from the Word according to the degree of affection of truth and of its desire, and also according to the faculty of receiving.

9393. Truth becomes of life and worship when a man is affected with it, or loves it, or what is the same, wills it, and from will, thus from love and affection, does it . . .

9596. Order in which . . . truths and goods follow with a man and an Angel who is in the Middle or Second Heaven. . . First comes truth from a celestial origin, which is signified by 'fine linen'; then love or affection of truth, which is 'blue'—hyacinthinum; afterwards love or affection of good thence derived, which is 'purple'—purpura; and at last spiritual good, which is 'scarlet double-dyed.'

9606. These spheres exhale from everyone's life of affections of truth and of good.

9741². They who are in good of mutual love are in affection of good for the sake of good, but they who are in good of faith are in affection of truth for the sake of truth.

10254. 'Aromatic cinnamon' = perception and affection of natural truth.

10256. 'Aromatic calamus' = perception and affection of interior truth.

10291. 'Take to thee fragrant spices' = affections of truth from good that must be in Divine worship.

10309. 'The man who shall have made like it to make an odour with it' = imitation of Divine worship through affections of truth and good from what is his own.

10683⁶. They who love truth for the sake of truth, and who love to do truth for the sake of truth, love the Lord, and receive Heaven into themselves, for the 'reward' that is from the Lord is affection of truth for the sake of truth, and in affection of truth for the sake of truth there is Heaven.

H. 95. In every man . . . there are also two kingdoms, one of the will and the other of the understanding; the will reigns through affections of good, and the understanding through affections of truth.

347. They who are affected and delighted with truth itself are affected and delighted with the light of Heaven.

— . Whatever inflows and is received from Heaven has delight and pleasantness in itself; hence is genuine affection of truth, which is affection of truth for the sake of truth. They who are in this affection, or what is the same, in this love, are in heavenly intelligence, and also are resplendent in Heaven as with the splendour of the firmament. . . But they who are in love of truth for the sake of glory, either in the world or in Heaven, cannot shine in Heaven, because they are not affected and delighted with the light of Heaven itself, but with the light of the world . . .

517. Since Spirits are affections, there is continually inspired affection of truth for the sake of uses of life . . .

N. 112. Faith is affection of truth from willing truth because it is truth . . . J. 36.

J. 9⁴. The angelic abodes are indeed in Heaven . . . but yet are with man in his affections of good and of truth.

—7. There is an extension into Heaven of all affections of good and of truth.

12². (There is mental) extension . . . according to the abundance of affections of good that have been implanted in the will.

S. 58. Man acknowledges truth from interior perception, and then sees it in his thought, whenever he is in affection of truth for the sake of truth; for from affection comes perception, from perception thought, and thus is effected the acknowledgment that is called faith.

61⁹. They who have studied the Word from affection of knowing truth because it is truth . . .

F. 4. Hence it is that there is inward acknowledgment of truth with those who are in spiritual affection of truth.

5. There is a spiritual idea . . . that inflows with those who are in affection of truth, and that inwardly dictates that this, which is heard or read, is truth, or that it is not truth . . .

13. Charity in its first origin is affection of good, and since good loves truth, that affection produces affection of truth, and through this, acknowledgment of truth, which is faith. Through these, in their series, affection of truth exists, and becomes charity.

W. 404. When the wedding (of will and understanding) has taken place, the first conjunction is through affection of knowing, from which comes affection of truth. Gen. art. The first state (of man after birth) is not meant here by the wedding, because there is then no thought from the understanding, but only obscure affection that is of love, or the will. . . In the second state, which belongs to man in childhood, there is affection of knowing. . . Through this affection he learns those things out of which the understanding is formed. . . It is also plain that affection of truth is from this, for when a man has become intelligent from affection of knowing, he is led not so much through affection to know, as through affection to reason, and to form such conclusions as are of his love, whether economical, civil, or moral. When this affection is raised to spiritual things, it becomes affection of spiritual truth. That its first principle or initiaement was affection of knowing, may be seen from this, that affection of truth is an exalted affection of knowing, for to be affected by truths is the same as to wish from affection to know them, and when found, to drink them in from delight of affection.

—². That the second conjunction is from affection of understanding from which comes perception of truth. . . It is plain from rational sight that affection of truth and perception of truth are two faculties of the understanding, which in some persons are coincident, and in others are not. . . It is also plain that every person is in perception of truth just in so far as he is in affection of understanding; for take away affection of understanding truth, and there will be no perception of truth; and give affection of understanding truth, and there will be perception of truth according to the degree of affection of it. No man whose reason is sound ever lacks perception of truth, so long as he has affection of understanding it.

—³. That the third conjunction is through affection of seeing truth, from which comes thought. Affection of knowing truth is one thing, affection of understanding it is another, and affection of seeing it is a third. In other words, affection of truth is one thing, perception of truth is another, and thought is another. Ex.

— Affection of truth is not itself perceived otherwise than as an effort of will from something pleasurable, which is inwardly in meditation as its life, and is little attended to.

—⁴. From all this it is now evident that these three, affection of truth, perception of truth, and thought, follow in order from love, and that they exist nowhere but in the understanding. For when love enters into the understanding, which takes place when conjunction has taken place, it first produces affection of truth, then affection of understanding what it knows, and lastly, affection of seeing in bodily thought that which it understands; for thought is nothing but inward sight. Thought does indeed exist first, because it is of the natural mind, but thought from perception of truth that is from affection of truth, exists last.

—^c. All operations of love or the will outside the understanding do not relate to affections of truth, but to affections of good.

405³. The bloodvessels of the heart in the lungs correspond to affections of truth, and the ramifications, or the bronchial tubes, correspond to perceptions and thoughts from these affections. 412.

P. 66. Every affection [that is] of good and at the same time of truth is in its own human form; for whatever proceeds from the Lord derives from His Divine love the fact that it is affection of good, and from His Divine wisdom that it is affection of truth. Affection of truth that proceeds from the Lord appears as perception and thence thought of truth in an Angel and in a man, because attention is paid to perception and thought, but little to the affection from which they come, notwithstanding that they proceed as one from the Lord with affection of truth.

147. How the Lord casts out concupiscences of evil, which obsess the inward man from birth, and in their place instils affections of good, when a man as of himself removes evils as sins.

298⁴. That the Divine Providence makes man see truth, and also gives affection of perceiving it and of receiving it. Ex.

300. All who are in Heaven are nothing but affections of good and thence thoughts of truth; and all who are in Hell are nothing but concupiscences of evil and thence imaginations of what is false; which are so ordered on both sides that the latter are precisely opposite to the former. Des.

321³. All influx is effected by the Lord through illustration of the understanding, and through affection of truth; and through the latter into the former.

334. Every Angel is perfected in wisdom to eternity according to the degree of the affection of good and of truth in which he was when he left the world. Sig.

R. 85. The spiritual mind is opened through charity, and when it has been opened, there flows in light and affection of understanding truths out of Heaven from the Lord; hence there is illustration. . .

130. 'And the last greater than the former' = increase of them from spiritual affection of truth, which is of charity.

216. 'Be zealous therefore and repent' = that this should be done from affection of truth and aversion to falsity.

357. 'Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand' = affection of truth from good, from which comes intelligence with those who will be of the Lord's New Heaven and New Church.

434. 'They had hair like the hair of women' = they appeared to themselves to be in affection of truth.

[R.] 831. 'I saw an Angel standing in the sun, and he cried with a great voice, saying to all birds that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together to the supper of the great God'=the Lord from Divine love and thence from Divine zeal, calling and convoking all who are in spiritual affection of truth, and think about Heaven, to the New Church, and to conjunction with Himself, thus to eternal life.

M. 127. Marriage love corresponds to affection of genuine truth, its chastity, purity and holiness.

D. 4399. There are two kinds of affections, those of truth and those of good, or of the understanding and of the will; affection of truth is formal, affection of good is essential. Examp.

5911. It was said by others that affection of truth makes the Church with man, and affection of truth cannot be given from the doctrine of those who are in faith alone, because they have not the doctrine of life; but they replied that still they are in affection of truth, namely of their own truth as to thought about those things; not knowing that affection of truth regards life, and not mere thought, not knowing that that affection which regards mere thought, is affection of their own glory or of their own gain, which is filth as to truths, and that the faith of that affection is either none at all, or is persuasive.

E. 112². They who are in affection of truth from a spiritual origin, and they who are in affection of truth from a natural origin. Sig.

—⁴. They who are in spiritual affection of truth are also in the life of charity, for thence they have spiritual affection.

115. Spiritual affection of truth, which is to love truth because it is truth, can be given only to those who are conjoined with the Lord by the acknowledgment and faith of His Divine in His Human. Sig.

117^o. Whoever is in spiritual affection of truth is conscious how few things he knows . . .

121. The persecution of those who are in spiritual affection of truth by those who are in falsity. Sig. and Des. 124.

128. He who remains in genuine affection of truth to the end of his life will come into the New Heaven. Sig.

138^o. None come into spiritual temptations except those who are in spiritual affection of truth . . .

444¹⁰. Spiritual affection of truth is to love truth itself and to estimate it above all the good of the world, because through it man has eternal life. Sig.

Affinity. Affinitas.

Relation by Marriage. Affinis.

A. 685. There are marvellous consociations in the other life, which are comparatively like relationships on earth; that is, they are acknowledged as parents, children, brothers, blood relations, relations by marriage . . . no respect whatever being had to parents, children, blood-relations, and relations by marriage on earth . . .

2508. The things that descend from the heavenly marriage have connections together like blood-relationships and relationships by marriage on earth . . .

2556. 'Truly she is my sister'=that rational truth has such a relationship . . . Each and all things with a truly rational man . . . all things of his affections, of his perceptions, and of his thoughts, are as it were conjoined to each other in consanguinity and affinity. For they are so disposed as to have mutual respect to each other, like the families of one house, and this with the utmost distinctness. Hence they are reproduced according to the affinities in which they are. 3129.

2863³. There is a connection, and there are affinities of truths . . .

3703². Lower or derived goods and truths . . . are relatively like brothers and sisters . . . like sons-in-law and daughters-in-law, in a word, like consanguinities and affinities in every degree . . . 9079.

3803. 'And Jacob told Rachel that he was the brother of her father'=the affinity of the good that is 'Jacob' and of the good that is 'Laban.'

— . It is enough to know that there are innumerable affinities of good and truth, and that the heavenly Societies are according to them.

3815. That in the Spiritual World or Heaven there are no other consanguinities and affinities than those of love to the Lord and of love towards the neighbour, or what is the same, of good, has been evident to me from the fact that all the Societies that constitute Heaven, and that are innumerable, are most distinct from each other according to the degrees and differences of love and thence of faith; and also from the fact that they acknowledge each other there, not from any relationship that they had in the bodily life, but only from good and the truth thence derived . . .

4121. Good and truth themselves constitute that in the other life which on earth is called consanguinity and affinity, wherefore they correspond. . . Earthly brotherhood and relationship are dissipated in the other life, and unless they have been in a similar good on earth everyone comes into other brotherhoods . . .

4450. 'Join relationships with us, give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you'=a union of goods and truths. Ex.

4989. The conjunction of natural truth that is not spiritual with spiritual natural good is not given in internals, but only in externals, in which it appears as if there were conjunction, but there is only affinity. . . The 'garment' of Joseph=what is external through which there is as it were conjunction, or through which there is affinity.

5008. In ultimates there is affinity, but not any conjunction.

5530. Those things that are in the midst are called related, for love makes relationship, those more remote are connected.

6690. Scientific things in the Natural are disposed in continuous series . . . they cohere according to various affinities and propinquities.

6756. When the Church turned aside from good, and thence also from truth, they no longer called each other brethren from spiritual consanguinity and affinity, but only from natural consanguinity and affinity, and also from friendship.

—². The reason why in ancient times they were called brethren from spiritual affinity is that the new birth or regeneration made consanguinities and affinities in a higher degree than the natural birth.

9141. Goods with man are like generations on the earth . . . those which are not in the same house, or in the same family, but are still related, are what are understood by being 'in the field of another.'

10490. 'Neighbour' = what is conjoined to them, thus what is related, for relations are neighbours. . . good, truth, and things related to them . . .

10814^e. These also dwell in the Heavens distinguished into nations, families, and houses, although in Societies together, but according to spiritual affinities, which are of the good of love and the truth of faith.

H. 46[a]. That all affinities etc. in Heaven are from good, and according to its agreements and differences. Refs.

205. All in Heaven are consociated according to spiritual affinities, which are of good and truth in their order. It is so in the whole Heaven, in each Society, and in each house. Hence it is that Angels who are in similar good and truth know each other as relations and connections do on earth.

W. 7^e. Affinities and similitudes.

10. In the Spiritual World spaces appear equally as in the Natural World, consequently also distances, but they are appearances according to spiritual affinities which are of love and wisdom, or of good and truth. . . And since reception of love and wisdom makes affinity with the Lord, therefore the Heavens where the Angels are in closer affinity from reception, appear closer to Him . . .

279. According to affinities.

P. 338⁴. Hence it is that after death everyone comes into the society of his own, who are they who are in similar love, and that he knows them as relations and friends; and what is wonderful, when he meets and sees them, it is as if he had known them from infancy. There is a spiritual relationship and friendship that effect this.

M. 50. All who are in Heaven are consociated according to affinities and propinities of love, and have habitations according to these.

D. 3039. Relationships in the other life. Gen. art.

— Communication and acknowledgment, and thence association, are like relationships on earth; namely, that they are acknowledged as parents, as children, as brothers, as relations, and connections according to the differences . . . The consanguinities and affinities are of the love, and its differences, which are indefinite, and the communications, are so exquisite that they cannot be described. No regard is had to those who have been parents, children, relations, and connections on earth.

C. 76. Everyone is the neighbour according to spiritual affinity and relationship. Ex. Natural affinities perish after death, and are succeeded by spiritual affinities.

5 M. 15. The inhabitants of Heaven and the Church are consociated like relatives with domestics.

Affirm. Affirmare.

Affirmative. Affirmativus.

A. 2338. Evil Spirits, who are with man and induce temptation, strongly inspire what is negative, but good Spirits and Angels from the Lord in every way dispel this doubtfulness, and constantly hold him in hope, and at last confirm what is affirmative. Hence a man who is in temptation hangs between what is negative and what is affirmative. He who yields, remains in doubtfulness, and falls into what is negative; but he who conquers is indeed in doubtfulness, but still he who suffers himself to be raised up with hope remains steadfast in what is affirmative.

2568⁴. There are two principles, one that leads to all . . . insanity, the other to all intelligence and wisdom . . . The former is to deny all things, or to say in the heart that we cannot believe them until we are convinced by what we can apprehend or feel; this . . . is to be called the negative principle. The other principle is to affirm those things that are of doctrine from the Word, or to think and believe within ourselves that they are true because the Lord has said so; this principle . . . is to be called the affirmative principle. Ex. 2588².

—⁶. Moreover there are some who are in doubt before they deny, and there are some who are in doubt before they affirm . . . They who are in doubt before they affirm are they who incline to a life of good, and when they suffer themselves to be bent to this life by the Lord, then in proportion as they think about these things they affirm.

2588⁹. In proportion as anyone excels in talent and knowledge—scientia, and is in what is negative, he excels in insanity; but in proportion as anyone excels in talent and knowledge, and is in what is affirmative he excels in wisdom.

2718^e. Although the spiritual relatively to the celestial are in obscurity, they can still come from obscurity into light, if only they are willing to be in the affirmative that all good is of love to the Lord and of charity towards the neighbour . . .

2720³. 'And now swear to me by God, here' = affirmation.

—⁴. 'And Abraham said, I will swear' = all the affirmative.

3221. Angelic conversations are sometimes represented by clouds . . . affirmatives of truth by bright and rising clouds, negatives by dull and sinking clouds; affirmatives of what is false, by dusky and black clouds.

3394⁹. To those who are in the affirmative in relation to the Word, namely that it is to be believed, such a position (that the things of faith should be simply believed, without any rational sight) is hurtful . . . Sig.

[A.] 3427⁴. In proportion as anyone is in good of life . . . he is in intelligence, that is, in faith from the Lord. Hence it is that these cannot be otherwise than in the affirmative (concerning the inward sense of the Word) . . .

3913. 'Behold my maid Bilhah' = an affirming medium that is between natural truth and more inward truth.

—⁵. The first medium (of conjunction between the inward and the outward man) is the affirming or affirmative of internal truth, namely that it is so. When this affirmative takes place, then man is in the beginning of regeneration; good operates from within, and produces affirmation. This good cannot flow into what is negative, nor even into doubtfulness, before this affirmative takes place. Examp. . . When the affirmative takes place, there is an accession of innumerable things, and they are filled with the good that flows in; for good constantly flows in from the Lord, but where there is no affirmative, it is not received. The affirmative is therefore the first medium, and as it were the first habitation of the good flowing in from the Lord. 3914.

3923. This ('Dan') is the first general principle that is to be affirmed or acknowledged . . . for he who only affirms faith with himself, and not . . . charity, and if he does not affirm this through good of life . . . is not able any longer to taste the essence of faith. . . Affirmation as well as acknowledgment is the first general principle with the man who is being regenerated, but is the last with the man who has been regenerated. Sig.

—². That 'Dan' is the affirmative that must first be with the man who is being regenerated. Ill. 'Dan' here = the affirmative of truth, of which affirmative it is said that he 'shall be a serpent upon the way, and an adder upon the path,' when he reasons about truth from sensual things . . .

—³. 'A lion's whelp' = the first thing connected with truth, which is affirmation and acknowledgment.

—⁴. 'The neighing of horses heard from Dan' = ratiocination about truth from what is not affirmative. 'The land that trembled, and whose fulness they have consumed' = the Church and all things of the Church; for they who reason about truth from what is not affirmative, or from what is negative, destroy all things of faith.

—⁵. 'Dan' (in Ezek. xxvii. 19) = the first truths that are affirmed.

—⁸. The reason why 'Dan' is the first boundary as well as the last one, is that the affirmative of truth and of good is the first thing of all when faith and charity commence with a man, and the last when a man is in charity and thence in faith. Ill.

—⁹. Since there did not fall a lot to Dan among the inheritances of the rest of the tribes, but beyond their borders, this tribe was left out in Rev. vii., where the twelve thousands who were sealed are treated of; for they who are in the mere affirmative of truth and of good, and go no further, are not in the Lord's Kingdom. . . The worst men are able to know truths and goods and also to affirm them, but it is known from the life of what quality the affirmation is.

3928². After infernal delight has prevailed, it cannot be blunted and dissipated by any other means than by the affirmation and acknowledgment of the holy things of faith and of good of life, which is the first means, signified by 'Dan'; and then by temptation, which is the second means, and is signified by 'Naphtali,' for this means follows the other; for they who do not affirm and acknowledge what is good and true . . . cannot come into any combat of temptation . . .

3931. 'And he took Zilpah her handmaid' = an affirmative conjoining means.

3956⁹. 'A handmaid' = an affirmative means serving for the conjunction of the outward and the inward man. Thus before those things have been affirmed and acknowledged that are signified by the sons of the handmaids, there cannot exist any conjunction of good and truth, thus no mutual love either, for these affirmations necessarily precede.

4096⁶. Doubts, and sometimes even also negatives, are excited by the Spirits who are adjoined to man, but in proportion as affection prevails, he is led to the affirmative, and is at the same time confirmed in truths by those doubts, etc.

4097. The first state (of the separation of affections of truth from the good signified by 'Laban') is that the mind is kept in doubt, the second state is that doubt is dispelled by reasons, the third is affirmation, the last is act . . .

4638⁴. 'To sleep' = to cherish doubt. . . The 'prudent (virgins)' = doubt in which there is what is affirmative, 'the foolish (virgins)' = doubt in which there is what is negative.

4711. 'And he said, Behold me' = affirmation.

4760. To consult scientific things concerning Divine truth is to see from them whether it is so. But this is done in one way by those who are in the affirmative that truth is truth, for when these consult scientific things they confirm truth by them, and thus strengthen faith; but in another way by those who are in the negative . . . Examp.

4911. 'To acknowledge' = to affirm.

5356⁶. Temptations confirm goods and truths, for the man then fights against evils and falsities, and by conquering comes into a stronger affirmative.

5558. Such are they who constitute the cutaneous glands; but there are two kinds of them; one that affirm because it appears flowing, from which they conjecture that as there is no resistance, it agrees with the heavenly form, consequently with truth, and so that it is affirmed; the other kind that affirm audaciously that it is so, although they do not know it.

6023. Scientific things are ruled by truths when truth is acknowledged because it is so said in the Lord's Word, and then the scientific things that affirm are accepted, and those that oppose are removed; thus does truth dominate in its affirmatives, those things that do not affirm being rejected . . .

6047³. Afterwards, when he has been confirmed, and thus is in the affirmative from the Word that these things are truths of faith, then it is allowable for him to confirm them by all scientific things that are with him, of whatever name and nature, for then, since the affirmative reigns universally, he accepts the scientific things that agree, and rejects the scientific things that disagree on account of the fallacies that are in them.

6383². By 'Zebulon' are here meant those who believe doctrinal things from the Word, thus those with whom something affirmative universally reigns, and yet their faith has life not in truths but in scientific things, for they apply scientific things to doctrinal things, and thus fortify their affirmative. 6384.

6479. They who are in the affirmative, that is, with whom the affirmative universally reigns, reject the fallacious scruples that are against truths, and if there is anything that they do not apprehend, reject it to the sides, and say that as yet they do not understand it, and still remain in the faith of truth.

6519. Affirmation signified.

7313. They who are in infestations are encompassed around with falsities, and are driven about like a reed by the wind, thus from doubt into what is affirmative, and from what is affirmative into doubt; hence when they are newly come up from that state, they are in obscurity.

9250. 'To be a witness of violence' = non-affirmation of such things as are contrary to good of charity.

H. 356 App.⁷. It is allowable for those who are in the affirmative concerning truths of faith, to confirm them intellectually by means of scientific things, but not for those who are in the negative. Refs. N. 51⁵.

T. 333². This discussing rarely ends in an affirmative of faith . . .

D. 3614. (An affirmative state of mind contrasted with a negative one.)

4533. On the universal affirmative.

— There is only a universal affirmative with which man is imbued as to truths by the Lord, as that the Word is the Word, that the Lord is the Lord, etc. When a man is in it, although he knows only dimly that this is so, innumerable affirming considerations are insinuated by the Lord.

4534. The contrary is the case with those who are in contrary affirmatives or affirmatives of what is false . . .

4535. True affirmatives can be confirmed even by many fallacies . . .

4536. The affirmatives of childhood are either confirmed by one thing after another even to adult age, and the persons are regenerated, or they decrease, and become by slow degrees doubting affirmatives, and then negatives.

D. Min. 458^o. On a doubtful affirmative and a doubtful negative. See under DOUBT at this ref.

E. 349^e. The Lord confirms the truths that an Angel or a man speaks as from himself by an affirmative in his heart that does not rise manifestly into his thought.

Afflatus. Afflatus.

Breathe or Blow. Afflare.

A. 1270². (Antediluvians) assailed me to slay me by means of a suffocating afflatus, that was like a fell nightmare.

7359. Spirits from Mars came to me, and applied themselves to my left temple, and there breathed their discourse upon me, but I did not understand it. . . It was like a very soft air. At first it breathed upon the left temple, and upon the left ear above; and the afflatus went thence to the left eye, and a little to the right [of it], and then flowed down, especially from the left eye, to the lips, and when it had reached the lips, it entered through the mouth, and through a way within the mouth, in fact through the Eustachian tube, into the brain. When the afflatus arrived there, I understood their discourse, and was permitted to speak with them.

8629. A certain Spirit rising up from the Lower Earth came to me . . . he was cold, as was manifestly felt from his afflatus.

10588. The lips (of the inhabitants of a fourth Earth in the starry heaven) are moved not only through influx of ideas into their fibres, but also through a pulmonic afflatus inwardly.

T. 124. If Jehovah God were only to blow upon those who are in Hell He would slay them in a moment.

503. When the humour incited them . . .

D. 3496. Those who pertain to the outermost coats of the left eye. [Their] afflatus is slightly cool; a cooler one is now felt chiefly in the region of the left knee.

3555. It was afterwards shown me of what quality they (the lowest class of the people) at last become, by means of an afflatus from them into my face, as well as into the front parts of the breast, which was cooling, but only slightly so. I have also felt one that was not cooling, but verging to heat, but whether from the same or from others I know not.

Afflict. Affligere.

Affliction. Afflictio.

See under OPPRESS—opprimere.

A. 34^e. 'Day of affliction' = his miserable state in the other life.

1846. 'They shall afflict them' = their grievous temptations.

— 'To afflict' or 'affliction' = persecution, thus temptation. Ill. 1851. 1947^o.

1875. 'Lead us not into temptation' . . . The idea of temptation and of evil was rejected by the good Spirits that were near, until nothing but good remained . . . of which good were formed innumerable ideas . . . how good comes from man's affliction, and still affliction is from man and his evil . . .

[A. 1875.] 'To humble oneself' is expressed in the original tongue by a word that sigs. to afflict. That to afflict oneself = to compel oneself, may be evident from many places in the Word. 1947.

1947. 'Because Jehovah hath heard thine affliction' = when she submitted herself. To humble and to afflict oneself is to submit oneself to the power of the inward man.

—⁶. Affliction is the taming and subjugation of evils and falsities that rise up from the outward man into the rational man . . . thus it is not any thrusting down of oneself into poverty and misery . . .

2603. Gentiles . . . who believe that no one can come into Heaven except through punishments and afflictions . . .

3755³. 'Then there shall be great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world even till now, nor shall be' = the utmost degree of perversion and vastation of the Church as to good and truth, which is profanation. Ex.

3864. 'Jehovah hath seen my affliction' = a state of arriving at good. 'Affliction' = temptation, and since this is a means by which we arrive at good, 'my affliction' here = a state of arriving from truth, which is outward, at good, which is inward.

4060. 'Immediately after the tribulation of those days' = the state of the Church as to the truth that is of faith. The desolation of truth is here and there called 'affliction.'

5356. 'In the land of my affliction' = where he had endured temptations.

6660. 'To afflict them with burdens' = to become more oppressive through servitude.

6663. 'The more they afflicted them the more they multiplied' = truths grew according to infestations. 'To afflict' = infestation.

6851. 'And Jehovah said, Seeing I have seen the affliction of my people' = mercy towards those who are of the Spiritual Church after infestations by falsities.

6897. 'I will make you go up from the affliction of Egypt' = elevation and deliverance from infestation by false scientific things.

7067. 'He had seen their affliction' = after such great temptations.

9196. 'Thou shalt not afflict and oppress a sojourner' = that they who will to be instructed in truths and goods of faith are not to be infested with falsities of faith and evils of life.

9200. 'To afflict,' when said of those who will to be instructed in truths and to be led to good, = to defraud. 9201.

R. 33. 'In tribulation, and in the kingdom and in the patient expectation of Jesus Christ' = those things which in the Church have been infested by evils and falsities, but which are to be removed by the Lord at His coming. By 'tribulation' is meant the state of the Church when there are no longer any goods of charity and truths of faith, but evils and falsities in their stead. Ill. E.47, Ex. and Ill.

95. ('I have known thy) tribulation and poverty' = that they are in falsities, and thence not in goods. . . 'Tribulation' is predicated of falsities.

101. 'Ye shall have tribulation ten days' = that this will last a full time, that is, so long as they will to remain in falsities. 'Tribulation' here = infestation, thus temptation. E.124.

137. 'Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and they that commit adultery with her into great tribulation' = that thus they will be left in their doctrine, with falsifications, and that they will be grievously infested by falsities. (=grievous temptations with those who addict themselves to their falsities. E.164.)

377. 'These are they who have come out of great tribulation' = those who have been in temptations, and have fought against evils and falsities. (This is 'Tribulation' in the E.)

915³. 'O thou afflicted' = the Church to be established by the Lord with the Gentiles.

M. 80³. 'Tribulation' (in Matt. xxiv.) = the state of the Church when infested by evils and falsities.

B. 74. That the infestation by falsities, and thence the consummation of every truth, or desolation, at this day in Christian Churches, is meant by 'great tribulation' (in Matt. xxiv.). Gen. art.

T. 179. That hence is that abomination of desolation, and tribulation such as has not been nor shall be, which the Lord has foretold in Dan. and the Gospels, and in the Revelation. Gen. art.

r80. 'Great tribulation . . .' = infestation of truth by falsities even until there is not any truth remaining that is not falsified and consummated.

D. 4822. Affections of evil and falsity . . . are not heard as cries in Heaven, except when they penetrate to the good, and afflict or oppress them . . .

E. 7. 'In the world ye shall have tribulation.' Here 'peace' is opposed to 'tribulation,' because by 'tribulation' is signified infestation by evils and falsities, which is with those who are in Divine peace so long as they live in the world, for the flesh, with which they are encompassed, lusts for those things that are of the world, and hence there is tribulation.

555⁵. 'Afflicted in spirit' is said of the Church when in grief from affection or desire for truths.

717⁵. 'To be afflicted and tossed with tempests' is said on account of the falsities by which the Gentiles are infested and carried hither and thither.

750¹¹. 'The hungry' = those who desire good; 'the afflicted,' those who desire truth.

Afflux. Affluxus. Flow to. Affluere.

A. 3646. The case with brute animals in respect to influx and correspondences is similar to what it is with men, namely, that there is with them an influx from the Spiritual World and an afflux from the Natural World, by which two they are held together and live . . .

7955. 'And (Pharaoh) called Moses and Aaron by night'=afflux of truth from the Divine in that state. 'He called'=presence and influx, here afflux, because it is said of those who are in a state of damnation. . . These are not able to receive any interior influx of truth and good, but an exterior one, which is afflux.

7990. They are said to be in spiritual captivity who as to interior things are kept by the Lord in good and truth, but as to exterior things by Hell in evil and falsity . . . and then the Lord, through influx through interior things, fights for them against the afflux of evil and falsity from the Hells. They are then as it were held captive, for through the influx from the Lord they will be in good and truth, but through afflux from the Hells they seem to themselves not to be able.

8137³. The evil flee from the presence of the Lord, that is, from the presence of the good and truth that are from Him, for on the mere afflux of these they shudder and are tortured.

9335. 'And the beast of the field shall be multiplied upon thee'=afflux of falsities from delights of the loves of self and of the world. 'To be multiplied,' when predicated of the hasty removal of evils and falsities, =afflux.

—². The reason why falsities from those loves flow to [the mind] through the hasty removal of evils and falsities. Ex.

H. 543. The Hells are governed in general through a general afflux of Divine good and Divine truth from the Heavens, by which the general effort flowing forth from the Hells is bridled and kept within limits; and also by a special afflux from each Heaven, and from each Society of Heaven.

— . The Africans are more interior than the rest.

75. (Ready reception by the Africans there of the doctrine of the Divine Human.) . . . The Africans think more inwardly spiritually than the rest.

76. Since the Africans are of this character in this world also, there is now a revelation among them which goes from the middle around but not as far as the sea. They acknowledge our Lord for the God of Heaven and earth . . . The things in the Doctrine of the New Jerusalem concerning the Lord, the Word, and those in the Doctrine of Life for the New Jerusalem are orally dictated by angelic Spirits to the inhabitants of that continent—telluris. 4777. It was afterwards shown in dim vision how that Heavenly Doctrine would proceed in Africa, namely towards the interior of Africa, but not to the middle of it, and then it would bend itself to those inhabitants who are in the interior of Africa, but nearer to the Mediterranean Sea, and so it would advance lengthwise, but not to the coasts, and then after a time it would turn itself back through an interior tract even towards Egypt, and also would afterwards advance thence to some in Asia under the Empire of the Turks, and also into Asia round about. Hence the Angels were glad that the Lord's Advent is now at hand, and that the Church, which now perishes in Europe, will be established in Africa, and that this will take place from the Lord alone through revelations, and not through emissaries from Christians. 5517. I said something to them about the Lord; they said that they await information, and that they love to know truths. . . I afterwards heard that a great number of Spirits and Angels who had been instructed about Divine truths from the Heavenly Doctrine had been sent thither.

[D.] 5518. The African nation are able to be in illustration more than the other nations of this earth, because it is their nature to think interiorly, and thence to receive truths and acknowledge that they are truths. . . The Africans are they who in our earth are of the genius in which are the Angels in the Celestial Kingdom. J. (Post.) 119.

5518³. The Africans live according to their religion and its laws, which they love, and therefore they are of such a character, namely interior.

—². The best of them are at the side towards the sea, more than half of the region, with a form like this [see figure]. Des. . . The worst are still further towards where Egypt is placed. . . They said that in the whole of that great tract DE they all worship the Lord and are instructed by many who communicate with Angels, not by speech with them, but by interior perception, and that the former are their instructors, whom they well know from others.

—³. They also said that Europeans are not admitted among them . . .

—⁴. They afterwards received the Word and read it, but at first did not perceive anything holy, afterwards more and more holily, and then they gave it to their instructors, who said that they had it, but had not divulged the fact. They said that they dictated it to men in Africa, with whom they have communication, as the Lord leads. Hence it is evident that there is now revelation there. J. (Post.) 123.

—⁵. There was afterwards given them the work on Heaven and Hell, which they received and preserved; also the Last Judgment, the Earths in the Universe, and the White Horse and afterwards the Doctrine of the New Jerusalem, for them to choose what they saw to be useful.

J. (Post.) 115. On the Africans. . . They detest their blackness, knowing that their souls are white.

116. I have heard it announced that a Church is at this day instituted with many in Africa, and that at this day revelations take place, and that they are receptive of the Heavenly Doctrine, especially concerning the Lord.

118. The Africans are more receptive of the Heavenly Doctrine than others on this earth, because they freely receive the doctrine concerning the Lord. They have it as it were implanted in them that the Lord will appear altogether as a man. They are in the faculty of receiving truths of faith, and especially its goods, because they are of a celestial nature . . .

120. (Various ideas of the Africans concerning God.)

121. It was said that in a certain region of Africa there has been from ancient times a book written by correspondences in a similar way to that in which the Word is written with us, and which they regard as holy.

124. The best and wisest are in the interior of Africa, those who are not good are near the Mediterranean Sea, near Egypt and the Cape of Good Hope. The mountains where are the good ones of Ethiopia are towards the middle. . . At this day some speak with Africans in the world, instructing them orally; this speech falls with them especially into their interior perception, and they perceive the influx, and thus receive revelations with illustration. Such is the speech that takes place with the instructors.

9251. 'To be after many' = to be with many, thus to be consociated, for in the original tongue, 'to be after,' 'to go after,' and 'to walk after' are mentioned, and the meaning is to be with and to follow, thus also to be consociated. Ill. 9252.

10550. 'To look after him (Moses)' = to see what is external of the Word, of the Church and of worship, for what is 'before' = what is within, and what is 'after' = what is without.

H. 223. No one is allowed to stand behind the pulpit there; if anyone were there the preacher would be confused.

R. 42. John said that he heard a voice 'behind him.' . . . They who do not approach the Lord alone regard Him and His Word as behind them, and not before them.

E. 55. 'Behind me' = manifestly. Ex.

After Death. Post mortem. See LIFE AFTER DEATH, RESUSCITATION.

A. 1112. They who have been in goods and truths of faith, and have thence acquired conscience and life of charity, are elevated into Heaven by the Lord immediately after death.

8858. The dominant principle of life . . . cannot be changed after death.

8911. Man is such as his will is, and such he remains after death, because death is not the end of life, but its continuation.

8918⁴. Everyone comes after death into that Hell or into that Heaven in which he was in the world.

9094². Man comes into angelic wisdom after the rejection of the body, that is, after death . . . S.75.

10622². Everyone is tolerated among the good . . . when he comes into the other life, which takes place immediately after death.

10749. The life of man cannot be changed after death . . . N.239. III.

H. 345. Those who die adults have a plane acquired from the . . . material world . . . it serves their thought after death for an ultimate plane. . . Hence it is that such as that plane is, and such as is the correspondence of the Rational with what is therein, such is the man after death.

363. Every man's ruling affection or love remains with him after death, nor is it extirpated to eternity. Ex.

453. That man after death is in a perfect human form. Gen. art.

461. That man after death is in all sense, memory, thought and affection, in which he was in the world . . . Gen. art.

470. That man is after death as his life was in the world. Gen. art.

479. That man after death is his own love or his own will. Gen. art.

480. That man after death remains to eternity such as he is as to his will or reigning love. Gen. art.

481². All, as soon as they come after death into the World of Spirits, are explored as to their quality, and are attached to those who are in similar love . . .

485. That the delights of every one's life are after death turned into corresponding delights. Gen. art.

487. He who is in the science (of correspondences) may know his state after death, if only he knows his love . . .

491. On the first state of man after death. Gen. art. 5 M.4. Gen. art.

— There are some who do not pass through these states, but immediately after death are either taken up into Heaven or cast into Hell. Ex.

J. 36². After the life of the body man rejects what does not agree with his love. M.36².

50². All, of whatever religion, after death are first conducted to those whom they had worshipped in the world . . .

56. Every one after death is in a like life to that in which he had been in the world; this cannot be changed . . .

59³. Every one after death retains his religiosity that he had imbued in the world . . .

C. J. 32. Man is equally man after death, and is so completely man that he is not aware of his having left the former world . . . T.160⁷. 607^e. Ex.

S. 17². 'To go to them that sell, and buy oil' = to procure good of love from others after death. E.252^e.

93. Every man after death is instructed by Angels, and they who see truths are received . . . for it is given to every one to see truths spiritually after death . . .

Life 27. After death man himself casts out those things (knowledges that are without life) because they do not agree with the love of his will.

45. When everything that is on the outside is put off, as takes place after death, then an evil man first of all casts out truth his friend in the world . . .

63². Such a man after death, although he has not committed murders, adulteries, etc., still hankers to commit them, and also does so, when the external . . . is taken away. All concupiscence remains with man after death. . . But they who do not will to commit murder, adultery, etc. . . these after death, when the external . . . is taken away, act as one with Heaven.

65. They who live (according to the precepts they have) from religion, receive truths when instructed by Angels after death.

111^e. If a man abstains from adulteries (from merely external reasons) he commits them in spirit . . . wherefore after death, when he becomes a Spirit, he openly speaks in favour of them.

F. 21^e. He who loves the neighbour from charity conjoins himself with his good and not with his person, except in so far and so long as he is in good . . . but he who loves another from mere friendship, conjoins himself with his person, and at the same time with his evil; after death the latter can hardly be separated from the person which is in evil. See below, T.446.

30. Many . . . who have looked to the Lord in their life, and have avoided evils from religion, but have been withheld from thinking about truths by worldly cares and business, and also by lack of truth with those who teach . . . after death, when they become Spirits, and are instructed by Angels, acknowledge truths and receive them with joy.

W. 249². They who . . . remain natural . . . after death become menials and servants . . .

252². The natural man with whom the spiritual degree has been opened does not know that his spiritual mind is filled by the Lord with thousands of arcana of wisdom, and with thousands of delights of love, and that he will come into them after death, when he becomes an Angel. Ex.

[W.] 253². The lot after death of those with whom the spiritual degree has not been opened, and yet has not been closed up is that they are in the lowest parts of Heaven, where they sometimes suffer hard things.

388. The mind is the man himself, for the primary texture of the human form . . . is from first principles from the brain continued through the nerves . . . it is this form into which man comes after death . . .

390°. Most are in the Spiritual World two days after (the death of the body).

397. All the understanding that is above man's own proper love is removed after death.

P. 17. In the world, man can hardly come into the conjunction . . . of good and truth, or of evil and falsity, . . . but every man comes into one or the other after death, because he can then no longer be reformed and regenerated . . . 329.

34². Man is in the spiritual degree of wisdom after death . . .

99°. The adult who does not come into freedom itself and rationality itself in the world, can never come into them after death, for then the state of his life remains to eternity such as it had been in the world.

179. Hence man does not know his lot after death.

223. Devils . . . when in a state of wisdom laughed at insanity, and when in a state of insanity laughed at wisdom. A man who has been such in the world, after death when he becomes a Spirit is for the most part let into alternate states of wisdom and insanity, in order that he may see the latter from the former.

231⁷. The life's love, which is also the reigning love, remains with everyone after death, and cannot be taken away. M. 34. Gen. art.

277a. If evil is not removed in the world it cannot be removed afterwards—postea. . . The ultimates of life which man takes with him after death are quiescent . . .

278a°. If a man is in an infernal Society he can only be brought out of it by the Lord according to the laws of His Divine Providence, among which is this, that the man should see that he is there, and will to come out, and should endeavour to do so from himself; this a man can do while he is in the world, but not after death, for he then remains to eternity in the Society into which he had inserted himself in the world. 307².

296³. So long as he lives in the world an evil man does not feel the bonds with which he is tied round . . . but after death these bonds become hard and stinging.

326⁵. They who deny God in the world deny him after death.

328⁹. There is given to every man after death an opportunity of amending his life if possible . . .

333°. Foreseeing and providing every one's place after death.

R. 17². All truth is sown in the inward man and rooted in the outward: this root the man who has done truths bears with him after death, but not the man who has known and acknowledged them with faith alone.

549. The state after death of those who come into the other life. Des. and Sig.

906². Everyone after death comes into his own place.

M. 4². Every man who has longed for Heaven, and has had fixed ideas about the joys there, is introduced after death into the joys of his imagination.

29°. The state of a man who conjoins himself with the Lord through a life according to His precepts is more blessed and happy after death than before it. Ex.

36². After death, man is not his own thought, but his own affection and thought thence derived.

46. That the love of the sex remains with every man after death such as it had been inwardly . . . in the world. Gen. art.

— . Every love follows a man after death, because it is the esse of his life, and the reigning love, which is the head of the rest, remains with every man to eternity, and with it all the subordinate loves. Ex.

48a³. Every man after death becomes such as he has been inwardly . . .

—°. The putting off of the external and the putting on of the internal after death described.

54. All married partners who are merely natural are separated after death. Ex. 320.

—². Married partners of whom one is spiritual and the other natural are also separated after death . . .

524. To everyone after death is imputed the evil in which he is; in like manner the good. Gen. art. B. 110.

—². That the life of everyone remains with him after death. Ex. B. 110².

T. 103. Every man after death lays aside the Natural that he took from the mother, and retains the Spiritual . . . from the father, together with a certain limbus around it from the purest things of nature . . .

110². After departure from the world no one is able to believe anything except what he has impressed upon himself through confirmation . . .

120. Every man after death comes into the World of Spirits, and then seems to himself to be just like what he was before. (His first experience there described.)

281. The states of men after death (described in succession). R. 153.

446. Friendship of love tied with a man without regard to his spiritual quality is detrimental after death. Gen. art.

566°. The door (between thought and speech) is opened with everyone after death, and then his quality appears.

6033. That the nature of man after death cannot be taken away, but may be broken and subdued.

D. Min. 4645. (Why man cannot change after death.)

J. (Post.) 230. After death the good are not let into their evils, but the evil are.

E. 151². All men are after death turned to their own loves . . . Refs.

193². It is the state of thought from the spirit, and not that from the memory that remains after death.

204³. That only remains with man after death which is of his love . . .

411. The delights of life remain with everyone after death.

654³⁰. Such are deprived of all knowledge of good and truth after death. Sig.

860. Impossibility of receiving faith after death.

Conversation with Angels 11. Man's state as to will or love is not changed after death . . . but his state as to understanding is changed . . .

Again. Iterum.

A. 2550. This being said again = further thought. 2688. 2808.

5242. These things are mentioned again for the sake of the series.

8060. This being said again = that it shall altogether be done. 8061.

Against. Contra.

A. 1395. When the persons were presented against whom they had felt hatred, there resulted a lamentable state, for whatever men have thought and plotted against another stands forth.

1949². The man who . . . is in truth alone . . . is against all: (like Ishmael).

2349². Here is described the first state of those . . . who are against the good of charity, and consequently against the Lord . . . 2401.

3420⁶. He wills not to know truths, for they are against his life, and the things that are against his life he also denies.

4330⁶. It was thus shown how the men of this earth are at this day against the inward man.

5084. Hence it is that . . . the natural man is against the spiritual . . .

6311. Sirens . . . being against all spiritual and celestial things, cannot see other Spirits except those who are in sensual lumen.

7290⁴. There reigns universally a negative against the Divine influx and government.

8625. 'The hand against' anyone = to do violence.

H. 558a. They account as enemies all who are against them and their evils.

N. 264. On those who are against the Word.

W. 335. The love of parents for their children.

P. 331. The Lord cannot act against the laws of the Divine Providence, because to act against them would be to act against His Divine love and against His Divine wisdom, thus against Himself. Gen. art.

T. 134³. Who cannot see that these things are diametrically contrary to the Divine Essence itself, that is, contrary to His Divine love and wisdom, and at the same time contrary to His omnipotence and omnipresence? No good master could act thus against his domestics . . .

Agate. Achates.

A. 9870. 'A lazure, an agate, and an amethyst' = spiritual love of good, as is evident from their colour, for azure from white signifies spiritual good . . . That an agate is of an azure colour, is not so well known, for in the original tongue it is not [made] known what kind of a stone this is, whether an agate, a turquoise, or some other.

T. 609. These three degrees are distinguished from each other as are in purity and goodness a ruby, a sapphire and an agate.

— 'An agate' = natural good, which is the good of the ultimate Heaven.

Age. Aetas. See PERIOD.

A. 1113. Girls . . . who have not yet reached that age in which they could judge about such a life . . .

1429. Unless it had involved spiritual and celestial things . . . it would not have happened at that age of Abraham.

1854. How the Angels regard the ages of man that are mentioned in the Word. 3254.

2623³. 'Ages' = states.

2636². Man cannot be regenerated except in adult age . . .

2905². The Church is circumstanced as the ages of man, of which the first is infancy, the second adolescence, the third adult age, the fourth old age. 4672. 10134².

3308. Good and truth are circumstanced like offspring, namely are conceived, are in the womb, are born, grow up, and advance in age even to the last one. Ex.

3603³. In his first age man knows only by memory the things that are in the Word . . . In his second age, when he is more grown up . . . he begins to reflect upon them from his own thought . . . In his third age, if he is one of those who can be regenerated, he begins to think about use . . . And in his fourth age, which is the age of his regeneration, he loves the Word, and doctrinal things that are from the Word, that is, truth, for the sake of good of life.

4005⁶. States of life are in general varied according to ages. 4063³. Enum.

4063³. Every age has its own delights, and is successively introduced through them into the things that belong to the age following . . .

4345⁴. As man advances in age he thus insinuates particulars into the generals of infancy, and then into particulars he insinuates singulars . . .

—⁵. When man is being regenerated . . . he passes as it were through ages. Enum. 4377. 4379.

4551². There is such a removal and rejection of falsities from man's first childhood even to his last age . . .

4901. All times of age=states.

—². The progressions of life of Spirits and Angels are not distinguished into ages . . .

5126². (Man's progress through his several ages described). 5135².

5291⁴. 'He who received two talents'=those who in advanced age have adjoined charity to faith.

5342². When the age of childhood commences, he then by degrees puts off the state of innocence . . .

—³. From this age he is therefore imbued with truths . . .

5376. When he matures in age he begins either to confirm in himself the truths of faith that he had learned, or to deny them . . .

5432. Truths of faith of the Church which are called doctrinal, when learned in the first age, are taken up and committed to memory just like other scientific things . . .

5647². The external or natural man reigns from the first age of life . . .

5774². As a child, man thinks . . . from sensual things, advancing in age he thinks . . . from scientific things, and afterwards from truths; this is the way to the judgment into which man grows by age.

8851. The age of men there (in Jupiter) is for the most part thirty years, according to the years of our earth. D. 546.

10225. Man's first state is from birth to the fifth year of his age, this state . . . is called infancy; the second state is from the fifth year of age even to the twentieth, this state is a state of instruction and of science, and is called childhood; the third state is from the twentieth year of age to the sixtieth, which is a state of intelligence, and is called adolescence, young manhood and manhood; the fourth and last state is from the sixtieth year of age and upwards, which is a state of wisdom, and of innocence in wisdom. Sig. M. 185.

P. 324¹. I have spoken with those who lived many centuries ago . . . and they were all seen as men in middle age.

332³. Correspondence of the (ages) of man with the vegetation of a tree.

M. 42². We have lived blessed in Heaven ever since the . . . golden age, and perpetually in a like flower of our age to that in which you see us to-day. 137³.

—³. The husband appeared in middle age, between adolescence and young manhood.

73. The last or iron age . . . began from those writers . . . who were called Sophi.

250. Inequality of age induces cold in marriages . . .

411². Infants in Heaven do not advance beyond the first age.

444². They who die infants, grow up in Heaven, and when they attain the stature of youths of eighteen in the world, and of maidens of fifteen, they stand still in it.

T. 762². From these progressions (of the four Churches) according to order, the wise ancients inferred four ages of the world, the first of which they called golden, the second silver, the third copper, and the fourth iron. Moreover the Church appears before the Lord as one man, and this Grand Man passes through ages of his own as the little man does, to wit from infancy to adolescence, and through this to young manhood, and at last into old age; and when it dies it rises again.

D. 5002. (Why men live to various ages.)

Age. Saeculum. See AGE—Aetas.

A. 433. 'An age' in the Word is ten years.

815². They live there (under Gehenna) for ages . . .

900. The greatest and least times are commonly distinguished in the Word into three or seven, and are called either 'days,' 'weeks,' 'months,' 'years,' or 'ages.'

947. Some had remained there (in an infernal tun) for twenty ages.

1041. 'An age'=what is perpetual.

1551. Hence was derived the fact that times were likened to these metals, and were called the Golden, Silver, Bronze, and Iron Ages . . . the Golden Age was the time of the Most Ancient Church . . . the Silver Age was the time of the Ancient Church, . . . the Bronze Age was the time of the succeeding Church, to which there succeeded the Iron Age. P. 328³.

1825. The last time of the Church is signified by the 'third day,' the 'third week,' the 'third month,' the 'third year,' and by the 'third age,' which are the same.

10248. The reason why 'for ever'=what is eternal is that by an age is meant duration even to the end . . . the same word also in the original tongue by which 'an age' is expressed signifies eternity.

— The reason an age is what is eternal is that 'an age' when said of the Church sigs. duration even to the end. Hence when it is said of Heaven, where there is no end, and when of the Lord, it sigs. what is eternal. It is in general predicated of every Church, but especially of the Celestial Church. 'An age' further sigs. the world and life there; and also the life after the former one to eternity. (All these significations of 'an age' fully illustrated.)

10355³. The times called the Silver Age described.

4263^e. Every unit consists of various things, and this through heavenly harmony and concord.

4479. 'These men are peaceable with us' = agreement, here, as to doctrinal things.

5182. In the other life there must be concord and unanimity of all in order that they may be a one . . . to this end the thought and speech of one must agree with those of others. It is fundamental that thought and speech in themselves should agree in everyone in a Society . . .

6408. The blessedness of the affections cannot inflow into the bodily sense . . . unless natural and sensual things have been reduced to agreement with interior ones.

6525. 'All the elders of the land of Egypt' = the things that agree with truth . . . 'Elders' = chief things of wisdom, thus the things that agree with good, here, that agree with truth, for the things that agree with good also agree with truth.

6792. 'Moses willed to dwell with the man' = that they would agree. . . 'To dwell with anyone,' is to live together, thus to agree.

8995. 'If she be evil in the eyes of her lord' = if affection of truth from natural delight does not agree with spiritual truth.

9026. The agreement of the truths of faith with the things that belong to the literal sense of the Word is here treated of.

9257. 'When thou seest the ass of him that hateth thee lying under his burden' = falsity not agreeing with the good of the Church.

9258. There are falsities that agree with the good of the Church, and there are falsities that do not agree with it. Ex.

9376. 'Seventy of the elders of Israel' = chief truths of the Church or of doctrine that agree with good.

W. 213. Homogeneous and concordant.

214^e. All homogeneous, that is, concordant.

T. 99. Unanimous and concordant.

Ahola. Ohola.

A. 6534^e. 'Ahola' = the perverted Spiritual Church, which is Samaria . . . 1368.

E. 355³⁰. 'Ahola,' or Samaria = the Church where truths have been falsified.

5557. 'Ahola and Aholibah,' or 'the tent and habitation of God' = Heaven and the Church where there are Divine truth and Divine good . . . E. 576⁶.

654⁶⁷. 'Ahola' which is Samaria, = the Spiritual Church, and 'Aholibah,' which is Jerusalem, = the Celestial Church.

Aholiab. Aholiab.

A. 10329⁴. 'Aholiab' = those who are in the good and truth of faith. 10335.

Aholibah. Aholibah. See AHOLA.

A. 6534^e. 'Aholibah' = the perverted Celestial Church, which is Jerusalem.

Ahusath. Under Abimelech.

Ai. Aj.

A. 1401. 'The mountain that had Bethel on the sea and Ai on the east' = the Lord's fourth state.

1453. 'Bethel on the sea and Ai on the east' = that as yet His state was obscure, namely as to knowledges of celestial and spiritual things.

—. 'Ai' = knowledges of worldly things.

1557. 'Between Bethel and Ai' = the celestial and the worldly things of knowledges. . . 'Ai' = light from worldly things.

E. 4357. 'Ai' = doctrine of truth.

655⁸. 'Ai' = knowledges of good; in the opposite, confirmations of evil.

Aid. Opitulatio.

T. 425. To give aid to the needy. 459⁸. 654.

442^e. Aid for the needy.

Aid. Ops.

A. 1327⁶. 'All the riches, all the labour,' etc. = knowledges of faith.

1488. 'Wealth and riches' = the wealth and riches of wisdom and intelligence, thus knowledges.

1694. 'All the wealth of Sodom and Gomorrah and all their food' = evil and falsity; evil is here sig. by 'wealth,' and falsity by 'food.' Spiritual wealth and riches, relatively to the good, are nothing but goods and truths with which they are endowed and enriched by the Lord. Thus wealth and riches, relatively to the evil, are nothing but evils and falsities that they have acquired for themselves. 1717.

1820³. Unless the Lord rendered aid . . .

2338^e. In this combat man seems to press the Lord . . . to render aid . . .

2378. 'The men put forth the hand' = the Lord's powerful aid.

3048³. 'To carry their wealth upon the shoulder of young asses' = knowledges that belong to their Rational.

—⁵. 'The wealth of the nations' = the immense abundance of natural good.

6389. Such pass by those who most need aid.

6403. 'I wait for Thy salvation O Jehovah' = unless the Lord renders aid. Ex.

6737. When they who are in perception feel compassion they know that they are admonished by the Lord to render aid.

6780. 'And Moses rose up and helped them' = aid from the truths that belong to Law from the Divine.

6803. 'And God heard their groaning' = aid. . . 'To hear' = to obey, but when it is said of the Lord, it = to provide and render aid, for he whom the Lord hears He renders aid to. 6852.

7377. They who aspire to wealth not for the sake of wealth, but for the sake of the necessities of life . . .

8440. 'Because He hath heard your murmurings' = on account of the suffering in temptation, that He may render aid.

8567. 'Why tempt ye Jehovah?' = that they are against the Divine, of whose aid they despaired.

8576. 'And Jehovah said to Moses' = aid.

8591. 'Is Jehovah in the midst of us?' = they almost believed that the Lord does not render aid to His own.

8719. The reason why the Lord acts mediately through Heaven is not that He needs their aid, but that the Angels there may have functions and duties . . .

8854. He who loves wealth above all things, whether money or possessions . . . N. 55.

9202. 'If crying he shall cry unto Me' = supplication to the Lord for aid. Ex.

9219. 'Because I am merciful' = that from Him is all aid, from mercy.

10160. The most ancients . . . knew not what it was . . . to accumulate wealth beyond the necessities of life,

10227⁴. 'Riches and wealth' = those things that are of intelligence and wisdom, thus also knowledges of truth and of good, which are also called spiritual wealth and riches. Ill.

H. 565. The love of the world is to will to draw to self by any arts whatever the wealth of others, and to set the heart on riches. N. 76.

— . But this love is manifold; there is the love of wealth for the sake of being advanced to honours . . . there is the love of honours and dignities in order to gain wealth, there is the love of wealth for the sake of various uses with which they are delighted in the world; there is the love of wealth merely for the sake of wealth . . . and so on. The end for the sake of which wealth is sought, is called the use, and it is the end or use from which the love has its quality. N. 77.

W. 93. Subsidiary aid. See SUBSIDIARY.

P. 183⁴. The Lord never draws a man away from seeking honours, and from procuring wealth; but He draws him away from the desire to seek honours for the sake of mere eminence . . . and from acquiring wealth for the sake of mere opulence, or for the sake of wealth . . .

216. Eternal things relate to spiritual honours and wealth, which are of love and wisdom, in Heaven. Gen. art. The natural man . . . calls honours and wealth Divine blessings, and when he sees that the evil . . . are exalted to honours and promoted to wealth, he thinks . . . if the Divine Providence governed all things it would heap honours and wealth upon the good. . . He does not see that honours and wealth may be blessings and also may be curses. . . That honours and wealth are also given by the Devil . . .

217. Honours and wealth are blessings, and they are curses. Gen. art. They are blessings with those who do not set their heart on them, and they are curses with those who do set their hearts on them. To set the heart on them, is to love them in themselves, and not to set the heart on them, is to love uses in them, and not themselves.

— . Dignities and wealth seduce some, and some they do not seduce: they seduce when they excite the loves of the man's proprium . . . but they do not seduce when they do not excite that love.

—³. The evil . . . are exalted to honours and advanced to wealth, because the evil equally as the good do uses . . .

—⁴. When dignities and wealth are blessings they are spiritual and eternal, and when they are curses they are temporary and perishable. Gen. art. There are dignities and wealth in Heaven as in the world . . . for there are tradings there and thence wealth . . . dignities and wealth are themselves spiritual in the Spiritual Kingdom and celestial in the Celestial Kingdom, consequently those excel in dignities and wealth who excel in love and wisdom. These are they to whom dignities and wealth had been blessings in the world. . . Spiritual dignities and wealth are of the thing and not of the person.

—⁷. That the dignities and wealth which are curses, compared with those which are blessings, are as nothing to everything, or as that which in itself is not to that which in itself is.

220¹⁰. Riches and wealth are natural and temporary with those who have regard merely to them and to themselves in them . . . but the same are spiritual and eternal with those who have regard to good uses in them . . .

[P.] 227³. Those who are inwardly good and who outwardly like other men have laboured to gain wealth and have sought for honours . . .

250. A worshipper of self and of nature confirms himself against the Divine Providence when he sees the wicked . . . abounding in wealth . . . and worshippers of God in . . . poverty. Gen.art. . . A worshipper of self and of nature believes dignities and wealth to be the greatest and only means of happiness. . . If in consequence of having been initiated into worship in his infancy, he thinks anything of God, he calls them Divine blessings. . . but in this worship there lies hidden what he himself is not aware of, that he may be advanced by God to still higher dignities and more abundant wealth, and if he attains thereto, his worship declines more and more to outward things, till it comes to nothing . . .

—². To the evil then, what are dignities and wealth but stumbling-blocks? Not so to the good, because they do not set their hearts on them, but on the uses or goods for the doing of which dignities and wealth serve as means.

251. Man's life's love . . . has become of such a nature, that he wills to domineer over all, and to possess the whole wealth of the world.

281³. Unless he acknowledges God and implores his aid . . .

M. 268. Those who are in the visionary concupiscence or phantasy of possessing all wealth (visited and described).

274. The first affection of this age is the increasing of property by means of wealth . . .

496. There are three degrees of the natural man ; in the first are they who love the world only, setting the heart on wealth; these are properly meant by the natural.

T. 403. When the love of Heaven makes the head, it inflows into the love of the world, which is chiefly the love of wealth, and thereby performs uses. Ex.

—³. No man of sound reason can condemn wealth, for it is in the general body as the blood is in man.

E. 242²⁰. 'The wealth of all nations' = knowledges where they are, even with the evil.

376¹⁶. 'Wealth' = spiritual wealth, which is knowledges of good and truth.

—¹⁹. 'Works' = knowledges of good, 'riches,' knowledges of truth.

538⁹. 'Riches' = falsities. —¹⁰.

652¹⁶. 'Wealth and riches-divitiae' = knowledges of truth.

654⁴¹. 'Wealth and treasures' = knowledges of truth and of good from the Word, but here, false scientific things, because from their own intelligence.

176. The ultimate atmosphere which is called the air . . .

216. Like aerial things that pass away, or like images in the air that perish. —.

223. There can be nothing so minute . . . in the ether and air, as not to have in it these degrees ; and since the ether and air are receptacles of heat and light . . .

420². That the blood nourishes itself with suitable food from the inhaled air is evident from the immense abundance of odours and exhalations continually flowing forth from fields, gardens and woods, from the immense abundance of salts of various kinds together with waters from earths, rivers and ponds, and from the immense abundance of exhalations and effluvia from men and animals with which the air is impregnated. That these things inflow into the lungs with the inhaled air is undeniable . . .

R. 708. 'The seventh Angel poured out his vial into the air' = influx from the Lord into all things at once with the men of the Reformed Churches. The 'air' = all things of perception and of thought, thus of their faith . . . for by the 'air' is signified their breathing, and breathing corresponds to the understanding, thus to perception and thought, and also to faith. 5135. 'Because . . . I was taken away by theft'=that celestial things have been alienated through evil . . . 'to steal'=to alienate; and 'theft'=the evil that alienates . . . 'theft'=alienation relatively to the seat it occupies, and from which it casts out goods and truths, and fills with evils and falsities. Ex.

5280⁴. As soon as they come to adolescence, they suffer themselves to be carried away by the world, and thus go over to the side of infernal Spirits, by whom they are alienated from Heaven . . .

5469. 'We are guilty upon our brother'=that they are in fault because they have alienated what is internal through non-reception of good. . . . 'Joseph' reps. that Internal which they have rejected or alienated.

5470. 'When we saw the anguish of the soul'=the state of what is internal while it is alienated.

5471. When influx of good from the Divine is treated of, entreaty that it should not be alienated is solicitation to be received. Sig.

5886. 'Whom ye sold into Egypt'=the Internal which they had alienated . . . 'to sell'=to alienate.

6557. 'Joseph's brothers'=things alienated from truth and good. Ex.

Alike. Under LIKE.Alive. Under LIFE.All. Omnis.

A. 1585. The Lord, who is all in all of His Kingdom and of His Church.

1614. Everything celestial and spiritual . . . is from the Lord alone, from which the Lord is all in all of His Heaven . . .

1894^e. Heaven is called the Grand Man from this especially, that the Lord is all in all there.

2349. 'All the people from the outermost'=each and all of them.

2359. The Divine can only inflow into what is Divine, or can only be communicated to man through the Lord's Divine Human and Holy [Proceeding]. Hence may be understood what it is for the Lord to be all in all of His Kingdom.

2538. 'All,' in the inward sense=everything, or all things.

2904². Each and all things in the Word in the highest sense have respect to the Lord . . . and therefore they have respect to His Kingdom, for the Lord is all in His Kingdom. Ex.

2909³. In process of time every Church decreases.

3345^e. With man, interior things are everything, and exterior things . . . in which he places everything, are relatively scarcely anything.

3705. The Lord is all in all of His Kingdom, and whatever therein is not from Him and has not respect to Him, is not of His Kingdom. 6821.

4899^e. The whole of life, thus the whole of wisdom and intelligence.

4997. Heaven properly so called is the Lord, for He is all in all there.

5373². It is said in the plural, 'Every land came to Egypt.'

5514. 'We are twelve brethren'=all truths in one complex. 'Twelve'=all.

6159. 'Those in your houses'=each and all things of good from truth; thus 'for food for them in your houses'=good of truth in each and all things. Ex.

— This reigns singularly, that is, in each and all things.

7186². If man could be introduced into Heaven merely of the Lord's mercy, all in Hell would be elevated into Heaven, for the Lord's mercy is towards all.

7211. Heaven, where the Divine Human is everything. Ex. . . Hence it is that the Divine Human in the Heavens is everything in their intuitions, and thence everything in their faith and love.

8192². Divine truth proceeding from the Lord makes Heaven . . . hence it is said that the Lord is all in all of Heaven, and that they who are in Heaven are said to be in the Lord. 9166⁴.

8761^e. In Heaven Divine good united to Divine truth is all in all, thus is the life or soul of Heaven.

8865. Everything good and everything true are from the Lord . . . the Angels . . . have a perception that this is the case, hence it is that their life is the Lord's life in them. . . From this it is evident what it is for the Lord to be all in all of Heaven, and for Him to be Heaven.

9568. 'One solid of pure gold'=a whole quantity, thus all from good. . . By what is wholly from good . . . is meant when good is all in all, not only in truths . . . but also in scientifics. . . Good is all in the products and derivatives.

—². So the end is all of the cause, and the cause is all of the effect; hence it follows that the end is all of the effect. . . So from the Celestial is all the Spiritual; from the Spiritual is all the Natural; that is, from the Celestial through the Spiritual.

—³. Hence it is evident that the first is all in the products and derivatives. . . The Divine is the first of all . . . wherefore it is all in all of the order of things, thus in all things of good and truth . . . consequently good from the Divine is in all truths of faith, and if good be not all in them, and if the Lord's Divine be not all in good, man has not anything of Heaven or of the Church in him.

—⁴. The Lord's Divine is in all things of good, and thence in all things of truth with man, when man wills from love and believes from faith thence derived that all good and all truth, thus all of love and all of faith are from the Lord, and nothing whatever from himself . . .

9640. 'All' when said of Heaven=everywhere.

9647. Repetition involves that it was so in each and all.

10125. The Lord does not dwell in anything proper to man or Angel, but in His own with them; hence it is that when Heaven and the Church are mentioned, the Lord's Divine with those who are there is understood; from which it is evident how it is to be comprehended that the Lord is all in all of Heaven and the Church. 10151³.

10157. 'To dwell Myself in the midst of them'=the Lord's Divine, that it is all in all of Heaven and the Church. Ex.

10766. Everyone with whom is the Church is saved; but everyone with whom the Church is not is condemned.

W. 195. The first degree is all in all in the following degrees. Gen.art.

198. Hence it may be clearly seen that the Divine, which is substance in itself, that is, the one and only substance, is the substance from which is each and every created thing; thus that God is the all in all things of the Universe.

P. 46. The Infinite is the all . . .

217^e. That which remains for ever is in itself perpetually something, thus is everything.

293. The Divine form [of Heaven] can only consist and be permanent when the Lord is all in all, and the [Angels] are nothing whatever.

T. 98. That salvation depends upon the knowledge and acknowledgment of God is evident to everyone who reflects that God is all in all of Heaven, and thence all in all of the Church, consequently all in all of theology.

224. Truth and good are the beginnings—principia—of all things in both worlds . . . wherefore these two are all in all.

272^e. The Lord, through the Word, is all in all of Heaven. Ex.

5990. Spirits . . . who in the life of the body . . . have persuaded themselves that adulteries are allowable.

6203². He then makes evils allowable . . .

8700². It is impossible for a man to be saved unless he is allowed to do what is evil, because he is born in evil . . .

C. J. 16°. Although they do not commit evils they account them allowable, and thus commit them in spirit, and also in body when it is allowable.

Life 63. He thinks these evils allowable before God, but not allowable before the world.

P. 81. The evils that a man thinks allowable are appropriated to him, although he does not commit them, for allowableness in the thought is from the will, for it is consent; wherefore when a man believes any evil to be allowable, he looses the inward bond for it, and is withheld from committing it merely by outward bonds . . .

108. Such are the concupiscences of evil, and the evils themselves, with those who in their spirit make evils allowable.

111°. Concupiscences produce evils through their delights; but when evils are believed to be allowable, which takes place from consent of the will and understanding, delights and evils make one.

113. In proportion as a man confirms evils as allowable he enlarges the court of the reigning love . . .

212°. Concerning this Fortune . . . I have been permitted to learn many things which it is not allowable to make known.

215°. All who are in the love of ruling from self-love are in the love of all evils; and if they do not commit them, still in their spirit they believe them allowable . . .

278. Man is to examine himself . . . especially as to what evils he makes allowable in his spirit, and does not account as sins, for these he still commits.

281°. If a man were not allowed to think according to the delights of his life's love he would be man no longer . . .

340°. Everyone in Hell is allowed to be in his own delight . . . provided he does not infest good Spirits and Angels . . . M. 461°.

M. 10°. Everyone is allowed to ascend into Heaven. . . . From experience.

256. Common because continually allowed . . .

492. Adulteries of the fourth degree are adulteries of the will, which are committed by those who make them allowable and pleasing . . . Gen. art.

T. 508°. I saw this writing upon the gate [of the temple] Nunc licet, which signifies that now it is allowable to enter intellectually into the arcana of faith. —⁵.

C. 4. A man must not only think of the things that he does, but also of those he wills to do, which if he believes to be allowable he also does, or if not it is only for the world's sake. Ex.

Conv. with Angels 5. He who in his own mind makes any evil allowable continually does it.

Allure. Allicere.

A. 1983°. Sirens are chiefly of the female sex, and are women who in the bodily life studied to allure their associates to them by deep wiles.

5180°. In order to allure others to themselves.

T. 428. To entice to evil by means of benefits.

Allurement. Illecebra.

M. 48a°. A good Spirit . . . in the world . . . has been wiser in his Internal than in his External; in his External also he was sometimes led astray through the allurements and vanities of the world.

49. Various allurements that entice to marriage . . .

98. This is spoken of the male sex, because it has allurements that actually inflame it.

466. There is a closer union with allurements with a concubine than with a wife.

T. 41°. The allurements of the love of evil, which in themselves are concupiscences . . .

313. Concupiscence is as a deed when it is in the will, for only allurement enters into the understanding, but into the will intention . . .

331°. The allurements of love . . .

352. The allurements of the eye and concupiscences of the flesh . . .

508°. Kisses nature, and loves it from the allurements of its pleasures.

Allurement. Lenocinium.

A. 9331°. Evils and falsities . . . that seduce through their allurements and through appearances.

Almighty. Under OMNIPOTENT.

Almodad. A. 1245.

Almond. Amygdala.

Almond Tree. Amygdalus.

A. 5622. 'Tarpentine nuts and almonds'=goods of life corresponding to these truths. . . 'Almonds'=goods of life corresponding to the truths of interior natural good.

—². The reason why almonds have this signification is that the almond is one of the more noble trees . . .

—'. 'Almond tree'=perception of interior truth; here, being predicated of Jehovah, it=watching over it.

—³. The almonds that blossomed from Aaron's rod for the tribe of Levi also=goods of charity or goods of life.

9557. 'Three bowls like almonds'=amygdalati=what is full as to scientifics from good.

T. 258°. Like the shell of an almond, within which, instead of an almond, there is a new-born adder. W. 424°.

E. 431². 'Almonds' = goods of life.

444⁴. 'Almonds' = goods of charity. 727¹¹.

Alms. Eleemosyna. See Do GOOD—Benefacere.

T. 428. They say . . . that God has regard merely to the aid and the alms.

442^o. They who believe that charity is procured by giving alms. 459⁷, Ex.

E. 600⁴. 'Alms' = every good work.

695⁵. 'Alms' in the universal sense = all the good that a man wills and does.

794³. 'To give alms' = love and charity.

D. Love (Post.) xiii. The goods that do not flow from their employments are not called uses, but alms, etc.

Almug. Under THYINE.

Aloes. Aloe.

A. 1025²⁷. Since myrrh signified truth in the highest degree external, which is sensual truth, and its perception, therefore the bodies of the dead were anointed with myrrh and aloes, by which anointing was sig. the preservation of all truths and goods with man.

E. 684¹⁷. 'Aloes' = good of the second degree.

Alone. Solus. See SOLITUDE, SOLITARY.

A. 138. 'It is not good for the man to be alone.' By 'alone' is sig. that he was not content to be led by the Lord, but desired to be led by himself and the world.

139. In ancient times they were said to dwell alone who were led by the Lord as celestial men, because evils or evil Spirits no longer infested them. This was also rep. in the Jewish Church by their dwelling alone when the nations were driven out. Therefore it is sometimes said of the Lord's Church that it is 'alone.' 111.

— This posterity of the Most Ancient Church was not willing to dwell alone, that is to be a celestial man, or to be led by the Lord as a celestial man; but wanted to be among the nations like the Jewish Church. Therefore it is said that it was not good for the man to be alone. For he who is in the desire is already in evil.

471. The reason why they dwelt thus, namely alone from one another, being merely distinguished into houses, families, and nations, was that thus the Church might be preserved in its integrity. . . Thus the Church represented to the life the Lord's Kingdom, for in that Kingdom there are innumerable Societies . . . this is to live alone.

816. A certain Spirit came to me . . . asking to be alone with me, as he wanted to tell me something that others were not to hear. But I replied that in the other life it is impossible to be alone, as men suppose themselves to be on earth, and that many Spirits were present . . .

2596. Chinese Spirits . . . said they wanted to be alone with me in order to open their thoughts, but it was said to them that they were not alone, and that there were others who were indignant that they wanted to be alone . . .

4273. 'Jacob remained alone' = good of truth procured.

5005. 'There was no man of the men of the house there in the house' = without the help of anyone, as is evident from the fact that this means that he was alone.

8352³. Meat and drink nourish the body better when a man has pleasant conversation at his meals . . . than when he sits at table alone. Ex.

8689. 'And [Jethro] said, wherefore sittest thou alone?' = without influx of truth from good from any other source. 'To sit alone,' when said of truth Divine that proceeds immediately from the Lord, and which is represented by Moses = influx from Him alone, and not at the same time from any other source. 8701, Ex.

N. 113. A man rejects the things that do not agree with his love when he meditates by himself alone.

W. 261^o. The latter he does when alone, the former in company.

397. When a man thinks from his spirit, which takes place when he is alone . . .

418. But when the same man is alone he thinks from the more inward love of his spirit, and then not wisely.

P. 61. When a man is thinking alone from his own spirit, which he does when meditating at home by himself, he thinks from the affection which is of his love.

104. Anyone can speak from outward thought and affection about the justice of the civil laws, etc. . . and yet when he is alone by himself can speak from his inward thought and affection against the civil laws, etc.

M. 233⁶. When such are alone they are not able to think anything, and thence to speak, but stand like dumb machines . . .

D. 1484. Certain Spirits are indignant when told that they are never alone, but that there are many who speak. . . No Spirit can ever be quite alone, but is in a certain association with Spirits who speak together; yet Spirits suppose that they are alone, and speak from themselves.

1864. In the other life it is impossible to be alone, as a man can be with a man on earth; there are many Spirits present . . .

E. 193. When a man is alone . . . —².

Alpha. Alpha.

A. 6044. The end is all in all created things, and created things are in such an order that as the end from the First through mediates has respect to the ultimate, so the end in the ultimate has respect to the end in the First; hence is the connexion of things. The end itself in its first origin is nothing but Divine good of Divine love, thus is the Lord Himself, whence He is also called 'First and Last, Alpha and Omega.'

L. 36. God from the beginning was Man in first principles, but not in ultimates; but after He took the Human in the world He became Man in ultimates also. . . Hence it is that the Lord is called 'Beginning and End, First and Last, Alpha and Omega.'

R. 29. 'I am Alpha and Omega, Beginning and End' = Who is the Self and Sole—Ipsum et Unicum—from first principles to ultimates, from Whom all things are; thus

Who is the Self and Sole love, the Self and Sole wisdom, and the Self and Sole life in itself, and is thus the Self and Sole Creator, Saviour, and Illustrator from Himself, and thence all in all of Heaven and the Church. 38.

—1. 'Alpha and Omega' have relation to His Divine love, 'Beginning and End' to His Divine wisdom.

—2. The Lord is called 'Alpha and Omega' because Alpha is the first and Omega is the last syllable in the Greek alphabet, and they thence sig. all things in the complex. Ex. T.19².

888. 'I am Alpha and Omega, Beginning and End,'= that they may know that the Lord is the God of Heaven and earth, and that all things in the Heavens and earths were made by Him, and are ruled through His Divine Providence, and take place according thereto . . . 950.

E. 41. 'I am Alpha and Omega, Beginning and End' =that He rules all things from first principles through ultimates, and thus all things of Heaven for ever . . .

Altar. Altare.

A. 273. 'Thorn and thistle upon the altars'=profanation.

920⁴. They who are called 'Cain' and 'Enoch' collected doctrinal things from the man of the Most Ancient Church. . . These doctrinal things consisted only in significatives . . . and as in such things they admired and seemed to themselves even to behold what was Divine and heavenly . . . worship from like things was begun and permitted. Hence their worship upon mountains, in groves . . . and at last altars and burnt-offerings, which afterwards became the principal things of all worship. This worship was begun by the Ancient Church, and emanated thence to their descendants and to all nations round about.

921. 'Noah built an altar to Jehovah'=a representative of the Lord. . . All the rites of the Ancient Church were representatives of the Lord, but the principal representative afterwards was the altar, and also the burnt-offering.

—2. That the altar was the principal representative of the Lord is evident from this, that before other rites were instituted . . . there were altars, even among the gentiles. Ill.

—3. Altars were built before they knew how to slay oxen and small cattle upon them, as a memorial.

—4. That 'altars'=a representative of the Lord, and burnt-offerings worship of Him thence, Ill.

1298². When the worship of sacrifices was begun upon altars, the altar then signified representative worship of the Lord in general, and the stones themselves holy truths of that worship, wherefore it was commanded that the altar should be built of whole stones . . .

1448. Abram 'built there an altar to Jehovah, Who was seen by him'=the Lord's first worship of His Father from the Celestial of love. . . 'Altar'=the principal representative of worship. 1454. 1559.

1454. Abram 'built an altar to Jehovah'=outward worship of His Father from this state.

1618. Abram 'built there an altar to Jehovah'=worship from this state. . . An 'altar'=a representative of all worship in general.

H

2777. An altar was built by David . . . upon Mount Moriah, for an altar, upon which there were burnt-offerings and sacrifices, was the principal representative of the Lord, and afterwards the temple.

2811. 'And Abraham built there an altar'=preparation of the Lord's Divine Human. Altars signified all worship in general, because they were the primary things of representative worship; and because they signified all worship in general, they signified the Lord's Divine Human, for the Lord's Divine Human is all worship and all doctrine, insomuch that it is worship itself and doctrine itself, as may also be evident from the Holy Supper, which succeeded altars, or burnt-offerings and sacrifices.

2814. An 'altar'=the Lord's Divine Human.

2832⁸. The altar was the principal representative of the Lord and of the worship of Him; for the altar was a representative of His Divine good, and the 'horns' were representatives of His Divine truth, and that from good there was truth was represented by the horns being from the altar.

3442. Isaac 'built there an altar'=a significative and a representative of the Lord. An 'altar'=the principal representative of the Lord.

3727³. 'In that day there shall be an altar to Jehovah in the midst of the land of Egypt.' . . An 'altar'=Divine worship in general. The altar was made the primary representative of worship in the second Ancient Church that had its beginning from Eber.

—4. 'Moses . . . built an altar near Mount Sinai.' An 'altar' was here in like manner a representative of all worship, and indeed a representative of what is good in worship.

—5. Since altars were representatives of all good of worship, and the Jewish Church was instituted to rep. the Celestial Church, which acknowledges no truth except that which is from good . . . there was therefore a representative of truth by means of the stones of the altar, and it was forbidden that it should be done by means of pillars, lest truth should be thus separated from good . . . Ill.

—7. Since the Gentiles also held through tradition that what is holy of worship was represented by altars and pillars, and yet they were in evil and falsity, therefore 'altars' with the gentiles signified evils of worship, and 'pillars' falsities, and therefore it was commanded that they should be destroyed. Ill.

4192. The reason why a 'heap'=good, is because before they built altars they used to make heaps and eat upon them as a witness that they were conjoined in love; but afterwards, when they held sacred the representatives of the ancients, instead of heaps they built altars, also of stones, but arranged in a more orderly manner. Hence a 'heap' has a similar signification to an altar, namely good of love, and the stones in them, truths of faith.

4197⁵. That as in ancient times heaps were set as witnesses, so afterwards were altars. Ill.

—8. An 'altar'=good of love, and in the highest sense the Lord Himself.

4263². The presents that were given to kings and priests when they approached them signified initiation ; but those that were offered upon the altar signified worship.

[A.] 4401. Jacob 'set up there an altar'=interior worship. 'To set up an altar'=worship, for an altar was the principal representative of the Lord, and hence was also the principal of worship.

4449. Altars, burnt-offerings, etc. had been received in the second Ancient Church. . . That they were known before they were commanded to the Israelitish nation, Ill.

4489. The altar upon which they sacrificed was the principal representative of the Lord ; hence also it was the fundamental of worship in the Ancient Church that was called Hebrew. Therefore each and all things of which the altar was constructed were representative. Enum. and Ex.

4517. There were there [in Canaan] they who were of the Most Ancient Church, and there were they who were of the Ancient Church, especially of that which was called the Hebrew Church . . . and they also had altars and sacrificed ; and therefore after they became idolaters it was so often commanded that their altars should be destroyed.

4541. 'Make there an altar to God who hath been seen by thee [Jacob]'=what is holy there. An 'altar'=the principal representative of the Lord, and this being the case, what is holy of worship is signified by 'making an altar to God.' 4547.

4558. 'And he built there an altar'=through sanctification. An 'altar'=the principal representative of the Lord, and thence what is holy of worship, and when predicated of the Lord, His Divine Human and the Holy that proceeds therefrom . . .

6917. Altars and sacrifices with the Hebrew nation, and afterwards with the Jewish and Israelitish nation, were true rituals, because they applied them to the worship of Jehovah ; but with the nations in the Land of Canaan they were false rituals, because they applied them to the worship of their idols ; wherefore also it was commanded that the altars of the nations should be everywhere destroyed.

8623. 'Moses built an altar'=for what is holy of worship and of memory. An 'altar'=the chief representative of the Lord, and thence what is holy of worship. The reason why it is also for memory is that in ancient times they erected heaps for a witness and memory of a thing . . . and afterwards altars. Ill.

8935. 'An altar of soil thou shalt make to Me'=a representative of worship in general from good. An 'altar'=the principal representative of the Lord, and thence of the worship of Him.

— . Worship from good was represented by an altar of soil, and worship from truth by an altar of stones. Ex. 8940.

— . The reason why an altar is the principal representative of the worship of the Lord is that burnt-offerings and sacrifices took place upon it, and it was in these that the Divine worship of the Hebrew nation, and thence of the Israelitish and Jewish nation, principally consisted.

8940. 'And if thou make to me an altar of stones'=a representative of worship in general from truths. An 'altar'=a representative of Divine worship in general.

— . Since an altar of stone=worship from truth, it was commanded that such an altar should be erected when they first crossed the Jordan . . . and that the precepts of the law should be written upon it, that is, Divine truths out of Heaven.

—^e. As to altars in general, they were of soil, of stones, of brass, of wood, and also of gold ; of brass, wood, and gold, because these signified good. Refs. E.391²¹.

9014. 'Thou shalt take him from mine altar that he may die'=condemnation although he flees to the worship of the Lord, and supplicates for forgiveness, and promises repentance. The altar of Jehovah=the principal representative of the worship of the Lord ; and because it was the representative of worship, therefore 'to flee to the altar' is to flee to the Lord, and to supplicate for forgiveness, and also to promise repentance, for one follows the other.

9229⁸. 'Whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift ?' By the 'altar' was represented the Lord Himself, and by the 'gift' or sacrifice, what is of faith and charity from the Lord.

9388. [Moses] 'built an altar below the mountain'=a representative of the Lord's Divine Human as to Divine good from Him. An altar=a representative of the Lord's Divine Human, and thence the principal representative of the worship of the Lord. Refs. 9395.

9395. 'He sprinkled half the blood upon the altar'=Divine truth from the Lord's Divine Human.

9710. Worship of the Lord from good of love is treated of in this chapter ; this worship is sig. by the altar, and is described in general by all things that belong to the altar.

9714. 'Thou shalt make an altar'=a representative of the Lord and of the worship of Him. The altar that was for burnt-offerings and sacrifices=a representative of the Lord ; and since by burnt-offerings and sacrifices were sig. all things of the worship of the Lord, therefore the altar was a representative of the worship of Him.

—². There were two things by which the Lord as to the Divine Human was represented ; the temple and the altar. Ill. . . But the 'altar' was a representative of the Lord as to His Divine good, and the 'temple,' as to His Divine truth. E.391⁸.

—³. Since the altar represented the Lord as to Divine good, therefore it was the very holy of holies, and sanctified everything that touched it. And therefore also the fire was perpetually burning upon it, and from that fire was taken the fire for the incense, for by the fire of the altar was signified Divine good of the Lord's Divine love.

—⁴. That the altar was a representative of the Lord. Ill.

—⁵. That the altar was a representative of the worship of the Lord. Ill.

— . 'The Lord hath forsaken His altar' (Lam.ii.7)=the abolition of the representative worship of the Lord from good of love.

—⁶. 'Your altars shall be destroyed ; I will scatter your bones about your altars ; your altars shall be devastated, and desolated, and broken' (Ezek.vi.4,5,6)=the destruction, devastation and desolation of representative worship.

—7. 'In that day a man . . . shall not look to the altars, the work of their hands, and what their fingers have made' (Is.xvii.7,8)=worship from their own intelligence.

—8. 'Ephraim hath multiplied altars to commit sin' (Hos.viii.11)=to fashion vain and empty things of worship.

—9. 'In that day there shall be an altar to Jehovah in the midst of Egypt' (Is.xix.19)=the worship of the Lord.

—10. The altar here treated of, being portable, was made of Shittim wood, and covered over with brass; but the altar that was to remain in its place, was either of soil or of unhewn stones; an altar of soil was the principal representative of the Lord from good of love, but from unhewn stones was a representative of worship from goods and truths of faith. But the portable altar was representative of the worship of the Lord from good of love. Therefore it was of Shittim wood and was overlaid with brass. E.391²².

9964. 'In their approaching the altar to minister in the holy [place]'=in worship representative of the Lord Himself. The altar was the principal representative of the Lord as to Divine good. . . Worship representative of the Lord principally consisted in burnt-offerings and sacrifices offered upon the altar; worship representative of the Lord as to Divine good at the altar, and worship representative of Him as to Divine truth in the tent of the assembly.

10001². By the altar that was placed at the door of the tent was represented the Lord as to Divine good, and by the tent of the assembly was represented the Lord as to Divine truth.

10028. 'Thou shalt pour out all the blood at the foundation of the altar'=the whole of Divine truth in the Sensual, which is the ultimate of man's life. . . The altar was a representative of the Lord's Divine Human, wherefore its foundation=that which is the ultimate of life in the human . . . which is what is called the external Sensual.

10034. 'Thou shalt burn [on] the altar'=from the Lord's Divine love. . . The altar is a representative of the Lord as to the Divine good of love.

10047. 'Thou shalt sprinkle upon the altar round about'=conjunction with Divine good. . . The altar is a representative of the Lord as to Divine good.

10052. 'Thou shalt burn on the altar with the whole ram'=the Internal of the Lord's Divine Human united to the Divine good of His Divine love that was in Himself. . . The altar was the principal representative of the Lord's Divine Human as to His Divine good.

10064. 'Thou shalt sprinkle blood upon the altar round about'=union of Divine truth with Divine good. . . The altar=a representative of the Lord as to Divine good.

10123. 'Thou shalt cleanse from sin upon the altar'=purification from evils in Heaven and in the Church. . . The altar=a representative of the Lord as to Divine good, and of the worship of Him; here, as to Divine good in Heaven and the Church. Since the subject of the influx, presence, and reception of the Lord there is still continued . . . by the altar' is also signified Heaven and the Church as to reception of Divine good from the Lord there; for it is the Divine of the Lord that makes Heaven and the Church, since the Lord dwells there in what is His own, and not in the proprium of man. Hence also it is that by the altar' is also signified the man himself in whom is Heaven, or in whom is the Church, thus in whom is the Lord; and abstractedly from person, the altar' is good itself that is from the Lord with Angels of Heaven and men of the Church.

—2. The altar' is mentioned in these senses in John; 'There was given me a reed like a rod, and the Angel stood near, and said, Measure the temple of God and the altar, and those who adore therein' (Rev.xi.1). Here the 'temple of God' and the altar' are Heaven and the Church, the 'temple' is the Spiritual Church, and the altar' is the Celestial Church.

—3. Again, 'I heard another Angel from the altar, saying, Lord God Almighty, just and true are Thy judgments' (Rev.xvi.7). 'From the altar' is from the Inmost Heaven, where celestial good reigns.

—4. 'The Lord hath forsaken His altar, He hath abominated His sanctuary' (Lam.ii.7). 'To forsake the altar and the sanctuary' is to forsake everything of the Church; the altar', everything of the Church as to good; and the 'sanctuary,' everything of the Church as to truth.

10129. 'The altar shall be the holy of holies'=the Celestial Kingdom, where the Lord is present in the good of love. . . The altar'=a representative of the Lord as to Divine good; here, as to Divine good in Heaven and the Church.

—2. By the altar is represented the Celestial Kingdom, or what is the same, where the Lord is present in good of love, and by the tent of the assembly outside the veil is represented the Spiritual Kingdom, or what is the same, where the Lord is present in good of charity towards the neighbour.

—6. That the altar of burnt-offering represented the Lord as to good of love, and receptivity by Angels and men . . .

10131. 'This is what thou shalt do upon the altar'=what in general concerns the reception of the Lord in Heaven and the Church. . . By the altar' is signified the Divine of the Lord in the Heavens, thus also the reception of Him.

10151. 'I will sanctify . . . the altar'=receptivity of what is Divine from the Lord in the higher Heavens. . . The altar'=a representative of the Lord as to Divine good; here, as to Divine good proceeding from Him in the Heavens, where it is received; thus in the higher Heavens, for there the Lord is received as to Divine good.

10177. 'Thou shalt make an altar of the perfuming of incense'=a representative of the hearing and grateful reception by the Lord of all things of worship from love and charity. . . The altar of the perfuming of incense'=a representative of such things of worship as are elevated to the Lord. . . The altar has a similar signification to that which is upon it, since the altar is the containant, and what is upon it is the contents, and the containant and contents make one thing.

[A. 10177]². The reason why an altar was made for the incense, and not a table, was that with the Israelitish nation altars were the principal representatives of worship from love, for there was fire upon them, and by fire are signified love and charity, from which there is worship.

—³. The reason why the altar of incense represented hearing and reception of all things of worship that are from love and charity, was that by smoke and thence by fumigation was signified that which is elevated on high, and by the odour of the smoke, that which is grateful, thus that which is heard and received by the Lord; and that alone is grateful and is received by the Lord which is from love and charity. Hence also it was that this altar was overlaid with gold, and was called the golden altar.

10182². By the 'altars of Bethel,' and by its 'horns,' are signified evils and falsities destroying the good and truth of the Church, of which it is said that 'they shall be cut off.'

10184. These degrees, celestial, spiritual, and natural, from correspondence are signified by the head, the breast, and the feet; in like manner by the roof, walls, and horns of the altar of incense.

10206. By 'not making burnt-offering and meat-offering to ascend upon the altar of incense' is signified that there was not there a representative of regeneration through truths and goods of faith and of love, but a representative of the worship of the Lord therefrom . . . therefore the altar of incense, by which worship is represented, is described last.

—^e. At length there is described the altar of burnt-offering, by which is signified regeneration through truths from good; and last of all the altar of incense, by which is signified worship from all these things in Heaven and the Church.

10245. 'To come near to the altar to minister'=to represent the Lord as to the good of love.

10272. 'The altar of incense'=a representative of all things of worship that are from love and charity from the Lord. 10343.

10273. 'The altar of burnt-offering' was the principal representative of the Lord's Divine Human, and of the worship of Him in general. Refs.

10344. 'The altar of burnt-offering, and all its vessels'=a representative of worship from the good of love and its truths. . . 'The altar of burnt-offering'=a representative of the Lord and of the worship of Him from the good of love. Refs.

10411. Aaron 'built an altar before it [the golden calf]'=worship. . . An 'altar'=the principal representative of Divine worship; but here, of diabolical worship. Ex.

10603². On account of that nation, altars, burnt-offerings, etc., were commanded, and are therefore mentioned in the Word as most holy things of worship, yet these things had only been granted them because they were first instituted by Eber, and they were altogether unknown in the Ancient Representative Church.

10642. 'Wherefore thou shalt overturn their altars'=that the evil of that religiosity and thence its worship was to be destroyed. . . An 'altar'=the principal representative of the Lord and of the worship of Him from good; and thence, in the opposite sense, it is a representative of idolatrous worship, thus from evil.

—². There are mentioned in this verse 'altars,' 'pillars' and 'groves;' and by these in general are signified all things of idolatrous worship; by 'altars,' worship from evil; by 'pillars,' worship from falsity of evil; and by 'groves,' their doctrinal things.

R. 277. The principal worship in the Jewish and Israelitish Church consisted in sacrifices and incense; wherefore there were two altars, one for sacrifices and the other for incense; the latter altar was in the tabernacle and was called the golden altar, the former was outside the tabernacle and was called the altar of burnt-offering. The reason was that there are two kinds of goods from which all worship takes place, celestial good and spiritual good; celestial good is good of love to the Lord, and spiritual good is good of love towards the neighbour; worship by means of sacrifices was worship from celestial good, and worship by means of incense was worship from spiritual good. 392, Ill.

325. 'I saw under the altar the souls of those who were slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony which they held'=those who were hated, abused, and rejected by the evil on account of their life according to the truths of the Word, and the acknowledgment of the Lord's Divine Human, and who were guarded by the Lord lest they should be led astray. 'Under the altar'=the Lower Earth, where they were guarded by the Lord. An 'altar'=worship of the Lord from good of love.

—². Since they were under the altar it is evident that they were guarded by the Lord; for all are guarded by the Lord . . . who have lived any life of charity.

392. 'Another Angel came and stood at the altar having a golden censer'=spiritual worship, which takes place from good of charity through truths of faith. By the altar at which the Angel stood, and by the golden censer that he had in his hand, is signified worship of the Lord from spiritual love, which worship is from good of charity through truths of faith.

—^e. Since representative worship, which took place chiefly upon the two altars, was abrogated by the Lord when He came into the world, because He Himself has opened the interior things of the Church, it is said; 'In that day a man shall look to his Maker, and his eyes shall look to the Holy One of Israel, and not to altars the work of his hands' (Is. xvii.8).

395. 'The Angel took a censer and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth'=spiritual love in which is celestial love, and its influx into lower parts, where were they who were in faith separate from charity. . . That by the fire of the altar of burnt-offering is signified Divine celestial love, is because by that altar is signified worship from that love . . . and by 'fire' in the highest sense is signified Divine love.

443. 'I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar that is before God, saying to the sixth Angel who had the trumpet'=a command by the Lord out of the Spiritual Heaven to those who examine and make manifest. . . By the 'golden altar,' or the altar on which they offered incense, is signified the Spiritual Heaven. By the 'four horns' of that altar is signified the power of it . . .

486. 'The Angel stood by, saying, Arise and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that adore therein'=the Lord's presence and His command that he should see and know the state of the Church in the New Heaven. . . By 'the temple, the altar, and them that adore therein' is signified the state of the Church in the New Heaven; by the 'temple,' the Church as to truth of doctrine; by the 'altar,' the Church as to good of love; and by 'them that worship therein,' the Church as to worship from these two.

648. 'Another Angel came out from the altar, having power over fire'=the Heavens of the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, which are in good of love from the Lord. By 'another Angel' are here signified the Heavens of the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, because he was seen to go out from the altar; for by the 'altar' is signified the worship of the Lord from love . . . and by 'fire upon the altar' is signified Divine love.

T. 185³. The altar there in the temple of the boreal Spirits was of cut stone.

503. In this temple at the walls there were as it were altars, and . . . they leaned their elbows on the altars as on so many tables.

E. 223¹⁴. 'An altar to Jehovah in the midst of Egypt.' 'An altar to Jehovah'=worship from good of love.

316²⁶. The 'altar of incense,' also called the 'golden altar,' was a representative of the hearing and reception of all things of worship that are from love and charity from the Lord, thus the reception of such things of worship as are elevated by the Lord.

324². Hence there were two altars. The altar of burnt-offering=worship from the good of celestial love, and the altar of incense, worship from the good of spiritual love.

—³. The altar of incense=worship from spiritual good, because it was without the veil.

329²⁰. 'Whom they slew between the temple and the altar'=rejection of the Lord in every way, for the 'temple'=the Lord as to Divine truth, and the 'altar'=Him as to Divine good, and 'between them'=both together. 391¹⁹.

391. 'I saw under the altar'=those who were reserved under Heaven. . . The 'altar,' in the proximate sense,=worship from good of love to the Lord; in a more interior sense, Heaven and the Church that are in that love; and in the inmost sense, the Lord's Divine Human as to the Divine good of the Divine love.

—². The reason why 'under the altar'=under Heaven, is that the 'altar,' in the highest sense,=the Lord; in the relative sense, Heaven and the Church, because the Lord is Heaven and the Church . . . In the general sense, however, the 'altar'=all worship of the Lord; specifically, representative worship, such as that of the Sons of Israel. The reason why 'altar'=all worship, is that worship in that Church principally consisted in offering burnt-offerings and sacrifices . . .

— The reason why Heaven was represented before John by an altar, is that the whole Word is written by means of representatives such as those that prevailed among the Sons of Israel, wherefore in order that the Word might be alike in both Testaments, there are similar things in this Book.

—³. That the 'altar,' in the highest sense,=the Lord's Divine Human as to Divine good of Divine love; in the relative sense, Heaven and the Church; in general, all worship; and specifically, representative worship. Ill.

— 'Send out Thy light and Thy truth . . . that I may go in to the altar of God' (Ps.xliii.4). Here, by the 'altar of God' is understood the Lord as to the Divine Human. . . By the 'altar of God' is understood where the Lord is in good of love.

—⁵. It is said that 'the temple sanctifieth the gold that is in it, and the altar sanctifieth the gift that is upon it,' and thus that the temple and altar were the most holy things from which is all sanctification; wherefore by the 'temple' and the 'altar' is signified the Lord as to the Divine Human, for from this proceeds everything that is holy of Heaven and the Church . . .

—⁶. Because this is signified by the altar, therefore everything that touched it was sanctified. . . It follows that the Lord Himself is signified by the 'altar,' for there is no other source of anything holy. . . By the 'altar' was signified the Divine Itself a quo, and this Divine is the Divine Human of the Lord.

—⁹. 'They shall come up with acceptance on Mine altar, thus I will glorify the house of My glory'=the Divine Human of the Lord in which they shall be; 'altar'=His Divine Human as to Divine good, and 'house of glory'=as to Divine truth.

—¹⁰. Since by 'altar,' in the highest sense, is signified the Divine Human of the Lord, therefore by 'altar' is signified Heaven and the Church, for regarded in itself the Angelic Heaven is from the Divine that proceeds from the Divine Human of the Lord. . . Hence by 'altar' is also signified in general all worship that proceeds from good of love.

—¹¹. 'The bird hath found a house, and the swallow a nest for herself, Thine altars, Jehovah of Hosts' (Ps.lxxxiv.5). By 'altars' here are understood the Heavens . . .

—¹². 'To compass Thine altar Jehovah'=conjunction with the Lord through worship from the good of love . . .

—¹³. 'In that day there shall be an altar to Jehovah in the midst of the Land of Egypt'=that then there will be the worship of the Lord from the good of love through scientific truths that are in the natural man.

—¹⁴. The destruction of the Church as to truths of worship is described by 'laying the stones of the altar as stones of chalk scattered' (Is.xxvii.9).

—¹⁵. The vastation of the Church as to all goods is signified by 'the Lord hath forsaken His altar' (Lam.ii.7).

—¹⁶. 'Their burnt-offerings and their sacrifices shall be well-pleasing upon Mine altar' (Is.lvi.7)=acceptable worship from the good of love through spiritual truths . . . 'upon the altar'=in Heaven and the Church.

—¹⁷. Worship from good of charity is signified by 'then shall they make bullocks go up upon thine altar' (Ps.li.19).

—²⁰. 'If thou bring thy gift upon the altar'=to worship God . . . =in all worship.

—²³. 'Altar,' in the opposite sense,=idolrous or infernal worship, which alone prevails with those who do indeed make a profession of religion, yet love themselves and the world above all things . . . when this is the case they love what is evil and false; by 'altar' therefore, when predicated of such, is signified worship from what is evil. III.

[E. 391²².] 'Altars the work of his own hands' = worship from his own proper love, from which come evils of life.

—³¹. Hence it is evident that altars were in use with the whole posterity of Eber . . . who for the most part were in the Land of Canaan, and in the adjacent countries, and also in Syria. III.

430⁹. 'Moses built an altar below Mount Sinai, and erected twelve pillars for the twelve tribes of Israel.' 'Altar' = good of the Church, and 'pillars,' its truths; hence 'altar, and twelve pillars,' together, = all truths from good, through which is the Church.

—¹⁰. 'Elijah took twelve stones and built an altar.' 'Altar' = good of the Church, and 'stones,' its truths.

490. 'Another Angel came and stood at the altar' = conjunction of Heaven with the Lord through celestial good . . . 'altar' = good of love to the Lord.

—^e. The altar of burnt-offering was a representative of the Lord and of the worship of Him from celestial good, and the altar of incense was a representative of the Lord and of the worship of Him from spiritual good.

493. 'The golden altar' = the Heaven where there is spiritual good.

567. 'I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar that is before God' = revelation from the Lord out of the Spiritual Heaven . . . 'the golden altar that is before God' = the Divine Spiritual.

— There were horns in the ultimates of both altars . . . and since horns were the ultimates of those altars, they signified the Divine as to power, for all power is in ultimates. Hence it is that the horns of the altars signified the Divine as to omnipotence.

— The altar of burnt-offering signified the Divine Celestial, which is Divine good.

—³. The reason why the golden altar upon which they offered incense = the Divine Spiritual, which is Divine truth proceeding from the Lord, is that the incense which they offered upon that altar = worship from spiritual good and the hearing and reception of it by the Lord. This is evident from the construction of this altar.

585¹¹. The altar, and afterwards the temple, were the chief representatives of the Lord as to Divine good and as to Divine truth, wherefore the stones of which they were built = truths of doctrine, of religion, and of worship.

608¹⁰. They were not to swear by the temple and by the altar, because to swear by them was to swear by the Lord, by Heaven and by the Church. For 'temple' in the highest sense = the Lord as to Divine truth, and in the relative sense, Heaven and the Church as to Divine truth, also all worship from Divine truth; and 'altar' = the Lord as to Divine good, and in the relative sense, Heaven and the Church as to Divine good, also all worship from Divine good.

652¹³. 'According to the number of the streets of Jerusalem thou hast put altars for a shame' (Jer. xi. 13) = as many worships as falsities of doctrine . . . the reason why it is worship from falsities that is here understood is that by 'altars' are understood altars of incense . . .

654⁸. 'An altar to Jehovah (in the midst of the Land of Egypt)' = worship from good of charity.

915. 'Another Angel went out from the altar' = manifestation from the Lord concerning the devastation of the Church as to the good of love and of charity . . . 'altar,' in the highest sense, = the Divine good of the Divine love, and thence in the relative sense, the good of love to the Lord and the good of charity towards the neighbour.

— In the Church that was instituted among the Sons of Israel there were two principal things of worship, the tent of the assembly and the altar, and afterwards the temple and the altar. In the temple the Word was taught, and upon the altar sacrifices took place. These were the principal things of their worship . . . and represented the sum total of the things of the Church, . . . which have relation to doctrine from the Word, and to the good of love and of charity. All the worship of the Church is from these two. And since all the representatives of the Church regarded the Lord as the End and as the Cause . . . therefore by the Temple was represented the Lord as to Divine truth, and by the altar, the Lord as to Divine good.

978. 'I heard another from the altar, saying' = preaching of the righteousness of the Lord from His Celestial Kingdom. . . 'The Angel from the altar' = the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, for by the 'altar' is signified the Lord as to Divine good, thus also the Heaven that is in Divine good. This Heaven, or these Heavens, constitute the Lord's Celestial Kingdom.

Altar. Ara.

T. 55^o. Oracle, altar, and pulpit.

163. Like the oracle and altar in a temple.

Alteration. Alteratio.

A. 3593. 'Isaac shuddered with exceeding great horror' = a great alteration in respect to the inversion of the state. . . 'Horror' = alteration.

3718. Jacob 'feared' = a holy alteration. Ex. 3719.

Alternate. Alternare.

Alternate. Alternus.

Alternation. Alternatio.

Alternately. Alternatim.

A. 933². Through regeneration man receives life itself from the Lord, and because he before had no life, no life and life itself alternate . . .

—⁴. It may also be known from experience that these alternate.

—^c. The last posterity of the Most Ancient Church could not be regenerated . . . thus there could not be any alternation with them.

631⁵. The man who in his life has been elevated from sensual things by means of the good of faith, is alternately in sensual and in interior lumen. Ex.

860⁷. That now Israel conquered and now Amalek, represented that they who are of the Spiritual Church cannot be in faith that continually regards the Lord, but that they are alternately in faith that regards self and the world . . .

927⁸². This is the reason why a man who has been regenerated, and who is in Heaven, is alternately in externals and internals; for by this means externals are disposed so as to agree with internals, and at last to be subject to them.

P. 223². The man who has been of such a character in the world, when he becomes a Spirit, is for the most part let into alternate states of wisdom and of insanity, in order that he may see the latter from the former.

298. Every man, when he becomes a Spirit . . . is let alternately into the two states of his life, the external and the internal. Des.

M. 268³. Our visionary delight alternately supervenes . . . thus we are wise and insane alternately. Des.

T. 280. (Swedenborg alternately in the two worlds.) M. 326.

371⁴. There are two reciprocations through which conjunction is effected, one is alternate and the other is mutual. The alternate reciprocation through which conjunction is effected may be illustrated by the animations of the lungs. Ex.

Altogether. Omnino.

A. 806⁰. Its being said again = that it would be so altogether. 806¹.

Am. Under BE, or ESSE.

Amalek. Amaleck.

Amalekite. Amalekita.

A. 165⁴. That the Lord overcame . . . falsities and evils . . . which are the 'Amalekite' and the 'Amorite.'

167⁷. 'They smote all the field of the Amalekites' = kinds of falsities. 1679, Ex.

376^{2e}. 'When Israel sowed, and Midian, and Amalek, and the sons of the east came up, and ascended over him' (Judges vi. 3). 'Midian' = those who are in falsity, because not in good of life; 'Amalek' = those who are in falsities that attack truths.

5313⁰. 'Amalek' in the Word = falsities that attack truths.

855⁵. The combat of falsity from evil against truth and good of faith is treated of in this chapter, and is represented by the combat of Amalek against Israel.

859³. 'And Amalek came' = falsity from interior evil. Ex. They who are in this evil are called evil Genii. . . These evil Genii never attack men openly, but when it appears that the man is yielding, they are suddenly at hand, and impel him to fall altogether. This is represented by Amalek now invading Israel. And also afterwards, when the Sons of Israel set themselves against Jehovah, and were afraid on account of the nations in the Land of Canaan, then Amalek came down with the Canaanite out of the mountain, and smote the Sons of Israel even unto Hormah (Num. xiv. 43, 45). 859⁴.

—³. Hence it is evident that the quality is of those who are represented by Amalek, and why judgment came upon him from Jehovah that there shall be war against them perpetually, and that his memory shall be blotted out from under heaven. Ill.

860⁷. 'Amalek prevailed' = that then falsity conquered. . . 'Amalek' = falsity from interior evil. That now Israel conquered, and now Amalek, represented that they who are of the Spiritual Church cannot be in faith that continually regards the Lord, but are alternately in faith that regards self and the world. . . Hence it was that Amalek was not extirpated either by Joshua, or afterwards by the judges and kings.

862². 'Destroying I will destroy the memory of Amalek from under the heavens' = that that falsity must be altogether removed so as not to fight any more. . . 'Amalek' = those who are in falsity from interior evil.

881^{5e}. 'Midian, Amalek, and the sons of the east' around whose camp the three hundred men of Gideon sounded with trumpets, sig. those who are in evils and thence in falsities.

E. 734⁸. 'Amalek' = those falsities of evil that continually infest the truths and goods of the Church.

Amaurosis. Amaurosis.

T. 346. (The nature and correspondence of amaurosis.) 620².

Amazed. Obstupescere.

Amazement. Obstupescencia, Stupor.

A. 3100. 'The man was amazed at her, containing himself' = a state of perception as to these things. . . For he was amazed because he acknowledged that it had so come to pass.

452⁷. They were amazed that man is quite ignorant of this . . .

4528^e. When they see these things they are amazed. 4529.

570⁵. 'The men were amazed' = change of state. . . 'To be amazed' = an unexpected and sudden change of the state of the thoughts. Since this is a cause of amazement it has this signification.

846¹. 'They said a man to his brother' = amazement. . . They were amazed when they saw the manna.

10694². When heavenly light inflows into the light of the world, it induces thick darkness and thence stupidity.

S. 13³. 'They have power to hurt men five months' = that they bring into a kind of stupidity those who are in understanding of truth and perception of good.

R. 425. When a scorpion strikes a man, it induces a stupor in the members.

427. 'It was given to them that they should not kill them, but that they should torment for five months'=that it is of the Divine Providence that they should not be able to take away the faculty of understanding and willing truth and good, but that they should only be able to induce stupidity for a short time.

[R.] 438. 'They have tails like unto scorpions'=truths of the Word falsified, by means of which they induce stupidity.

— Everyone who assumes a principle of religion from his own intelligence, and sets it for a head, takes confirmations from the Word and sets them for a tail; thus does he induce stupidity upon others, and thus does he hurt them.

456°. In the light that flowed in from Heaven there appeared in their faces lividity and also stupidity. Ex.

M. 104. The third said . . . I saw those who were going up (to Heaven), and followed them, and was admitted, but . . . from the light of Heaven . . . there invaded my mind stupor, and thence thick darkness invaded my eyes, and I began to rave . . .

E. 239°. 'Amazement of heart'=no will of good.

355°. 'In that day I will smite every horse with astonishment.' . . 'Astonishment' is said of the understanding when it has no perception of good, and 'blindness' is said of it when it has no perception=apperception-of truth.

406°. 'To be astonished'=to be altogether changed as to state.

561. 'Their power is to hurt men five months'=that they induce stupor on the understanding of truth and perception of good. . . The reason why 'to hurt' here sigs. to induce stupor, is that it is said above that their tails were like unto scorpions, and by 'scorpions' is sig. what is persuasive infatuating and suffocating, thus also inducing stupor, for . . . that persuasive is of such a nature with Spirits, as to stupefy the Rational and Intellectual, whence it also induces stupor.

Amaziah. Amaziah.

E. 624¹⁰. 'Amaziah'=the perverted Church.

Ambassador. Legatus.

A. 6723. 'To send ambassadors to the sea'=to consult scientific things.

P. 197°. I heard two priests disputing with an ambassador concerning human prudence . . . it was said to the ambassador, put on a priest's garments . . . M. 354.

Ambiguous. Ambiguus. See DOUBT-ambiguous.

A. 519°. An ambiguous expression.

1007°. The sense of the words in this verse is, as it were, ambiguous.

9159. What is ambiguous, Sig.

Ambition. Ambitio.

D. 2796. On ambition. . . Since the love of the neighbour no longer exists in the world, in its place there has succeeded the ambition of becoming eminent in various ways. For that which should excite man to do what is good is the love of the neighbour, but as there is no longer any, in place thereof there is the ambition of doing great things, by which man is bent by the Lord to do good to the neighbour, to societies, and to the commonwealth.

Ambrosia. Ambrosia.

A. 4968°. To the sun they attributed horses, whose food they called ambrosia, and drink, nectar. . . They knew that foods=celestial things, and drink, spiritual things.

Ambush, To lay an. Insidiari.

Insidious. Insidiosus.

Lier in wait. Insidiator.

A. 827. They who lay an ambush by means of marriage love, and love towards little children . . .

949. They who have made the honour of prudence to consist in insidious wiles.

4951. They who lay an ambush clandestinely in order to destroy. Des. Their Hell.

5060. They who are in what is contrary to marriage love . . . are they who lay an ambush by means of love, friendship and kind offices. Des.

9009. 'He who hath not laid in wait'=when it is not of foresight from the will. To 'lie in wait'=to act from premeditation, thus from foresight; for the evil that the liar in wait is about to do, he foresees in his mind; and since he does such evil from foresight he does it also from the will.

H. 488°. Lot of those whose delight it has been to lay an ambush clandestinely.

R. 784. They lay an ambush for the wealthy when they are ill.

Amen. Amen.

F. 6. Faith and truth are one, wherefore the ancients . . . instead of faith, said truth. Hence also it is that, in the Hebrew language, truth and faith are one word, which is 'Amuna,' or amen. R. 1111.

R. 23. 'Amen'=Divine confirmation from truth, thus from the Lord Himself. 'Amen'=truth, and because the Lord was the Truth itself, He so often said, 'Verily I say unto you.'

28. 'Even so, amen'=Divine confirmation that so it would be.

61. 'Amen'=Divine confirmation that it is the truth.

199. 'These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true Witness'=the Lord as to the Word, which is Divine truth from Himself. 'Amen' is Divine confirmation from the truth itself, which is the Lord, thus from the Lord.

292. 'The four Animals said amen'=Divine confirmation from the Word. 'Amen'=Divine confirmation from the truth itself, thus from the Word.

371. 'Saying amen' (Rev. vii. 12)=Divine truth, and confirmation therefrom.

375. 'Amen' (Rev. vii. 12)=the consent of all. In this verse, 'amen' is said at the beginning, and now it is said at the end. When it is said at the beginning, it =truth, and confirmation therefrom; but when at the end, it=confirmation, and the consent of all that it is the truth.

So8. 'Amen' (Rev.xix.4)=confirmation and consent from the truth.

T. 572. 'Verily, verily'=that it is the truth; and because the Lord was the Truth itself, He therefore said this so often. He himself is also called the 'Amen.' 777.

E. 34. 'Amen' = Divine confirmation. 'Amen' = truth, for this is signified by 'amen' in the Hebrew language; and since all truth that is truth is Divine, therefore 'amen'=Divine confirmation; for truth confirms all things. And since the Lord was the Truth itself when He was in the world, He therefore said 'verily' so often. 40.

348. 'The four Animals said amen'=confirmation from the Lord out of the Inmost Heaven. . . 'Amen' = confirmation from the Divine, and also the truth.

464. 'Saying amen'=the Lord as to Divine truth from Divine good. 'Amen'=the truth; and since the Lord is the Truth itself, by 'amen,' in the highest sense, is signified the Lord as to Divine Truth. This therefore is here signified by 'amen,' because the speech is to the Lord from the Angels of the three Heavens. 'Amen' being here mentioned in the first place as well as in the last, sigs. that the Lord as to Divine truth from Divine good is in first principles and in ultimates.

469. 'Amen' = confirmation from the Divine. . . 'Amen'=the truth, and hence that it is Divine truth from the Lord; but here, confirmation from the Divine, because it is the termination of the adoration of the Angels. . . When anyone speaks Divine truth from the heart, the Lord confirms it; confirmation can come from no other source. This is signified by 'amen' at the end of prayer.

Amend. Emendare.

Amendment. Emendatio.

Amendable. Emendabilis.

A. 1107. They remain in the Lower Earth . . . that so they may be amended.

4972. Evil of guilt, or evil that a man has contracted through actual life, and has also confirmed in thought even to faith and persuasion, cannot be amended, but remains to eternity. 4174°.

4730°. When a judge punishes a malefactor . . . he is in charity towards the neighbour, for he wills his amendment . . . thus he is able to love him if he is amended . . .

4942. They who are there, are kept in such fear (of robbers) for the sake of being deterred from evils, because with some, fear is a means of amendment.

6405°. As soon as a man who is in truth and not yet in good carries out anything from a religious principle, he afterwards defends it . . . nor does he admit amendment except so far as he comes into good, for through the act he imbues it and loves it.

6977°. It is this inversion of state that is here understood, which is of such a nature that he can no longer be amended as to interior things, but only as to exterior things, namely, through fear, on account of punishment . . .

7186°. It is according to order that everyone should bear with him his own life that he had lived in the world, and that his state in the other life should be according thereto; and that the Lord's mercy should flow in with all, but that it should be diversely received, and should be rejected by those who are in evil. And since they have imbued this in the world, they retain it in the other life; nor is amendment possible in the other life, for the tree lies where it has fallen.

7332°. With the evil, truths effect nothing towards the amendment of their life, but they merely use them as a means to do evil.

7342°. Man never sets his heart to any truth if the will resists. Hence it is that the Infernals, being in the affection or cupidity of evil, are not able to receive truths of faith, consequently not to be amended.

8700°. The Divine wills nothing but good, namely the happiness of the good, and these (torments) for the sake of the restraint, and at the same time, the amendment of the wicked.

9045. 'In fining he shall be fined'=amendment. . . 'To fine'=amendment, for a fine is for the sake of amendment.

9046. 'As he shall put upon him,' when said of a fine, =amendment even to satisfaction.

9087. 'The lord of the pit shall repay'=that he with whom the falsity is, shall amend. . . 'To repay'=to amend, because a 'fine'=amendment, and the silver that he was to pay=truth, through which comes amendment.

9088°. If good or truth is perverted through falsity, then that which is perverted is to be amended through truth . . . for truth teaches what is evil and what is false, and thus man sees and acknowledges it, and when he sees and acknowledges, it can then be amended; for the Lord inflows into those things with a man that the man knows, but not into those that he does not know; wherefore neither does He amend what is evil or false before the man has been instructed that it is evil and false.

9123. Harm done in various ways to truth of faith and good of charity, and the amendment and restoration of them, are treated of in this chapter (Ex. xxii.).

9162. 'He shall repay double to his companion'=amendment to the full. 'To repay'=amendment.

9256. 'In bringing back thou shalt bring it back to him'=instruction and amendment. . . 'To bring back,' when said of those outside the Church who are in good and truth not genuine,=to instruct and amend, for thus they are brought back.

9259. 'Removing thou shalt remove [it] with him'=exhortation and endeavour of amendment. 'To remove,' when said of the falsity that does not agree with the good of the Church,=amendment, here, the endeavour of amendment, and exhortation, because such falsity is amended with difficulty.

9325¹⁰. 'The outlet of the waters'=the Natural of man which receives knowledges of truth and of good, and which is amended through the desire of truth for good. Hence it is evident that this miracle (of the healing of the waters) involves the amendment of the Church and of the life through the Word from the Lord, and through the desire of truth for good thence derived; and that amendment takes place when the Natural of man, from such a desire, receives truths from the Word.

[A.] 10243². Such as man's Natural is when he dies, such it remains, for it is not amended afterwards. Ex.

H. 508^e. After death, man remains of such a quality as his nature is that he had procured for himself through life in the world, which with the wicked can no longer be amended and changed through the way of the thought, or of the understanding of truth.

P. 328⁹. There is given to everyone after death an opportunity of amending the life, if possible. Ex.

M. 282. (Conjugal semblances) are for the sake of amendment. Gen. art.

T. 459¹⁵. They who are in Hell, who all have the love of doing evil, are kept shut up in prison, and when they do evil are punished, which the Lord permits for the sake of amendment.

D. 3910. That they who have conscience are amendable in the other life.

—. They who are in phantasies and in falsities, provided they have held marriage love to be holy, and have had conscience . . . are amendable in the other life . . . although they have contumaciously adhered to their opinions. . . But they who have not had conscience . . . are they who cannot be amended, so as to come among the Celestials, except so as to be scarcely self-conscious, like bones . . .

4037. On amendment in the other life. Gen. art. See REFORM.

Amethyst. Amethystus.

A. 9870. 'A lazure, an agate, and an amethyst'=the spiritual love of good . . . for the colour azure from white=spiritual good, or what is the same, the spiritual love of good. That a lazure is of an azure colour is known, and also that an amethyst is. See R.915.

Ammon. Ammon.

Ammonite. Ammonita.

A. 576². 'There shall not come an Ammonite and a Moabite into the congregation of Jehovah, even the tenth generation of them shall not come into the congregation of Jehovah' (Deut.xxiii.3). An 'Ammonite and a Moabite'=profanation of the celestial and spiritual things of faith.

2313^e. There was thence conceived and born something like a Church, whose so-called good is 'Moab,' and whose so-called truth is the 'Son of Ammon.'

2467. 'The younger also bore a son'=the falsified truth of that Church; 'and called his name Benammi'=its quality; 'he is the father of the Sons of Ammon even to this day'=that thence come such.

2468³. 'Edom, Moab, and the first-fruits of the Sons of Ammon, to be snatched out of his hand'=those who are in such good not as yet so defiled with falsities, wherefore they are called 'the first-fruits of the Sons of Ammon' (Dan.xi.41).

—⁵. Hence it is that . . . 'the Sons of Ammon drove out the Rephaim, whom they called Zanzummim' (Deut. ii.21). By 'Moab,' and the 'Sons of Ammon' are here signified those who were not as yet so much imbued with persuasions of evil and falsity; but these also, when they were imbued with them, that is, when their good was defiled with falsities, were also driven out.

—⁹. Because they are easily led astray, Moab is called 'the putting forth of the hand of the Philistines,' and the Sons of Ammon, 'their obedience' (Is.xi.14).

—¹⁰. The quality of those who are called 'Moab' and 'Sons of Ammon,' when their good has been altogether defiled with falsities. Ill.

—¹⁴. 'The tents of Edom, the Ishmaelites, Moab, the Hagarenes, Gebal, and Ammon' (Ps.lxxxiii.6,7)=those who are in the outward things of worship and of doctrine.

—¹⁵. Moab and Ammon in the end of days, or when altogether imbued with falsities=those with whom good is adulterated and truth falsified, in consequence of their despising, rejecting, and at length spurning all interior things. Ill.

—¹⁶. They also were nations who sacrificed their sons and daughters to Moloch; by which is signified that they extinguished truths and goods; for the god of Moab was Chemosh, and that of the Sons of Ammon was Moloch or Milchom.

3322⁵. 'Edom, and Moab, and the first-fruits of the Sons of Ammon.' . . 'Edom'=those who are in simple good, which is good such as there is with those who constitute the Lord's outward Church. In like manner 'Moab, and the Sons of Ammon.'

6405^e. 'The Sons of Ammon' (Jer.xlix.1) = those who falsify truths and live according to them when falsified.

S. 18³. 'The Sons of Ammon' (in the Word generally) =the adulteration of truth. T.200³. E.435⁷.

E. 637¹⁰. 'The Sons of Ammon'=those who are in natural good, and who falsify the truths of the Church. 653⁶.

Among. See BETWEEN.

Amorite. Emorraeus, Emorita.

A. 289. 'Your mother was a Hittite, and your father an Amorite' (Ezek.xvi.45). 'Hittite'=what is false, and 'Amorite'=what is evil.

1204. 'The Jebusites, Amorites, Girgashites,' etc. (Gen.x.16) were so many nations, by which are signified so many different idolatries. 1205.

1654. That the Lord afterwards fought and overcame falsities and evils themselves, which are the 'Amalekite' and the 'Amorite,' treated of.

1680. Chedorlaomer . . . smote . . . 'the Amorite that dwelt in Hazezon Tamar'=kinds of evils derived from falsities.

1704. Abram 'was dwelling in the oakgroves of Mamre the Amorite'=a state of perception from the rational man.

1857. 'The iniquity of the Amorites was not yet consummated' (Gen.xv.16)=the last time, when there is no longer any good. . . The 'Amorite' in the Word=evil in general, because the Land of Canaan was called the 'Land of the Amorites'; wherefore here by the 'Amorite' are signified all the nations of the Land of Canaan, by which are signified evils and falsities specifically. Hence by the 'Amorite' are signified all evils in general.

1867. 'The Amorite and the Canaanite' (Gen.xv.21)=evils.

6306. 'That I took out of the hand of the Amorite' (Gen.xlviii.22)=by means of victory over evil.

—³. By the Amorite nation is represented evil in general. Ill.

—⁴. The reason why 'Amorite'=evil in general, is that the whole Land of Canaan was called the 'Land of the Amorites.'

6859. [The Sons of Israel brought to the place] 'of the Amorite and of the Perizzite' (Ex.iii.8)=from evils and falsities thence derived. . . The 'Amorite'=what is evil. . . There are two origins of evil; one is falsity of doctrine, the other is the cupidities of the loves of self and of the world. . . These evils are signified by the 'Canaanite' and the 'Amorite.'

8054. 'And it shall be when Jehovah hath brought thee in to the land of the Canaanite, and of the Hittite, and of the Amorite, and of the Hivite, and of the Jebusite' (Ex.xiii.5)=the region of Heaven occupied by those who are in evil and falsity. . . Evil and falsity thence derived are signified by the 'Amorite.'

E. 401¹⁸. 'The kings of the Amorites'=the good of the Church vastated through evils.

503⁶. 'The five kings of the Amorites'=those who are in falsities of evil, and want to destroy the truths and goods of the Church.

655⁸. 'The five kings of the Amorites'=evils and falsities thence derived destroying the goods and truths of the Church.

A. 2468⁵. 'Emim, Rephaim, Anakim, Zamzumim' (Deut.ii.11)=those who are imbued with persuasions of evil and falsity.

2909³. That every Church in process of time decreases, until it has nothing of faith and charity left, and that it is then destroyed, was represented by Kirjath Arba which is Hebron being possessed by Anakim, by whom are signified direful persuasions of falsity. Ill.

Analogy. Analogia.

Analogue. Analogon.

Analogous. Analogus.

Analogical. Analogicus.

Analogically. Analogice.

A. 196². Have not animals an analogue of reason?

671. With an unregenerate man there does not exist understanding of truth, or will of good . . . they are only analogous. P.296¹¹.

1442. They who become spiritual men . . . have what is an analogue of perception.

4570². The internal of the Natural is constituted of those things that are thence analytically and analogically concluded . . . thus the Natural communicates through sensual things with worldly and corporeal things, and through analogical and analytical things with the Rational; thus with those things that are of the Spiritual World.

4622². Spirits and Angels enjoy . . . sight, hearing, smell, an analogue of taste, and touch.

W. 56. Every created thing . . . having been created in God from God, is an analogue; and through that conjunction, is like an image of God in a mirror.

T. 491. God implanted freedom not only in man, but also in every beast, yea an analogue of it in inanimate things.

—². This is what is called an analogue of free determination . . .

Analysis. Analysis.

Analytical. Analyticus.

Analytically. Analytice.

A. 1495². The thought and faculty of judging; in these all the arcana of analytical art and science lie hidden . . . 2004².

2556. Hence man has the faculty of thinking etc., which is so wonderful, as to surpass . . . indefinitely the analyses that human industry has drawn out thence.

3348. (Useless analytics, called metaphysics and logic. Des.)

4154². The interior man who judges and concludes from analytical things unfolded from natural scientifics . . .

4570². See ANALOGY at this ref.

4658³. I afterwards spoke with Aristotle about analytical science, and it was given to say that a little child would speak more philosophically, analytically, and logically in half an hour, than he could describe in volumes; because all things of human thought and thence of human speech are analytic, the laws of which are from the Spiritual World.

[A.] 5288². To view things, to perceive them, to think analytically, to conclude thence, and at length to refer them to the will, and through the will into act . . .

H. 130. Man's spiritual light is the light of his understanding, and its objects are truths, which he disposes analytically into orders, forms into reasons, and from them concludes things in series.

N. 49¹. The sight of the inward man is in the light of Heaven, and therefore man is able to think analytically and rationally.

W. 189. Abstractions, which remain no longer than while analytical things from metaphysical are in the thought.

255². Since beasts are not able to think analytically, and to see lower thought from higher, they are therefore not able to speak. 66.247.

355⁰. Consider whether . . . you could think analytically, unless the Divine from its wisdom flowed in through the Spiritual World. M.419⁰.

P. 317. Every man is in the Spiritual World as to his spirit . . . thus in spiritual light, which illustrates the interiors of his understanding, and as it were dictates . . . Hence it is that man is able to think analytically . . .

M. 380⁰. We have adduced these arguments from the analysis of reason . . . T.35⁰.

I. 12⁴. That man is rational from the union of spiritual things with natural, is manifest from the analytical things of his thought.

T. 131. The simple . . . see better from comparisons, than from deductions formed analytically from the Word, and at the same time from reason.

142². These operations of the Lord cannot be expounded here one by one, because everyone demands its own analysis confirmed from the Word, and illustrated by reason.

350. The sole source of wisdom is Divine truths distributed analytically into forms by means of light flowing in from the Lord. Human intelligence, that is truly such, is from no other source.

365⁰. Spiritual light is that from which the understanding sees and perceives rational things analytically, as the eye sees and perceives natural things symmetrically.

454. The inward man is in the Spiritual World, and the outward man in the natural world. The reason why man has been so created, is that he may be associated with Spirits and Angels in their world, and may thence think analytically.

475. Since the spirit of man is in society with Spirits in their world, he is also in spiritual thought and speech with them, because his mind is spiritual interiorly, but natural exteriorly, wherefore he communicates with Spirits through his interiors, and with men through his exteriors. Through this communication man perceives things, and analytically thinks them.

Anamim. Anamim.

A. 1194. 'Mizraim begat Ludim, and Anamim,' etc. (Gen.x.13)=so many nations, by which are signified so many rituals.

Anastomosis. Anastomosis. T.60².

Anathema. Anathema.

A. 55. 'Antiquities' [old estates] (Ezek.xxxvi.11)=the Most Ancient Church. 477².

274⁰. 'Days of antiquity' (Is.xxxvii.36)=the antediluvian time.

1540⁰. Wherefore all the books of the Ancients were so written as to bear a different meaning in the interior sense from what they did in the letter.

2252². The Ancients designated the state of the Church by means of numbers . . .

2591. There are scarcely any wise men at this day, but there were very many in ancient times, especially in the Ancient Church, from which wisdom emanated to many nations.

2593. It has also been given to speak with others who lived in ancient times, and who at that time were among the wiser ones . . . they were intensely delighted when I read something from the Word to them . . . they said that in their time . . . their manner of thinking and speaking, and also of writing was like that, and that this was the study of their wisdom. H.323.

2722⁰. The Ancients after the flood knew from tradition and collected materials what all the objects in nature signified . . .

2724³. It was customary with the Ancients to adjoin something to the name of Jehovah, and thus to remember His benefits or attributes. Ill.

2762⁰. At this day even, when what is intellectual is described, from a custom that has been received from the Ancients, we are wont to describe it by a flying horse, or Pegasus . . .

2763³. The science of correspondences, which was so highly cultivated and esteemed by the Ancients after the flood . . .

2906^e. 'Ancient years' (Mal.iii.4) = the Ancient Church.

2916^b. Since burial signified resurrection . . . the Ancients were so solicitous about their burials. Ill.

3090. Therefore the Ancients instituted a marriage between the will and the understanding.

3122. The Most Ancients who were celestial . . . the Ancients who were spiritual . . .

3419. 'Isaac returned and dug again the wells that they had dug in the days of Abraham his father' (Gen.xxvi.18) = that the Lord would open those truths that the Ancients were in possession of.

—². The truths that the Ancients were in possession of are at this day altogether obliterated . . . They had representatives and significatives of the celestial and spiritual things of the Lord's Kingdom, thus of the Lord Himself; and those who understood them they called wise men. . . And since the Ancients were in these representatives and significatives . . . they also had doctrinals that treated in the most especial manner of love to God and charity towards the neighbour, from which also they were called 'wise men.'

—³. These doctrinals are utterly lost at this day, and in their place there are doctrinals of faith, which the Ancients made relatively nothing of. Ex.

3482. The Ancients, having intercourse with Spirits and Angels, had no other speech (than such speech as that of the Word); it was full of representatives, and there was a spiritual sense in every particular. The books of the Ancients were also written in the same way, for so to speak and so to write was the study of their wisdom.

3596^e. Feasts among the Ancients described.

3727. The Ancients who were after the flood had this (custom of setting up stones) from the Most Ancients who were before the flood. Refs. 4580².

3915. The custom among the Ancients of acknowledging as legitimate sons and daughters that were born of maid-servants with the consent of the wife . . . was derived from the Ancient Church. Ex.

3942. With the Ancients who belonged to the Church, all fruits and flowers were significative . . .

3974. (The law concerning women servants among the Ancients.)

4211. Banquets and feasts among the Ancients, signified appropriation and conjunction through love and charity.

4299⁴. That no one could see Jehovah face to face and live, was known to the Ancients; and the knowledge of it was thence derived to the descendants of Jacob.

4326³. With the Ancients, whose age was called silver, because they were in a state of truth, and thence in charity towards the neighbour, the Involuntary that belongs to the cerebellum was not manifest in the right part of the face, but only in the left. (Compare with Most Ancients at this ref.)

4328. The Ancients who formed the Lord's Spiritual

Church, had the Voluntary utterly destroyed, but the Intellectual entire, in which the Lord, through regeneration, formed a new Voluntary, and through that a new Intellectual also. Refs.

4380^e. In Heaven they think and speak by abstract expressions. . . So to speak was also familiar to the Ancients.

4429³. The representatives that were commanded to the descendants of Jacob were not new, but were for the most part such things as were in use among the Ancients. But the Ancients did not worship the outward things, as the descendants of Jacob did, but inward things: through inward things they acknowledged the Lord Himself.

4431. 'The son of Hamor the Hivite' (Gen.xxxiv.2) = from the Ancients. Ex.

4433. Interior truth from the Ancients, which is signified by Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, is that truth which was the Internal of the Church among the Ancients . . .

4442. 'Hamor the father of Shechem' reps. the truth of the Ancients.

— . The manner of writing among the Ancients. . . It was general among them to introduce things as it were speaking; as wisdom, intelligence, etc. and also to bestow names upon them. . . The gods and demigods of the Ancients—veterum—were nothing else.

4459. 'Shechem' = truth among the Ancients, or what is the same, truth from an ancient Divine stock. Ex.

4572. Jehovah, or the Lord, was called by the Ancients God Shaddai relatively to temptations, and consolation after them.

4745. It was usual with the Ancients, when they had determined anything of a memorable nature . . . to eat together, by which they signified that they had approved of it and thus had appropriated it. Ill.

4748. Among the Ancients, sweet-scented substances were used in their worship. . . The things that were in use among the Ancients derived their origin from celestial and spiritual things that are in the Heavens . . .

4904. The Lord opened the internal things of His Kingdom; but still these internal things were known to the Ancients . . .

4966³. From these examples it is manifest what was the nature of the scientifics of the Ancients, and that they led them into the knowledge of spiritual and celestial things.

—^e. Hence it is evident how greatly mankind have gone back from the learning of the Ancients, which led to wisdom.

5044⁴. The truths of the Ancient Church are signified by 'the Kings of antiquity' (Is.xix.11). 6015.

5194^e. The Ancients likened each and all things in the world . . . to marriages. Refs.

5222. The Ancients called interior affection and thought the spirit; but by the spirit they understood specifically the interior man that is to live after the death of the body.

5224³. Such an obscurity of the understanding there never was with the Ancients; their wisdom consisted in the cultivation of interior things, and thus the perfecting of both the intellectual and voluntary faculties. . . That such things were matters of care with the Ancients, follows from their writings that are extant at this day, and also from the desire of all to hear Solomon (1 Kings v.14.)

[A.] 5628. The Ancients distinguished the one only God by various names according to the various things that are from Him . . .

5649⁴. In ancient times they who were of the Church knew such things (as are here contained in the inward sense), being taught them by their scientifics, and also by their doctrinals, for they were interior men . . .

5658². That silver sigs. truth, was very well known in ancient times. Hence the Ancients distinguished times from the first age to the last into the golden, silver, copper, and iron ages . . .

5708. The Ancients knew through traditions from the Most Ancient Church, what some numbers signified, wherefore they used these numbers when anything came in their way to the signification of which they were serviceable . . .

6065. The Most Ancients who were of the Celestial Church were in good from an origin in the will, but the Ancients who were of the Spiritual Church were in good from an origin in the understanding . . .

6182. 'I will lie with my fathers' (Gen.xlvii.30)= life such as the Ancients had.

6201. That man can be withdrawn from sensual things was known to the Ancients, wherefore also some of them have written concerning that state.

6313. This elevation from sensual things was known to the Ancients, even to the Gentiles, wherefore their Sophi said, when the mind is withdrawn from sensual things, that it comes into interior light . . .

6589. 'He shall make you go up from this land to the land which He sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob' (Gen.i.24)=that they would come to the state of the Church in which the Ancients were.

6630. But in process of time this ancient wisdom declined . . .

6705. The Ancients reduced the neighbour into classes . . .

6832⁷. That fire was a representative of Divine love was very well known to the Ancients . . . as is evident from the fact that this representative emanated from the Ancient Church even to remote nations that were in idolatrous worship. It is well known that they instituted a sacred perennial fire, and set virgins over it whom they called Vestal Virgins.

6849². That without this preservation everyone would perish by the presence of the Divine, was known to the Ancients, wherefore they feared to see God . . . Ill.

7259. The Ancients, with whom the doctrine of charity was the very doctrine of the Church, distinguished charity towards the neighbour into many classes . . .

7729⁸. How much the Ancients excelled the moderns in intelligence, is evident from the fact that they knew to what things in Heaven many things in the world correspond . . . and this not only they who were of the Church, but also they who were outside the Church, as they who were in Greece, the most ancient of whom described things by significatives. Examp.

7806. (The Spirits of Jupiter) see an ancient man with a white face . . .

8215⁵. 'The Ancient of Days' is the Lord as to Divine good.

8261³. Such an effect had the Songs of the Church with the Ancients. . . Hence it is that glorifications of the Lord with the Ancients who belonged to the Church were effected by means of Songs, Psalms, and musical instruments of various kinds, for the Ancients who belonged to the Church felt a joy that surpassed all joys in the contemplation of the Lord's Advent, and the salvation of the human race by Him.

8705⁵. They who think of God not from themselves, nor from the flesh, but from the spirit, think about Him determinately, that is, they present to themselves an idea of the Divine under a human form-specie . . . so did the wise Ancients think; to whom also, when the Divine Itself appeared, He appeared as a Divine Man . . .

8944². The Ancients who were Gentiles knew that there is a Divine, that He is to be worshipped, and that man as to his soul is immortal . . . not from the lumen of their own nature, but from revelation, which had been diffused from the Church even to them; for the Lord's Church was in the Land of Canaan from the most ancient times. Thence had emanated such things as were of Divine worship to the surrounding nations, and also to the neighbouring Greeks, and from these to the Italians or Romans . . .

9011⁶. There was knowledge of an inward sense among the Ancients in Chaldea, Assyria, Egypt, Arabia, and thence in Greece; in whose books, emblems, and hieroglyphics, such things are still to be met with.

9396². At this day, scarcely anyone speaks with Angels and Spirits, and thence knows how they perceive the Word; yet this was known to the Ancients, especially to the Most Ancients, for it was a common thing with them to speak with Spirits and Angels. The reason was, that the men in ancient times, especially in the most ancient ones, were interior men, for they thought in the spirit almost abstractedly from the body.

9407¹⁴. This light, which is Divine truth proceeding from the Lord, has been described by the Ancients by means of radiant circles of a golden colour around the head and body of God represented as a man, for the Ancients perceived God no otherwise than under a human form.

9408². The Ancients had no other idea of the visible heaven, than that the residents of Heaven dwelt there, and that the stars were their habitations.

9470³. 'The Ancient of Days' is the Lord as to celestial good, such as He was in the Most Ancient Church, which was a celestial Church, and is called 'Ancient' in the Word.

H. 82. Since there is such a perception in the Heavens concerning the Divine, it is therefore implanted in every man who receives any influx from Heaven to think of God under a human form—specie. This did the Ancients. This also do the moderns, both outside and inside the Church; the simple see Him in thought as an Ancient One in brightness.

322. There are both wise and simple among the Gentiles . . . But at this day there are no such wise ones as in ancient times. . . That I might know what they were like, it has been granted me to have familiar conversation with some of them. See CICERO.

323. It has also been granted me to speak with others who had lived in ancient times, and who were among the more wise. . . From one idea of thought they knew the entire series, and could fill it with delightful things of wisdom, and with pleasant representations.

S. 102. That the Word with the Ancients was written by means of mere correspondences . . . has been related to me through Angels, and it has been said that that Word is still preserved among them, and is in use in that Heaven with the Ancients who had that Word in the world. The Ancients with whom that Word is still in use in Heaven, were partly from the Land of Canaan and its confines, and also from Syria, Mesopotamia, Arabia, Chaldea, Assyria, Egypt, Sidon, Tyre, and Nineveh; the inhabitants of all which kingdoms were in representative worship, and thence in the science of correspondences. The wisdom of that time was from that science, and through it they had interior perception, and communication with the Heavens. They who knew the correspondences of that Word interiorly, were called Wise and Intelligent, and afterwards Diviners and Magicians.

F. 6. Faith and truth are one, therefore the Ancients, who were in thought concerning truths from affection more than our people are, instead of faith, said truth.

R. 47⁵. That the 'Ancient of Days' is the Lord from eternity is manifest from Micah; 'Thou Bethlehem Ephrata, little as thou art to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall come forth unto Me One who shall be a ruler in Israel, and whose goings forth are from of old, from the days of eternity' (v.2). 291². E. 195¹⁸. 336⁹.

M. 78³. The idols among the Ancients who lived in the Silver Age . . . were images representative of spiritual things and of moral virtues.

—7. (A Spirit of the Iron Age) said, This lightning is a sign to us that the Ancient One from the east is about to come, who will teach us about God . . . This Ancient One is our Angel . . .

T. 205. The Ancients, who were in the science of correspondences, made themselves images that corresponded to heavenly things, and with which they were delighted, because they signified such things as were of Heaven and the Church, and therefore they set them not only in their temples, but also in their houses; not for the purpose of adoration, but to remind them of the heavenly things they signified . . . S. 23.

A. 1124. Those who lived immediately before the Flood . . . said that they represented the Lord to themselves as an ancient man with a white beard. . . D. 3355.

10711. The inhabitants of the fourth Earth . . . want to be bearded, and to appear ancient, because they always elect and set over themselves some bearded Old Man . . .

T. 279². That ancient Word . . . —³.

Ancient Church. Ecclesia Antiqua. See HEBREW CHURCH, MOST ANCIENT CHURCH, and NOAH.

A. 55. 'Beginnings' = the Ancient Church after the flood. 477.

93². The Ancient Church treated of in Ezek. xvi. 5319². —³. 5433². 5620⁴. 5954⁵. 10540².

349². 'Days of old' = the Ancient Church. 2906⁶.

466. The tenth Church, parent of three Churches after the Flood, is 'Noah,' which Church is to be called the Ancient Church. 528.

477³. 'Generation and generation' = the Ancient Churches.

489². 'Its sons shall be as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established before Me' (Jer.xxx.20) = the truths of the Ancient Church.

530. 'Noah' = the Ancient Church, or the doctrine remaining from the Most Ancient Church.

—². The few things that remained from the Most Ancient Church were with those who constituted the Church called 'Noah,' but these remnants were not of perception but of integrity, and also of doctrine from the percepts of the Most Ancient Churches, wherefore a new Church was now first raised up by the Lord, which, being of a different native character from the Most Ancient Churches, is to be called the Ancient Church.

It is to be called Ancient from the fact that it existed at the end of the ages before the Flood, and in the first time after it.

[A.] 534. 'Noah' = the Ancient Church. 'Shem, Ham and Japheth' = three Ancient Churches, of which the parent was the Ancient Church called 'Noah.'

597. 'Noah' = a new Church, which is to be called the Ancient Church to distinguish between the Most Ancient Church which was before the Flood, and that which was after it. The states of these Churches were quite different. . . The state of the Ancient Church, or 'Noah,' consisted in having a conscience of what is good and true. . . The Ancient Church was a spiritual Church. 607. 765.

605. The formation of the [Ancient Church] called 'Noah' is described by the 'ark.' 701.

612. The essential of the Ancient Church was charity.

640. Besides the Ancient Church called 'Noah,' there were other Churches at that time. . .

670. The man of this Church was to be regenerated first as to intellectual things. Sig.

773. All the Churches called 'Shem, Ham, and Japheth' together constituted the Church which is called the Ancient Church. 788. 915.

788. 'Noah' was not the Ancient Church itself, but was as the parent or seed of that Church. But 'Noah,' together with 'Shem, Ham, and Japheth,' constituted the Ancient Church which immediately followed the Most Ancient Church. Ex.

805°. Since the communication with Heaven had ceased, the men of the Ancient Church could not be celestial men, but spiritual.

897. The regenerate man of the Ancient Church treated of.

915°. 'Noah' did not constitute the Ancient Church. but his sons 'Shem, Ham and Japheth' . . . for there were as there were three Churches which formed this Ancient Church.

920. In this verse is described the worship of the Ancient Church in general. Ex.

975. The Ancient Church is here treated of in general.

976. Lastly there is described the duration and state of the first Ancient Church by the years of Noah's age. 1104.

1023. The heavenly marriage . . . with the man of the Ancient Church was in his intellectual proprium. Ex.

1062. In the Ancient Church, as in every other, there were internal men, corrupt internal men, and external men. See SHEM.

1068. The doctrinal things possessed by the man of the Ancient Church were preserved from the revelations and perceptions of the Most Ancient Church. . . These doctrinals were their Word. 1071. 1409°. 2897.

1069. The Ancient Church, being spiritual, is described by a 'vineyard' . . . as in 'I will sing to my Beloved a song of my Beloved, of his vineyard,' where 'vineyard' = the Ancient Church.

1071. The man of this Church had no perception like the man of the Most Ancient Church, but had to learn what is good and true from the doctrinals of faith collected and preserved from the perception of the Most Ancient Church . . .

—2. 'Israel' = the Ancient Church.

1072°. The Ancient Church at the beginning was of the character here described (by the drunkenness of Noah) especially those who were of the stock of the Most Ancient Church. 9960¹⁶.

1083. The inward things of the Ancient Church were all things that are of love and of faith thence. . . The outward things of that Church were sacrifices etc., all of which by representation related to the Lord, and regarded Him. Thus the inward things were in the outward, and made one Church. The inward things of the Christian Church are quite like those of the Ancient Church. . . The Ancient Church did not differ in the least from the Christian Church as to inward things, but only as to outward ones. 1141.

1088. This parent Church, or the man of this Church, did not act thus from wickedness, but from simplicity. Sig.

1126. There appeared to me a small chamber, and when the door was opened, there came into view a long man clothed in raiment of intense whiteness. . . He signified those who were called 'Noah' or who were the first men of the Ancient Church, which was the Church after the Flood, and they were thus represented because they were few.

1128. There appeared a Spirit veiled as it were with a cloud, and in his face were many wandering stars, which signified falsities. Such was the posterity of the Ancient Church when it began to perish, especially those who instituted worship by sacrifices and images.

1130. In the whole of this chapter the Ancient Church and its propagation are treated of.

1136. Concerning inward worship, which is 'Shem,' and its extension to a second Ancient Church.

1137. Concerning a certain Church which existed in Syria, instituted by Heber, which is to be called the second Ancient Church.

1138. That the worships of the Ancient Church were diverse, and according to the genius of each nation.

1140°. The names in this chapter, except Heber and his descendants, mean so many nations, and there were so many nations who constituted the Ancient Church, which was spread far and wide around the Land of Canaan. 1141, Ex.

1145. 'These are the nativities of the sons of Noah' = the derivations of the doctrinals and worships of the Ancient Church, which in general is 'Noah.'

1148. The Church before the Flood is called the Most Ancient Church, but the Church after the Flood, the Ancient Church.

1153°. The differences of worship . . . among the various nations of the Ancient Church. Ex.

1195. Hence the Egyptians rejected, yea nauseated the rites of the Ancient Church. 5702°, Ex.

1218. 'Shem' here = the Ancient Church in general.

1219. 'There were born to Shem'=that a new Church existed from the Ancient Church.

1220. 'Heber'=a new Church, which is to be called the second Ancient Church. 1239.

1221. His being 'the father of all the sons of Heber'=that this second Ancient Church, and things appertaining to it, existed from the former Ancient Church as from their father.

1222. 'The elder brother of Japheth' involves that the second Ancient Church, called 'Heber,' was to the first Ancient Church as a brother; for 'Japheth'=outward worship in which there is inward, of any Church; thus also the worship of this new Ancient Church, which was principally outward. . . Hence 'the elder brother of Japheth'=the worship of the new Ancient Church, that it was outward.

1224. These names signify that the Ancient Church, which was inward, was endowed with wisdom, intelligence, science, and knowledges of truth and good.

1238. Since the Ancient Church was such . . . as to include a true inward, a corrupt inward, a true outward and a corrupt outward (Church), these names are used that all differences in general may be referred to them and their sons, as to their heads.

—². The first Ancient Church, signified by Noah and his sons, was not confined to a few, but was extended through many kingdoms, namely Assyria, Mesopotamia, Syria, Ethiopia, Arabia, Lybia, Egypt, Philistia even to Tyre and Sidon, and through the whole land of Canaan on both sides of the Jordan, as appears from the nations here named. 2385⁵. 10177¹⁰. H.327. P.328². T.279. E.391⁶. 422²⁰. Coro.39.

— . But a certain outward worship afterwards began in Syria, which in process of time spread far and wide, through many lands, especially through Canaan, which was different from the worship of the Ancient Church. And as there thus arose somewhat of a Church, that was separate from the Ancient Church, there thus arose as it were a new Church, which may therefore be called the second Ancient Church. Of this, Heber was the first institutor. 1241. 3031.

1241. In process of time the first Ancient Church degenerated and was adulterated by innovators as to both outward and inward worship, and this in various places, especially in this way, that all the significatives and representatives that the Ancient Church had from the mouth of the Most Ancient . . . were turned into idolatrous things, and with some nations into magical ones.

—^e. Sacrifices were unknown to the true Ancient Church, except with some of the descendants of Ham and Canaan, who, being idolaters, were allowed to have them to prevent their sacrificing their sons and daughters.

1254. 'These are the families of the sons of Noah'=the worships of the Ancient Church in particular.

1279, 1280. (The first Ancient Church, and its four states from its perfection to its decline and fall treated of in the account of the building of the tower of Babel.) 1283. 1285, Ex. 1292. 1295.

1281. The second Ancient Church, named from Heber, treated of; its derivation and state, and that it ceased at last in idolatry.

1282. The origin of a third Ancient Church treated of, which, from being idolatrous, was made representative.

1324. 'They ceased to build the city'=that such doctrine, or such worship, in which there is inwardly the love or the worship of self, was not permitted in this Ancient Church.

1327. 'Jehovah confounded the lip of the whole earth'=the state of this Ancient Church, that inward worship began to perish.

— . With regard to the Churches after the Flood, the case is this. There were three Churches that are specifically mentioned in the Word, namely, the first Ancient Church which was named from Noah, the second Ancient Church named from Heber, and the third Ancient Church named from Jacob and afterwards from Judah and Israel. The first one was the parent of the succeeding ones . . . and was more unimpaired and guiltless . . . But in process of time it began to fall, chiefly from the fact that many of them began to draw worship to self in order to be more eminent than others . . . 'For they said, Let us build us a city and a tower, and its head in heaven, and let us make us a name.' Such persons must needs act as a kind of leaven in the Church, or as a torch causing a conflagration. When, from this cause, the danger of the profanation of what is holy threatened the Church, of the Lord's Providence its state was changed, namely, that its inward worship perished and its outward remained, which is here signified by Jehovah's confounding the lip of the whole earth. . . Hence it is evident that such worship as is called 'Babel' did not prevail in the first Ancient Church, but in the succeeding ones when men began to be worshipped as gods, especially after death; whence came so many gods of the Gentiles.

1328. That the first Ancient Church was deprived of the knowledges of truth and good, is evident from the fact that the nations which constituted that Church for the most part became idolaters and still had a certain outward worship.

1330. 'These are the nativities of Shem'=the derivations of the second Ancient Church.

1331. That the inward worship of this Church was scientific. Sig. 1337, Ex.

1335. 'Two years after the Flood'=the second post-diluvian Church . . . when this second Church began.

1339. 'Arphaxad lived thirty-five years'=the beginning of the second state of this Church, and also that state itself.

1342. 'Shelah lived thirty years'=the beginning of a third state. 'And begat Heber'=derivation thence. Heber was a nation that was called the Hebrew nation, by which is signified the worship in general of the second Ancient Church. 1343.

1343. The Ancient Church, that is, the Church after the Flood, also acknowledged the Lord, and called Him Jehovah, especially they who had inward worship, and were called 'sons of Shem.' 1607².

[A.] 1345. 'Heber lived thirty-four years'=the beginning of the fourth state of this Church. (And so on. See 1347. 1349. 1351. 1353. 1355.)

1361³. In the Ancient Churches, representatives extended to all objects of the senses.

1409². It thus appears that representatives had their rise from the significatives of the Ancient Church, and these from the celestial ideas of the Most Ancient Church.

1540⁰. If a man of the Most Ancient or of the Ancient Church lived now, and read the Word, he would not attend at all to the sense of the letter, but to the inward sense. . . Wherefore the books of the Ancients were so written as to bear a different meaning inwardly.

1551. The Silver Age was the time of the Ancient Church, which was a spiritual man.

1588. 'The garden of God' is said when the Rational is spiritual, that is, from a spiritual origin, as with the Ancient Church.

1675⁵. Balaam was one of the sons of the east or from Syria, where was the residue of the Ancient Church. 1796. 1992.

1735. Jehovah was called God Most High in the Ancient Church because . . . the highest signified the inmost. Hence the worship of the Ancient Church upon high places, mountains and hills.

1799⁰. The Ancient Church immediately after the Flood, although scattered through many kingdoms . . . differed much among themselves as to doctrinal things, but still made charity the principal, and regarded worship, not from doctrinal things that are of faith, but from charity that is of the life, which is meant by their being 'all of one lip.' 2385⁵.

1832³. Many rites in the Ancient Church, and afterwards in the Jewish Church, which in themselves were nothing but rituals in which there was no truth, were tolerated and permitted, yea commanded, because they had been held to be holy by their ancestors, and were thus implanted and impressed on their minds as truths from infancy.

1850³. The Ancient Church also had its last time; namely, when all charity grew cold, and all faith was darkened; which was about the time of Heber. This time was the Last Judgment of that Church . . . 2118. 2910³. 4333.

1914¹. The fathers of the Ancient Church, who had not perception but conscience, thought from the outer or natural Rational.

1992⁸. With those who were of the Ancient Church, Spirits were often heard who rebuked, and who afterwards comforted. Des.

1997². The Most Ancient Church . . . was in affection of good, but the Ancient Church . . . was in affection of truth . . . and was a spiritual Church. 2023⁰. 2048.

2177. The Gentiles derived their sacrifices etc. from the Ancient Church, especially from the Hebrew. 4936. 4966⁰.

—^e. The Ancient Church is described in Ezek. xvi.13. 3164². —.

2180⁴. The Ancient Church . . . was ignorant of sacrifices. It was indeed in representatives, but not in sacrifices, which were first instituted in the succeeding Church, called the Hebrew. 4433². 10603².

2243¹. The Ancient Church which was after the Flood, and was called 'Noah,' was less celestial. This Church also so fell away from the good of charity, that nothing of charity remained; for it was turned partly into magic, partly into idolatry, and partly into a sort of dogma separate from charity, and then was its consummation.

2417⁴. The Ancient Church . . . at its beginning knew no other doctrinal than the doctrinal of charity . . . but after some time there began to be cultivated with some the doctrinal of faith, which at last they separated from charity. These they called 'Ham,' because they were in the life of evil. 3412.

2441⁷. The Ancient Church understood nothing else by the 'sun' but the Lord, and the Divine Celestial of His love, wherefore they had the rite of praying towards the rising sun, not even thinking of the sun; but after their posterity had lost this, together with all other representatives and significatives, they began to worship the sun and moon themselves. . .

2588⁰. Such were writings in the Ancient Church.

2591. There were very many wise men in ancient times, especially in the Ancient Church, from whom wisdom emanated to many nations.

2605. I have spoken with some who had been in the Ancient Church, and who had then known that the Lord was to come, and had imbued the goods of faith, but had fallen away and become idolaters. (Their miserable state.) H.327.

2632⁰. Circumcision in the Ancient Church signified that man is to be purified from the loves of self and of the world. . .

2661². The Ancient Church . . . was a spiritual Church; this Church, or they who are of the Spiritual Church, could not have been saved unless the Lord had come into the world.

2682. The desolation of truth is here described (Job xxx. 3-7) by forms of speaking that were customary in the Ancient Church, for the Book of Job is a book of the Ancient Church. 2762².

2686. There were books in the Ancient Church entitled 'The Wars of Jehovah' . . . and 'Books of the Prophetic Enunciators' . . . from which we may gather that there were writings of the Ancient Church, both historical and prophetic, that were Divine and inspired . . . 2897.

2708⁵. 'Jerusalem'=the Ancient Church, which was spiritual. 3103². 3147⁵. 3301⁵. 5954⁵.

2722. In the Ancient Church holy worship was held on mountains and in groves; on mountains, because they signify the celestial things of worship, and in groves, because they signify its spiritual things. So long as the Ancient Church was in its simplicity, their worship upon mountains and in groves was holy . . . 4552³. 6435¹¹, Ex.

—⁶. The Ancients after the Flood, from traditions and collected accounts, knew that visible objects were significative, and therefore held them to be holy. Hence came the representative worship of the Ancient Church, which Church, being spiritual, was not in perception that it was so, but in knowledge, for it was relatively in obscurity. Still it did not worship outward things, but by means of outward things remembered inward, and thus they were in holy worship when they were in representatives and significatives. They were able to do this for this reason also, that they were in spiritual love, that is, in charity, which they made the essential of worship, wherefore what is holy from the Lord could flow into their worship.

2724⁹. The Ancient Church, from which came so many epithets, never worshipped any but one God under so many names.

2732. Many of the Ancient Church were in true marriage love.

2762³. From the Ancient Church, the signification of a horse was derived to the wise men around, even into Greece. 4280.

2913. There were many inhabitants of Canaan . . . and among them the Hittites . . . Many of them were from the Ancient Church . . . All who were from that Church acknowledged charity as the principal thing, and their doctrinals were all of charity or life . . . 4429³. 4516. 4517.

2943. Cities in the Ancient Church were not such cities as there were afterwards, and as there are now, namely companies and congregations, but were cohabitations of separate families; the family of one parent constituted a city . . .

3147³. The reason why this was signified by washings in the Ancient Church, but was represented in the Jewish, was that the man of the Ancient Church regarded that rite as an outward thing of worship, and did not believe that he was purified by washing, but by the ablution of the filth of the natural man . . .

3179³. The Ancient Church formed for itself an idea of such things from marriages, namely, from the state of a virgin before betrothal, etc. Such was the wisdom of the Ancient Church. Their books were also written so, and this manner of writing emanated from them to the Gentiles themselves; for they wished to express the things which are in Heaven by means of those which are in the world, yea, to see spiritual things from natural. 3540¹. 3901⁶.

3187². In the Ancient Church this was a customary devout wish to a betrothed virgin, when she was going to be married; 'Be thou for thousands of myriads, and may thy seed inherit the gate of thine enemies.' But by these words the wise ones of that Church understood spiritual things . . .

3249². The last remains of the Ancient Church were in Syria . . . 4112².

3255. Many of those who were from the Ancient

Church, and were in like truth, dwell together in Heaven.

3268¹⁰. The reason why by these nations (named from the twelve sons of Ishmael) are signified the things appertaining to the Spiritual Church, is that the Ancient Church, which was spiritual, was among them.

3596². The reason appears from the inward meaning of the rituals of the Ancient Church, for eating with them signified appropriation and conjunction . . .

3667. They who were of the Ancient Church by all these denominations did not understand any but the One God, namely the Lord, whom they called Jehovah. 4162.

3686². The Ancient Church . . . was also in the land of Canaan. . . The representatives (of rivers etc. there, attached to them by the Most Ancients) remained in the Ancient Church. . . The Word in the Ancient Church also had the names of places representative from this source.

3727. The worship of the Ancient Church was established from the percepts and significatives of the Most Ancients. Examp. 3915. 4264⁹.

3941². The Ancient Church is treated of in Deut. xxxii. 13, 14, and its state when established. 3994³. 5117⁹. 5943⁹. 6075². 6239¹. 6269⁶. 6534. 9780⁸.

3942². The Book called Solomon's Song has not an inward sense, but is written in the ancient style, and is full of significatives collected from the books of the Ancient Church.

4171². Hence it is that as in the Ancient Church, so also in the Jewish, it was forbidden to eat what died of itself . . .

4288. The Ancient Church . . . was a representative Church, but that instituted with the descendants of Jacob was only the representative of a Church. Ex.

4425. The subject treated of in this chapter is the extinction of all truth of doctrine of the Ancient Church by the descendants of Jacob.

4430. 'Shechem' = the truth of the Church from Ancient time. 4444. 4459.

4439. 'Jacob' here = the outward Ancient Church. For that Church was to have been instituted among his descendants; and would have been if they had received the interior truths that prevailed among the Ancients. 4442. 4500. 4831.

4442. 'Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to speak with him' = consultation of the truth of the Church with the Ancients, with the truth that was according to the Ancient Church to be established anew among the descendants of Jacob.

—². The ancient Sophi derived their style of writing from the Ancient Church . . . and these, from the mouth of the Most Ancients.

4444⁶. The statutes, judgments and laws that were given to the Israelitish nation, were not new, but were such things as had been in the Ancient Church, and in the second Ancient Church called Hebrew. 4449. 4700. 4835.

4447. By the Church among the Ancients is meant the Church derived from the Most Ancient Church, which was before the Flood, and by the Ancient Church, is meant the Church after the Flood. Ex.

[A.] 444⁸. The case was different with the Ancient Church, which was spiritual. This was not in love to the Lord, like the Most Ancient, but in charity towards the neighbour, and they could not come to charity except through the truth of faith, of which they had no perception, as the Most Ancients had, therefore they then began to discuss concerning truth, whether it was so.

4475. 'Dinah' = the affection of truth of the Ancient Church . . . and with this, or what is the same, with this Church, there was a desire of conjunction.

4489³. They who were of the Ancient Church were not internal but external men, wherefore the Lord could not flow in with them through an internal, but through an external way, and teach what is good ; and this first by such things as represented and signified ; whence arose the Representative Church.

4492. They receded from the doctrine of the Church among the Ancients. Sig.

4500. Extirpation of the truth of doctrine of the Church among the Ancients. Sig.

4516. 'The inhabitant of the Land' = those who were of the Ancient Church.

4519. That thus the Ancient Church would perish. Sig.

4580³. The use of statutes in the Ancient Church.

4643. 'Ada the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Aholibamah the daughter of Ana the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite' = such (affection of apparent truth) as there was from the Ancient Church.

4674. 'Joseph brought to their father their evil report.' . . 'Father' = good ; here, the good of the Ancient Church, which is represented by Jacob.

4680. 'His father loved him more than all his brethren' = that the Lord's Divine truth was conjoined with the Divine Natural ; in the proximate sense, with the Ancient Church, which is 'father.'

—². The Ancient Church which was established by the Lord after the Flood, was a Representative Church, of such a nature that each and all of its externals of worship represented the celestial and spiritual things of the Lord's Kingdom, and in the supreme sense, the Divine things themselves of the Lord ; but each and all of its internals of worship had reference to charity. That Church was spread through a great part of the Asiatic world, and through many kingdoms there, and although they differed as to doctrinals of faith, still the Church was one, because all in every part of it made charity the essential of the Church. They who at that time separated faith from charity, and made faith the essential of the Church, were called 'Ham.' But in process of time, this Church turned away to idolatrous things, and in Egypt, Babel, and elsewhere, to magic ; for they began to worship outward things without inward, and as they thus receded from charity, Heaven also receded from them, and in its place came Spirits from Hell, who led them. When this Church was desolated, a certain new Church commenced from Heber . . . 6628.

—⁴. Hence it is that Jacob = the Ancient Church. In many other parts of the Word also, especially the prophetic, by 'Jacob' is meant the Ancient Church. Sometimes also the Ancient Church is called 'father' and 'mother' ; 'father' as to its good, and 'mother' as to its truth.

4692². All who were of the Ancient Church, and did not separate charity from faith, believed that the God of the Universe was a Divine Man, and that He was the Divine Esse. Hence also they named Him Jehovah. They knew this from the Most Ancients, and also because He appeared to many of their brethren as a Man. They knew that all the rituals and externals of their Church represented Him . . . 4727. 4738.

4706. 'Their father (Jacob)' = the Ancient Church, and also the Primitive Church. Ex.

4738. By Jacob is represented the Jewish religion from the Ancient Church.

4772. 'They brought it to their father' = comparison with the goods and truths of the Ancient Church, and of the Primitive Church. . . These two Churches are altogether the same as to inward things, and only differ as to outward. The outward things of the Ancient Church were all representative of the Lord, and of the celestial and spiritual things of His Kingdom ; that is, of love and charity, and faith thence derived, consequently of such things as are of the Christian Church . . .

4785. 'I shall go down to my son to the grave mourning' = that the Ancient Church would perish.

4786. In the Ancient Churches also, there were wailing and weeping for the dead, by which was signified inward mourning.

4874². The representatives instituted with the descendants of Jacob were not exactly similar to those in the Ancient Church. They were for the most part like those in the Church instituted by Heber . . . In this there were many new kinds of worship, such as burnt-offerings and sacrifices, that were unknown in the Ancient Church. . . . The internal of the Church was not so conjoined with these representatives, as with those of the Ancient Church.

4904². These things had been known to those of the Ancient Church, but they were led to them by means of outward things that were representative.

4926². The Ancient Church, such as it was in its adolescence, is treated of in Ps. cxliv. 13, 14.

4964. In the Ancient Church there were doctrinals, and there were scientifics ; the doctrinals treated of love to God and of charity towards the neighbour, the scientifics, of the correspondences of the Natural with the Spiritual World, and of representatives of spiritual and celestial things in natural and earthly ones.

5044⁴. Pharaoh calls himself 'A son of the kings of antiquity,' because the scientifics in Egypt were from the truths of the Ancient Church . . .

*5117⁵. 'Israel' = the Ancient Spiritual Church at its beginning. 'Fathers,' here and elsewhere, are not the sons of Jacob, but are they with whom the Ancient Church was first established. 6050. 6075.

5223. The scientifics of the Ancient Church were cultivated especially in Egypt, and related to correspondences, representatives and significatives ; by means of which scientifics, they explained those things that were written in the books of the Church, and that they made use of in their sacred worship. 5700. 5702, Ex.

5405. In the Ancient Church, bread was broken when it was given to another, and by this was signified to communicate from one's own, and to appropriate good from one's own, and thus to have mutual love.

5433⁶. The Ancient Church as it was when instituted, and as it afterwards became, that it was at first without truths, but was afterwards instructed in truths, and at last rejected them, Sig. in Ezek.xvi.

5619. It was customary in the Ancient Representative Church, and thence in the Jewish, to give something as a present to the judges, and afterwards to the kings and priests. . . The reason was, that the presents they gave them represented such things with man as ought to be offered to the Lord when He is approached, which things are what proceed from freedom.

5628. When the Ancient Church declined, they began to worship as many gods as there were names of the One Only God. . . At last every family had its own god . . .

5663. The Divine Human was what the Ancient Church adored. Ex.

6015. 'The wise, and the Kings of Antiquity' (Is. xix. 11) = the truths of the Ancient Church.

6023². (Study of truths in the Ancient Churches.)

6269³. If good of charity were in the first place . . . and truth of faith in the second . . . the face of the Church would then be like that of the Ancient Church, which made the Church to consist in charity, and had no other doctrinals of the Church than those of charity ; hence they had wisdom from the Lord. Sig. 6629, Ex. N.9, Ex.

6280^e. 'Former years' (Mal.iii.4) = the states of the Ancient Church, which was spiritual.

6304. 'And bring you again unto the land of your fathers' = to the state of both of the Ancient Churches. . . 'Fathers' = those who were of the Ancient Church, and of the Most Ancient Church. Ex.

6428. 'From the God of thy father' = that He is the God of the Ancient Church. Jacob, who is 'father' here, = the Ancient Church. This Church was a spiritual Church, and the Lord was worshipped in it, who is here meant by the God of the Ancient Church.

6589. The Ancient Church, or the state of the Church in which the Ancients were, is signified by 'God swearing to give this land to Abraham, to Isaac and to Jacob.' . . The descendants of Jacob could only come to the external of that state, namely to representatives. . . But what is meant is, that those who are signified by the Sons of Israel shall come thereto.

6846. 'I am the God of thy father' = the Divine of the Ancient Church. . . The reason why the Ancient Church is called 'father' is that from it were born the Churches that succeeded it, namely the Hebrew Church, and afterwards the Church among the descendants of Jacob. 6884. 6892. 8270.

—². The God worshipped in the Ancient Church was the Lord as to the Divine Human, and it was known to them that it was the Lord who was represented in all the rituals of their Church. Many of them knew that the Lord was to come into the world, and make the Human in Himself Divine. In that Church no other was understood by Jehovah, for He had appeared to them as a Divine Man, and was called Jehovah. 6876, Ex.

8093². Faith alone is not a new thing, but existed in the Ancient Churches, being described by 'Cain,' 'Ham,' 'Reuben,' etc.

8762. The external of the Ancient Church was all that which represented the internal, and its internal was that which was represented by the externals. Examp.

9182⁵. The Ancient Church and its institution by the Lord is treated of in Jer.ii.2.

9193³. The Principal of the worship of the Ancient Church was to worship God under a human form, thus the Lord ; but when they turned aside from good to evil, they began to worship the representatives themselves, as the sun, moon, etc.

9340⁴. That the Ancient representative Church was in Philistia. Ill.

9391⁸. The Ancient Church, which succeeded the Most Ancient, was a representative Church, the whole of whose worship consisted in rites, statutes, judgments and precepts, which represented Divine and heavenly things. . . After the Flood, this Church was extended through a great part of the Asiatic world, and was also in Egypt ; but in Egypt they cultivated the scientifics of that Church . . . R.503^e.

10177¹⁰. (The use of incense traced to the Ancient Church.)

10248⁸. 'The years of generation and generation' (Deut.xxxii.7) = the time of the Ancient Church, E.431¹⁰.

[A.] 10644°. The Ancient Church had worship in groves and in gardens, under trees, according to their significations.

H. 327(p). The Lord was the God of the Ancient Church, and was called Jehovah.

N. 4. The reason why this New Heaven is distinct from the Ancient Heavens, is that in the Ancient Churches there was no other doctrine than the doctrine of love and charity, and they did not then know of any doctrine of faith separate. 9.

S. 20. All the Ancient Churches were Churches representative of heavenly things; their rites and statutes also, according to which their worship was instituted, consisted of mere correspondences.

P. 328⁴. The consummation of the Ancient Church is described by the various devastations of the nations that are treated of in the historical and prophetic Word, especially by the ejection of the nations from Canaan by the Sons of Israel.

R. 585. The Ancient Church, which was spiritual, held holy worship in temples.

T. 760. The second Church, which is to be called the Ancient Church, was in Asia, and partly in Africa, and was consummated and perished through idolatries.

D. 1987. That there are some now who are as it were of the Ancient Church.

4075. The posterity of the Ancient Church and their innumerable falsities, represented.

4106. The Ancient Church is above the head; they flowed in softly through the head into the breast, but did not reach the heart.

E. 433¹². 'Former years' = the Ancient Church.

443⁷. The act of Simon and Levi represented the extinction of the truth and good of the Ancient Church, which Church still remained with the nation of Hamor.

448⁷. 'The hills of an age' = the Ancient Church.

504²⁷. 'Thy mother like a vine' = the Ancient Church, which was in the good of life, and thence in truths.

555⁵. 'The woman of the youth' = the Ancient Church, which was in truths from affection.

Coro. 39. On the Noetic or Ancient Church. . . It extended at last into Great Tartary, and as far as the Euxine, and thence into all the countries of Africa.

41. The successive states of the Ancient Church cannot be so well described, because they cannot be so well collected from our Word. . . Moreover that Church was spread through many kingdoms, and was varied in each kingdom. . . That its first and second states in the regions round about the Jordan and Egypt were 'like the Garden of Jehovah' is evident from Gen.xiii.10. That the case was the same with Tyre, from Ezek. xxviii. 12-15. That Ashur was like a 'cedar in Lebanon,' from Ezek.xxxi.3-9. That wisdom flourished in Arabia is evident from the visit of the Queen of Sheba to Solomon, and from the three 'wise men.' . . The third and fourth states of that Church, which were its states of vastation and consummation, are described in the Word throughout, in both the historical and prophetic parts. The consummation of the nations round about the Jordan or the land of Canaan, is described by the destruction of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah and Zeboim. The consummation of the nations of the Church within Jordan, is described by the expulsion of some and the slaughter of others. . . The consummation of that Church in Egypt, is described by the drowning of the Egyptians in the Red Sea.

42. This Ancient Church was a representative Church, which in types, and visible and natural signs, figured the invisible and spiritual things of the Church that was to come, when Jehovah Himself should manifest Himself in a natural human form. . . But as this Ancient Church, typical of the one that was to come, converted the representative correspondences into magical and idolatrous things . . . Jehovah raised up the Israelitish Church. 43, Ex.

44. The Heaven of the Ancient Church described.

45. The Hell of the Ancient Church described.

51². Before the Incarnation of Jehovah, there could be no conjunction with Him except through an Angel. . . Hence the men of the Ancient Church . . . were external and natural, nor could they become internal and spiritual, as men can since the Advent of the Lord.

And. Et.

A. 3921². As this one thing is signified by both expressions, they are joined together by 'and also.'

4987°. The less important changes of state are indicated by 'and,' wherefore it occurs so frequently.

5578. In the Original Language of ancient times, the sense was not distinguished by stops, but the text was continuous, in imitation of heavenly speech, and in place of stops, there was 'and,' and also 'there was' or 'it came to pass.' Hence it is that these occur so frequently. 7191.

H. 241². The speech of the Celestial Angels is devoid of hard consonants, and rarely passes from one consonant to another except by the interposition of a word that begins with a vowel. Hence it is that the particle 'and' is so often interposed in the Word, as may be evident to those who read the Word in the Hebrew language, in which that particle is soft, and both begins and ends with a vowel.

Andrew. Andreas.

E. 821³. 'Andrew' = the obedience of faith.

Aner. Aner.

A. 1705. 'Mamre, Eshcol, and Aner' rep. and sig. the Angels who were with the Lord when He combated in His first childhood. . .

1754. 'Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre.' These names sig. the goods and truths from which the combat was waged; not so much the Angels. . .

—e. The names 'Eshcol, Aner, and Mamre' rep. the Angels, and therefore sig. those things that the Angels have.

Angel. Angelus.

Angelic. Angelicus.

See ANGEL OF JEHOVAH, CELESTIAL ANGEL, SPIRITUAL ANGEL, NATURAL ANGEL, HEAVEN, SPIRIT, and ANGELIC SPIRIT.

A. 50². So long as man is not regenerate . . . evil Spirits are with him, who so dominate him that the Angels, although at hand, can scarcely do anything, except merely to arrange that he does not precipitate himself into ultimate evil ; and to bend him to some sort of good and truth through his cupidities and the fallacies of his senses. . . But when he has been regenerated, the Angels have dominion, and inspire him with all goods and truths, and with horror and fear of evils and falsities. The Angels do indeed lead, yet merely minister, for it is the Lord alone Who rules man through Angels and Spirits. And since this is effected through the ministry of Angels, it is here said in the plural, 'Let us make man in our image.' But as the Lord alone rules and disposes, in the following verse it is said in the singular, 'God created him in His own image.' . . The Angels also confess that they have no power, but that they act from the Lord alone.

64. It is thus that the Angels perceive the Word.

99^o. Such is man's state when he is with the Angels in Heaven, and as it were one among them ; for man is so created that he may be in Heaven at the same time that he is living on earth.

104. This perception is so manifest with the Angels, that they can tell what is true and good, what is from the Lord, and what from themselves ; and also the quality of a stranger, at once on his arrival, and from a single idea of him. 125. 1048.

125. The men of the Most Ancient Church spoke with the Lord and with the Angels.

141^o. The Angels are in such a proprium, and then are in the utmost peace and tranquillity ; for in their proprium are contained the things which are of the Lord, who rules their proprium, or them through their proprium.

155². The Angels perceive that they live from the Lord, although, when not reflecting on the subject, they know no other but that they live from themselves. There is, however, a general affection of such a nature, that on the least departure from the good of love and the truth of faith they perceive a change. Wherefore they are in their peace and happiness, which are ineffable, when in the general perception that they live from the Lord. 1387.

227. When the evil Spirits begin to have the dominion, the Angels are in labour to avert evils and falsities, wherefore there exists a combat.

228. It is impossible to describe the exquisite perception of the Angels, whereby they know whether any thing enters that is against the truth of faith and the good of love. They perceive both the quality of that which enters, and when it enters, a thousand times more perfectly than the man himself. . . The least of thought with man is more perceptible to the Angels than the greatest.

233². Man of himself cannot possibly do what is good, and turn towards the Lord, except by the ministry of Angels ; neither can the Angels except from the Lord alone.

263. When the Sensual averts itself . . . evil Spirits begin to combat powerfully, and the Angels with the man begin to labour, wherefore the combat is described thus ; 'in multiplying I will multiply thy sorrow as to the conception and birth of sons,' that is, as to thoughts and productions of truth.

270. Such a state of life ensues when evil Spirits begin to combat, and the Angels who are with the man, to labour. This is still more the case when the evil Spirits begin to have the dominion, for they then rule his outward man, and the Angels the inward, of which so little remains that they can scarcely take any thing thence with which to defend him. Hence arise misery and anxiety.

300^o. Where anything is effected through the ministry of Angels, the plural number is used. Here also, because the celestial man, being a man, cannot be compared to the Lord, but only to the Angels, it is said that 'the man is as one of us.'

315. If a resuscitated person is not of such a disposition as to desire instruction, he wishes to be away from the company of the Angels, which the Angels exquisitely perceive . . . but even then they do not leave him, but he dissociates himself from them. The Angels love everyone, and desire nothing more than to do them service, to instruct, and to convey them to Heaven. In this consists their highest delight. 2704^o.

322. Good Spirits, Angelic Spirits and Angels. 457. 459. 634. 1480. 1642. 1752.

454. The Angelic life consists in use and in the goods of charity, for nothing is a source of more happiness to the Angels than to inform and teach Spirits coming from the world ; to serve men, and rule the evil Spirits who are with them so as to prevent them from passing beyond the bounds, and to inspire the men with what is good ; to raise up the dead to the life of eternity, and afterwards if possible, to introduce them into Heaven. From these things they perceive more delight than can ever be described. Thus are they images of the Lord, for they love the neighbour more than themselves. . . Wherefore in use, from use, and according to use, that is, according to the goods of love and of charity, is there Angelic happiness.

488³. The Angels, being in the inward sense of the Word, do not know what time is. . . Before the Angels everything relating to matter, space and time disappears . . .

548. If they would be as the Angels, they ought to love the neighbour more than themselves.

549. The Angelic state is such that each communicates his own blessedness and happiness to another. Ex.

553². The whole Angel, especially as to the face, is as it were Charity, which both appears and is perceived manifestly. Des. . . All the Angels are such forms with innumerable varieties.

607². The men of the Most Ancient Church did not converse so much by words . . . as by ideas, like the Angels . . .

633. With every man and Angel whatsoever, even the most celestial, his proprium is nothing but what is false and evil ; for it is known that the Heavens are not pure before the Lord, and that all good and truth are of the Lord alone ; but as a man or Angel can be perfected, so he is perfected, and as it were receives understanding of truth and will of good, but that he has them is only an appearance.

[A.] 637°. Man lives altogether contrary to order ; wherefore unless the Lord had compassion on him, and joined him to Himself by means of Angels, he could not live a single minute.

653. It is the Lord who fights by means of the Angels that are adjoined to the man.

660. When the way for remains is closed up, then man is no longer man, because he can no longer be protected by Angels.

661. They who have no doctrinals of faith, but live in utter ignorance, cannot . . . profane holy things, and thereby close up the way for remains, and consequently cannot expel from themselves the Angels of the Lord.

666. The Lord is here called 'the Angel of the Covenant.'

737. With those who are being regenerated through temptations, the remains are for the Angels who are with them, who take out from them those things with which they defend them against evil Spirits. 751.

761. Spiritual temptation with man is a combat of the evil Spirits with the Angels who are with the man . . . The Angels continually defend the man and avert the evils that the evil Spirits intend him ; they even defend what is false and evil in him, knowing full well that these falsities and evils come from evil Spirits and Genii. Ex.

868. Every man and Spirit, yea, every Angel, if left to himself for a single moment, would of himself rush to Hell, wherefore it is said in the Word that Heaven is not pure. This the Angels acknowledge, and whoever does not acknowledge it cannot be among the Angels, for it is the Lord's mercy alone that delivers them, yea, that draws them out of Hell and withholds them from it . . . The Angels perceive this manifestly, and so to some extent do good Spirits. 1438°.

904. There are with every man at least two evil Spirits and two Angels, the former excite his evils, and the latter inspire goods and truths. Everything good and true that the Angels inspire is of the Lord. 968°. 986.

967. When the evil are being punished, Angels are always present who moderate the punishment and alleviate the suffering, but they cannot take it away.

987. It has been shown me by living experience that a man, a Spirit, yea, even an Angel, regarded in himself, that is, the whole of his proprium, is the vilest excrement, and when left to himself breathes nothing but hatreds, revenges, cruelties, and the most filthy adulteries. These things are his own and his will.

1013¹. Heaven consists of as many likenesses of the Lord as there are Angels, and exists solely through mutual love, for each loves another better than himself. 1594°.

1025°. The Word was written not only for man, but also for Angels. When a man reads the Word, apprehending only the literal sense, the Angels apprehend not the literal, but the inward sense. The material, worldly and corporeal ideas that a man has when reading the Word, become spiritual and celestial ideas with the Angels . . . By 'Noah' . . . the interior Angels do not even perceive the Ancient Church, but the faith of that Church, and the state of the things treated of, according to the series.

1079°. They who are in charity scarcely see another's evils, but observe all his goods and truths, and the evils and falsities they interpret into good. Such are all the Angels.

1088°. The Angels excite nothing but goods and truths, and what is evil and false they excuse. Hence it is evident that with those who are in charity, Angels have the dominion, through whom they communicate with Heaven.

1106°. When the time of vastation is over, they are taken up into Heaven, and are instructed as novitiates in the truths of faith by the Angels by whom they are received.

1116. The Angels have most magnificent habitations, exceeding all description. . . They live in an aura of light, of a brilliant pearly and sometimes diamond-like lustre.

1119. The Most Ancients breathed with the Angels in whose company they were. The Angels have a breathing to which inward breathing corresponds, and which is varied with them in a similar manner. When any thing contrary to love and faith in the Lord presents itself to them, their breathing is straitened, but when they are in the happiness of love and faith, their breathing is free and full.

1120°. Inward breathing then ceased, and with it immediate communication with the Angels.

1121. The men of the Most Ancient Church had a perception of all things that are of faith, almost like the Angels, with whom they had communication. . . Love to the Lord and towards the neighbour is attended with this, for thus man is conjoined with the Angels through their veriest life, which consists in such love.

1124°. An Angel came whose coming they could not endure. 1398.

1258. When families and nations are regarded by the Angels, they never have an idea of the nation, but only of its worship ; for they regard all purely from their quality. —°.

1274°. The Angels have no idea of time.

1276. The Angels are on the Lord's right hand, evil Spirits on the left. . . There is a similar situation of all things about every Angel (as with the Lord).

1317. The Angels with man, being of the Lord, rule nothing in him but his ends. While they rule these, they also rule the thoughts and actions, for all these are of the end.

1382. A real idea of the Infinite Divine is insinuated into the Angels by this ; that in a moment they are present under the Lord's view. . . A real idea of the Eternal Divine by this ; that thousands of years do not appear to them as time, but scarcely otherwise than as if they had lived a minute. Both ideas are insinuated into them by this; that in their present they have together things past and future. Hence they have no solicitude about things to come, nor have they ever any idea of death, but only an idea of life; thus in all their Present there is what is eternal and infinite of the Lord.

1391. The Angels perceive what is within an idea, what the affection is that is in it, what is the origin of that affection, what is its end, besides many other things that are of an interior nature.

1393°. On the removal of impediments, the Angels flow in and communicate their happiness.

1398. One Angel can put to flight myriads of evil Spirits, for they cannot endure the sphere of mutual love. Nevertheless it was perceived that his sphere was tempered by means of the consociations of others, otherwise they would all have been dissipated.

1405. The Angels have from the Lord a perception of the Word, when it is being read by man. See under READ.

1416. The Lord is His Kingdom, that is, the all in all of His Kingdom, as also is acknowledged by all the Angels in Heaven.

1472°. The Angels, who are in the science of all knowledges, and that in such a manner, that hardly a ten-thousandth part can be transmitted to the full apprehension of man, yet esteem sciences as nothing relatively to use.

1480. Celestial food is every good of love and of charity from the Lord, spiritual food is every truth of faith. On these foods the Angels live.

1511. (The Angels from the Lord remove the spheres of evil Spirits.)

1519. The spheres of the Angels are sometimes presented visibly as atmospheres or auras, of such beauty, pleasantness and variety as to exceed all description.

1521. On the light in which the Angels live. Gen. art. 1619, continued.

1524. The intensity of the light that the Angels have in Heaven, relatively to that in the World of Spirits, Des. And as does the light, so also do the intelligence and wisdom of the Angels exceed those of Spirits . . . and also their speech, thought, joys and happinesses, for these correspond to the light. Hence it was evident to me how great and how excellent are the perfections of the Angels relatively to those of men, who are in a greater obscurity even than Spirits.

1529. (The quantity and quality of the Light is according to the quantity and quality of the Celestial and the Spiritual that the Angels have) thus the very Celestial and Spiritual of the Lord manifests itself through the light before their outward sight.

1532. (From the visions of the prophets) it may be known that the Angels not only live in the most intense light, but also that there are indefinite things there such as no one would ever be able to believe.

1554°. The order in which man is carried during regeneration no mortal knows, nor even the Angels except slightly, but the Lord alone.

1557°. With the Angels themselves, who are in the most intense light of intelligence and wisdom, holiness dwells in ignorance, for they know and acknowledge that they know nothing of themselves, but that whatever they know is from the Lord. They know likewise and acknowledge, that all their science, intelligence and wisdom, relatively to those of the Lord, are nothing; thus are ignorance.

1573°. No Angel can ever be tempted by the Devil, because while he is in the Lord, evil Spirits cannot approach him even afar, but are at once seized with horror and terror.

1581°. The Angels know no other than that evil is separated from them, but there is only a detention from evil. Thus its quiescence, so that it appears to be annihilated, is an appearance, as the Angels know when they reflect.

1618. Man is in continual worship when he is in love and charity; outward worship is only an effect. The Angels are in such worship, wherefore with them there is a perpetual Sabbath.

1619. On the paradises and habitations of the Angels. Gen. art. . . Nothing exists before the sight of the Angels that is not representative and significative.

1622°. The Angels are not delighted with the Paradises, but with the representatives, thus with the celestial and spiritual things from which they are.

1628. See HABITATION at this ref.

1642. Such is the speech of Spirits. But that of Angelic Spirits is still more universal and perfect, and that of Angels still more so again. . . Angelic Spirits distinctly comprehend more by one idea of speech and thought than Spirits do by a thousand, and Angels in like manner relatively to Angelic Spirits.

1645. See SPEECH at this ref., and at 1646. 1647. 2209. 3345. 4264. 4528. 5434. 5492. 6987°.

—°. The Angels are kept by the Lord in ends and uses . . . wherefore also the Angels who are with man attend to nothing else but ends and uses, and eliminate nothing else from his thought; caring nothing for other matters which are ideal and material, because these are far beneath their sphere.

1680°. He who intends good to the neighbour, and thinks nothing but good concerning him, and who, when able, actually does it, is among the Angelic, and also becomes an Angel in the other life.

1683. (In regard to temptation) the Angels who are with the man never make the attack, but always and continually the evil Spirits. The Angels only avert and defend.

1705. By 'Mamre, Eshcol and Aner' are represented and signified the Angels who were with the Lord when He combated in His earliest childhood, and who were adapted to the goods and truths then with the Lord, from which they have their names. No Angel in Heaven ever has any name, but it is goods and truths of which their names are predicated, as 'Michael,' and other Angels in the Word. There never were such Angels, but they are so named from their office. 1752. 1754.

1735°. The Angels manifestly perceive that they do not live from themselves, but from the Lord, because they live in the Esse of the Lord's life, since they live in His love. But still there is given to them, above all others, the appearance, attended with ineffable happiness, as if they lived of themselves.

[A.] 1740^e. The more that man loves goods and truths, the more the Angels love to be with him, and with the Angels Heaven; for they are in their own life when in goods of love and truths of faith.

1745³. Sometimes an Angel speaks not from himself, but from the Lord, and then he knows no other than that he is the Lord, but his externals are then quiescent. It is otherwise when the externals are in operation. The reason is that their inward man is the possession of the Lord, and in proportion as on such occasions nothing of his own impedes, he is the Lord's, yea, is the Lord.

1752. That Angels were with the Lord when He fought against the Hells, is evident from the Word, and also from the consideration, that during his temptation-combats it could not be otherwise than that Angels should be present, to whom the Lord, of His own power, gave strength and power to combat as it were together with Him, for the Angels have all their power from the Lord. That the Angels fight against the evil, is evident from what has been already said concerning the Angels who are with man, that they protect him and avert the evils which evil Spirits intend. Good Spirits are indeed Angels, but lower ones, for they are in the First Heaven . . . but Angels properly so called in the Third. The form of government in the other life is such that good Spirits are subordinate to Angelic Spirits, and Angelic Spirits to the Angels themselves, and thus they constitute one Angelic Society. Good Spirits and Angelic Spirits are what are here called the 'lads,' and the Angels themselves, the 'men-viri.' 1753.

1755. 'Let these take their portion'=that they were given into their power. . . The case is this; the Angels are they who have dominion over evil and infernal Spirits. Ex.

1776. The Angels understand the inward sense better and more fully when the Word is being read by little boys and girls, than when by adults who are not in the faith of charity. Ex. D.1923.

1802. The Angels who are in the First Heaven are subordinate to the Angels who are in the Second, and these are subordinate to the Angels who are in the Third; but the subordination is not of command, but as in man, is an influx of inward things into things more outward. . . The lower or subordinate Angels do not know that this is the case, unless there is given reflection from the Lord. . . In proportion as there is what is internal with an Angel of the Third Heaven, is he an heir of the Lord's Kingdom; and the case is the same with an Angel of the Second Heaven, and likewise with an Angel of the First Heaven. . . The interior Angels have more of this Internal than the exterior Angels, wherefore they are nearer to the Lord, and are heirs in a higher degree.

1806^e. Such is the sight of the Angels with man.

1808. 'Stars'=Angels, or Societies of Angels, and in the contrary sense, evil Spirits and their companies; when they sig. Angels or Societies of Angels, they are fixed stars.

1810. 'Thy seed as the stars'=the innumerable goods and truths of wisdom and intelligence, with their happiness, with every Angel.

1854². When there occurs such an expression as 'old age,' the Angels, who are in the inward sense . . . never perceive old age; indeed they are ignorant what old age is, for they are continually advancing to a life of youth and adolescence.

1871. How the Word appears before the Angels.

1876. The Angels do not retain the least idea of any person, or of the name of any person, mentioned in the Word. 1989.

1880⁴. Hence it is evident that man was so created that while he lived on earth among men he might live at the same time in Heaven among the Angels, and contrariwise; so that Heaven and earth might be together, and act as one, men knowing what is in Heaven, and Angels what is in the world.

1925⁵. 'Angels'=something special of the Lord, as 'the Angels of the Seven Churches'=that which is of the Church, thus that which is of the Lord relatively to the Churches. The 'twelve Angels over the gates of the New Jerusalem'=the same as the twelve tribes, namely, all things that are of faith, thus the Lord, from whom is faith and all things of it. The 'Angel flying in the midst of Heaven, having the Everlasting Gospel'=the Gospel, which is of the Lord alone. 'The Angel of His faces saved us'=the Lord's mercy towards the universal human race in effecting their redemption. . . 'The Angel who redeemed me from all evil bless the lads,' also=redemption, which is of the Lord alone. 'The Angel of the Covenant, whom ye have desired;' that the Lord is there signified by the 'Angel' is very manifest, where he is called 'the Angel of the Covenant' on account of His Advent. It is still more manifest that by an 'Angel' is signified the Lord in, 'Behold, I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee to the place which I have prepared; he will not endure your transgression, because My name is in the midst of him.' Hence it is evident that by an 'Angel' is meant the Lord, but what of the Lord, is manifest from the series in the inward sense.

1937⁶. The Angels are in such a proprium, and in proportion as they are in this truth, that everything good and true is from the Lord, they are in the delight and happiness of that proprium.

1955^e. Of these things, which appear so obscure to man, the Angels have ideas so clear and distinct, enriched with so many representations, that it would require a volume to describe but a small part of them.

1964^e. In this life are all the Angels, and because they are in this life, they are in intelligence and wisdom itself.

1983. Sirens . . . who beset man during the night . . . are constantly driven away, by Angels from the Lord.

1984. No ideas of bodily and worldly things can ever pass over to the Angels.

2016. The Angels are in the perception that all good and truth are from the Lord, inasmuch that they perceive that so far as it is from the Lord it is good and true, and that so far as it is from self it is evil and false . . .

2077. The Angels, for the sake of saving a soul from Hell, make no account of death, indeed if they could, they would endure Hell for that soul. Hence it is the inmost of their joy to translate into Heaven any one that rises from the dead. They confess, however, that this love is not in the least from themselves, but that every particle of it is from the Lord alone, indeed they are incensed if any one thinks otherwise.

2159⁴. 'Who is blind but My Servant and deaf as the Angel I will send?' (Is.xlii.19) speaking of the Lord, of whom 'Servant' and 'Angel' are said when He was in the Human.

2162⁷. The 'mighty Angel seen descending from heaven' (Rev.x.1)=the Word as it is in the inward sense.

2171. They who are in perception, as the Angels are, know perfectly well what is the perception in which they are, whether natural, rational, or still more inward, which to them is Divine.

2179². When the conversation of the Angels falls into the World of Spirits, it is sometimes presented as animals. Examps.

2183². The Angels who are with man rule his Rational, but the evil Spirits, his Natural, and hence there is combat. . . If the Rational conquers, the Angels approach nearer to man, and insinuate into him charity, which is the Celestial that comes through the Angels from the Lord, and then the evil Spirits remove to a distance; but if the Natural conquers, the Angels remove themselves further off, that is, more towards his interiors.

2189³. When good constitutes the Rational, truth disappears, and becomes as it were good; good then shines through truth, as is the case with the Angels, who, when they appear clothed, it is splendour inducing the appearance of a garment; as with the Angels who appeared before the Prophets.

2242³. The Angels are not so much in appearances as man; hence the Word . . . as to the inward sense is for the Angels, and also for those men, to whom of the Divine mercy it has been granted to be as Angels while they live in the world.

2249. It is of the greatest consequence that so much should be said (about these subjects) in the inward sense, for before the Angels, to whom the inward sense is the Word, these things are presented to the life with their representatives in a most beautiful form, besides innumerable things that are consequent thereon . . . for Angelic ideas are such that they relish these things more than anything else, and perceive them as the most pleasant. Hence also they are illustrated and confirmed more and more concerning the union of the Lord's Human Essence with the Divine Essence, for Angels were formerly men, and when men, they could not do otherwise than think of the Lord as a man, and of the Lord as God, as well as of a Divine Trine . . . thus fallacies insinuated themselves, which in the other life alienate the ideas of thought from the truth and good of faith. To dispel such things, so much is said in the inward sense of this chapter concerning the conjunction of the Human with the Divine of the Lord . . . and thus, while the Word is being read, these things are so presented to the perception of the Angels, that the former ideas . . . are by degrees dispersed, and new ones that are conformable to the light of truth in which the Angels are, are insinuated. This is more the case with the Spiritual Angels than with the Celestial, for according to the purification of their ideas they are perfected for the reception of celestial things.

2268. It may be predicated of the Angels that they as it were dwell in man's truths, and insinuate affections of good from the Lord when the man lives in love to the Lord and in charity towards the neighbour, for so they are delighted to dwell, that is, live with such men. It is otherwise with those who are in some truths and in no goods of charity.

2284^o. To the Angels nothing is more delightful and happy than to instruct those who come into the other life from the earth.

2289. All little children who die . . . are with the Angels, who take care of, educate and instruct them. . . They all . . . become Angels.

2290. How the Angels . . . insinuated into their tender and novitiate ideas the meaning of what is in the Lord's Prayer.

2292. Hence it is evident that little children do not come into the Angelic state immediately after death.

2295. When the little children are in a more inward sphere, namely the Angelic one, they cannot be infested by Spirits.

2303. Immediately after the birth of infants, there are with them Angels from the Heaven of innocence; in the succeeding age, Angels from the Heaven of the tranquillity of peace; afterwards those who are from the Societies of charity; and then, as innocence and charity decrease with the little children, other Angels. At last, when they become adults, and enter into a life foreign to charity, Angels are indeed present, but more remotely, and this according to the ends of life, which the Angels especially rule, constantly insinuating good ones and averting evil ones, and in proportion as they can or cannot do this, they flow in more nearly or more remotely.

2304. Intelligence and wisdom make an Angel.

2310². The Word is also for the Angels with man.

2318. 'There came two Angels to Sodom in the evening'=visitation that precedes Judgment.

2319. 'Two Angels'=the Divine Human and the Holy proceeding of the Lord, to which belongs judgment. 2343. 2373. 2397.

2320. Why here there are only 'two Angels,' while with Abraham there were 'three men.'

2333². The Angels are no longer in worldly and bodily things, like those of man, but in spiritual and celestial ones, into which the expressions of the sense of the letter are marvellously changed, when it ascends from a man who is reading the Word to the sphere in which the Angels are.

[A.] 2338. The evil Spirits who . . . induce temptation powerfully inspire a negative, but the good Spirits and Angels from the Lord in every way dispel this doubtfulness, and keep us in continual hope, and at last confirm the affirmative.

2363². That everything blessed and happy consists in the affection of good which is of love and charity, and of the truth which is of faith so far as the latter leads to the former, is evident from the fact that Heaven, that is, Angelic life, consists therein.

2380. With those who are in good, the attendant Angels, upon the infusion of any falsity of evil or evil of falsity, whether from the conversation of an evil man, or from thought from an evil Spirit or Genius, at once avert it, and bend [the good] to something true and good in which they have been confirmed; and this however they are infested as to the body, because they esteem the body relatively to the soul as nothing.

—⁴. The reason why some suppose themselves not to be in good, while they really are, is that when they reflect upon that good in themselves, the Angels in whose society they are, at once insinuate that they are not in good, lest they should attribute good to themselves . . .

2422^o. These states do not appear to man, still less their quality, but they appear to the Angels as in clear light, for the Angels are in every good affection of man.

2493. The more interior and perfect the Angels are, the less do they care for past things, and think about future ones; thence also is their happiness . . .

2494. Men who are in love to the Lord and in charity towards the neighbour, have Angelic intelligence and wisdom in them while they live in the world, but they are stored up in the inmost recesses of their inner memory . . .

2523. The Lord's whole life is described in the inward sense of the Word . . . in order that all these things might be presented to the Angels at that time. . . Unless this had been done, the Lord would have had to come into the world immediately after the decline of the Most Ancient Church.

2540². These things appear as of slight value to man . . . but to the Angels, in whose care and hearts are spiritual and celestial things, they are precious. Their ideas and perceptions respecting these things are ineffable. Hence it is evident that many things which are of slight value to man, because they transcend his apprehension, are most highly valued by the Angels, because they enter into the light of their wisdom; and contrariwise, those things which are most highly valued by man . . . are of slight value to the Angels, being out of the light of their wisdom. So stands the case with the inward sense of the Word in many places. 2551^o.

2541². Myriads of distinct ideas with the Angels present only a single obscure one with men. Examp.

2551. The inward sense of the Word is especially for the Angels, thus is adapted to their perceptions and thoughts. They are in their delectable, yea, blessed and happy feelings, when they are thinking of the Lord, of His Divine and Human, and of how this was made Divine, for they are circumfused with a celestial and spiritual sphere, that is full of the Lord, so that it may be said that they are in the Lord. Hence to them nothing is more blessed and happy than to think according to what belongs to the sphere and affection therefrom. At the same time they are also instructed and perfected. . . These and innumerable other things are presented before the Angels in a celestial and spiritual manner with a thousand and a thousand representatives in the light of life, while the Word is being read. 2574³.

2572³. Because the Angels are in love to the Lord and in mutual love, they are also in all truth, thus in all wisdom and intelligence, not only of celestial and spiritual things, but also of rational and natural things, for from love, since love is from the Lord, they are in the beginnings or springs of things, that is, in ends and causes. Ex.

—⁴. Nevertheless the wisdom and intelligence of the Angels is finite, and relatively to the Divine wisdom of the Lord is most finite, and scarcely anything.

2574³. There being Angels, who, when they were men, had taken up an idea of the Lord's Human as of the human of another man; in order that they may be able to be with the Celestial Angels in the other life . . . such wrong ideas are dispersed by the inward sense of the Word, and thus they are perfected.

2576². When the Angels are visibly presented, their interiors shine forth from their faces, and their exteriors are represented in both their bodies and clothes. . . So with the Angels described in the Word.

2588². The Angels have such great wisdom because they are in truths, for truth is the very light of Heaven.

2590. (The Gentiles instructed by the Angels.) 2596. 2597. 2603.

2654⁴. The Angels are in the faith, yea, in the perception, that whatever is thought and done from proprium is evil, even if it is [in itself] good . . . and yet they have more abundant proprium than all others, but they know and perceive that it is from the Lord, but that it appears altogether as their own.

2786^e. Although these things are with men in dimness as of night, they are as in clear day with the Angels, who, being in the light of Heaven from the Lord, see distinctly innumerable things in these and similar subjects, and at the same time perceive ineffable joy from the inflowing affection. Hence it is evident how remote is the human intellectual and perceptive faculty from the Angelic one. 2795. 2796². 3660³.

2795². Not even Angels can approach the Divine.

2851². There are two gates with every man . . . one is open towards Heaven . . . in this gate are Angels. . . (The rational mind is compared to a 'city,' and therefore has 'gates' assigned to it, and it is said that evil Genii and Spirits assault that city, and that Angels from the Lord defend it.)

—¹⁴. When man is such as to admit goods and truths, thus Angels, then the Infernals are driven away from their seat.

—¹⁵. Hence it is evident that the 'Gate of Heaven' is where the Angels are with man, that is, where there is an influx of good and truth from the Lord.

2872. Heavenly freedom is that which is from the Lord; in this are all the Angels.

— (Every Angel is a centre of blessedness to all Heaven.)

2873. If the Angels only think of such freedom as is from the affection of evil and falsity . . . they are instantly seized with inward pain.

2882. All the Angels are in such freedom, yea, in the most perfect perception that it is so. The inmost Angels perceive how much is from the Lord, and how much from themselves, and in proportion as it is from the Lord they are in happiness, but in proportion as it is from themselves they are not in happiness.

2890. The Angels, through whom man communicates with Heaven, consider him as a brother, and insinuate into him affections of good and truth, and so through freedom lead him, not whither they will, but whither the Lord pleases.

2896. Since the men of the Most Ancient Church were celestial, and had consort with Angels, all things that they saw . . . were representative . . . thus, and no otherwise, were they able to speak with Angels, for the things that are with the Angels are celestial and spiritual . . . 2995.

2953. The inward sense of the Word is such that the words are almost as nothing, but the sense flowing from the series presents an idea, and in fact a spiritual idea before the Angels, to whom the outward sense serves as an object from which [comes the idea], for there are ideas of men's thought that are objects of spiritual thoughts with the Angels, and in fact chiefly those ideas of thought that are from the Word.

2992. Sometimes when I have been speaking about the viscera of the body . . . the Angels who were above me led my thoughts through the spiritual things to which the former corresponded, without making the least mistake. They indeed did not think at all about the viscera of the body, of which I was thinking, but only of the spiritual things to which they corresponded. Such is Angelic intelligence that from spiritual things they know each and all things that are in the body, even the most recondite, which can never come to man's knowledge; yea, each and all things that are in the universal world, without fallacy, and this because thence are causes and the principles of causes. 2993. 3626.

3016. The Angels have no idea of old age, nor of the advance of age . . . but an idea of the state as to the life in which they are. 3254.

3039. 'He shall send His Angel before Thee' = the Divine Providence. An 'Angel' in the Word = the Lord, but what of the Lord, appears from the connection. The reason why by 'Angels' in the Word the Lord is meant, is that all that is spoken in the Word through the Prophets and others, under the dictation of the Angels, is from the Lord. . . The Angels in Heaven also acknowledge and perceive that nothing good and true is from themselves, but from the Lord, inasmuch that they hold everything in aversion that induces any other idea. Hence it is that by 'Angels,' namely the good, the Lord is meant, but what of the Lord, appears from the connection.

3085^e. The inward sense of the Word is especially for the Angels, in order that through the Word there may be communication between Heaven and man, and these things are to them delicious, because heavenly food is nothing else than all that which is of intelligence and wisdom, and whatever treats of the Lord is to them the blessedness of wisdom and intelligence.

3195². Hence the wiser the Angels are, the brighter is the light in which they dwell. 4413^e.

3207³. No truths are ever pure with a man, nor even with an Angel. . . each and all are appearances of truth. 3358. 3362. 3368. 3404², Ex. 3405.

3213. The ideas and thence the speech of the Angels, when they fall down to Spirits, are presented representatively . . . Good Spirits are able thus to know what the Angels are conversing about. . . Angelic ideas and speech cannot be presented before Spirits in any other way, for an Angelic idea contains indefinitely more things than an idea of a Spirit . . . 3217. 3219.

3219. (Spirits seen who had fallen from an Angelic Society.) They were not cast down, for the Angels cast no one down, but being in falsity, they fell down of themselves.

3226². In Heaven among the Angels, nothing else is thought of than celestial and spiritual things.

3308^e. The Angels are thus being continually perfected.

3316³. When these things are being read by man, and apprehended by him according to the sense of the letter, the Angels who are then with him have no idea whatever of 'pottage,' 'Jacob,' etc. . . but instead of them have a spiritual idea, which is altogether different and remote from that natural one; the former things being in a moment turned into this spiritual idea. It is the same with everything else that is mentioned in the Word. Examp.

3402². In proportion as a man is in evil and falsity, the Angels who are with him from Heaven recede, and diabolical Spirits from Hell approach. The removal of good and truth, consequently of the Angels from a man who is in evil and falsity, does not appear to him, because he is then in the persuasion that evil is good and falsity truth . . . Good and truth, or the Angels, are said to be removed from a man when he is no longer affected by them.

3417^e. One Angel is more powerful than myriads of infernal Spirits, not from himself, but from the Lord; and so far from the Lord as he believes that he can do nothing of himself; and he is able to believe this in proportion as he is in humiliation from the affection of serving others, that is, in proportion as he is in love to the Lord and charity towards the neighbour.

[A.] 3464. The Angels with a man are in interior truths when he is in exterior ones, thus he has communication through doctrinal things with Heaven, but according to his life of good. For example, when in the Holy Supper he simply thinks of the Lord, from the words 'This is My body and this is My blood,' then the Angels with him are in the idea of love to the Lord and charity towards the neighbour . . . and because there is such a correspondence, there infows such an affection out of Heaven through the Angels into that holy [state] in which the man then is, which he receives according to the good of his life, for the Angels dwell with every one in the affection of his life, thus in that of the doctrinal things according to which he lives, but never in that with which the life disagrees. If the life disagrees, as for instance, if the man is in the affection of gaining honours and wealth by means of doctrinal things, the Angels recede and Infernales dwell in that affection. 6789^e.

3480. (The inward things of the Word were presented before the Angels by the Israelitish representatives.)

3484^e. Good Spirits and Angels appear as the very forms themselves of charity.

3489. The Angels attend only to inward things, that is, to ends, or to intentions and acts of will, and to thoughts thence.

3548^e. The Natural as to truth with the man who is being regenerated . . . so appears, not indeed before man . . . but before the eyes of the Angels, who see such things in the light of Heaven.

3573^e. Whatever a man wills and thinks inwardly in his Rational, should present itself conspicuously in his Natural, and this should present itself conspicuously in the face. Such is the face with the Angels.

3584. In the form of Heaven the Angels are arranged according to the consanguinities and affinities of good and truth.

3636. The light of the world that is from the sun is as darkness to the Angels.

3638^e. All the Angels are not only with the Lord, but in the Lord; or, what is the same, the Lord is with them and in them.

3652^e. See WORD at this ref.

3665^e. When these things (in the historicals of the Word) are known and thought of by a little child, the Angels with him then think of the Divine things they represent and signify; and because the Angels are affected with these things, their affection is communicated, and produces the delight that the child has from them. 3690^e.

3693^e. There are with the Angels changes of state between the greatest and the least of light, or between the greatest and the least of wisdom, and these changes of state are as morning . . . midday . . . and evening . . . and then as morning again.

3701. 'Behold, the Angels of God ascending and descending upon it'=infinite and eternal communication, and thence conjunction. . . 'Angels'=something Divine of the Lord, here Divine Truth, because they are called 'Angels of God.'

3735. The Angels with man do not think of 'bread,' but of the good of love, and, in the supreme sense, of the Divine Good of the Lord. . . Man's thought about 'bread' serves the Angels with him for an object of thinking about the good of love from the Lord, for the Angels apprehend nothing of man's thought about bread, but in place of it have thought about good. . . The holy [feeling] that the man then has, is from an influx of celestial and spiritual thoughts and affections, such as exist with the Angels. . . 4217^e.

3741. All Angels are forms, or substances formed according to the reception of Divine things from the Lord.

3742. The Angels manifestly perceive the influx of life from the Lord, also how it flows in, and likewise the amount and character of their reception. When they are in a fuller state of reception, they are in their peace and happiness, otherwise they are in a state of unrest and of some anxiety. Yet the life from the Lord is so appropriated to them that they have a perception as of living from themselves, and still they know that it is not from themselves.

3776. The historicals of the letter become nothing in Heaven with the Angels when they leave man and enter Heaven. 4373^e.

3858¹⁵. The Angels are called 'Powers,' and 'Principalities,' because goods and truths have all power in them from the Lord.

3895^e. When such come into the other life, they at first believe themselves to be Angels, but are not able to approach any Angelic Society, being as it were suffocated there by their own persuasive [nature].

3900^e. They who are called the 'elect' rarely appear in the company of those who veil profane worship under what is holy, or if they appear, are not known . . . but when they have been confirmed, they endure, for they are kept by the Lord in the company of Angels, which they themselves do not know, and then it is impossible that they can be seduced by that wicked crew.

3927^e. When man is in temptations his inward man is ruled by the Lord through Angels, but his outward man through infernal Spirits.

3928. As soon as corporeal and worldly delight is no longer for an end, but for the use of serving heavenly delight, then the Angels with man can be in both.

3938. The Angels, not being in space and time, have ideas of state. Hence it is that spaces and times in the Word signify states. Refs.

3954. See INWARD SENSE at these refs. 4234. 4280^e. 8694^e. 10215^e.

3956. Charity towards the neighbour has in it that one wishes as well for him as for oneself, and with the Angels, that they wish better for him than for themselves.

3982°. See WORD at these refs. 4814. 5275. 5316. 5398. 6333. 9152°. 9357. 10033°.

3987°. Hypocrites feigning to be Angels of Light. 4225°.

4027. The things here contained in the supreme sense . . . are such as to exceed even Angelic understanding.

—2. They who are in affection of charity are delighted with such things, for the Angels who are with them are in their happiness when man is in such things. . . . From the Angels, that is, through the Angels from the Lord, there flow in delight and blessedness with a man who is in affection of charity when he reads these things, and still more when he believes that there is what is holy in them, and yet still more when he apprehends any thing that is contained in the inward sense.

4060°. 'He shall send forth the Angels with a trumpet and a great voice'=choice, not through visible Angels . . . but through the influx of holy good and truth through Angels, wherefore by 'Angels' in the Word is signified something of the Lord. Here there is signified what is from the Lord and about the Lord.

4067. See SOCIETY at these refs. 4073°. 4099. 4330. 4797.

4073°. Man sees nothing as to good and truth unless he is illustrated by the Lord through Angels.

4096°. Good that is of love and charity flows in from the Lord, and in fact, through the Angels that are with man.

—6. Good does not flow in from Angels, but through Angels from the Lord. This also all the Angels confess, wherefore they are indignant when any one attributes it to them.

4122. The Angels see and perceive all the changes of state of the man who is being regenerated, and with whom they are present as ministers, and according to and through them, they from the Lord lead to good in so far as the man suffers himself to be led.

4164. In Heaven with the Angels anger does not exist, but zeal instead.

4220. They who in the life of the body have received the Divine things that are of the Lord, that is, His love towards the universal human race, thus charity towards the neighbour, and reciprocal love to the Lord, in the other life are gifted with intelligence and wisdom, and with ineffable happiness, for they become Angels, thus truly men.

4235. 'There met him Angels of God'=illustration by good. 'Angels of God'=something of the Lord, here, the Divine that is in the Lord . . . called the 'Father.'

4236. Hence truths and goods, that is, the Angels who are arranged according to that order, are called 'an army.'

4249. See TEMPTATION at these refs. 4274. 5036°.

—3. 5280°. 6097. 6574. 7122°. 8367. 8670. 8960.

4287. (The Lord tempted even by the Angels.)

4295. The Angels are called 'gods' from truths and goods.

—2. That the Lord in temptations at last fought with the Angels themselves, yea, with the whole Angelic Heaven . . . is thus. The Angels are indeed in the highest wisdom and intelligence, but all their wisdom and intelligence are from the Divine of the Lord; and from themselves, or from proprium, they have nothing of either. . . The Angels themselves openly confess this, and are indignant if any one attributes anything of wisdom and intelligence to them. . . The Angels also say that all their proprium is evil and false . . . and that what is evil and false is not separated or wiped away from them . . . but that it all remains with them, and that they are withheld by the Lord from evil and falsity, and held in good and truth. These things all the Angels confess, nor can any one be admitted into Heaven unless he knows and believes them. . . Since this is so, the Lord, in order to reduce the universal Heaven into heavenly order, admitted into Himself temptations also from the Angels, who, so far as they were in proprium, were not in good and truth. These temptations are the inmost of all, for they act only into ends, and with such subtlety as to escape all observation. But in so far as they are not in proprium, they are in good and truth, and so far are not able to tempt. Moreover the Angels are constantly being perfected by the Lord, and yet can never to eternity be so far perfected as that their wisdom and intelligence can be compared with the Divine wisdom and intelligence of the Lord; for they are finite, and the Lord is infinite. . . . Hence it is evident what is meant by 'the god with whom Jacob as a prince contended,' and also why he was not willing to reveal his name.

4299°. Evil Spirits cannot bear that Angels should look at them, for they are instantly tormented and swoon away. D.1966.

4301°. See PERCEIVE at this ref.

4311°. Good Spirits and Angels not within, but without them. . . But the Lord is otherwise present with those in the Church who are in spiritual love and thence in faith, with these there are good Spirits and Angels, not only in outward worship, but also at the same time in inward . . .

4318. The principal part of the intelligence that the Angels have is to know and perceive that all life is from the Lord, also that the Universal Heaven corresponds to His Divine Human, and consequently that all Angels, Spirits, and men correspond to Heaven, and also to know and perceive how they correspond. The Angels thus know and perceive innumerable things that are in the Heavens, and thence also those things that are in the world.

[A.] 4329³. When the Angels are in a general or universal idea, they are at the same time in the singulars that are distinctly arranged by the Lord in the universal.

4334². 'Not even the Angels of the heavens, but My Father only'—that Heaven does not know the state of the Church as to good and truth specifically, but the Lord alone.

4383². Although the Angels relatively to man are in such great wisdom that the things they know and perceive are ineffable, they confess that they are comparatively only very general, and that the things they do not know are indefinite; they dare not say infinite, because there is no relation between the finite and the infinite.

4402⁵. 'Elohim' is used in the plural, because by Divine Truth are meant all truths that are from the Lord. Hence the Angels are sometimes called 'Elohim' or 'gods.' III.

4411. Thus do correspondences succeed each other even to the outward sight of the Angels.

4415⁶. Hence it is evident why celestial Angels are called in the Word 'Angels of Light.'

4480. The Angels can only think spiritually about anything.

4533. See EVIL SPIRIT at this ref.

4564. All the Angels confess that from themselves there is nothing but evil and falsity in them.

4641. This falls into the understanding of scarcely any Angel. 4642.

4735². The Angels . . . appear as forms of love and charity in a human shape. . . Through heavenly love man becomes an Angel after death.

4796. When Angels present themselves to view, all their interior affections appear clearly from the face, and shine forth thence, so that their faces are outward forms and representatives of them. It is not given in Heaven to have any other face except that of the affections.

4797. Every Angel is in some province of the Grand Man, and so communicates generally and widely with all in the same province, although he is in that part of the province to which he properly corresponds.

4803. The states of good Spirits and Angels are constantly being changed and perfected, and they are thus carried into the interior parts of the province in which they are, thus into more noble functions. . . No Angel can ever to eternity come to absolute perfection.

4809². 'All the holy Angels with Him'=the Angelic Heaven. The 'holy Angels' are the truths that are from the Divine Good of the Lord, for by 'Angels' in the Word are not meant Angels, but those things that are of the Lord, for Angels are recipients of the life of truth proceeding from the Divine Good of the Lord, and they are Angels in proportion as they receive it. Hence it is evident that 'Angels' are those truths. 5313⁹.

4839². In proportion as Angels, Spirits, and men have what they have from the Lord, that is, in proportion as they are in good and truth thence, thus in proportion as they are in His Divine order, they are men. . . Hence it is that the Angels in Heaven all appear in human form.

4930. If a man should see the quality of a single thing as it appears before the Angels he would be astounded, and would confess that he could never have believed it, and that he knows comparatively almost nothing.

4932. In proportion as anyone attributes all power to the Lord, and none to himself, is he in greater power. Hence the Angels are called 'Powers.'

4943. Angels are sometimes sent to those (who are in the Lower Earth) to comfort them.

4971. What is Divine is not in the Angels, but is present with them, for they are only forms recipient of what is Divine from the Lord.

4973⁵. The Divine Truth, which the Lord was when in the world, and which afterwards proceeded from Him, that is, from Divine Good, is also called 'the Angel of the Covenant.'

4985⁶. The Angels of Heaven have ineffable beauty, for they are as it were loves and charities in form, wherefore when they appear in their beauty, they affect the inmost [feelings]. With them the good of love from the Lord shines forth through truth of faith, and penetrating, affects.

5032⁶. They who are in natural good alone . . . cannot be protected by the Angels.

5044³. The Heavens are distinguished into principalities according to truths from good; hence also the Angels are called 'Principalities.'

5102. The face regarded in itself is nothing else than an image representative of the interiors. All faces appear no otherwise to the Angels, for the Angels do not see the faces of men in a material form, but in a spiritual form, that is, in a form that presents to view the affections and thoughts thence.

5110. What is Divine is . . . incomprehensible even to Angels.

5133². The form of charity appears visible in the other life, and is the Angelic form itself; all Angels thence are forms of charity.

5147². That food signifies celestial good, is because the foods of the Angels are nothing else than the goods of love and of charity; by means of these they are not only vivified, but also revived . . . 5293, Ex.

5175. After death . . . most are treated gently at first, for they are kept in the company of Angels and good Spirits, which is represented by the food's being softly touched by the lips, and its quality being then tasted by the tongue.

5199. Spiritual beauty is the affection of interior truth, because truth is the form of good. Good itself from the Divine in Heaven is the source of life to the Angels, but the form of their life is through truths from that good . . . Hence it is that the Angels appear of ineffable beauty.

5228. Perception is nothing but the speech or thought of the Angels who are with man . . .

5248. See GARMENT at these refs. 5954³. 9814. 9952. H.178. 179. 180. 181.

5329. The Angels cannot perceive the historicals (of the Word) because . . . the things of the world do not appear to them ; but since there is a correspondence of all things that are in the world with the things that are in Heaven, the Angels perceive heavenly things when man perceives worldly ones. Unless this were so, no Angel from Heaven could possibly be with man. To enable him to be so, the Word has been given, in which the Angels perceive the holy Divine which they can communicate to the man with whom they are present.

5391^e. Thus do the interiors become more open to the Angels.

5427. The Angels who are in the Heavens, thus in the light of Heaven, can see each and all things that take place in the World of Spirits, in the Earth of lower things, and in the Hells, but not contrariwise. The Angels of a higher Heaven can see all things that take place beneath them in a lower Heaven, but not contrariwise, unless there is a medium . . .

5428². Nature of Angelic power. See POWER at this ref.

5433². If the inward man looks downward to earthly things, and there places all, he cannot look upwards, and there place anything. . . The reason is that the Angels of Heaven cannot be with man in earthly things ; wherefore they recede, and then infernal Spirits approach. . . Man cannot be with both Angels of Heaven and Infernals at the same time. . . When he is in affection of truth for the sake of truth . . . he is then among Angels.

5470. There are with every man two Spirits from Hell and two Angels from Heaven, for a man who is born in sins could not possibly live unless he communicated on one side with Hell and on the other with Heaven ; the whole of his life is thence. When a man grows up and begins to rule himself from himself . . . the two Spirits from Hell draw near, and the two Angels from Heaven remove themselves a little. But if he betakes himself to good, the two Angels from Heaven draw near, and the two Spirits from Hell are removed. When therefore a man betakes himself to evils . . . if he feels any anxiety when he reflects upon the evil he has done, it is a sign that he will still receive influx through the Angels from Heaven . . . but if he feels no anxiety . . . it is a sign that he will no longer receive influx through the Angels from Heaven. Sig. 5848.

5482. Truth from the Divine, which is represented by Joseph, flows in through a medium into the good of faith, and through this into the truth of it. . . There does not exist any other way of influx with the man who has been regenerated, nor with the Angels of Heaven.

5530^e. That the Angels who are likenesses appear in a flaming beam, and thence in white, is evident from the Angel who descended from Heaven and rolled away the stone from the door of the sepulchre.

K

5576. The Angels are not fed with material food. . . The food that nourishes the mind is to understand what is true and to have a relish for what is good. . . The Angels are actually nourished with this food. . . The Angels constantly yearn for the things that are of intelligence and wisdom ; and when they are in evening, that is, in a state when these are deficient, they are so far comparatively not in happiness, and then they have no greater hunger and appetite than that the morning may dawn upon them anew, and that they may return into the life of happiness, which is that of intelligence and wisdom.

5585². 'The Angel of His faces saved them.' He is called the 'Angel' because 'Angels'=something of the Lord, here, His mercy, wherefore he is called 'the Angel of the faces.'

5621. When the perceptions of the Angels are turned into odours, as often takes place from the good pleasure of the Lord, they are smelt as fragrances from aromatics and flowers.

5628^e. When any one there has suffered hard things from evil Spirits . . . after the evil Spirits have been removed, he is received by Angels, and is brought into a state of consolation by means of delight that is in agreement with his genius.

5648^e. Hence it may be evident to any one who reflects, what the difference is between the delights of men and the delights of Angels, also in what things Angels place wisdom, and in what men ; namely, that Angels place wisdom in such things as man holds to be of no account and is averse to, and that man places wisdom in such things as Angels care nothing about, and many men in such things as Angels reject and flee from.

5672. States of shade as of evening exist there, not from the Sun, that is, the Lord, Who always shines, but from the proprium of the Angels, for as they are let into their proprium, so they come into a state of shade or of evening, and as they are elevated from their proprium into a celestial proprium, so they come into a state of light.

5695². Such a face have all the Angels, for they do not wish to hide from others anything they think, for they only think well towards the neighbour, nor have they any latent thought of wishing well to the neighbour for their own sakes.

5758. That everything good and true is from the Lord the Angels in Heaven perceive manifestly, and moreover that they are withheld from evil by the Lord, and held in good and thence truth, and that with a mighty force.

5846. On Angels and Spirits with man. Gen. art. 5976.

5854. The Angels inflow into ends, and so through ends into the things that follow from ends ; for the Angels flow in through good Spirits into those things that are goods of life and truths of faith with man, by means of which they draw him away as much as possible from evils and falsities. . . Angels are not able to be in evil ends, that is, in loves of self and of the world, but still they are present afar off.

5862. Angels from the Lord alone know that they are with man.

[A.] 5893². When a man is being regenerated . . . he is ruled through Angels by the Lord by his being held in truths, which he impresses upon himself as being truths. Through them he is held in the affection with which they are conjoined, and that affection of truth being from good, he is thus led by degrees to good . . . I have perceived that when evil Spirits poured in evils and falsities, the Angels from the Lord then held me in the truths that had been implanted, and so withheld me from evils and falsities. Hence also it has been evident, that the truths which are of faith, inrooted through the affection of truth, are the plane into which the Angels operate. They therefore who have not this plane cannot be led by Angels, but suffer themselves to be led by Hell, for the operation of the Angels cannot then be fixed any where, but flows through. . . The operation of the Angels into the truths of faith with man rarely takes place manifestly, so as to excite thought concerning that truth, but there is produced a general idea of such things as agree with that truth, with affection. For the operation is effected by an imperceptible influx. . . Thus do the Angels elevate the mind of a man from falsities, and protect from evils.

5895². The Angels are not able to have a separate idea of good and of truth, they must be conjoined and make one ; on this account they were not willing to look at such ploughing by an ox and an ass together. The Celestial Angels are not willing even to think of truth separate from good, for every truth with them is in good.

5897¹¹. When a man is in good and truth from affection . . . Angels from Heaven approach nearer and conjoin themselves to the man. This conjunction is what causes goods with truths to exist in the interiors of a man. But when a man is in outward things . . . the Angels are removed, and then nothing whatever of those goods and truths appears. Yet still as the conjunction has been once effected, the man is in the faculty of conjunction with the Angels, thus with the good and truth that is with them.

5915. When a man partakes of food, the Angels with him are in the idea of good and truth . . . with a difference according to the kind of the food ; wherefore when a man takes the bread and wine in the Holy Supper, the Angels with him are in the idea of the good of love and the good of faith. 10521.

5954⁸. He who has not acquired for himself truths, or resemblances of truth from his religiosity, like the Gentiles, and applied them to life . . . suffers himself to be led by reasonings from evil Spirits equally as from good, and so cannot be defended by the Angels. This is meant by that he 'should watch and keep his garments.'

5964⁹. Hence it is evident that the Lord does not hide Himself, but that the man, Spirit, or Angel does so.

5979. Angels from Heaven cannot possibly be within the sphere of such (diabolical Spirits), but are without ; wherefore also the Angels recede as the infernal Spirits approach nearer ; but still the Angels from Heaven never recede altogether from a man, for then it would be all over with him ; for if he were without communication with Heaven through the Angels he could not live.

5980. The Angels sedulously and constantly observe that the evil Spirits and Genii with a man are after ; and so far as the man allows, they bend evils into goods, or to goods, or towards goods.

5981. There sometimes appear with infernal Spirits and Genii shameful and filthy things . . . and lest the Angels should flee away altogether, those things are perceived milder than they really are. Des. D.1995.

5992. The Angels through whom the Lord leads and protects man are near the head. Their office is to inspire charity and faith, and to observe whither the man's delights turn, and to moderate and bend them to good so far as they are able, consistently with the freedom of the man. They are forbidden to act violently, and so to break the cupidities and principles of the man. Their office also is to rule the evil Spirits who are from Hell, which they do in innumerable ways ; of which it is only allowable to mention these. When the evil Spirits pour in evils and falsities, the Angels insinuate truths and goods, which, if not received, are the means of tempering. Infernal Spirits continually attack, and Angels protect ; such is the order. The Angels especially moderate the affections, for these make the life of man, and also his freedom. The Angels also observe whether any Hells are open that were not open before, and from which there is influx with a man, as takes place when a man goes into any new evil. These Hells the Angels close so far as the man allows. The Angels also remove the Spirits who attempt to emerge therefrom. They also dissipate strange and new influxes that might produce evil effects. Especially do the Angels call forth the goods and truths that are with the man, and set them in opposition to the evils and falsities that the evil Spirits excite. Thus man is in the midst, and does not perceive either the evil or the good, and being in the midst, he is in freedom to turn himself either to the one or to the other. By such means do Angels from the Lord lead and protect man, and this every moment, and moment of a moment ; for if the Angels were to intermit [their care] for a single moment, the man would be precipitated into Hell, whence he could never more be brought out. These things the Angels do from the love they have from the Lord, for they perceive nothing more delightful and happy than to remove evils from man, and to lead him to Heaven. That this is a joy to them, see Luke xv. 7.

6032². From this light all the Angels in the Heavens see the things that are outside of and around them, and also from the same light perceive the truths that are of faith, and their quality.

—³. This spiritual heat is truly heat, which blesses the bodies of the Angels with heat, and at the same time their interiors with love.

6057². That the inward man is formed to the image of all the things of Heaven is conspicuously exhibited in the Angels, who, when they appear before the inward sight . . . affect the inmost [feelings] by their mere presence, for love to the Lord and charity towards the neighbour pour forth from them and penetrate, and the things that are derived thence, namely the things of faith, shine forth from them and affect.

6073². The Angels who are in Heaven, being in good from the Lord, yearn for nothing more than to perform uses; these are the very delights of their life, and they also enjoy blessedness and happiness according to uses, as the Lord also teaches in Matt.; 'The Son of Man shall come in the glory of His Father, with His Angels, and then He shall render to every one according to his works.'

6078. That truths nourish the spiritual life manifestly appears with good Spirits and Angels in Heaven, who are both in the constant desire of knowing and being wise, and when this spiritual food is wanting they are in desolation, in sluggishness of life, and in hunger, nor are they revived and uplifted into the blessedness of their life until their desires are satisfied.

6135². That 'body' in the genuine sense is the good of love, is manifestly evident from the Angels. From them, when they are presented to view, love pours forth, so that you would believe them to be nothing but love, and this from their whole bodies. Their bodies also appear resplendent and lucid from the light thence derived, for the good of love is like a flame that emits a light from itself which is the truth of faith thence.

6193². The things that flow in from the Angels, being more through the interiors, do not appear so much to the outward sense, as those which are from evil Spirits. The Angels are also of such a character as never to be willing to hear that the influxes of good and truth are from themselves, but that they are from the Lord; they are indignant if it is thought otherwise, for they are in the manifest perception that it is so, and they love nothing more than not to will and think from themselves, but from the Lord.

6205. Influx through the Angels takes place according to the affections of the man, which they lead gently and bend to good, and do not break; the influx itself is tacit, hardly perceptible, for it is in the interiors; and constantly through freedom.

6206. If, when evil flows in, the man would think that it is from evil Spirits, the Angels would avert and reject it, for the influx of the Angels is into that which the man knows and believes, but not into that which the man does not know and believe, for it can only be fixed where there is something in the man.

6207. The influx of the Angels is especially into the conscience of man; there is the plane into which they operate; this plane is in the interiors of man.

6209. The influx of the Angels with man is not perceived as the influx of Spirits is; for what flows in from them is not material, but spiritual, and appears wholly as an aerial streaming-fluvialite aereum-, which is lucid from the interior Angels, and as it were flaming from those still more interior.

6210. When I have thought inordinately about worldly things . . . possessions, the acquisition of riches, pleasures, and the like, I noticed that I relapsed into the Sensual; and that in proportion as the thought was immersed in these things I was removed from consort with the Angels.

6221. The Angels know nothing about death, or sickness, wherefore neither have they any idea about such things, and therefore when a man reads about them, they have instead an idea of the continuation of life and resurrection. . . At the same time they have an idea of regeneration, for this is resurrection into life.

6226. The Angels do not think like man from the objects of the world, of the body, and of the earth, but from the objects of Heaven.

6279. 'The Angel redeeming me from all evil' = the Lord's Divine Human, from which there comes deliverance from Hell. 6280, Ex.

6280. The reason why the Divine Human is called the 'Angel' is that by Angel is signified Sent, and the Lord as to the Divine Human is said to be 'Sent,' and moreover the Divine Human before the Advent of the Lord into the world was Jehovah Himself inflowing through Heaven when the Word was being spoken . . . this is the Divine Human from eternity, and is what is called 'Sent,' by which is meant the proceeding, and is here the same as 'Angel.' III. See also A.6831, under ANGEL OF JEHOVAH.

6313. When a man is uplifted towards interior things, from a gross sensual lumen he comes into a milder lumen, and is then at the same time withdrawn from the influx of scandalous and filthy things, and is drawn nearer to those things which belong to what is just and fair, because more nearly to the Angels who are with him, thus more nearly to the light of Heaven.

6315. He who is in good of life, is uplifted from one lumen into the other, and into the interior lumen the moment that he begins to think evilly, for the Angels are near him.

6319. The influx of the Angels with a man is not [an influx] of such thoughts as the man has, but is according to correspondences. For the Angels think spiritually, but the man perceives this naturally. . . For example, when a man thinks of bread, sowing, harvest, fat, and such like things, then the thought of the Angels is about the goods of love and of charity; and so on.

6320. When Angels flow in, they also adjoin affections, and the affections themselves contain in themselves innumerable things; but of these only a few are received by the man, namely, those which are applicable to what is already in his memory; the rest of the things of the Angelic influx encompass them, and as it were keep them in their bosom.

[A.] 632^r. That there is Angelic influx, and that man could not live without it, has been given to know by experience. . . There are malignant Spirits who have devised arts of withholding the Angelic influx, but only as to some part. . . In proportion as they did this to me, the life of thought fluctuated, and at length was as with those who swoon.

634⁴. They who are in truth from good . . . are in power through truth from good ; in this power are all the Angels, whence also Angels are called 'Powers' in the Word ; for they are in the power of controlling evil Spirits, one Angel thousands at once. They exert their power the most with man, in sometimes protecting him against many Hells, and this in thousands of ways. They have this power through the truth which is of faith from the good which is of charity ; but as faith with them is from the Lord, it is the Lord alone who is Power with them.

6393. They place blessedness in pre-eminence . . . and in being served by Angels, thus in being above the Angels.

6423. Anyone from the infernal crew flees away to a great distance when good approaches, or an Angel who is in good.

6430. The man who is in good of life as to his interiors is in society with Angels.

6469. It has been given me to perceive, through influx, the sweetness of the Angels, which they perceive from not thinking and willing from themselves, but from the Lord. Thence they have tranquillity, peace, and happiness. And when the Angels have flowed in to my perception, then the presence of the Lord was manifestly perceived, a sign that they are in the Lord's life.

6482^e. The reason why the Angels are the Lord's ministries, is that they may be in active life, and thence in happiness ; but still the ministries they perform are not from them, but from influx from the Lord, as also the Angels unanimously confess. 8719, below.

6484². What his quality had been in his infancy was shown by the Lord to the Angels.

6486. I heard the Angels conversing together about the Lord's Providence, and did indeed understand what they said, but little of it can be described, because their speech was constantly joined to heavenly representatives, which cannot be expressed except as to a small part.

6492. The Angels make such presents to each other.

6595. When the Church ceases to be . . . the external still remains, but is such that it has an internal in it ; but this internal is not then with man . . . but with the Angels who are with man.

6604. (The face of an Angel seen varied according to affections.)

6607. The forms of Heaven are still more wonderful, and are such as can never be comprehended, even by the Angels. In such a form are the Angelic Societies in the Heavens, and in such a form do the thoughts of the Angels flow, and that to a great distance almost in an instant, because they are according to a form infinitely perfect.

6612. They who think outwardly, that is, in the Sensual, communicate only with the grosser Spirits ; but they who think inwardly, that is, from the Rational, have communication with Angels. The difference explained.

6615. When the thought of the Angels falls down to lower parts, it appears as a bright cloud ; but when the thought of the Angels in the higher Heavens falls down, it appears like a flaming light from which there is a vibration of splendour . . .

6617. That there are innumerable things in a single idea, is evident to me from the fact that the Angels perceive in a moment the life appertaining to a Spirit and a man merely on hearing him speak, or when they look into his thought. The Angels of a lower Heaven are able to do this, and the Angels of a higher Heaven are able to perceive still more things. Ex.

6623. Because there are such innumerable things in ideas of thought, the Angels can tell the quality of a Spirit or of a man from one single expression that goes forth from thought. (That is, from the way in which it is uttered.) Examp.

6624. Ideas of thought are the words of Spirits, and ideas of more inward thought are the words of Angels.

6626. The Lord, who alone is Man, and from whom Angels, Spirits, and the inhabitants of earth are called men, through His influx into Heaven, causes the Universal Heaven to represent and relate to one man, and through influx through Heaven and from Himself immediately into each there, causes everyone to appear as a man, the Angels in a more beautiful and resplendent form than can possibly be described.

6647. When the man of the Spiritual Church is being regenerated, truths are excited by the Lord through the Angels who are with him, and thence he is led into good ; but when that man has been regenerated, truth and good are excited together, and so he is led.

6648^e. Thus are the Angels continually being perfected, and thus are all who, when they come into the other life, become Angels.

6666². The evil who are from Hell . . . are of such a character, that they could not possibly be resisted by any man, nor even by any Angel, but by the Lord alone.

6677. In all good the Lord is present. Hence it is that the Angels, being in good, have such power over infernal Spirits that one of them is able to master a thousand.

6804². The Angels in Heaven never determine their thoughts to single persons, for this would be to bound the thoughts, and withdraw from the universal perception of things which is the source of Angelic speech. Hence it is that the things the Angels speak in Heaven are ineffable, and far above human thought, which is not extended to universals, but is confined to particulars. Examp.

6849. Lest the Angels in Heaven should be hurt by the influx of heat from the Lord as a Sun, each one of them is veiled by a kind of thin and suitable cloud, by which the heat flowing in from that Sun is tempered. 8946^e. H. 120.

6872². If there are with a man the love of God and the love of the neighbour, and thence the love of what is good and true, as well as of what is just and honest, whatever may be his appearance in outward form, as to his spirit, which lives after death, he is an Angel.

—³. That a man is altogether as his love . . . is evident from the Angels in the other life, who when seen appear as forms of love. Love itself not only shines forth from them, but also exhales, so that you would say that from head to foot they are nothing else but loves. The reason is that all the interiors of an Angel, as also of a man, are nothing but forms recipient of life, and being forms recipient of life, they are forms recipient of love, for loves make the life of man.

6928. The Spirits of our Earth . . . love corporeal and worldly, that is, material things, wherefore . . . they are kept in . . . the 'Lower Earth,' and that until they are averse to corporeal and worldly things, and so come out which being done, they are elevated into Heaven, and initiated into interior things, and become Angels.

6982. The truth that proceeds immediately from the Divine cannot be heard by any one, not even by any Angel . . . 7270².

7038. The Angels in Heaven have all happiness from uses, and according to uses, so that use are to them Heaven.

7122². Evil Spirits excite evils and falsities, and the Angels excuse if the end had been good and insinuate truths. This is perceived as though it were in the man.

7236². Good in the Heavens forms the faces of the Angels.

7268. That which is properly called heaven is nothing but the Divine formed there, for the Angels who are in Heaven are human forms recipient of the Divine, and constituting a general form which is that of a man. And since Divine Truth in the Heavens what is meant in the O. T. by 'God,' hence it is that in the Original Language God is called 'Elohim' in the plural; and also that the Angels who are in the Heavens, being recipients of Divine Truth, are called 'gods.' III.

7295. When the evil first come into the other life, they have good Spirits and Angels adjoined to them, as when they lived in the body, for even evil men have Angels with them, in order that they may be able if they are willing to turn themselves to Heaven . . . But when, from their life in the world, they are of such a character as not to be able to receive the influx of truth and good from Heaven, the Angels and good Spirits by degrees recede from them, and as they recede, they become less and less rational. Sig.

7299. By the Divine power of the Lord the Angels annihilate the magical doings of magicians in the other life whenever they practise them to do evil to the upright. So great is the Angelic power from the Lord that it instantly dissipates all such things.

736. Many of the inhabitants of Mars have open communication with the Angels who are in Heaven. . . Their societies taken together throughout that Earth represent a general Angelic Society.

7381. Inward law is truth accommodated to Angels. . . The truth that is accommodated to Angels is for the most part incomprehensible to men, as is evident from the fact that such things are seen and said in heaven as the eye never saw nor the ear heard. The reason is that those things which are said among the Angels are spiritual, which are abstracted from material things, and consequently are remote from the ideas and words of human speech. . . In the ideas of the Angels there is nothing derived from time and space, but in place of them there are states. Ex. Hence it is that the things which the Angels speak among themselves are incomprehensible to man, and are also ineffable.

7391. The Angels do not attend to supplication, but to the humiliation in which the man is when he is supplicating; for supplication without humiliation is only a sounding voice that does not come to the hearing and perception of the Angels.

7719. There is light in the habitations or mansions of the Angels according to the intelligence and wisdom of their minds; and in proportion as there is light with them, there is darkness with those who are in the opposite. Sig.

7801^e. The Angels who are from the Earth Jupiter are together with the Angels of all the other Earths; for all who are truly Angels constitute one general Heaven.

7811. Their Angels (that is, of Jupiter) who are seated at the head, exercise a kind of judicial power over the man, for the Angels permit, moderate, forbid, and flow in. But it is given to them to say that they do not believe that they judge, but that the Lord alone is the Judge, and that all things which they command and prescribe to the chastising and instructing Spirits flow in with them from Him, and that they appear as if they were from them.

7967^e. The Angels that are with a man continually flow in with good affections, and then excite the truths that are conjoined with them, and vice versa. If the truths are not conjoined with good affections, then in vain do the Angels labour to excite those things that are of faith and charity.

[A.] 7973⁴. 'The measure of a man, that is, of an Angel' . . . By a 'man,' and by an 'Angel,' is signified everything of the truth and good of faith.

8002². Conscience is the plane into which the Angels flow, and by means of which there is given consort with them. But no plane can be formed for the Angels by means of natural good. . . They who are in this good . . . are drawn away by everyone, whether good or evil, like chaff driven by the wind . . . nor can they then be drawn away by the Angels, for the Angels operate through truths and goods of faith, and inflow into the plane that has been formed in man within from truths and goods of faith. Hence it is evident that those who do what is good merely from their natural disposition cannot be consoiated with the Angels. Refs.

8021. (How the inhabitants of Jupiter are prepared for the coming of one of their Angels.) 8028.

8022. Angels of that Earth afterwards came, and it was given to perceive from speech with me, that they are altogether different from the Angels of our earth, for their speech was not carried on by means of words, but ideas. Ex.

8099². They who are delivered from infestations . . . are led through the midst of Hell. . . When they are passing through, they are so protected by the Lord that not the least of evil can touch them . . . for they are encompassed with a column of Angels with whom the Lord is present. This is represented by the passing of the Sons of Israel through the Red Sea.

8115. The Spirits of Jupiter . . . marvelled when they heard that those who from our Earth become Angels, are of an altogether different heart, and retain scarcely anything like their states when they were Spirits. In order that they might know that it is so, there came a choir, one after another, from a Heaven where there were Angels from our Earth. Des.

8118. Such were the ancient times; wherefore the Angels were then able to have intercourse with men, and to lead their minds with them into Heaven almost separated from their bodies, and to take them about and show them the magnificent and happy things there.

8212. Hence it is that when the Angels look into anyone, they infuse into him the affection that is of their life.

8237². The Lord rules the Hells by means of the Angels, to whom there is given the opportunity of seeing all things that exist there from the place where they are. . . This office is given to the Angels, and through it dominion over the Hells.

8242. There appeared one of their Angels (of Jupiter) behind a bright cloud, who gave permission.

8269². The Heaven of man is good, and man is with the Angels in Heaven through good.

8296. 'Thou hast breathed with Thy wind' = the presence of the Lord with the Angels.

8301³. By 'gods' in a good sense are meant the Angels, who are called 'gods' because they are substances or forms recipient of truth in which there is good from the Lord. Ill.

8343². When the Angels think and speak about the Hells, they think and speak of falsities and evils abstractedly from those who are there; for the Angels always remove ideas of persons, and remain in ideas of things. 9249², Refs.

8370². Hence it is that when Angels are presented to view, the sphere of the good of love pours forth from them, and affects those who are present, and the truths of faith shine forth from their faces. H. 17.

8379. The inhabitants of Jupiter are fond of picturing in their houses the visible heaven with its stars, because they believe the abodes of the Angels to be there.

8443². Truth Divine in the first and second degree . . . is above Angelic understanding.

8452. In the other life, when there is a state that corresponds to evening, good Spirits and also Angels are let into the state of the natural affections in which they were in the world, consequently into the delights of their natural man; the reason is that they may be there perfected.

850². The Angels well perceive the source of a man's goodness and thence its quality; the Angels with a man are in good from the Lord and as it were dwell in it, and are unable to be in good that is from the man; they remove themselves from it as far as possible, for it is evil for the inmost.

8495³. The Angelic state in Heaven is that they will and do nothing from themselves, or from their proprium; they do it even so think and speak; their conjunction with the Lord consists therein. Sig. This state with the Angel is the heavenly state itself; and when they are in it, they have peace and quiet.

8497². The goods that are of faith and of charity cannot be given to a man or an Angel so as to be his own, for me and Angels are only recipients, or forms accommodate to receive life, thus good and truth from the Lord.

8533². The quantity and quality of every one's good in the other life is manifest before the Angels when the Lord grants.

8588². Communication with the Angels in Heaven at that time to place in this way. Their outward worship communicated with the Angelic Spirits who are simple and do not reflect upon inward things, but still are inwardly good. . . The interior Angels in Heaven saw in these Spirits the things that were being represented, thus the celestial and Divine things that corresponded, for they could be with these Spirits and see those things, but they could not be with the men except through those Spirits; for the Angels dwell with men in interior things, but where there are no interior things, they dwell in the interior things of simple Spirits, for the Angels have no relish for anything except the spiritual and celestial things that are within the representatives. 8788². 10602.

8595². In order that Truth Divine may be made combative, it flows in with such Angels as are in ardent zeal for truth and good, and being stirred with that zeal they combat. This is the source of the truth combating that is represented by 'Joshua.'

8632. Their Angels (of Jupiter), when with a man of their own Earth, do not chastise, nor even speak harshly, but only permit the punishing Spirits, who are also present, to do so.

8644². No Angel could bear the flame from the Divine Love; he would be consumed in a moment.

8717. The disposition or Providence of the Lord . . . that is mediate through Heaven, is as that which is immediate from Himself, for that which comes out from Heaven comes from Him through Heaven. That this is so the Angels in Heaven not only know, but also perceive in themselves.

8719. The reason why the Lord acts through Heaven, is not that He has need of their assistance, but in order that the Angels there may have functions and duties, and thence life and happiness according to the duties and uses. Hence it is that there is the appearance with them that they act of themselves, but the perception that they do so from the Lord. Sig.

8725^e. The Angels clearly and plainly see and perceive from the Lord the connection and purification of truths.

8747. A man who is regenerate is in Heaven as to his inward man, and is an Angel there with the Angels, among whom also he will come to live after death. . .

8750. Since in the inmost sphere of Heaven there is a certain progression according to the Divine heavenly form, which comes to the perception of no one, and according to which the changes of state of all in Heaven take place, the Angels there are alternately in the good of love, in the truth of faith, and in obscurity as to both. This is why there is a correspondence of the states there with times in the world. . .

8862. All the words, that is, all the truths that are from the Lord, are not only for men, but are also for the Angels, for they pass through Heaven, and so reach the earth. Ex. 8899.

8865. Such a universally reigning [presence] must the Lord be with man, for such is He with the Angels in Heaven, of whom it is therefore said that they are in the Lord. The Lord becomes regnant when it is not only believed that everything good and true is from Him, but also when we love it to be so. The Angels are not only in the faith that it is so, but also in the perception. Hence it is that their life is the life of the Lord in them; the life of their will is the life of love from the Lord, and the life of their understanding is the life of faith from the Lord.

8868³. With the Angels of Heaven all things of their discourse are open even to the Lord, which is both clearly perceived and also heard from the softness and quality of it.

8891². The Angels do not see the sense of the Word according to the letter, but according to those things in it that are spiritual and celestial, and in these Divine things. Examp.

8897^e. This Divine light from the Lord as a Sun is what illuminates Angelic minds and infills with intelligence and wisdom, and causes them to be Angels of Light.

8949. The Lord sometimes appears to those who are in that Earth (Saturn) in an Angelic form, and thus as a Man.

8983². The Angels themselves appear in a human form in Heaven altogether according to the truths that with them are in good, and with beauty and splendour according to the quality of the good from truths.

9043^e. Man is then as an Angel, for the Angels have life from good and form from truths, which is the human form.

9094. The Angels see the arcana of the Word in light that is from the Lord, in which innumerable things are presented to view that do not fall into the expressions of speech, and not even into ideas of thought with men so long as they live in the body. . . From experience.

9141². The love of good, that is, love to the Lord and love towards the neighbour, constitute the fire of life with a good man and with an Angel of Heaven, and the love of truth and the faith of truth constitute the light of life with them.

9160. God is called 'Elohim' in the plural from the fact that the Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord in Heaven is multifariously divided among the Angels, for there are as many recipients of Divine Truth as there are Angels, each in his own way. Refs. Hence it is that the Angels are called 'gods,' and also judges, because these were not to judge from themselves, but from the Lord.

9166⁴. Heaven is not Heaven from the Angels regarded in themselves, but from the Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord, thus from the Lord in them, for the Divine in them makes them to be and to be called Angels of Heaven. Hence it is that those who are in Heaven are said to be in the Lord, also that the Lord is all in each and all things of Heaven, and also that the Angels are Truths Divine, because recipients of Truth Divine from the Lord. Refs.

[A.] 9167². 'The Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His temple, even the Angel of the Covenant whom ye have desired ;' where 'Lord' is said from Divine Good, and 'Angel' from Divine Truth. Refs. 10528^e.

9229⁸. Hence it is that the Angels are called 'holy ;' not that they are holy from themselves, but from the Lord, who alone is holy, and from whom alone there is what is holy ; for by 'Angels' are signified truths, because they are receptions of truth from the Lord. Refs. 9820.

9295⁴. 'The Angels who are the reapers' = truths from the Lord.

9303. 'Behold I send an Angel before thee' = the Lord as to the Divine Human. . . An 'Angel' = that which proceeds, for Angel in the Original Language sigs. sent. Ill.

—⁵. An Angel appears in the human form, but still there are three things in him that make a one ; there is his Internal, which does not appear before the eyes, there is the External that does appear, and there is the sphere of the life of his affections and thoughts that pours forth from him to a distance. Refs.

9327². They who are in Hell, being all in falsities from evil, have no power whatever ; therefore thousands of them can be driven, cast down and dispersed by one Angel, almost like flocks in the air by blowing with the mouth.

9341⁴. 'The Angels bound at the Euphrates' = falsities arising through reasonings from the fallacies of the senses.

9359. The Lord appears to the inhabitants of the Earths in an Angelic form, which is the human form.

9360. The inhabitants, Spirits, and Angels of our Earth relate to the outward and bodily sense.

9372⁴. 'King's houses' = the mansions where the Angels are. . . The Angels are called 'Sons of the Kingdom,' 'Sons of the King,' and also 'Kings' from the reception of truth from the Lord.

9410⁵. The Angels are called 'Powers,' and also are powers . . . not from themselves, but from the Lord, since they are recipients of Divine Truth that is from the Lord. Their power from the Lord is so great that one of them can drive away, shut up in the Hells, and hold in check a thousand of the diabolical crew. 9639. 10182².

—^e. When I am reading 'the blood of the Lamb,' and am thinking of the Lord's blood, the Angels with me know no otherwise than that I am reading Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord.

9503. The more perfectly the Angels receive the Divine Truth that is from the Lord, thus the Lord, the more perfect human forms they are, and at last so perfect, that the beauty exceeds belief. He who shall see them, as I have, will be astounded ; for they are heavenly loves and charities in form, which is the form truly human. The reason why the Angels are human forms, is that the Divine in Heaven is the Lord, and they who receive Divine Truth in good from Him are His images. 9879. 10177⁴.

9603². 'The measure of a man, that is, of an Angel' = such is the state of the Church and of Heaven as to goods of love and truths of faith, for 'man' is the Church, and 'Angel' is Heaven.

9606. The Angels and Angelic Societies are conjoined and also disjoined according to their spheres.

9670³. Intermediate Angels represented by the 'veil.'

9694. They (Spirits of the first Earth) said, that they worshipped a certain Angel who appears to them as a Divine Man, for he is refulgent with light ; and that he instructs them and gives them to perceive what to do. They said further that the Greatest God is in the Sun of the Angelic Heaven, and that He appears by His Angel.

9695. The Angel whom they worshipped was an Angelic Society . . .

9814². The Angels who were seen by the ancients, as by Abraham, Sarah, Lot, Jacob, Joshua, Gideon, and the Prophets, were not seen with the eyes of the body, but with the eyes of their spirits, which were then opened. H. 76.

9818²². 'The Angel of faces' is the Lord as to Divine Good.

—²³. 'To make the Angels spirits' denotes receptions of Divine Truth.

9874². Every Angel is a Heaven in the least form.

9877. The Angels in the Heavens are receptions of truths from good.

9879. The Angels who constitute Heaven are receptions of good and truth from the Lord, and being receptions of them, they are also forms of them.

9905. (When the Urim and Thummim were consulted, answers were given by the Angels.)

9960⁷. 'The Angel of the Church' = Truth Divine there.

9987. 'The Heavens thence made and all their host' are the Angels so far as they are receptions of Divine truth.

10125. The Angels regarded in themselves do not constitute Heaven, but the Lord with them ; for the Lord does not dwell in anything proper to a man or an Angel, but in what is His own with them.

10130⁵. When an Angel of Heaven determines his sight to others, he then communicates and transfers his interior things into them, according to the quantity and quality of their love ; wherefore if the sight is determined by an Angel of Heaven to the good, it produces gladness and joy ; but if to the evil, it produces pain and torment.

10134⁴. The Angels have an Internal and an External ; when they are in the Internal the External is almost quiescent ; but when they are in the External, they are in a grosser and more obscure state . . .

10135. The states of love and of light are varied with the Angels as the states of the times of the day are varied in the world. . . When the Angels are in a state of love, then it is morning with them, and then there appears to them the Lord as a Rising Sun ; when they are in a state of light, then it is noon with them ; but when in a state of dim light, then it is evening with them ; and afterwards when they are in a state of dim love, or in some cold, then it is night with them, or rather the dawn before the morning. Such states follow in succession with the Angels continually, and by their means they are continually being perfected. But these variations do not exist from the Sun there . . . but from the state of the interiors of the Angels themselves ; for they desire, like men, to be now in their internals, now in externals . . .

10162. I was told by the Angels . . .

10189². The Angels have the Lord constantly before the face.

10217^e. 'An Angel,' in the Word=truths from good, since he is a recipient of Divine Truth from the Lord. 10299^e.

10227^e. In Heaven with the Angels all things appear as it were flashing with gold, silver, and precious stones, and this because they are in intelligence of truth and in wisdom of good ; for the interiors of the Angels are thus presented to view in a visible form from correspondence.

10330². Man being then among the Angels, there are communicated to him by them, that is, through them from the Lord, intelligence of truth and affection of good. This communication is what is called influx and illustration.

10355². In the most ancient times, men were informed about heavenly things through immediate intercourse with the Angels of Heaven, for Heaven then acted as one with the man of the Church, flowing in through the inward into the outward man. Hence they had not only illustration and perception, but also speech with the Angels.

—⁴. Inasmuch as information about heavenly things . . . could not be given through influx into the interiors of (the Israelites), and thus through illustration, therefore Angels from Heaven spoke viva voce with some of them, and instructed them about external things, and little about internal things.

10384. On this Earth, where bodily and earthly things are so much loved . . . it would be dangerous to speak with Angels.

10483². The Angels from Heaven with man are in his celestial and spiritual loves.

10508. 'Behold, I will send my Angel before thee'=that still Divine Truth will lead. The 'Angel of Jehovah,' in the supreme sense=the Lord as to the Divine Human ; in the relative sense=the Divine that is of the Lord with the Angels in the Heavens ; and thence=Divine Truth. 10528.

10528. 'I will send an Angel before thee'=the Divine of the Lord, from which is the Church and its worship. . . . An 'Angel' also=the Divine of the Lord in the Church with men. . . . For men who are in the good of love and the truths of faith in the Lord from the Lord become Angels after death, and those who do so also are Angels as to their interiors while they live in the world. Hence it is that John the Baptist is called an 'Angel,' Ill.

10561^e. 'To be sent by Jehovah'=the Divine leading, and also the Divine proceeding, therefore the Angels in the Original Language are so called from Sent.

10568². The Angels of Heaven cannot keep their minds in the idea of a land, because the idea of a land is material ; nor in the idea of any nation, for this idea also is material ; wherefore there at once comes to them a spiritual idea, which is that of the Church. . . It is impossible for any material idea to enter Heaven. 10604², Ex.

10604³. Hence the Angels perceive spiritually what man perceives naturally, and this in a moment, without any reflection about the difference. This takes place especially when man is reading the Word, or when he is thinking from the Word.

—⁵. Another reason why the Angels so perceive the Word when a man is reading it, is that the Angels are with men and dwell in their affections ; and because man as to his spirit is in society with Spirits, and as to his interior thought, which is spiritual, with the Angels of Heaven. Hence also man has the faculty of thinking.

10608³. The interior Angels dwell higher upon the mountains, and the higher the more interior and perfect they are.

10768. The Angels who were there, and appeared as men of that (fifth) Earth, when they are presented to view as men . . . see the objects there with their eyes just as the inhabitants themselves do. But when they are not in that state, they see nothing of that kind, but only what is in Heaven.

10809. With the Angels of our Earth the Lord appears . . . in the Sun as a Man, encompassed with the solar fire, from which comes all light to the Angels in the Heavens. . . That Sun only appears to the Angels in Heaven, and not to Spirits who are below, since the latter are further removed from the good of love and truth of faith than the Angels who are in the Heavens.

10814. It was then granted to speak about dominion with the Angels who were with me.

10833. (On the Sixth Earth) they then hear the Angels of Heaven speaking about Divine Truths, and a life according to them ; and when they are fully awake, an Angel in white appears to them at the side of the bed, who then suddenly disappears from their eyes ; and then they know that the things they have heard are from Heaven.

H. 1². 'The Angels with a trumpet and a great voice' = Heaven, whence is Divine Truth.

7. The Angels taken together are called Heaven, because they constitute it ; but still it is the Divine proceeding from the Lord, that flows in with the Angels, and that is received by them, that makes Heaven both in general and in part. The Divine proceeding from the Lord is the good of love and the truth of faith ; in proportion therefore as they receive good and truth from the Lord, in the same proportion are they Angels, and in the same proportion are they Heaven.

[H.] 8. The Angels of the Inmost Heaven clearly perceive and feel the influx (of good and truth from the Lord), and in the same proportion as they receive it do they seem to themselves to be in Heaven . . . Refs.

— (q). Therefore by 'Angels' is meant something of the Lord. Refs.

9³. Because the Angels so believe, they refuse all thanks for the good they do, and are indignant and retire if any one attributes good to them.

12. The Lord dwells in what is His own with the Angels of Heaven . . .

14. Love conjoins the Angels to the Lord, and conjoins them mutually together; and so conjoins them that in the Lord's sight they are all as one.

17^e. It is not the Angels who turn themselves to the Lord, but it is the Lord who turns to Himself those who love to do the things that are from Him.

— (z). The Angels are forms of love and charity. Refs.

27^e. The Lord always provides such intermediate Angels.

32. (Internal and external Angels in every Heaven.)

34. Angelic perfection consists in intelligence, in wisdom, in love, and in every good; and thence in happiness, but not in happiness without these things, for happiness without these things is outward and not inward. Since the interiors of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven are open to the third degree, their perfection immensely surpasses that of the Angels in the Middle Heaven, whose interiors are open to the second degree; and in like manner does the perfection of the Angels of the Middle Heaven surpass that of the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven.

35. Since there is such a difference, the Angels of one Heaven cannot enter to the Angels of another Heaven . . . 37, Ex.

—^e. When the Lord elevates any from a lower to a higher Heaven . . . they are environed round by intermediate Angels through whom there is communication.

39. With every Angel, and also with every man, there is an inmost or supreme degree, or inmost and supreme somewhat, into which the Divine of the Lord first or proximately flows, and from which it disposes the rest of the interiors that follow according to the degrees of order . . . 435^e.

41. The Angels of each Heaven are not all together in one place, but are distinguished into Societies greater and smaller, according to the differences of good of love and truth of faith in which they are. . . Every Angel is as it were his own good. See SOCIETY.

45. It is good that consociates all in the Heavens, and they are distinguished according to its quality; but still it is not the Angels who thus consociate themselves, but the Lord the Source of good. He Himself leads them, conjoins them, distinguishes them, and keeps them in freedom in the proportion that they are in good; thus [He leads and keeps] every one in the life of his own love, of his own faith, of his own intelligence and wisdom, and thence in happiness.

46. When I have been in the spirit, thus withdrawn from the body, and so in consort with Angels.

47^e. Angelic faces are forms of their interiors, thus of the affections that are of love and faith.

48. Hence it is that an Angel who excels in wisdom can see at once what another is from his face.

49. The Angels have intelligence and wisdom according to the extension of the sphere of their life. Those who are in the centre of the Inmost Heaven have extension into the universal Heaven.

50. There are some who dwell solitary, as it were house by house, and family by family. But although they live in this scattered way, they are similarly arranged in order as those who are in Societies; namely, the wiser of them are in the middle, and the more simple in the boundaries. These are more closely under the Divine auspices of the Lord, and are the best of the Angels.

51. Every Angel is a Heaven in the least form. Gen.art.

52. When the Lord appears in the midst of the Angels, He does not then appear encompassed by many, but as one in an Angelic form. Hence it is that in the Word the Lord is called an 'Angel.'

53. Heaven is not outside of an Angel, but within him; for his interiors, that are of his mind, are disposed into the form of Heaven, thus to the reception of all things of Heaven that are outside of him; for he receives them according to the quality of the good that is in him from the Lord. Thence is an Angel also a Heaven.

54. Every Angel receives the Heaven that is without him according to the Heaven that is within him.

55^e. When the Lord appears in any Society, He appears there as an Angel; but He is known from others by the Divine that shines through.

57. Man was created that he might come into Heaven and become an Angel; wherefore he in whom there is good from the Lord is an Angel man.

—². What a man has in common with an Angel, and what he has more than the Angels. . . A man has in common with an Angel, that his interiors are equally formed to the image of Heaven, and also that He becomes an image of Heaven in proportion as he is in the good of love and of faith. A man has more than the Angels in that his exteriors are formed to the image of the world; and that in proportion as he is in good, the world is with him subordinated to Heaven, and is of service to Heaven; and that then the Lord is present with him in both as in His Heaven.

59. To know that Heaven in the whole complex relates to one man, and the specific and particular things concerning it, is the principal [subject] of the intelligence of the Angels there.

61. Such is the idea of the Angels concerning man, wherefore they never attend to the things that a man does with the body, but to the will from which the body does them. They call this the man himself, and his understanding, in so far as it makes one with the will.

62. The Angels do not indeed see Heaven in the whole complex in such a form, for the whole of Heaven does not fall into the view of any Angel, but they sometimes see remote Societies, that consist of many thousands of Angels, as a one in such a form.

65. The Angels know in what member one Society is, and in what another.

68. Hypocrites that can feign themselves to be Angels of light.

69. The little stars that appeared round the cloud were Angels, who so appeared by light from the Lord.

71^e. Since Heaven is perfected by increasing numbers . . . the Angels yearn for nothing more than for new Angel guests to come to them.

73. Hence every Angel is in a perfect human form. Gen.art.

—^e. Since an Angel also is a man from these things, therefore it is said 'the measure of a man which is that of an Angel.'

74. That the Angels are human forms, or men, I have seen a thousand times. For I have spoken with them as one man with another, sometimes with one, sometimes with many in consort, nor have I seen with them any difference from a man as to form. . . It has been granted to see them in full wakefulness, when I was in possession of every bodily sense, and in a state of clear perception. I have often told them that men in the Christian world . . . believe Angels and Spirits to be minds without a form. . . To these things the Angels said that they know there is such a belief with many in the world. . . They said the reason is that the learned . . . have thought concerning them from the sensual things of the outward man. . . They further said that the simple in faith and heart are not in that idea about Angels, but in an idea of them as being the men of Heaven. . . Hence it is that the Angels in churches, whether carved or painted, are represented as men. H.183².

75. From all my experience, which is now that of many years, I am able to assert, that Angels as to their form are altogether men; that they have faces, eyes, ears, a breast, arms, hands, and feet; that they see and hear each other, and speak together; in a word, that there is nothing whatever wanting to them that belongs to a man, except that they are not covered over with a material body. I have seen them in light that surpasses noonday light by many degrees, and in that light I have seen all the features of their faces more distinctly and more clearly than the faces of men of the Earth were ever seen. It has also been granted me to see an Angel of the Inmost Heaven, who had a more glittering and resplendent face than the Angels of the lower Heavens. I examined him, and he had the human form in all its perfection.

79. All the Angels that are in the Heavens never perceive the Divine under any other form than the human form; and, what is wonderful, those who are in the higher Heavens, cannot think otherwise about the Divine. They are borne into this necessity of thinking from the Divine itself that flows in, and also from the form of Heaven, according to which their thoughts extend themselves around; for all the thought the Angels have has extension into Heaven, and according to that extension is their intelligence and wisdom. Hence it is that all there acknowledge the Lord, because a Divine Human does not exist in anyone but He. . . Hence it is evident that the wiser the Angels are, the more clearly they perceive this; and hence it is that the Lord appears to them; for the Lord appears in a Divine Angelic form, which is the human form, to those who acknowledge and believe in a visible Divine.

80. The Angels of the interior Heavens, being in good and truth from the Lord, and thence in wisdom and intelligence, are in the most beautiful and perfect human form; and the Angels of the lower Heavens are in a less perfect and beautiful human form.

81. Since Heaven in the whole and in part, from the Lord's Divine Human relates to a man, the Angels say that they are in the Lord, and some of them that they are in His Body, by which they understand being in His love. Sig.

86^e. The simple . . . have an idea of an Angel that he is a heavenly man, an idea of their own soul which is to live after death that it is like an Angel. . . These therefore the Angels call intelligent.

102. The Angels are astounded when they hear that there are men who attribute all things to nature . . .

114. The Angels of Heaven do not think from natural things as man does; wherefore when a man is in the science of correspondences, he is able to be with the Angels as to the thoughts of his mind, and so to be conjoined with them as to his spiritual or inward man.

118. The Lord appears as a Sun . . . before the faces of the Angels.

121. When the Lord appears in Heaven, as He often does, He does not appear girded with the Sun, but in an Angelic form, being distinguished from the Angels by the Divine shining through the face . . .

122. The sun of this world appears to the Angels as a thick darkness opposite to the Sun of Heaven, and the moon as a thick darkness opposite to the Moon of Heaven, and this constantly.

127. From Divine Truth the Angels have light, and from Divine Good they have heat. 128, Ex. 135, Ex.

128 (h). Light in Heaven is according to the intelligence and wisdom of the Angels. Refs. Hence they are called Angels of Light. 131.

131. The interior Angels love that all things in them should appear openly, because they do not will anything but what is good.

— When a man as to his spirit is looked at by the Angels, if he is a good man he appears beautiful according to his good; if evil, as a monster, ugly according to his evil.

133. There are Angels who receive more Divine Good than Divine Truth, and there are some who receive more Divine Truth than Divine Good, (the former are in the Celestial Kingdom, and the latter in the Spiritual Kingdom). The most perfect Angels are those who receive both in a like degree.

136. The Angels, like men, have understanding and will; the life of their understanding makes the light of Heaven, because the light of Heaven is Divine Truth and thence Divine Wisdom, and the life of their will makes the heat of Heaven, because the heat of Heaven is Divine Good and thence Divine Love. The very life itself of the Angels is from the heat and not from the light, except in so far as it is in the heat.

[H.] 137². All Angels, from Divine Truth, are called Powers, and also are Powers in the same proportion that they are receptions or receptacles of it; through it they prevail over the Hells and over all who oppose themselves; a thousand enemies cannot endure there a single ray of the light of Heaven, which is Divine Truth. Since the Angels are Angels from the reception of Divine Truth, it follows that the whole Heaven is from no other source, because Heaven is from the Angels.

142. The east is always before the Angels, the west behind them, the south on their right hand, and the north on their left. The whole Heaven turns itself to the Lord as to its common Centre; hence all the Angels turn themselves thither. . . The interiors of the Angels are also actually turned forwards, and since the interiors present themselves to view in the face, it is the face that determines the quarters. 272².

— (y). There is no presence of the Angels with the Lord, but of the Lord with the Angels.

143. That the east is before the Angels in every turn of their faces and bodies shall be explained. The Angels turn and bend their faces and bodies about just as men do, yet still the east is always before their eyes; but the turning about of the Angels is not like that of men, but is from another origin. They appear alike, but are not so. The reigning love is the origin of all determinations with Angels and Spirits . . . wherefore as the love is constantly before their faces, and the face exists from the interiors . . . therefore that love which reigns is always before the face. Ex. That the Angels have the Lord constantly before the face, has been given me to know, and also to perceive, from much experience; for whenever I have been in consort with Angels, I have observed the presence of the Lord before my face, which although not seen, was perceived in light. The Angels have also often testified that such is the case. It is because the Lord is constantly before the faces of the Angels, that it is said in the world that we should have God before our eyes . . .

144. Although the whole aspect of the Angels is to the east, still they have an aspect to the three other quarters also, but the aspect to these is from the interior sight, which is that of the thought.

145. The Angels see the Lord in one way, and the Lord sees them in another. The Angels see the Lord through the eyes, but the Lord sees the Angels in the forehead. The reason is that the forehead corresponds to the love, and the Lord flows into their wills through love, and causes Himself to be seen through understanding, to which the eyes correspond.

154. On the changes of state of the Angels in Heaven. Gen.art.

155. The Angels are not constantly in the same state as to love, and thence are not in the same state as to wisdom . . . sometimes they are in a state of intense love, sometimes in a state of love not intense; it decreases by degrees from its greatest to its least. When they are in the greatest degree of love, they are in the light and heat of their life, or in its clearness and delight; but when they are in the least, they are in the shade and cold, or in the dimness and undelight of it. From the last state they return again to the first, and so on. These changes succeed each other, with variety. . . Morning corresponds to the state of their love in its clearness; noon, to the state of their wisdom in its clearness; evening, to the state of their wisdom in its dimness; and night, to a state of no love and wisdom. But there is no correspondence of night with the states of life of those who are in Heaven, but there is a correspondence of the daybreak before the morning.

156. The states of the various things that are around the Angels and that appear before their eyes are also changed with the states of their interiors, which are of love and wisdom, for the things that are without them assume an appearance according to those that are within them.

158. The Angels say that there are such changes of state there from various causes. First; that the delight of life and of Heaven, which they have from love and wisdom derived from the Lord, would gradually become cheap if they were constantly in it. Secondly; they have proprium as well as men, and this consists in loving themselves, and all who are in Heaven are withheld from their proprium, and in proportion as they are withheld from it by the Lord, in the same proportion they are in love and wisdom; and in proportion as they are not withheld, they are in self-love; and inasmuch as everyone loves his proprium, and is attracted by it, therefore they have changes of state, or successive vicissitudes. Thirdly; they are thus perfected, since they thus become accustomed to be kept in love to the Lord, and to be withheld from self-love; and moreover the perception and sensation of what is good become more exquisite by means of alternations of what is delightful and of what is undelightful. They added, that the Lord does not produce the changes of their state, because the Lord as a Sun always flows in with light and heat; but that they themselves are the cause, because they love their proprium, which continually draws them away.

159. How the Lord as a Sun appears to the Angels in the Celestial Kingdom in their three states. Des.

160. When the Angels are in their last state, which is when they are in their proprium, they begin to become sad. I have spoken with them when they were in this state, and have seen their sadness. But they said that they were in the hope of soon returning to their pristine state, and thus as it were again into Heaven, for it is Heaven to them to be withheld from proprium.

162. Although all things in Heaven have their successions and progressions as in the world, still the Angels have no notion or idea of time or space, and so devoid are they of any such idea, that they are utterly ignorant of what time and space are. 163, Ex. 165. 168², Examp.

165. When the Angels hear from man (the names of various periods of time), for Angels are always adjoined to man by the Lord, then in place of them they perceive states, and such things as belong to states. Thus is a natural idea of man turned into a spiritual idea with the Angels.

167. Since the Angels have no notion of time, they therefore have a different idea of eternity from that of men of the Earth. By eternity, the Angels perceive infinite state, not infinite time.

168. When Angels speak with men, they never speak by means of natural ideas proper to the man, all of which are derived from time, space, what is material, and such things as are analogous to them; but they speak by means of spiritual ideas, all of which are derived from states and their various changes within and without the Angels; yet still, when the Angelic ideas, which are spiritual, flow in with the men, they are in a moment, and of themselves, turned into natural ideas proper to the man, and corresponding exactly to the spiritual ones. That such is the case, neither the men nor the Angels are aware; for such is all the influx of Heaven with man. There were Angels who were admitted more closely into my thoughts, even into my natural thoughts, in which were many things derived from time and space; but they understood nothing, and therefore suddenly retired, and I afterwards heard them saying that they had been in darkness.

169. The thoughts are not bounded but extended in proportion as they do not derive anything from time, space, and what is material. Hence the Angels have wisdom, so great as to be called incomprehensible, because it does not fall into ideas that consist merely of such things.

170. Angels have all the senses that man has, yea, much more exquisite ones; the light also by which they see, is much brighter than that by which man sees. Refs.

173. The Angels have interior things and exterior things; the interior have relation to love and faith . . . and the exterior correspond to the interior. 176, Examp.

177. On the garments with which the Angels appear clothed. Gen.art. Since Angels are men, and live together as men on the Earth do, they therefore have garments, homes, and many like things, but with the difference that they are all more perfect, because in a more perfect state; for as Angelic wisdom surpasses human wisdom to such a degree as to be called ineffable, so also do all things perceived by them and appearing to them; for all things perceived by the Angels and appearing to them correspond to their wisdom.

183. On the habitations and mansions of the Angels. Gen.art.

—2. Everyone has a general idea that Angels are in the human form, and that they have magnificent abodes . . . but this general idea, which is from the influx of Heaven is at once annihilated when the question whether it is so? is brought into the centre of thought. This takes place chiefly with the learned.

184. Whenever I have spoken with the Angels face to face, I have been with them in their habitations, which are exactly like the habitations on Earth called houses, only more beautiful. See HABITATION at this ref.

—(x). That the Angels have cities, palaces, and houses. Refs.

189. There are also Angels who do not live consociated, but separate, house by house. These dwell in the midst of Heaven, because they are the best of the Angels.

190. The houses in which the Angels dwell are not constructed [by hand] like houses in the world, but are given to them gratuitously by the Lord, to each according to his reception of good and truth; they also vary a little according to the changes of the states of their interiors. All things whatever that the Angels possess they hold as gifts from the Lord, and whatever things they need are given to them.

191. Although all things in Heaven appear to be in place and in space exactly as they do in the world, still the Angels have no notion or idea of place and space.

192. All progressions in the Spiritual World are effected by changes of state of the interiors, so that they are nothing but changes of state. . . All the Angels move in this manner, and hence they have no distances; and since they have no distances, they have no spaces, but instead of spaces they have states and their changes.

193. Hence it is that those [Angels] are near each other who are in a similar state, and those are distant from each other who are in a dissimilar one.

195. When anyone goes from one place to another . . . he arrives sooner when he is eager to do so, and later when he is not eager, the way itself being lengthened or shortened according to the desire, although it is the same way. . . Hence it is evident again that distance, and consequently spaces, are altogether according to the states of the interiors with the Angels; and therefore the notion and idea of space cannot enter their thoughts, although there are spaces with them equally as in the world.

199. The first and most essential cause of this is, that the Lord is present with everyone according to love and faith, and that all things appear near or remote according to His presence; for hence are all things in the Heavens determined. By this also the Angels have wisdom, for by it they have extension of the thoughts, and by it there is a communication of all things that are in the Heavens; in a word, by this it is that they think spiritually, and not naturally like men.

205. All in Heaven are consociated according to spiritual affinities, which are those of good and truth in their order. It is so in Heaven as a whole, it is so in every Society, and it is so in every house. Hence it is that the Angels who are in similar good and truth know each other as relations by blood and by marriage do on earth, and just as if they had done so from infancy. In a similar way are consociated the goods and truths that make the wisdom and intelligence with every Angel. They also know each other in a similar manner, and as they know each other so do they conjoin themselves together. Wherefore they with whom truths and goods are conjoined according to the form of Heaven, see the consequent things in a series, and also how they cohere together far and wide all round.

208. Since the conjunction of the Heavens by influx is from the Lord alone, the greatest care is taken that no Angel of a higher Heaven should look down into a Society of a lower one, and speak with anyone there;

the moment he does so, the Angel is deprived of his intelligence and wisdom. The cause of this is, that every Angel has three degrees of life, just as there are three degrees of Heaven. They who are in the Inmost Heaven have the third degree open, and the second and first closed; they who are in the Middle Heaven have the second degree open, and the first and third closed; and they who are in the Ultimate Heaven have the first degree open, and the second and third closed. As soon therefore as an Angel of the Third Heaven looks down into a Society of the Second Heaven, and speaks with anyone there, his third degree is closed, and he is thus bereaved of his wisdom, for in the third degree does his wisdom reside, and he has none in the second and first. This is what is meant by the words of the Lord in Matt., 'He who is on the roof, let him not come down to take anything that is in his house; and he who is in the field, let him not turn back to take his garment.'

[H.] 209. There is no influx from the lower Heavens into the higher ones, because this is against order, but only from the higher Heavens into the lower. For the wisdom of the Angels of a higher Heaven surpasses that of the Angels of a lower one in the proportion of a myriad to one; which is also the reason why the Angels of a lower Heaven cannot speak with the Angels of a higher one; yea, when they look thither they do not see them, and their Heaven appears as a misty somewhat over their heads. But the Angels of a higher Heaven can see those of a lower Heaven, but it is not allowable to join in conversation with them, except with the loss of their wisdom.

210. Neither the thoughts and affections, nor the discourse of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven can ever be perceived in the Middle Heaven, because they so far transcend; but, when it pleases the Lord, there appears thence a flaming somewhat in the lower Heavens; while those which are in the Middle Heaven appear as a lucid somewhat in the Ultimate Heaven, and sometimes as a bright and variously coloured cloud, from the ascent, descent, and form of which, what they are saying is in some measure known.

228. On the power of the Angels of Heaven. Gen.art.

229. The power of the Angels in the Spiritual World is so great, that if I were to adduce all the evidence of it that I have seen it would exceed belief. If anything there makes resistance that is to be removed because contrary to Divine order, they cast it down and overturn it by a mere effort of will and by a look. I have seen mountains that were occupied by the evil thus cast down and overthrown, and sometimes made to shake from one end to the other as though by an earthquake. I have seen rocks split open in the middle down to the deep, and the evil who were upon them swallowed up. I have also seen hundreds of thousands of evil Spirits dispersed by them and cast into Hell. Numbers are of no avail against them, nor arts, cunning and confederacies; they see all, and disperse them in a moment. . . That the Angels have similar power in the natural world, when it is granted, is evident from the Word; as that they gave whole armies to slaughter, that they induced a pestilence of which there died seventy thousand men. . . Since the Angels have such power, they are therefore called Powers; and it is said in David; 'Bless the Lord, ye His Angels that excel in strength' (Ps.ciii.20).

230. But the Angels have no power whatever of themselves, but all the power they have is from the Lord; and they are Powers in the proportion that they acknowledge this. Any one of them who believes that his power is from himself instantly becomes so weak that he cannot resist a single evil Spirit; therefore the Angels attribute no merit to themselves, and hold in aversion all praise and glory for anything they do, ascribing it to the Lord.

231. It is Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord that has all power in the Heavens . . . in proportion as the Angels are receptions of it, in the same proportion are they Powers. Refs. . . In proportion therefore that an Angel is Truth from the Divine, and Good from the Divine, he is a Power, because in the same proportion is the Lord with him; and since no one is in exactly the same good and truth as another, for in Heaven as in the world there is endless variety, therefore one Angel is not in the same power as another. Those are in the greatest power who constitute the arms in the Grand Man, or Heaven, because those who are in that province are in truths more than others, and good flows into their truths from the universal Heaven.

232. The Angels, however, are receptions of Divine Truth only so far as they are receptions of Divine Good. . . How great is the power which the Angels have through truths from good, has been evident from the fact, that an evil Spirit merely looked at by the Angels falls into a swoon, and does not appear as a man, and this until the Angel turns away his eyes. This effect is produced by a look of the Angels' eyes, because the sight of the Angels is from the light of Heaven, and the light of Heaven is Divine Truth.

234. On the speech of the Angels. Gen.art. The Angels talk together just as do men in the world, and also about various things (domestic, civil, moral, and spiritual), nor is there any difference, except that they talk more intelligently than men, because more interiorly from thought. It has often been granted me to be in consort with them, and to speak with them as one friend with another, and sometimes as one unknown person with another, and then, since I was in a state similar to theirs, I knew no otherwise than that I was speaking to men on the Earth.

235. Angelic speech is distinguished into words equally as human speech is; it is also uttered and heard with equal sonorousness; for the Angels have equally a mouth, a tongue, and ears. They have also an atmosphere, in which the sound of their speech is articulated, but it is a spiritual atmosphere that is accommodated to the Angels who are [themselves] spiritual. The Angels also breathe in their atmosphere, and utter words by means of the breathing, as men do in theirs.

236. All thought is from affection . . . and ideas of thought are various forms into which the affection is distributed. . . Hence the Angels know the quality of another from his mere speech; from the sound, the quality of his affection, and from the articulations of the sound, or the words, the quality of his mind. From a single succession of speech the wiser Angels know what is the dominant affection, for that is what they chiefly attend to. . . The dominant affection or love is in all (the other affections), therefore the wiser Angels, perceiving this (affection), know all the state of another from the speech. . . I have heard Angels laying open the life of another merely from having heard him ; they said also that they know all things of the life of another from a few ideas of his thought, because they thence know his reigning love in which they all are in order ; and that man's Book of Life is nothing else.

237. That Angelic language has nothing in common with human languages is evident from the fact, that it is impossible for the Angels to utter a single word of human language. This has been tried, but they could not do it ; for they cannot utter anything except what completely agrees with the affection ; what does not agree is repugnant to their very life, for the life is of affection, and from it is their speech.

238. Since the speech of the Angels corresponds to their affection that is of love, and the love of Heaven is love to the Lord and love towards the neighbour, it is evident how elegant and delightful their speech must be, for it affects not only the ears, but the interiors of the mind of those who hear. There was a certain Spirit hard of heart, with whom an Angel was speaking, and he was at last so affected by his speech, that he burst into tears, saying, that he could not resist, because it was love speaking, and that he had never wept before.

239. The speech of the Angels is full of wisdom, because it proceeds from their interior thought, which is wisdom, as their interior affection is love. Love and wisdom thus conjoin themselves in their speech ; hence it is so full of wisdom, that they can express by one word what a man cannot by a thousand. The ideas of their thought also comprehend things that man cannot conceive, much less utter. . . I have sometimes been let into the state in which the Angels are, and in that state have spoken with them, and then understood all ; but when I was let back again into my previous state, and thus into the natural thought proper to man, and wanted to recollect what I had heard, I could not. . . The ideas of thought of the Angels, from which come their words, are also modifications of the light of Heaven, and the affections from which comes the sound of the words, are variations of the heat of Heaven . . .

240. Since the speech of the Angels immediately proceeds from their affection . . . the Angels can express things in a minute that a man cannot in half an hour, and can also present in a few words what has been written on many pages. . . The ideas of thought of the Angels, and the words of their speech, thus make one . . .

242. In Angelic speech there is a certain harmonious concord that cannot be described . . .

246. On the speech of Angels with man. Gen.art. When Angels speak with a man, they do not speak in their own language, but in that of the man, and also in other languages with which he is acquainted . . . The reason is that when Angels are speaking with a man they turn themselves to him, and conjoin themselves with him, and the conjunction of an Angel with a man causes them to be both in similar thought ; and since the thought of the man coheres with his memory, and the speech flows thence, therefore both of them are in the same language. Moreover when an Angel or a Spirit comes to a man, and by turning to him is conjoined with him, he comes into the whole of his memory, so that he hardly knows but that he knows from himself that which the man knows, thus also the languages. From experience.

—². The state of man is now so altered that he can no longer have such conjunction with Angels, but only with Spirits who are not in Heaven.

250. To speak with Angels is granted only to those who are in truths from good . . .

252. They who speak with the Angels of Heaven also see the things that are in Heaven . . . and the Angels also see through them the things that are on the Earth. . . When the Angels turn themselves to a man, they conjoin themselves with him so as to know no otherwise than that the things of the man are theirs, not only the things that are of his speech, but also those that are of his sight and hearing ; while the man on his part, knows no otherwise than that the things which flow in through the Angels are his. In such conjunction were the Angels with the most ancient people on this Earth. Des.

253. Since those times rarely has anyone spoken with the Angels of Heaven, but some have done so with Spirits who are not in Heaven . . .

255. When Angels and Spirits turn themselves to a man, they know no otherwise than that the man's language is their own, and that they have no other . . . but as soon as they turn themselves from the man, they are then in their own Angelic and spiritual language, and do not know anything of the man's language. From experience.

—². When Angels and Spirits turn themselves to a man, they can speak with him at any distance ; they have spoken with me far off as sonorously as close by ; but when they turn themselves away from the man, and speak together, nothing whatever of what they are saying is heard by the man, even though they are close to his ear.

256. No Angel or Spirit is allowed to speak with a man from his own memory, but from that of the man . . .

265. On the wisdom of the Angels of Heaven. Gen.art.

266. The nature of the wisdom of the Angels may be inferred from the fact that they are in the light of Heaven, which in its essence is Divine Truth or Divine Wisdom, and this light simultaneously enlightens their inward sight, which is that of the mind, and their outward sight, which is that of the eyes. The Angels are also in heavenly heat, which in its essence is Divine Good or Divine Love, from which come their affection and yearning to be wise. That the Angels are in wisdom, so that they may be called Wisdoms, may be inferred from the fact, that all their thoughts and affections flow according to the heavenly form, which is the form of Divine Wisdom, and that their interiors, which receive wisdom, are compounded to that form . . .

That the Angels have super-eminent wisdom is further evident from the fact, that their speech is the speech of wisdom, for it flows immediately and spontaneously from thought, and this from affection; so that their speech is thought and affection in an outward form. Hence it is that nothing withdraws them from the Divine influx, and that there is nothing external [such] as with man is borne from other thoughts into his speech. . . To such wisdom of the Angels this also contributes, that all things they see with their eyes and perceive by their senses are in agreement with their wisdom, because they are correspondences, and therefore forms representative of such things as belong to wisdom. . . Besides, the thoughts of the Angels are not bounded and restricted by ideas derived from space and time, as are human thoughts. Neither are the thoughts of the Angels drawn downwards to earthly and material things, nor interrupted by any cares about the necessities of life . . . for all things come to them from the Lord gratuitously . . . and moreover they are endowed with delights and pleasantnesses according to the reception of wisdom from the Lord. Refs.

[H.] 267. The reason why the Angels can receive such great wisdom, is that their interiors are open, and wisdom, like all perfection, increases towards the interiors. . . With every Angel there are three degrees of life that correspond to the three Heavens. Those with whom the first degree is open are in the First or Ultimate Heaven (and so on); the wisdom of the Angels in the Heavens is according to these degrees; hence the wisdom of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven transcends immensely that of the Angels of the Middle Heaven, and the wisdom of these that of the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven. Ex. (Yet the wisdom of the Angels of even a lower Heaven similarly transcends that of man.)

268. How great is the wisdom of the Angels is further evident from the fact, that in the Heavens there is a communication of all things, the intelligence and wisdom of everyone being communicated to every other. . . This the Angels derive from the Lord . . . Certain simple ones were once taken up into Heaven, and on their arrival they came also into Angelic wisdom, and then understood such things as they could not comprehend before, and spoke what in their former state they were not able to utter.

269. Angels can express in one word what a man cannot in a thousand. Moreover in one Angelic word there are innumerable things that cannot be expressed at all in the words of human language, for in each word the Angels speak, there are arcana of wisdom in a continuous connection, to which human sciences never attain. What they do not fully express by the words of their speech the Angels supply in the sound of the voice, in which there is the affection of the things in their order. . . The Angels can recite in a few words the particulars written in a volume of any book, and put into every word such things as elevate to interior wisdom. . . Their words too are varied in infinite ways according to the series of the things that are in a complex in the thought.

—². From the sound of the voice, together with a few words, of one who is speaking, the interior Angels are able to know his whole life; for from the sound, variegated by the ideas in the words, they perceive his reigning love, upon which the Singulars of his life are as it were inscribed. P.194^e.

—. The wisdom of the Angels relatively to human wisdom is as a myriad to one; comparatively it is as the moving forces of the whole body, which are innumerable, are to an action from them; or as the thousands of things in an object seen in a perfect microscope are to the one obscure thing before the naked eye. (An example given of this by the manner in which an Angel described regeneration.)

270. The wisdom of the Angels of the Third or Inmost Heaven is incomprehensible, even to those who are in the Ultimate Heaven. The reason is that the interiors of the Angels of the Third Heaven are open to the third degree, but those of the Angels of the First Heaven only to the first degree. . . Since the interiors of the Angels of the Third Heaven are open to the third degree, Divine truths are as it were inscribed on them. . . Being of this character, the Angels of this Heaven never reason about Divine truths, nor do they know what it is to believe or have faith. . . But the Angels of the First Heaven have not Divine truths thus inscribed on their interiors. . . therefore they reason about these things, and they who reason see scarcely anything beyond the object they are reasoning about, nor go beyond the subject, except merely to confirm it by some considerations, and when they have confirmed it, they say that it is a matter of faith, and is to be believed. . . The Angels have told me that the difference between the wisdom of the Angels of the Third Heaven, and that of the Angels of the First Heaven, is like that between what is lucid and what is dim. They also compared the wisdom of the Angels of the Third Heaven to a magnificent palace. . . They said further that the wisdom of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven consists chiefly in this, that they see Divine and heavenly things in every object, and wonderful things in a series of many objects. . . they thus see innumerable things at once in their order and connexion, which so delight their minds that they seem to be carried away out of themselves.

271. See THIRD HEAVEN at these refs. 280^o. 282^e. 288.

272. An additional reason, which in Heaven is the primary one, why the Angels can receive such great wisdom, is that they are devoid of self-love. . . and being without this, are in the light of wisdom, for the heavenly loves in which they are. . . open the interiors, because these loves are from the Lord, and in them is the Lord Himself.

273. The Angels are continually being perfected in wisdom, but still to eternity they cannot be so far perfected that there can be any proportion between their wisdom and the Divine Wisdom of the Lord. . .

274. Since wisdom perfects the Angels, and constitutes their life, and since Heaven with its goods inflows with everyone according to his wisdom, therefore all there long for it, and have an appetite for it. . .

275. The Angels in one Heaven, and also in one Society of Heaven, are not in like wisdom, but in unlike; in the greatest wisdom are those who are in the middle . . . The light also with them is in like degree . . .

276. On the state of innocence of the Angels in Heaven. Gen.art.

278. Innocence dwells in wisdom, and in proportion as an Angel has wisdom, in the same proportion he has innocence. Ex.

—³. Wherefore also when a man grows old he shrinks in body, and becomes anew as an infant, a wise one, thus an Angel, for a wise infant is in an eminent sense an Angel.

281. Concerning innocence I have spoken much with Angels.

—³. Truth cannot be conjoined to good and good to truth except by means of innocence; hence it is that an Angel is not an Angel of Heaven unless innocence is in him . . .

282. Since innocence is the Esse itself of good with the Angels of Heaven, it is manifest that the Divine Good proceeding from the Lord is Innocence itself, for that Good is what inflows with the Angels and affects their inmost principles, and disposes and adapts to receive all the good of Heaven.

285. The two inmost things (of Heaven), which are innocence and peace, proceed from the Lord's Divine Love, and affect the Angels from the inmost.

286. The Divine peace in Heaven is from the Lord, existing from His conjunction with the Angels of Heaven, and in particular, from the conjunction of good and truth with every Angel . . . and is in its essence the Divine joy of the Lord's Divine Love from His conjunction with Heaven, and with each one there. This joy, perceived by the Lord in the Angels, and by the Angels from the Lord, is Peace. By derivation therefrom the Angels have all blessedness, delight, and happiness, or that which is called heavenly joy.

287. Hence the Angels are called 'Angels of peace.'

288. Since the peace of Heaven is the Divine inmost affecting with blessedness the very good that is with the Angels, it does not come to their manifest perception, except by delight of heart when they are in the good of their life, by pleasantness when they hear truth agreeing with their good, and by cheerfulness of mind when they perceive their conjunction; hence, however, it flows into all the acts and thoughts of their life, and there presents itself as joy, in an outward form also.

289. Since Divine peace exists from the conjunction of the Lord with Heaven, and, specially, with every Angel from the conjunction of good and truth, therefore the Angels, when they are in a state of love, are in a state of peace, for then good is conjoined to truth with them.

290. I have spoken with Angels concerning peace.

292 (u). That with every man there are Angels and Spirits, and that through them man has communication with the Spiritual World. Refs.

302. I have spoken with Angels concerning the conjunction of Heaven with the human race.

304. Man has been so created as to have connection and conjunction with the Lord, but with the Angels of Heaven only consociation. The reason he has not conjunction, but only consociation, with the Angels, is that man from creation is like an Angel as to the interior things that belong to the mind . . . hence it is that after death, if he has lived according to Divine order, he becomes an Angel . . . Heaven is not Heaven from the proprium of the Angels, but from the Divine of the Lord . . . Man has besides, what the Angels have not . . . that he is also in the natural world as to his exteriors . . .

306. When a man reads the Word, and perceives it according to the outward sense . . . the Angels perceive it according to the inward sense; for all the thought of the Angels is spiritual, but that of man is natural; these two kinds of thought do indeed appear diverse, but yet are one, because they correspond. Examples, 307.

307^e. Wherefore when the Angels are thus thinking spiritually, and a man is thus thinking naturally, they are conjoined almost as the soul and the body.

308. All who acknowledge the Divine, and live in charity, are instructed after their decease by the Angels, and receive Divine Truths. 321. —(o), Refs. 325².

310. I have sometimes spoken with the Angels about the Word . . .

311. There is not one Angel who was created such, nor in Hell any Devil who was created an Angel . . . but all, in both Heaven and Hell, are from the human race . . .

312. It has been given me to have consort with Angels, and also to speak with those who are in Hell, and this now for many years . . .

314. Angelic minds and human minds are similar . . . for the human mind is capable of wisdom as well as the Angelic mind; the reason why in the world it is not so wise, is that it is in an earthly body . . . but when loosed from that connection . . . it becomes wise like an Angel; from which it is evident, that the Internal of man, which is called his spirit, in its essence is an Angel . . .

—(k). That in the Word the man who receives the good of love and of faith from the Lord is called an Angel. Ref.

315. That man was created to become an Angel, explained.

329. Every little child . . . when he dies, is received by the Lord, and educated in Heaven . . . and afterwards as he is perfected in intelligence and wisdom . . . he becomes an Angel.

330. Little children who die . . . are only in the rudiments of the capacity of becoming Angels, for they are not Angels, but become Angels . . .

332. As soon as little children are raised from the dead . . . they are carried into Heaven and committed to the charge of Angels of the female sex who have tenderly loved little children in the bodily life, and at the same time have loved God . . .

340. It is intelligence and wisdom that make an Angel, and while the little children are devoid of these, they are indeed with the Angels, but are not Angels; it is when they are intelligent and wise that they first become Angels . . . M.413.

[H.] 341^e. The wiser the Angels are, the more innocent they are, and the more innocent they are, the more they appear to themselves as little children.

342. I have spoken with the Angels about little children . . .

349. All who in the world have acquired intelligence and wisdom are accepted in Heaven, and become Angels, everyone according to the quantity and quality of his intelligence and wisdom . . .

356. Appendix¹¹. With the Angels there is an insatiable longing for knowledge and wisdom, because these are spiritual food. Refs.

357. From much speech and life with Angels it has been given to know for certain . . .

360. They who have renounced the world . . . when elevated to where the Angels are, induce anxieties that disturb the happiness of the Angels . . .

367. Wherefore two married partners in Heaven are not called two, but one Angel. 372. M. 50. De Conj. 8.

370. It has been told me by the Angels . . .

— The conjunction of truth and good makes an Angel, and also his intelligence, wisdom, and happiness. The quality of an Angel is determined by the degree in which the good with him is conjoined to truth and the truth to good . . .

374. I have heard an Angel describing true marriage love and its heavenly delights in the following way . . .

382. There is genuine marriage love in the inmost Heaven, because the Angels there are in the marriage of good and truth, and are also in innocence. The Angels of the lower Heavens are also in marriage love, but only in proportion as they are in innocence . . .

387. On the employments of the Angels in Heaven.

389. All things in the Heavens are instituted according to Divine order, which is everywhere guarded by means of administrations by Angels, by the wiser ones those things that are of general good or use, by the less wise those that are of particular use, and so on. . . To every employment there is adjoined dignity according to that of the use, yet an Angel does not arrogate dignity to himself, but gives it all to the use . . .

391. See SOCIETY at these refs. 513.

— In general, Angels of every Society are sent to men, to guard them, and to draw them away from evil affections and the thoughts thence, and to inspire good affections so far as they receive in freedom, by which they also rule the deeds or works of men, removing, as far as possible, evil intentions. The Angels, when with men, as it were dwell in their affections, near to the man in proportion as he is in good from truths, and more remotely in proportion as the life is distant therefrom. But all these employments of the Angels are employments of the Lord through the Angels; for the Angels perform them, not from themselves, but from the Lord. Hence it is that by 'Angels' in the Word, in its inward sense, are not meant Angels, but something of the Lord; and hence it is that Angels in the Word are called 'gods.'

—(x). That Angels are sent to those who are in Hell, to prevent them from torturing each other without measure. A. 967.

— On the offices rendered by the Angels to men who come into the other life. A. 2131.

392. These are the general employments of the Angels, but every one has his own special employment . . .

402. All the delights of Heaven are conjoined with uses, and are in them, because uses are the goods of love and charity in which the Angels are; wherefore every one has delights such as the uses are, and likewise in such a degree as is the affection of use.

403. Angelic life consists in performing the goods of charity, which are uses, and all the happiness the Angels have is in use, from use, and according to use.

406. Let them know . . . that if they would be as the Angels, they must love the neighbour more than themselves . . . for in the Heavens the delight is to do good to another, and not to self, except that it may become another's . . .

409. Heavenly joy itself, such as it is in its essence, cannot be described, because it is in the inmost things of the life of the Angels, and thence in each particular of their thought and affection, and from these in each particular of speech and of action . . . Good Spirits, who are not in that delight . . . when they perceive it from an Angel from the sphere of his love, are filled with such delight that they go as it were into a sweet swoon.

410. See JOY at this ref.

411. The Angels are not delighted with the outward objects themselves, but with what they represent.

414. The whole Angel, especially the face, is as it were charity, which both appears and is perceived openly. This form, when beheld, is ineffable beauty affecting with charity the inmost life itself of the mind. . . All the Angels are such forms, with innumerable variety.

415. Many thousands of men depart this life every day . . . How many of these have become and do become Angels cannot be told; this has been told me, that in ancient times very many did so, because then men thought more interiorly and more spiritually, and thence were in heavenly affection; but in the succeeding ages not so many . . .

431. When Angels are mentioned, those who are in Heaven are understood.

450. (The Angels do not leave a resuscitated person even when he desires to be out of their company,) but he dissociates himself from them. For the Angels love everyone, and long for nothing more than to perform kind offices, to instruct, and to carry into Heaven; in this consists their highest delight. A. 182.

462². Their outward sight corresponds to their inward sight or understanding, for with the Angels the one sight flows into the other, so that they act as one . . . and in like manner their hearing corresponds to their perception . . . but the rest of the senses with the Angels are not so exquisite as the senses of sight and hearing, because sight and hearing are of service to their intelligence and wisdom, but not the rest of the senses. If these were equally exquisite, they would take away the light and delight of their wisdom, and would bring in the delight of pleasures of various appetites, and of the body, which bedim and debilitate the understanding in proportion as they prevail.

463. When a man's actions are laid bare before him after death, the Angels to whom is given the office of examining, look into his face, and their examination ranges throughout the whole body, commencing from the fingers of each hand. Ex.

487³. The Angels who are in the Heavens both see and perceive the evils and falsities that sometimes arise in themselves, and also those in which are the Spirits in the World of Spirits who are bound to the Hells, but the Spirits themselves cannot see their own evils and falsities.

515. See INSTRUCT at this ref.

518°. Knowledges do not make an Angel, but the life that is acquired by their means . . .

519. After Spirits have been prepared for Heaven by instruction . . . they are brought into a way that tends upwards towards Heaven, and are handed over to the Angel guards there, and are then received by other Angels and introduced into the Societies . . . The ways by which they are led are not known to any Angel, but to the Lord alone.

520. The ways by which the novitiate Angels are introduced, described.

530. Since the spiritual man thinks about Divine things when he acts, he communicates with the Angels of Heaven, and is conjoined with them in proportion as he does this, and thus his inward man is opened . . .

—². They who, on account of the Divine Laws, have acted sincerely and justly, act wisely when outward things are taken away and they are left to their inward things, because they are conjoined with the Angels of Heaven, from whom wisdom is communicated to them.

535. Most of those (who have removed themselves from the affairs of the world), inasmuch as they have thus contracted a sad life, and have removed themselves from the life of charity . . . cannot be consoiated with Angels, because the life of the Angels is glad from blessedness, and consists in performing uses, which are works of charity . . .

538. This sphere (of truth from good) from Heaven was perceived to be from the Lord alone, although it appeared to be from the Angels in Heaven. That it was from the Lord alone, and not from the Angels, was because every Angel in Heaven acknowledges that nothing of good and truth is from himself, but that all is from the Lord.

543. The Hells are ruled in particular by means of Angels, to whom it is given to look into the Hells, and to restrain the insanities and disturbances there. Sometimes also Angels are sent there, and moderate them when present.

548. When a man enters the other life, he is first taken charge of by Angels, who perform every kind office for him, and also speak to him about the Lord, Heaven, and the Angelic life, and also instruct him in truths and goods. But if the man, now a Spirit, is of such a character, that he had indeed known such things in the world, but at heart had denied or despised them, he then after some conversation desires to be away . . . and when the Angels perceive this, they leave him. . .

From these things it is evident that the Lord draws away every Spirit to Himself by means of Angels, and also by means of influx from Heaven . . .

576. Hence it is that when a man becomes an Angel after death, he is in intelligence and wisdom ineffable relatively to that he had in the world . . .

591. The good that flows forth from Heaven is all from the Lord, for the Angels who are in the Heavens are withheld from their own proprium and are held in the proprium of the Lord, which is Good itself. . . Hence it is evident, that the equilibrium in which the Angels of Heaven are held, and also Spirits in the Hells, is not like that in the World of Spirits. The equilibrium of the Angels in the Heavens is the measure in which they have willed to be in good, or the measure of the good in which they have lived in the world, thus the measure in which they have been averse to evil.

593. To govern and equalize the balance (of the equilibrium between the Heavens and the Hells), is not in the power of any Angel, but of the Lord alone . . . an Angel only sees what is near him, and does not even perceive in himself what is taking place in his own Society.

599. See FREEDOM at this ref.

600. The conjunction of man with Heaven and Hell is not immediate, but mediate by means of Spirits in the World of Spirits. These Spirits are with man, and no (Spirits) from Hell itself or (Angels) from Heaven itself . . .

N. 40. An inward spiritual man, regarded in himself, is an Angel of Heaven, and while he lives in the body, is also in the society of Angels, although he does not know it, and after release from the body he comes among Angels.

U. 80. Those who come to the men of that Earth (Jupiter), and sit at the head, are not Angels in their interior Heaven, but Angelic Spirits or Angels in their exterior Heaven. . . Presently the Angels of that Earth approached, and it was given to perceive from their speech with me that they were entirely different from the Angels of our Earth; for they did not effect their speech by means of words . . .

J. 20°. 'To create in the image and likeness of God' is to convey into him all things of Divine order from first to last, and thus to make him an Angel as to the interiors of his mind.

28. The 'Angels' (with whom the Son of Man will appear)=Heaven, from which is the appearing.

—(1). By the 'Angels' in the Word are signified Divine Truths that are from the Lord, because the Angels are receptions of them, and do not speak them from themselves, but from the Lord. Refs. S.43°.

S. 21. The men of the Most Ancient Church . . . were of so celestial a genius, that they spoke with the Angels of Heaven, and were able to speak with them by means of correspondences . . . they thus thought conjointly with the Angels.

62. By means of the letter of the Word there is conjunction with the Lord, and consociation with the Angels. Gen.art.

67^e. The Angels extract their [meaning] from the natural sense of the Word without knowing what the man [who is reading it] is thinking.

75. Into this Angelic wisdom comes the man after death who is made an Angel by the Lord by means of the Word.

Life 32^e. Yet the Angels of all the Heavens are in intelligence and wisdom in proportion as good with them makes one with truth ; for the good that does not make one with truth is to them not good, and so on the other hand, the truth that does not make one with good is to them not truth . . . and since an Angel is an Angel from the love and wisdom with him, and in like manner a man, it is manifest that good conjoined with truth makes an Angel to be an Angel of Heaven, and a man a man of the Church.

F. 41-43. (Report of a conversation of an Angel of Heaven with one in faith alone, and with one not in faith alone.) T.391.

48. With such a man an Angel of Heaven could not speak, because the one would not understand the speech of the other.

W. 4. God alone, thus the Lord, is Love itself, because He is Life itself; and Angels and men are recipients of life. Gen.art.

19. In such a form is Heaven . . . from the Divine which the Angels receive, for in the proportion that an Angel receives from the Divine, in the same proportion is he in perfect form a man. Hence it is that the Angels are said to be in God, and God in them ; also, that God is their all.

25^e. Wherefore, if an Angel of Heaven only thinks of a plurality of gods, he is at once separated, for he is cast out to the extreme boundary of the Heavens, and falls down.

57. From this it is that the Angels are not Angels from themselves, but from this conjunction with God Man ; and this conjunction is according to the reception of Divine Good and Divine Truth . . .

63. In the Spiritual World also there are all things of the three kingdoms, and in the midst of them the Angel ; he sees them around him, and also knows that they are representations of himself ; yea, when the inmost of his understanding is opened, he recognizes himself, and sees his own image in them, hardly otherwise than as in a mirror.

71^e. The thought of a spiritual man, especially an Angel of Heaven, has nothing in common with the figure and form that derive anything from the length, breadth and height of space, but from the state of a thing from the state of the life . . . From this it is evident, that an Angel of Heaven, when he thinks of the Divine Omnipresence, can by no means think otherwise than that the Divine, apart from space, fills all things. What an Angel thinks is the truth, because the light that illuminates his understanding is the Divine Wisdom.

73^e. Hence it is that the Angels do not know what time is, and that, when it is mentioned, instead of it they perceive state.

79. The Divine in the whole Heaven and the Divine in an Angel are the same ; wherefore the whole Heaven is able to appear as a single Angel.

87. The Angels, like men, have an Inward and an Outward. Their Inward is what thinks and is wise, and what wills and loves ; and their Outward is what feels, sees, speaks, and acts ; and all their outward things are correspondences of the inward ones . . .

90. The Angels, being spiritual, cannot live in any heat or in any light but those which are spiritual . . . if an Angel were to derive the least bit from natural heat and light he would perish, for it is totally discordant with his life.

101. The Angels turn themselves to the Lord either more or less ; those who turn themselves more, receive more from heat and less from light, and those who turn themselves less to the Lord, receive more from light and less from heat. Hence it is that the Heavens, which are from the Angels, are distinct in two Kingdoms . . . the Celestial Angels receive more from heat, and the Spiritual Angels more from light. The lands upon which they dwell, appear according to the reception of heat and of light by them. The correspondence is full and complete, if only instead of the motion of the Earth we take the change of state of the Angels.

102. When heat and light make one in the Heavens, it is as it were spring with the Angels, but when they do not make one, it is either like summer or like winter, no like winter in the cold zones, but like winter in the hot zones ; for the equal reception of love and wisdom is the Angelic itself, wherefore an Angel is an Angel of Heaven according to the union of love and wisdom with him.

105. The second reason why the Sun of the Spiritual World appears at a middle altitude above the Angelic Heaven, is because thus there is perpetual spring in all the Angelic Heavens, whereby the Angels are in a state of peace, for this state corresponds to the time of spring on earth. The third reason is, that the Angels are thus enabled to turn their faces constantly to the Lord, and to see Him with their eyes ; for in every turning of their bodies the Angels have the east, thus the Lord, before their faces.

108. The distance between the Sun and the Angels . . . is an appearance according to the reception of the Divine Love and Wisdom by them. Gen.art.

110. The Sun of the Spiritual World appears at a distance from the Angels, because the Divine Love and Divine Wisdom are received by them in a degree of heat and light that is adequate to them ; for an Angel, being created and finite, cannot receive the Lord in the first degree of heat and light, such as is in the Sun ; if he did he would be utterly consumed ; wherefore the Lord is received by them in the degree of heat and light that corresponds to their love and wisdom. The following may serve to illustrate this. An Angel of the Ultimate Heaven cannot ascend to the Angels of the Third Heaven, for if he ascends and enters their Heaven, he falls as it were into a swoon, and his life struggles as with death. The reason is that he has a less degree of love and wisdom, and in the same degree are the heat of his love and the light of his wisdom. What, then, would be the result if an Angel were to ascend even to the Sun, and come into its fire?

111. In this (spiritual) idea are the Angels.

112. The difference between Angels and men is that Angels are under that Sun only, whereas men are not only under that Sun, but also under the sun of the world; for the bodies of men cannot exist and subsist unless they are under both suns; but it is otherwise with the bodies of the Angels, which are spiritual ones.

113. The Angels are in the Lord, and the Lord is in them; and since the Angels are recipients, the Lord alone is Heaven. Gen.art.

114. The reason that the Lord is not only in Heaven, but is also Heaven itself, is that love and wisdom make an Angel, and these two are of the Lord with the Angels. . . For the Angels are not Angels from their proprium, their proprium is exactly like the proprium of man, which is evil. That this is the proprium of the Angels, is because all the Angels have been men, and that proprium inheres in them from their birth. It is merely removed, and in proportion as it is removed, in the same proportion they receive love and wisdom, that is, the Lord, into themselves. . . The Lord can only dwell with the Angels in what is His Own, which is love and wisdom, and not at all in what is the Angels' Own, which is evil. Hence it is, that in so far as evil is removed, so far the Lord is in them, and so far they are Angels. The Angelic itself of Heaven is the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom. This Divine is called the Angelic when it is in the Angels. Hence it is evident again, that the Angels are Angels from the Lord, and not from themselves; consequently that so also is Heaven.

115. How the Lord is in an Angel and an Angel in the Lord, cannot be comprehended, unless the nature of the conjunction is known. The conjunction is of the Lord with the Angel, and of the Angel with the Lord, wherefore it is reciprocal conjunction. On the part of the Angel it is as follows. An Angel, like a man, perceives no otherwise than that he is in love and wisdom from himself, consequently as if love and wisdom were of him, or his own. Unless he so perceived, there would be no conjunction; thus the Lord would not be in him, nor he in the Lord. Nor is it possible for the Lord to be in any Angel or man, unless he in whom He is with love and wisdom, perceives and feels them as his own. . .

116. How an Angel perceives and feels as his own, and thus receives and retains, that which is yet not his. . . shall now be told. . . With every Angel there are freedom and rationality; these two are with him to the end that he may be receptive of love and wisdom from the Lord. Neither of these, however, is his, but is of the Lord with him. But since the two are intimately conjoined to his life, so intimately that they may be said to be joined into it, they appear to be his very own. It is from them that he is able to think and will, and to speak and act; and what he thinks, wills, speaks, and does from them, appears as if from himself. This makes the Reciprocal, by means of which there is conjunction. Yet in so far as an Angel believes that love and wisdom are in him, and thus claims them for himself as his own, so far the Angelic is not in him, and consequently so far there is no conjunction of him with the Lord; for he is not in the truth, and since truth makes one with the light of Heaven, so far he cannot be in Heaven. . . In these two, freedom and rationality, consists the life that is called Angelic and human. Hence it is evident that an Angel has a Reciprocal for the sake of conjunction with the Lord, but that the Reciprocal, regarded in its faculty, is not his but the Lord's. Hence it is that if he abuses this Reciprocal, by which he perceives and feels as his own that which is the Lord's, which is done by appropriating it to himself, he falls from the Angelic.

118. What has been said of an Angel. . . is also to be said of a man. . . for an Angel of Heaven and a man of the Church act as one through conjunction; and a man of the Church is an Angel as to the interior things of his mind. . .

124. The quarters in the Spiritual World are not from the Lord as a Sun, but from the Angels according to reception. Gen.art.

126. An Angel changes his quarter according to the increase or decrease of love with him; from which it is evident that the quarter is not from the Lord as a Sun, but that it is from the Angel according to reception.

128. The Lord is the same with one as with another; but the recipients, who are Angels and men, are unlike from unlike reception and life.

129. The Angels constantly turn their faces to the Lord as a Sun, and thus have the south to the right, the north to the left, and the west behind them. Gen.art.

130. The reason why the Angels constantly turn their faces to the Lord as a Sun, is that the Angels are in the Lord and the Lord in them, and the Lord interiorly leads their affections and thoughts, and turns them constantly to Himself. . . Hence it is evident that the Angels do not turn themselves to the Lord, but that the Lord turns them to Himself. For when the Angels think interiorly about the Lord, they do not think of Him otherwise than as being in themselves. . . God is everywhere, and yet not in space; thus He is both within and without an Angel; and therefore an Angel can see God, that is, the Lord, both within himself, and without himself; within himself when he is thinking from love and wisdom, without himself when he is thinking about love and wisdom.

131. The turning of the Angels to the Lord is such, that in every turning of their bodies they look to the Lord as a Sun in front of them. An Angel can turn himself round and round, thereby seeing the various things that are around him, yet still the Lord as a Sun constantly appears before his face.

134. Since the quarters are thus inscribed on an Angel, and also the universal Heaven, an Angel knows his home and his dwelling-place wherever he goes,

[W.] 135. All the interior things of both the minds and bodies of the Angels are turned to the Lord as a Sun. Gen.art.

— In a word, the Angels have each and all things that men on earth have; it is from these things that Angels are men . . .

140. One who has been elevated out of the World of Spirits into Heaven is called an Angel.

161. The light there corresponds to the state of wisdom, and the heat to the state of love with the Angels.

179. The Angels of the Third Heaven so far excel the Angels of the Second Heaven in love and wisdom, and these, the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven, that they cannot be together. The degrees of love and wisdom distinguish and separate them. Hence it is that the Angels of the lower Heavens cannot ascend to the Angels of the higher Heavens, and if they are permitted to ascend, they do not see them, nor anything that is with them. The reason why they do not see them is that their love and wisdom are in a higher degree, transcending their perception. For every Angel is his own love and his own wisdom; and love together with wisdom in its form is a man . . . It has sometimes been permitted me to see that Angels of the Ultimate Heaven ascended to Angels of the Third Heaven, and when they had made their way thither, I heard them complaining that they did not see anyone, although they were in the midst of them. They were afterwards instructed that they were invisible to them because their love and wisdom were imperceptible to them, and that love and wisdom cause an Angel to appear as a man.

182. See LIGHT at this ref.

183. That there are a number of atmospheres there (is evident from the fact) that the Angels of the lower Heavens cannot breathe in the region of the higher Angels, and appear to themselves to gasp for breath . . .

188. The Angels are in sorrow on account of the darkness on Earth, saying that they see light hardly anywhere . . . they lament the most over the confirmations of faith separate from charity, and over justification thereby; as well as about the ideas concerning God, Angels, and Spirits, and about the ignorance of what love and wisdom are.

202. In the highest Heaven the Angels excel in all perfection the Angels in the middle Heaven, and in the middle Heaven the Angels excel in all perfection the Angels of the lowest Heaven. The degrees of perfections are such, that the Angels of the lowest Heaven cannot ascend to the first threshold of the perfections of the Angels of the middle Heaven, nor these to the first threshold of the perfections of the Angels of the highest Heaven. . . The reason is, that they are consociated according to discrete degrees, and not according to continuous degrees. . . The difference between the affections and thoughts, and consequently the speech, of the Angels of the higher and lower Heavens, is such that they have nothing in common, and that communication takes place only through correspondences . . . The thoughts of the Angels of the highest or Third Heaven are thoughts of ends, the thoughts of the Angels of the middle or Second Heaven are thoughts of causes, and the thoughts of the Angels of the lowest or First Heaven are thoughts of effects. . . The Angels of the lower Heavens think about causes and about ends, but the Angels of the higher Heavens think from causes and from ends . . .

215°. From a man's deed or work alone, the Angels perceive and see everything of the will and thought of the doer; the Angels of the Third Heaven, from his will perceive and see the end for which he is acting, and the Angels of the Second Heaven, the cause through which the end is acting.

220. From the action alone, done by the hands, the Angels who are with a man, and in correspondence with all things belonging to him, know his quality as to understanding and will, and as to charity and faith, thus as to the inward life of his mind, and the outward life therefrom in the body . . .

222. Since the Angels are in wisdom from universals . . .

223. The statements of the Angels (about degrees) are . . .

231. All Angels were born men.

239°. It is only after death, if he becomes an Angel, that he comes into this wisdom . . . I knew a man of no remarkable learning in the world, and after death saw and spoke to him in Heaven, and clearly perceived that he spoke like an Angel, and that what he said would be unperceivable by the natural man.

252. A natural man is a full man when the spiritual degree with him is opened; for he is then consociated with the Angels in Heaven, and at the same time with men in the world . . . Nor does he know that through his spiritual man he is in Heaven, although his spiritual man is in the midst of the Angels of Heaven, and sometimes even appears to the Angels, but because he draws himself back to his natural man, after a short stay there, he disappears.

257. The natural mind can be elevated even to the light of Heaven in which the Angels are, and can perceive naturally what the Angels perceive spiritually, thus not so fully; but still the natural mind of man cannot be elevated into Angelic light itself. By means of his natural mind being elevated to the light of Heaven, a man can think with Angels, yea speak with them; but the thought and speech of the Angels then flow into the natural thought and speech of the man, and not contrariwise, wherefore the Angels speak to a man in the natural language which is his mother tongue. . . Human wisdom can by no means be elevated into Angelic wisdom, but only into a certain image of it.

279. The Angels that are with a man, perceive separately and distinctly the things which are from the mind in the act, the Spiritual Angels those things that are in it from the understanding, and the Celestial Angels those that are in it from the will. . . The Angels say that a man's quality is perceived from each single work, but in a varied likeness of his love, according to its determinations into affections, and thence into thoughts. In a word, every act or work of a spiritual man, before the Angels, is like delicious, useful, and beautiful fruit.

280. It is the same with man's speech. The Angels know a man's love from the sound of the speech, his wisdom from the articulation of the sound, and his knowledge from the sense of the words . . . It was told me by Angels of the Third Heaven, that from each word of one who is speaking in a regular connection, they perceive the general state of his mind—animi, and also some of the particular states.

284. The reason why these things are here treated of, is that the Angels have lamented before the Lord, that when they look into the world they see nothing but darkness, and no knowledge with men of God, of Heaven, and of creation, for their wisdom to rest upon.

287. That love and wisdom are man, is proved by the Angels of Heaven being in beauty men, in proportion as they are in love and thence wisdom from the Lord.

288. The Angels know in what province of Man they are.

322. (All the objects there) appear to the life, and exist about an Angel, and about the Angelic Societies, as if they were produced, or created from them. They stay there, and do not go away. That they are as it were produced, or created from them, is evident from the fact, that when the Angel goes away, or when the Society passes to another place, they no longer appear; also when other Angels come in their place, the face of all things around them is changed . . . The reason of this is, that all these things exist according to the affections and thence the thoughts of the Angels, for they are correspondences; and because things that correspond make one with that to which they correspond, they are therefore an image representative of it. . . It has been given to see that when their eyes were opened by the Lord, and they saw these things from the correspondence of the uses, the Angels recognized and saw themselves in them.

326. Such things as have been mentioned above do not exist around a man Angel from the Angel, but from the Lord through the Angel; for they exist from the influx of the Divine Love and Wisdom of the Lord into the Angel, who is a recipient, and before whose eyes it is all produced like the creation of a universe.

334. That such things have been given to man to use and enjoy, and that they are free gifts, is plainly evident from the state of the Angels in the Heavens, who have, like men on Earth, a body, a Rational, and a Spiritual. They are nourished gratis, for food is given them daily; they are clothed gratis, for garments are given them; they dwell gratis, for houses are given them; nor have they any care about any of these things; and so far as they are spiritual rational, so far they have delight, protection, and preservation of state. The difference is that the Angels see that these things are from the Lord, because they are created according to the state of their love and wisdom; whereas men do not see it. . .

343. For man, as to his affections and cupidities, and consequent thoughts, and as to his acts so far as they are from the latter and the former, which are good or evil uses, is in the midst either of Angels of Heaven, or of Spirits of Hell . . .

358°. The likeness and image of God appear conspicuously in the Angels, for love from within shines forth in their faces, and wisdom in their beauty, and their beauty is the form of their love.

P. 28°. This conjunction (which is Heaven) is a conjunction of the Lord with the Angels, and of the Angels with the Lord, thus is a reciprocal conjunction. The Lord inflows into the life's love of the Angels, and the Angels receive Him in wisdom, and through this they in turn conjoin themselves with the Lord. But it is to be well known that it appears to the Angels as if they themselves conjoin themselves with the Lord through wisdom, yet the Lord conjoins them with Himself through wisdom; for their wisdom also is from the Lord. It is the same if it is said that the Lord conjoins Himself with the Angels through good, and that the Angels in turn conjoin themselves with the Lord through truth; for all good is of love, and all truth is of wisdom.

—3. The Lord inflows into all these affections (of truth, of understanding, and of seeing), for they are derivations from the life's love of everyone, and the Angels receive this influx in the perception of truth, and in thought, for in these the influx appears to them, but not in the affections. Now as perceptions and thoughts appear to the Angels as if they were their own, when yet they are from affections that are from the Lord, there is therefore the appearance that the Angels reciprocally conjoin themselves with the Lord, when yet the Lord conjoins them with Himself. . . Hence it is evident that the reciprocal conjunction of the Angels with the Lord is not from them, but as from them.

29°. All the Angels turn their faces to the Lord, and the Lord looks at them in the forehead, and the Angels look at the Lord with their eyes. The reason is that the forehead corresponds to love and its affections, and the eyes, to wisdom and its perceptions; but still the Angels do not of themselves turn their faces to the Lord, but the Lord turns them to Himself, and does so through influx into their life's love, and through this enters into the perceptions and thoughts, and thus He turns them.

32°. This conjunction (with the Lord) by approach . . . is for ever increasing with the Angels, but still an Angel cannot come to the first degree of the love and wisdom of the Lord, or even touch it. . .

34°. Angelic wisdom . . . is so ineffable that a thousand ideas in the thought of the Angels from their wisdom can present but a single idea in the thought of men from their wisdom; the nine hundred and ninety-nine ideas in the thought of the Angels not being able to enter, for they are supernatural. . . But no one can come into this ineffable wisdom of the Angels except through conjunction with the Lord, and according to it, for the Lord alone opens the spiritual degree and the celestial degree. . .

39. The happinesses of the affections of love and good begin from the Lord, thus from the inmost, and thence diffuse themselves into lower things even to ultimates, and so fill an Angel, making him as it were all deliciousness.

[P.] 58°. The Angels . . . sensibly perceive the presence, influx, and conjunction (of the Divine proceeding); but they also take note that the conjunction is no other than what may be called adjunction.

60. No one becomes an Angel . . . except he who carries with him from the world what is Angelic; and in what is Angelic there is a knowledge of the way (to Heaven) from walking in it, and a walking in the way through the knowledge of it. . . No one there sees any other ways than those of his love; from which it is evident that the Angels are nothing but heavenly loves, for otherwise they would not have seen the ways leading to Heaven.

64. The universal Heaven is as one man before the Lord . . . and this is the cause of every Angel being in all his form a man.

135. There is speech with Spirits, but rarely with the Angels of Heaven.

208. They who acknowledge God and His Divine Providence, are as the Angels of Heaven, who are averse to being led by themselves, and love to be led by the Lord; a sign that they are led by the Lord is that they love the neighbour.

293. To this I will add an Angelic maxim concerning will and intelligence with man . . .

301. The reason why the Angels of Heaven are affections of good and thence thoughts of truth, is that they are recipients of Divine Love and Divine Wisdom from the Lord, and all affections of good are from the Divine Love, and all thoughts of truth are from the Divine Wisdom.

303. The delight of his affection fills and encompasses every Angel of Heaven . . .

321⁴. To believe and think . . . that everything good and true is from the Lord, and everything evil and false from Hell . . . is the truly Human and thence the Angelic. Ex.

334. It is said that the operation of the Divine Providence remains constant to eternity, because every Angel is being perfected in wisdom to eternity; but each according to the affection of good and truth in which he was when he left the world. It is this degree that is being perfected to eternity; whatever is beyond this degree is outside the Angel, and not within him . . .

R. 5. 'He signified, sending by His Angel'=the things that have been revealed from Heaven, or through Heaven by the Lord; for by an 'Angel' in the Word throughout is meant the Angelic Heaven, and in the highest sense, the Lord Himself. The reason is, that no Angel separated from Heaven speaks with man, for there is such a conjunction of each with all there, that each one speaks from the communion, although the Angel is not conscious of it. . . The reason why the Lord is understood by 'Angel' in the highest sense, is that Heaven is not Heaven from what is proper to the Angels, but from the Divine of the Lord, from which they have love and wisdom, yea, life. Hence it is that the Lord Himself is called an 'Angel' in the Word. From this it is evident that the Angel did not speak with John from himself, but that the Lord in the midst of Heaven spoke through him.

8. 'Blessed is he who readeth, and they who hear the words of the prophecy, and who keep the things that are written therein'=communion with the Angels of Heaven of those who live according to the doctrine of the New Jerusalem. 'He that is blessed' here means one who as to his spirit is in Heaven, and is thus in communion with the Angels of Heaven while he lives in the world, for he is in Heaven as to his spirit.

65. 'The seven stars are the Angels of the seven Churches'=the New Church in the Heavens, which is the New Heaven . . . An 'Angel'=a heavenly Society. E.90, Ex.

73°. The reason why it is written 'to the Angel' of this Church, is that by the 'Angel' is understood the Angelic Society that corresponds to the Church that consists of such.

170. 'I will confess his name before the Father, and before His Angels'=that they are to be received who are in Divine Good and Divine Truths from the Lord, thus who have the life of Heaven in themselves. . . 'Father' means Divine Good, and 'Angels' Divine Truths, both from the Lord. . . The reason why 'Angels' mean those who are in Divine Truths from the Lord, and abstractedly Divine Truths, is that the Angels are recipients of Divine Good in the Divine Truths that are with them from the Lord. E.200.

224. I saw a company of Spirits on their knees, praying to God to send Angels to them . . . and when they rose up, they saw three Angels in white standing in their view. (Then follows a report of a long conversation between the Angels and these English Spirits.)

—⁴. When we (the Angels) have looked down into the world, we have not seen anything, but have only heard sounds that were for the most part dissonant.

—¹⁰. So far as a man does what is good and speaks what is true as from himself, so far he is an Angel of Heaven; but so far as he does what is evil, and thence believes what is false, which is also as from himself, so far he is an Angel of Hell.

—¹¹. Baptism is a sign before the Angels that the man is of the Church.

—¹². The Angels said . . . such appear to us from Heaven like graven images.

—^e. When they (the Spirits) said, We understand, lo, a flaming out of Heaven with light, descending, con-associated them with the Angels, and they loved each other.

258. 'I saw a mighty Angel preaching with a great voice'=Divine Truth from the Lord inflowing intimately into the thought of Angels and men, and search. By 'an Angel preaching' in the spiritual sense is understood the Lord, because an Angel does not preach and teach from himself, but from the Lord, yet as from himself.

299. 'He who sat' on this white horse (Rev.vi.) means a man-Angel as to the doctrine of what is true and good from the Word . . .

328. 'White robes were given to every one of them'=that there was given to them communication and conjunction with the Angels who were in Divine truths. Garments have this signification, because all in the Heavens are clothed according to the truths with them, and everyone has a garment according to his conjunction with Angelic Societies, therefore when conjunction is given, they at once appear similarly clothed.

342. 'I saw four Angels standing upon the four corners of the earth'=the universal Heaven in the effort to perform the Last Judgment upon those who were in the World of Spirits.

343. A Last Judgment takes place—existat—when the evil are multiplied in the World of Spirits to such an extent that the Angels in the Heavens are not able to continue—subsistere—in the state of their love and wisdom, for they then have no support and foundation.

344. 'I saw another Angel ascending from the rising of the sun'=the Lord providing and moderating. By an 'Angel' here is understood the Lord as to Divine Love, because He ascended from the rising of the sun . . .

— That the Divine Human of the Lord is understood in the highest sense by an 'Angel,' illustrated.

— 'Angel' and 'Sent,' in the Hebrew Language, are one word. Hence it is that the Lord so often says that He was 'Sent by the Father,' by which is understood the Divine Human.

— But an 'Angel,' in the relative sense, is everyone who receives the Lord, both he who is in Heaven and he who is in the world.

369. 'All the Angels were standing around the throne, and the Elders, and the four Animals'=all in the universal Heaven, hearing and doing what the Lord commands. By the 'Animals' and 'Elders' are understood the Angels in the higher Heavens . . . but by the 'Angels' are here understood the Angels of the lower Heavens, thus all in the universal Heaven. (=those in the First Heaven. E.462.)

390. 'I saw the seven Angels who stood before God'=the universal Spiritual Heaven in the presence of the Lord, hearing and doing what He commands. The reason why by the 'seven Angels' is signified the universal Heaven, is that by 'seven' is signified all, or all things, and thence the whole and universal; and by 'Angels,' in the highest sense, the Lord, and in the relative sense, Heaven; here the Spiritual Heaven, as is evident from what is said above. (=all the Heavens more inwardly and closely conjoined with the Lord. E.489. 500.)

415. 'I saw and heard an Angel flying in the midst of Heaven'=instruction and prediction by the Lord. By an 'Angel' in the highest sense is understood the Lord, and thence also something from the Lord.

417. There presently appeared an Angel, standing between those two flocks, who cried to the flock of sheep . . .

440. By the 'king the Angel of the bottomless pit' is not signified any Angel king there, but falsity regnant there.

444. 'Loose the four Angels bound at the great river Euphrates'=that outward bonds should be taken away from them, so that the inward things of their minds may appear . . . for it is infernal Spirits who are here understood by these 'four Angels,' because it is said of them that they were ready to kill the third part of men . . .

465. 'I saw another mighty Angel descending from Heaven'=the Lord in Divine majesty and power. That the 'Angel' here is the Lord, is evident from the description of him . . . The reason why He was seen as an Angel, is that when He manifests Himself He appears in the Heavens and below the Heavens as an Angel; for He fills some Angel with His Divine, accommodated to the reception of those whom He permits to see Him. His presence itself, such as it is in itself, or in its own essence, no Angel could endure, and still less any man; wherefore He appears above the Heavens as a Sun, which is distant from the Angels as the sun of the world is from men . . . He is here called a 'Mighty Angel' from Divine power; and it is said 'another Angel' from the fact that something else Divine belonging to Him is here described.

486. 'The Angel stood there, saying, Arise, and measure the Temple of God, and the Altar, and them that worship therein'=the presence of the Lord and His command that He should see and know the state of the Church in the New Heaven. By the 'Angel' is understood the Lord, here and elsewhere; for an Angel does nothing from himself, but from the Lord.

520. 'There were great voices in Heaven, saying, The Kingdoms of the world have become those of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever'=celebrations by the Angels that Heaven and the Church have become the Lord's . . .

522. 'We thank Thee Lord God Omnipotent, Who art, and Who wast, and Who art to come'=confession and glorification by the Angels of Heaven, that the Lord is He Who is, Who lives, and Who has power from Himself, and rules all things, because He alone is Eternal and Infinite.

565. It is not granted to any Angel to look down from Heaven into lower things, but if he likes, he is allowed to descend.

626. 'I saw another Angel flying in the midst of Heaven, having the eternal Gospel to evangelize to them that dwell on the earth'=the announcement of the Lord's Advent, and of a new Church that will come down out of Heaven from Him. By 'Angel' in the highest sense is understood the Lord, and thence also Heaven; by 'another Angel' is now signified what is new from the Lord.

631. 'And another Angel followed, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen . . .' By 'another Angel' is now signified what is new from the Lord.

633. 'And a third Angel followed them, saying with a great voice'=still more from the Lord about those who are in faith separated from charity. By the 'third Angel following them' is signified still more from the Lord that follows in order, for by 'Angel' in the highest sense is understood the Lord. The reason is that when an Angel is speaking the Word, as here, he does not speak from himself, but from the Lord.

636. 'And shall be tormented with fire and brimstone before the holy Angels and the Lamb . . .'=the love of self and of the world and the cupidities thence . . . It is said 'before the Angels and the Lamb' because these loves are against Divine Truths, and against the Lord

Who is the Word. For by 'Angels' are signified Divine Truths, because they are recipients.

[R.] 644. 'And another Angel went out of the Temple' = the Angelic Heaven.

645. 'Crying with a great voice to Him that sat upon the cloud, Put in Thy sickle, and reap, for the time is come for Thee to reap, for the harvest of the earth is dried up' = the supplication of the Angels of Heaven to the Lord to make an end and perform the Judgment, because now is the last state of the Church . . . for the Church on earth is to the Angelic Heaven as a foundation on which a house rests, or as the feet on which a man stands, and with which he walks; wherefore when the Church on earth is destroyed, the Angels lament, and supplicate the Lord to put an end to the Church, and to raise up a new one.

—e. 'The reapers are the Angels' = Divine Truths.

647. 'And another Angel went forth from the temple that is in Heaven, he also having a sharp sickle' = the Heavens of the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, and the Divine Truth of the Word with them. By 'Angel' in the highest sense is signified the Lord, also the Angelic Heaven, and also the Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord; but here by Angel is signified the Heavens of the Spiritual Kingdom, and thence Divine Truths there, because it follows that another Angel went forth from the altar, by whom is signified the Heavens of the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, thus Divine Goods there. 648.

648. It is said that 'he had power over fire' because the Angels guard the Divine Love in themselves.

657. 'Seven Angels having the seven last plagues' = evils and falsities in the Church, such as there are in its last time, universally disclosed by the Lord. By the 'seven Angels' is signified the universal Heaven; and since Heaven is not Heaven from what is proper to the Angels, but from the Lord, therefore by the 'seven Angels' is signified the Lord; nor can anyone else disclose the evils and falsities that are in the Church.

670. 'And the seven Angels having the seven plagues went forth out of the temple' = preparation by the Lord for influx out of the Inmost Heaven into the Church, in order that its evils and falsities may be universally disclosed, and the evil thus separated from the good.

676. 'And I heard a great voice out of the temple, saying to the seven Angels, Go and pour out the vials of the wrath of God into the earth' = influx from the Lord out of the Inmost Heaven into the Church of the Reformed, where are they who are in faith separated from charity as to doctrine and as to life, to take away truths and goods from them, and to open the falsities and evils in which they are, and thus to separate from them those who believe in the Lord, and are in charity and its faith from Him.

685. 'And I heard the Angel of the waters saying' = the Divine Truth of the Word . . . for 'waters' = truths, and an 'Angel,' what is Divine from the Lord.

689. 'Another (Angel) from the altar' = the Divine Good of the Word. By an 'Angel' is signified what is Divine from the Lord, and by 'an Angel from the altar' is signified the Divine Good of Love; here, the Divine Good of the Word, because the Word is treated of, and because by the 'Angel of the waters' is signified the Divine Truth of the Word.

754. 'I saw an Angel coming down out of Heaven, having great power, and the earth was enlightened by his glory' = strong influx from the Lord out of Heaven through Divine Truth, from which His Church was in heavenly light. By 'an Angel' is signified the Lord; by 'an Angel coming down out of Heaven' is signified the influx of the Lord out of Heaven.

791. 'A strong -robustus-Angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall Babylon be cast down, that great city, and shall be found no longer' = that by the Lord's strong influx out of Heaven, that religiosity, together with all its adulterated truths of the Word, will be cast headlong into Hell, and never more appear to the Angels. By 'a strong Angel took up' is signified strong influx from the Lord out of Heaven, for by 'an Angel' is signified the Lord, and His operation, which is effected through Heaven.

803. Preface. A glorification of the Lord by the Angels of Heaven that the Roman Catholic religiosity in the Spiritual World has been removed, whence they have come into their light and blessedness. Sig.

803. A confession and celebration of the Lord by the Angels of the lower Heavens on account of the removal of the Babylonians. Sig.

809. 'There came a voice out of the throne, saying, Praise our God all ye His servants, and ye that fear Him' = influx from the Lord into Heaven, and thus the unanimity of the Angels, that all who are in truths of faith and goods of love should worship the Lord as the Only God of Heaven. . . As the Lord is above the Heavens, and appears to the Angels as a Sun, He does not speak to the Angels thence, but flows in, and that which flows in is received in Heaven and uttered; wherefore although that voice came from the throne, it was still heard by John from Heaven, thus from the Angels there, and whatever the Angels speak from Heaven is from the Lord.

816. An Angel from Heaven sent to John, and speaking with him about the Lord's New Church. . . Sig. . . When the Angels speak with a man, they never speak with him from Heaven, but the voice that is heard thence is from the Lord through Heaven. But when Angels are permitted to speak with a man, they send a single one from their Society, who is near the man, and they speak with the man through him. He who is sent is the subject of many; and such was he who now spoke with John.

818. 'I fell before his feet to worship him, and he said to me, See thou do it not; I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren having the testimony of Jesus; worship God' = that the Angels of Heaven are not to be adored and invoked, because there is nothing Divine in them, but that they are associated with men as brothers with brothers, with those who worship the Lord; and thus that the Lord alone is to be adored in consociation with them. . . The reason why the Angels of Heaven are not superior to men, but are their equals, and therefore equally the servants of the Lord as men are, is that all the Angels have been men, born in the world, and not any of them created immediately. . . They do indeed excel men in wisdom, but that is because they are in a spiritual state, and thence in the light of Heaven . . . but in proportion as any Angel excels in wisdom, he acknowledges that he is not above men, but like them ; wherefore there is no conjunction of man with the Angels, but there is consociation with them ; with the Lord alone is there conjunction. 946.

831. 'And I saw an Angel standing in the sun and he cried with a great voice'=the Lord from Divine Love and thence from Divine zeal.

839. (Two Angels sent to me from Heaven who belonged to a Society there called Michael. —4.) T.113.

840. 'I saw an Angel coming down from Heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand'=the Lord's operation into lower things from the Divine power of closing and opening, and of binding and loosing.

875. On awaking out of sleep one morning I saw two Angels coming down from Heaven ; one from the south of Heaven, and the other from the east of Heaven, both of them in chariots to which white horses were attached. . . but when they came nearer they did not appear in chariots, but in their own Angelic form, which is the human. He who came from the east of Heaven was in a resplendent crimson garment ; and he who came from the south of Heaven in a resplendent deep-blue one. When they were in the lower parts under Heaven, they ran towards each other, as if they strove which should be first, and embraced and kissed each other. I have heard that when those two Angels lived in the world they were conjoined in interior friendship, but now one was in the eastern Heaven, and the other in the southern Heaven. (Their conversation reported.) T.386.

895. 'There came to me one of the seven Angels having the seven vials full of the seven last plagues . . . '=influx and manifestation by the Lord from the Inmost Heaven concerning the New Church. Ex. 895.

900. 'And over the gates twelve Angels, and names written thereon which are those of the twelve tribes of the Sons of Israel'=the Divine truths and goods of Heaven, which are also the Divine truths and goods of the Church, in those knowledges, and also guards to prevent anyone from entering unless he is in truth from the Lord. By the 'twelve Angels' are here signified all the truths and goods of Heaven, since by 'Angels' in the highest sense is signified the Lord, in a general sense the Heaven from Angels, and in a particular sense, the truths and goods of Heaven from the Lord, (Refs.) here, the truths and goods of Heaven, because there follows, 'and names written thereon, which are those of the twelve tribes of the Sons of Israel' . . .

906. Every man who is in the goods and truths of the Church from the Word is consociated with the Angels of Heaven, and dwells together with them as to the interiors of his mind . . .

910. 'The measure of a man which is that of an Angel'=the quality of that Church as making one with Heaven. . . By 'an Angel' is signified Heaven from the Angels. . . By an 'Angel' there are signified three things ; in the highest sense, the Lord ; in a general sense, Heaven or a heavenly Society ; and in particular, Divine Truth. Refs.

943. 'The Lord God of the holy prophets hath sent His Angel to show unto His servants the things that must shortly be done'=that the Lord, from Whom is the Word of both Covenants, has revealed through Heaven to those who are in truths from Him, the things that will certainly take place. By 'Angel,' here, is signified Heaven. . . The reason of this is that the Lord spoke with John through Heaven . . . and He speaks through Heaven with everyone with whom He does speak. Ex.

—3. The Lord speaks through Heaven, yet the Angels there do not speak, and do not even know what the Lord is saying, unless some of them are with the man. . . The Angels of Heaven, and also Spirits below the Heavens, know nothing about man . . . because the state of Spirits and Angels is spiritual, and that of men is natural. These two states are consociated solely through correspondences, and consociation through correspondences does indeed cause them to be together in affections, but not in thoughts . . .

945. 'I fell down to adore before the feet of the Angel'=that John thought that the Angel who had been sent to him by the Lord to keep him in the state of the spirit, was God who revealed these things, when yet it was not so, for the Angel only showed what the Lord had made manifest. . . The Angel was sent by the Lord to John to keep him in the state of the spirit . . . for no one can come into this state, and be kept in it, except by means of Angels who are closely adjoined to the man, and who instil their spiritual state into the interiors of his mind, for thus the man is elevated into the light of Heaven, and in that light he sees the things that are in Heaven.

951^e. The Angels in Heaven have such power, that if they only will a thing they obtain it ; but they do not will anything except what is of use, and this they will as from themselves, but yet from the Lord.

953. 'I Jesus have sent My Angel to testify unto you these things in the Churches'=testification by the Lord before the whole Christian World that it is true that the Lord alone has made manifest the things described in this Book, and also those which have now been opened. . . By 'to send an Angel to testify' is signified testimony by the Lord that it is true. The Angel did indeed testify this, yet not from himself but from the Lord . . .

961. I saw . . . Angels standing in the form of a circle . . . and as I burned with the desire of hearing what they were saying, I was first permitted to hear the sound, which was full of heavenly love, and afterwards the speech . . . They spoke things ineffable, the greater part of which cannot fall into the words of any natural language ; but as I had sometimes been in consort with the Angels in Heaven itself, and was then in like speech with them, I could now understand them. (Their conversation reported.) B.119. T.25.

[R. 961]⁶. The Angels perceived in my thought the common ideas . . . about a Trinity of Persons (and at first threatened to close Heaven against me and depart).

962. (A golden table seen, on which lay the Word, and two Angels standing by it, who afterwards read from the Word to the Council.) B.120. T.188.

M. 2. I once saw an Angel flying under the eastern Heaven . . . who sounded his trumpet towards the north, the west, and the south . . . T.731. (Six companies of Spirits assemble, who deliver their opinions respecting the nature of Heavenly Happiness. The Angel conducts them to many places, and gives them instruction on that subject. 2-26.)

42. (Three expanses seen, one above another, with Angels upon each of them.)

—². There then appeared a chariot descending from the Third Heaven, in which was seen one Angel; but as it approached, there were seen to be two in it. . . They were a husband and his wife. Des.

—³. All the Angels are affections of love in a human form; the regnant affection itself shines from their faces, and garments are allotted to them from and according to the affection; wherefore it is said in Heaven that his own affection clothes everyone.

44³. The Angelic love of the sex . . . is full of inmost deliciousness. Des.

—⁴. Unchaste . . . new-comers (into Heaven) are changed, and appear hairy in the eyes of the Angels, with feet like calves or leopards . . .

—⁵. Angelic chastity . . . prevents the passage of this love beyond the enclosure of the heart . . . The Angels have this love of the sex, because they have marriage love only.

—⁷. The Angels turn cold over the whole body at unchaste or extra-marriage love, and turn warm over the whole body from chaste or marriage love; with the men there, all the nerves are unstrung at the sight of a harlot, and recover their tension at the sight of a wife.

—⁸. Angelic perception and sensation are much more exquisite than human perception and sensation.

—⁹. The Angels are not sad after these delights . . . but cheerful; and this from a constant influx of fresh powers . . . that renovate and at the same time enlighten; for all who come into Heaven return into the spring-time of their youth, and into the powers of that age, and so remain to eternity.

—¹⁰. The Heaven over their heads opened, and two Angels came into their view, and said, There are weddings in the Heavens as on earth; but only for those who are in the marriage of good and truth; nor are any others Angels . . .

52. Marriage love perfects an Angel, for it unites him with his consort, whence he becomes more and more a man, for two married partners in Heaven are not two but one Angel; wherefore by marriage union they infill themselves with the human, which is to will to be wise, and to love that which is of wisdom.

55². An Angel from Heaven then appeared in the midst of them . . . Having said this, the Angel vanished.

—³. Suddenly there were Spirits present from various Societies, and in the midst of them some Angels in white . . .

71². No love can ever become pure, either with men, or Angels . . .

—^e. Genii . . . approaching an Angel who was enjoying delight with his consort . . .

75. Lo, an Angel stood before me, and said, I have been sent by the Lord to be your guide and companion . . .

103⁴. Suddenly an Angel stood in the midst of the palace . . . Having said this, the Angel went away, and said, I will return. . . After three hours, the Angel returned . . .

115. At some height towards the east I saw an Angel holding a paper in his right hand . . . in the middle of which there was written in letters of gold, The Marriage of Good and Truth. . . I saw the Angel descending (the paper gradually changing as he did so) until at last the Angel was seen to enter a dark mist and pass through it to the ground, where the paper was not seen, although the Angel still held it in his hand. (Four companies of learned Spirits could not see the Angel at all, except a few who had been in simple faith from charity, who said) they saw a man with a paper. (The Angel then explained the meaning of the words on the paper.)

—^c. After a salutation of peace, the Angel raised himself up from the ground, and passing through the mist ascended into Heaven, and then the paper flashed as before according to the degrees of ascent. T.624.

132. I was once speaking with two Angels, one from the eastern and one from the southern Heaven (who conducted me to a School of Wisdom). The two Angels then went to the table in the middle of the plain, and broke the seal of the paper, and read the arcana of wisdom written on it to all who were seated there . . . They were written by Angels of the Third Heaven and let down upon the table. . . Having read them the two Angels withdrew, and were carried up into their Heavens. T.48.

144. (The Angels) perceive these delights to be exalted and infilled with themselves when they ascend from chaste married partners on earth.

151a. I saw an Angel in a deep-blue garment . . . T.692.

155a. I asked an Angel who then happened to meet me whether he saw the Golden Shower . . .

183. I saw two Angels in crimson and scarlet who were speaking with those who were sitting on the grass about the origin of marriage love and its delights . . .

207⁴. Every Angel, like every man, thinks what is true and does what is good as from himself, and this, according to the state of the Angel, is mixed, and not pure. Moreover among the Angels there are wise and simple; and it is the part of the wise to judge, when the simple, from simplicity and ignorance, are doubtful as to what is just, or depart therefrom.

—7. Every Angel is an Angel according to use; the delight of use carries him along as a favourable current does a ship, and causes him to be in eternal peace, and in the repose of peace. That an Angel is alive according to the application of the mind from use, is manifestly evident from the fact, that every one has marriage love with its virtue, potency and delights, according to the application of genuine use in which he is. T.694.

208³. The Lord Himself . . . thus forms a man with his wife into an Angel of Heaven.

232. I looked round to see what Angels were present, and lo, they were those who were in the Heaven immediately above those who were crying O how learned! . . . I asked the Angels to lead me to them . . . T.333.

242^e. The Angels . . . said, We cannot remain with you in that house, because the married partners there are in discordant religion. This they perceived from the inward disunion of their souls.

256^e. With the Angels, there is a communion—commune—from what is continually allowed, the very deliciousness of the soul, and it is the containant of their marriage love; for they are continually in the delight of that love, and in its ultimates according to the presence of their minds not interrupted with cares, thus from the good-pleasure of judgment with the husbands.

261^e. All things that a man examines intellectually appear to the Angels as if inscribed on the hands. T.661.

266. I looked around and saw two Angels standing not far from me and conversing. One wore a woollen robe that flashed with flaming crimson, and a resplendent white vest under it; the other wore similar garments of scarlet, with a mitre studded on the right side with carbuncles. (They are the Prince and the Chief Priest of their Society, and speak to him about the two kinds of the love of dominion.)

—^c. Having said this, the two Angels went away, and were seen from afar carried in a fiery chariot like Elijah, and taken up into their Heaven. T.661.

267. I entered a certain grove (and was meditating on the love of the world) and at some distance from me I saw two Angels conversing together, and by turns looking at me. (They speak to him about phantasy, concupiscence, and intelligence.) T.662.

268. After this there came upon the two Angels, and also upon me, a longing to see those who are in the visionary concupiscence or phantasy of the possession of all wealth . . . T.662.

269⁵. But suddenly, when he saw the Angels with me, his face and voice got inflamed, and he became black . . . and sank down into Hell through the opening he had come up by. T.507.

270³. Having seen this, an Angel stood by me, and said, Do you understand what you have seen? . . .

327. After this, a voice was heard from a higher Heaven, saying to the chief teacher, Come up here. He went up, and on his return said that the Angels, like himself, had not before known the differences between the Spiritual and the Natural, because there had not before been given an opportunity of comparing them together by a man's being in both worlds at the same time. T.280.

352. None of either the former or the latter (kinds of polygamists) can be consociated with the Angels in the Christian Heavens. Gen. art. . . The Heavens would be so shaken that the Angels could not subsist . . . the Christian Angels would become natural, and thus adulterers; or if they remained spiritual, they would continually feel about them what is lascivious, which would intercept all the blessedness of their life.

353. I was once in the midst of Angels, and heard their discourse concerning intelligence and wisdom . . . T.663.

355². One of them who knew something about Heaven, said, . . . as to what concerns the Angels themselves, they are of both sexes; there are youths and married men, and maidens and wives; maidens so lovely that there is not a resemblance of such beauty in the world, and wives still more lovely that appear like the true effigies of heavenly love, and their husbands like the effigies of heavenly wisdom; and all these are in the full bloom of youth; and what is more, they do not know what any love is except marriage love; and . . . the husbands have a perpetual faculty of enjoyment . . .

—³. But at that instant a certain Angel from Heaven unexpectedly stood in the midst of them, and said, Hear me, I pray you. I am an Angel of Heaven, and I have now lived a thousand years with my wife, in the same flower of my age as that in which you see me here. I have this from my marriage love with my wife; and I can asseverate that I have had and do have that perpetual faculty. Ex.

380². While I was astounded at the multitude of such (as ascribe all things to nature) there stood an Angel at my side, and said . . . But I will take you to the Gymnasia . . . and he took me by the hand and led me there . . . T.35.

413. It is intelligence and wisdom that make an Angel; therefore so long as little children (after death) have not these, they are indeed with the Angels, but are not Angels . . . H.340.

415. See SATAN at this ref.

416. After this, the two Angels, seeing me near, said to the by-standers, We know that this man has written about God and nature, let us hear it.

444. After I had commenced the meditations about scortatory love, there suddenly stood two Angels by me, and said . . . We do not perceive the things about which you are now meditating. Pass these things over, because they are nothing. But I replied, This love . . . is not nothing, because it exists . . .

—³. On hearing this, I was glad at heart that I was permitted to speak with Angels of such innocence that they were entirely ignorant what whoredom is . . . (He instructs them about evil and its origin.)

[M.] 453². The Angels charged these things as evils of sin upon some, and upon some as not evils . . . 527. B. 113. T. 523².

461. He prayed earnestly to God that he might be instructed; and lo, an Angel appeared at his right hand, and lifted him up and said, You have supplicated to be instructed about Heaven and Hell; inquire and learn what delight is, and you will know. And having said this, the Angel was taken up. T. 570.

477³. But a certain Angel looking down from Heaven, heard these things, and broke off the conversation, lest it should advance further to the profanation of marriages; and said (to the novitiate) Come up hither, and I will show thee to the life what Heaven and Hell are . . .

521⁶. A certain Angel then suddenly stood by them, he was a Priest, and he opened the Hell in the western quarter . . .

532. (E. S. tells the Angels news from the earth concerning the revelations made by his means.)

533. The Angels greatly rejoiced on hearing these things, but perceived sadness in me . . . I told them that these arcana . . . are held of no account. At this the Angels marvelled, and besought the Lord to permit them to look down into the world. They looked down, and lo, there was mere darkness there. (A paper containing these arcana is let down, which grows dimmer as it descends until all its light is gone, and the learned men are seen to be utterly indifferent to it, while some of them tear it up and want to trample on it.) But they were kept off from that deed by the Lord, and the Angels were commanded to draw it back and take care of it. And as the Angels were made sad and thought how long this would last, it was said, 'Until a time and times and half a time.' T. 848.

534^e. Then (the Angels) said to me, Write about (true marriage love), and follow the revelation, and afterwards the book written about it shall be let down by us from Heaven, and we shall see whether the things in it are received . . . T. 487.

B. 62^e. (These doctrines make the Angels sick.)

I. 13⁴. All the Angels of Heaven turn the forehead towards the Lord as a Sun, and all the Angels of Hell turn the occiput towards Him; and the latter receive the influx into the affections of their will, and make the understanding favour them; but the former receive the influx into the affections of their understanding, and make the will favour them; hence these are in wisdom, and the others in insanity . . .

19^e. Then suddenly an Angel stood by them and said . . .

T. 1. Hence it is that the man of the Church who is in good of love from truths of faith, and in truths of faith from good of love, as to the interiors of his mind is an Angel of Heaven . . .

61. The Angels of Heaven can see whatever is going on in Hell . . . but the Spirits of Hell cannot see what is going on in Heaven . . . D. 4759.

66. When the inmost sight of (the Angels) is opened, they recognize their image in (the surrounding objects).

71. Feigning himself to be an Angel of Heaven . . . he said . . .

76. One day I was meditating about the creation of the universe, and this being perceived by the Angels above me on the right side, where there were some who had sometimes meditated and reasoned about the same things, one of them descended and gave me an invitation . . . I was conducted to the Prince. (They tell him the erroneous ideas they have had about the subject, and he instructs them.)

78. The next day an Angel came to me from another Society of Heaven (who shows him how animals and plants have been produced by God).

87². An Angel who is in Divine Truths from the Lord, although as to his body he is as weak as an infant, is able to put to flight a troop of infernal Spirits who in appearance are like . . . giants, pursue them to Hell, and thrust them into caverns there; and when they come out they dare not approach the Angel.

115^e. For men in the world are so conjoined with Angels of Heaven and with Spirits of Hell as to make one in the interiors of their minds on both sides.

118. Without this redemption no man could have been saved, nor could the Angels have subsisted in a state of integrity. Gen.art. 579.

121. The Lord thus redeemed not men only, but also the Angels. Gen.art.

—³. Not only every man, but also every Angel, is withheld from evil and held in good by the Lord; for no one, whether Angel or man, is in good from himself, but all good is from the Lord. When therefore the footstool of the Angels, which they had in the World of Spirits, was taken away . . . That the Angels are not pure before God is evident from the Prophecies . . .

134. That black cloud was divided in the middle, and Angels were seen to be let down from Heaven through the cleft, who dispelled the cloud on each side . . .

135³. Then by command of the Lord three Angels descended from Heaven, and associated with me, in order that from interior perception I might speak with those who were in the idea of three gods . . .

137⁴. There arose one of them, an old man, yet seen as a young one afterwards, for he was an Angel from Heaven . . .

159. I was once in company with the Angels in Heaven, and saw a great smoke at a distance below . . . The Angels then said to me, Let us pray to the Lord for leave to go down . . .

—⁶. Then from power given them the Angels closed up the exterior or lower things of their thoughts, from which they had spoken, and opened the interior or higher things . . .

—^e. We went away, and the Angels, after accompanying me home, ascended into their Heaven.

160. I was once walking in company with Angels in the World of Spirits . . . the Angels were delighted with this discourse, and said . . .

186. I was once engaged in thinking what region of the mind theological things reside in . . . an Angel then stood by me, and said . . .

209^d. The Angels themselves, when they descend from Heaven to perform any office below, appear beset with little stars, especially around the head, which is a sign that Divine truths from the Word are in them.

238. The thoughts of a man who holds the Word to be holy, and reads it for the sake of the uses of life, are like one who holds a cabinet (that contains precious stones, pearls, and diadems arranged in order) and sends it to Heaven, and it is opened in its ascent, and the precious things in it come to the Angels, who are deeply delighted in beholding and examining them. This their delight is communicated to the man, and effects consociation, and also a communication of perceptions. For the sake of this consociation with the Angels, and at the same time conjunction with the Lord, the Holy Supper has been instituted . . .

300. The Angels are named according to their moral and spiritual life.

312. The savage feelings of their hearts are sometimes seen above them in the air like fights with the Angels, and the slaughter of the latter . . .

—2. Men in the world who want to destroy the Lord's Church . . . before the Angels, who do not look at their bodies, but at their spirits, appear in similar forms to these Devils.

350. That the truths of faith are multiplicable ad infinitum may be evident from the wisdom of the Angels of Heaven, which grows to eternity. The Angels also say that there is never any end of wisdom . . .

354³. A Spirit who in the company of others appeared simple, because he acknowledged the Lord alone as God of Heaven and earth, and who had established this faith by some truths from the Word, was taken up into Heaven among the wiser Angels, and I was told that he was equally as wise as they . . .

380³. With every man there is a consociate Spirit . . . He who inducts himself into good affections through truths from the Word and a life according to them, has an Angel from Heaven adjoined to him . . .

395². The human mind is like a house of three stories . . . in the highest of which dwell Angels from Heaven . . . The man in whom these three loves are rightly subordinated, is able to ascend and descend at his pleasure; and when he ascends to the highest story, he is together with the Angels as an Angel; and when he descends thence into the middle one, he is there with men as a man-Angel . . .

412. The Lord, and from Him the Angels, when they look down into the earth, see a whole society no otherwise than as one man, and they see the form of that man from their qualities.

455. With the good the inward man (or spirit) is conjoined with the Angels in Heaven.

563². What is easier than for a man-Angel to raise his eyes to Heaven, and for a man-Devil to cast down his eyes to Hell?

568². After they had said this, Angels stood by and said . . .

569⁴. I once saw a certain Devil appearing afar as a leopard, who some days before had been seen among the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven, being skilled in the art of making himself an Angel of light . . . and not smelling any bad odour of his own life. The reason was that the Angels were not at hand. But as soon as ever they were he was seized with convulsions . . .

590³. They are among those who can feign themselves Angels of light, both among men in the world and after death with the Angels of Heaven.

593². Hence it is that from one action of a man the Angels perceive the quality of his will, and from one speech the quality of his thought, whether infernal or heavenly; thence they know the whole man, they perceive the affection of his thought from the sound, and the love of his will from the gesture or the form of the action. They perceive these things however he may be imitating a Christian and moral citizen.

597. Through victory over the outward man he becomes spiritual and is then consociated by the Lord with the Angels of Heaven, who are all spiritual.

607. A regenerated man is in communion with the Angels of Heaven, and a non-regenerated man with Spirits of Hell. Gen.art.

665. After this, there was heard a voice from Heaven from the Angels who were immediately above us, saying, Come up hither, and we will interrogate one of you who is still in the natural world as to the body as to what they know there about conscience . . . (They go down again and summon a crowd of Spirits whom the Angels arrange in four companies, who then deliver their sentiments on the subject of conscience.)

666. The Angels who were above us heard all things that were uttered by the four companies, and said . . . We will send down one of ourselves to instruct them, and at once there stood in the midst of them an Angel in a white garment, with a zone of light around his head in which were little stars. Addressing the four companies, he said . . .

677⁵. In the Heavens little children are introduced by baptism into the Christian Heaven, and Angels are there assigned to them, who take care of them; wherefore as soon as little children have been baptized, Angels are set over them, by whom they are kept in a state of receiving faith in the Lord; but as they grow up . . . the guardian Angels leave them, and they take to themselves such Spirits as make one with their life and faith.

685. Therefore when baptism is performed, read of in the Word, and mentioned, the Angels who are present do not understand baptism, but regeneration . . .

691². The Lord Himself does not descend (into Heaven), but an Angel with a sphere of love from the Lord around him. See above, R.465.

—e. For this reason Angels were at that time sent to be the guardians of (the Jews).

767. Every Angel looks at the Lord before him however he turns his body and face; for the Lord is the Sun of the Angelic Heaven; this it is that appears before their eyes when they are in spiritual meditation.

778. Every man is his own love and his own intelligence, and whatever proceeds from him derives its essence from these two essentials . . . of his life ; wherefore the Angels know a man, as he is essentially, from a short intercourse with him ; his love from the sound, and his intelligence from the discourse. Ex.

[T.] 779. From the first of that call I have not received anything appertaining to the doctrines of that Church from any Angel . . . R. Preface⁴.

797³. When the Angels who were above (Melancthon's) head perceived that he wrote nothing about charity, and when the Angels who were associated with him when he was out of the house heard what he said about it, they withdrew from him ; for Angels are associated with every new-comer at first.

798⁶. The Angels who were with me compressed his lips.

815². They who teach from modern orthodoxy concerning faith appear to the Angels as if they wore a wreath of leaves of the Italian oak-aesculus ; but they who teach from the Word concerning charity and its works appear to the Angels as if adorned with a wreath woven out of the scented leaves of the bay.

Ad. 3/2046. There are in general three classes of Angels ; those of the third class [see] through the eyes of men, through which they see outward things, namely what is going on on earth, and thus what Aaron and his sons were doing . . . These representations are borne to the second class, who perceive them spiritually . . . these only the choirs of Angels of the second class apprehend in their own way. These spiritual and celestial things are then borne to the inmost class, that is, into the Third Heaven, and are perceived in a holy and super-celestial manner. Thus they come to God Messiah. 2047, Ex.

D. 156. On the three classes of Angels. The Angels of the first class, who are to be called Celestial, are ruled immediately by God Messiah through love, and have a sublime understanding of what is good and thence of what is true. The Angels of the second class, who are truly to be called Spiritual, are ruled by God Messiah mediately through the Celestial Angels. The Angels of the third class, who are to be called Affections or Goodnesses, are ruled through the Celestial Angels, and through the Spiritual ones as well, thus mediately by God Messiah, for they are not of such intelligence and wisdom as to be immediately actuated. The rest are called Spirits, who are of indefinite variety. The Angels ascend according to their perfection. Hence they are called higher and lower, or if they are introduced [into Heaven], interior, more interior and inmost. These are now signified by Jacob, Isaac, and Abraham ; also by Egypt, Assyria, and Israel (Is. xix. 25).

206. That the Angels do not know us. I long thought that the inmost and more interior Angels knew what I was doing and thinking . . . but . . . they said that they knew nothing whatever of what I was doing ; nor saw it, as the nearest Spirits did ; and yet that they are in constant reaction against the efforts and acts of evil Spirits, or their spheres, which they felt perfectly well ; but from what cause, or what man, they did not know. Thus it is God Messiah alone Who acts through His Angels . . . This now it is that is understood by these words, 'Abraham knoweth us not.' To-day, by a certain kind of abstract thought, something ascended to the Angels, with which they were moved, and at which they wondered, and thus they spoke with me through others. Nor do the Angels want to know what is going on on earth, because they know that everything is perverted and devastated ; wherefore they long for the Kingdom of God Messiah to come, hoping that thus communication may be opened between them and men.

333. If it pleased God Messiah to resume His gift, and to restore an Angel to his former life, then would that Soul become just as he was before, when he went forth from the body . . . 788. 1321. 1331. 1332. 2584, Gen. art. 2755.

552. The Angels (of Jupiter) are distinct, and cannot be together with our Heavens, except their more interior and inmost Angels . . . But the more interior and inmost Angels constitute one Heaven throughout the universe.

668. But yet the states of Souls and Angels are changed and perfected, thus are transposed into better seats of the same member or province, yea, into other provinces also that are nobler ; for there is constant purification, or so to speak, new creation ; nor can any Angel come to perfection itself through eternity.

883. That the Angels can become better to eternity, but never perfect.

955. That the Angels accurately know natural truths so that hardly one is wanting. 1625^o. 2394.

1054. Why some are permitted to enter into Heaven who are not Angels.

— It is permitted not infrequently that evil Spirits insinuate themselves, through cunning, into Heaven ; that is, into the company of Angels, for thus they are in Heaven . . . Sometimes, when certain states of the Angels of the interior Heaven prevail, they are admitted through imitations of what is good, thus by putting on the appearance that they are Angels, for the Angels freely admit them. . . The reason is, that the Angels are thus tried and proved, whether they are such as heavenly beings ought to be, for there is always something feculent adhering, which is successively and through time to be exterminated. Thus are the Angels led astray, and their defects made known. Evil Spirits are like leaven, which stirs what is evil into commotion, and if they then suffer themselves to be led astray, they are for a time banished from Heaven, and undergo a species of suitable vastation, and are afterwards introduced. 1183. 1218. 2158.

1315. That Angels sometimes speak (through Spirits) with those in the deepest Hell.

1375. (Angels directing punishment there.) 1494. 3299.

1656. A Spirit is sent to prepare the way for the coming of Angels to a man . . .

1796. Those who are Angels do not reflect so much upon these things, that they are clothed in garments, as Spirits, Souls recently [deceased] . . . (Their garments described.) 1797.

1966. Evil Spirits are tortured when Angels look at them. 2395. 2519. 3640.

1998. The Angels also were made glad (by music that I heard) but only when I paid less attention to it, so that I did not mingle with it the gladness of the Spirits that was communicated to me, but when I as it were heard nothing. So also in other things; the Angels paid greater attention when I paid less. The reason was that bodily things were then present, and the almost bodily thoughts of the Spirits.

2010. The Angels of the interior Heaven can think more rapidly and distinctly in one moment than a man can in many hours.

2157. The Angels cannot be in either the interior, the more interior, or the inmost Heaven without being at the same time in the natural mind which belongs to the Angels of the interior Heaven. The natural mind cannot be put off, for so there would be wanting that which completes order, and they would no longer be Angels . . .

2188. That the Angels have no memory of past things and no foresight of the future. 2271.

2210. Angels can only speak with a man through intermediate Spirits . . . 2285.

2823. On the fall of Angels from Heaven. 2831.

2996. That Angels can know the quality of man.

— Angels can know from the Lord whatever has been in man from earliest infancy, and whatever he has thought.

3043. Only those are called Angels who are in Heaven.

3079. That the horrid faces as well as the beautiful ones in the World of Spirits arise from the inspection of the Angels.

3323. Hence it follows that the ideas even of the Celestial Angels are nothing but respirations.

3356. That the thoughts and speech of Angels and Angelic Spirits fall into parables.

3398. The Angels have as it were the head in Heaven and the feet in the Heaven of interior Angelic Spirits . . .

3443. Employments of the Angels enumerated. 3617.

3525. Guardian Angels . . .

3546. One Angel can by his sphere drive away the whole World of Spirits . . .

3629. How greatly the wisdom of the Angels surpasses that of the lower Spirits, represented.

3846. The Angels who are at the head are ruled by the Lord immediately, and have no communication with the evil Spirits who are above the head, but rule their subjects only . . .

3973. The Angels do not know what space is, for those who are at the end of the universe are present in a moment; they have no idea of past and future things, but both are in their present . . .

4061. The Angels are not consociated in their places, but most of them are in their functions and uses, and wherever they are they appear consociated . . .

4131. Spirits and Angels can never of themselves find out anything that is true, or do anything that is good.

4132. The state of Spirits and Angels relatively to that of the Lord is in general a state of sleep.

4223. The Angels care for nothing with man but ends; when the end is for the sake of self and the world they oppose it and turn it into an end of good, in which case they are greatly delighted; so far as there is an end of good they are present, but so far as there is an end of evil they are far away; but still they prevent the man from precipitating himself into the greatest evils by means of outward bonds which they excite . . . 4256. 4267.

4244. The delights with man that are innocent are the ultimates in which the delights of the Angels are terminated . . .

4250. How it was with the Angels seen in the Jewish Church.

4256. On the speech and thought of Angels. They regard nothing but ends, thus uses. They abhor those who have evil ends . . .

4267. The speech and thought of the Angels are of nothing but ends, thus of uses. Hence it is that their thought and speech are so remote from the perception of man, which is that of particulars.

4390. The Angels perceive man's ends and their progression, which the man himself does not perceive . . .

4427. (The magnificence, wealth, and power of the Angels described. Yet how humble and unselfish they are.) 4506.

4482. The Angels still retain all their outward things. (The necessity of this.)

4593. Those are Angels who so receive the Lord that they are delighted with the happiness of all; but those who will only their own happiness cannot be in Heaven . . .

4620. (The influx of the Angels into man, explained.)

4622. If a man has no truths from good the Angels cannot flow in, except through Spirits into his outward things . . .

4632. (The Government of the Hells by the Angels described.)

4645. When the affection of truth and the will of good are delightful to a man then the Angels flow in . . .

4686. (How a man appears to the Angels. He is not seen at all by Spirits.)

4708. He could almost deceive the interior Angels . . .

4740. (A Genius who cast down two Angels.)

5101. Angels are invisible to Spirits. From experience.

5187. All the wisdom of the Angels is given by means of the Word, and is communicated to them when the Word is being read by man; but still it is given through the Angels of the Most Ancient and Ancient Churches; therefore these Angels are scattered through the Heavens . . . 5607.

5188. Those Angels who had not been in wisdom here are in wisdom there only when other Angels are present who had been in wisdom here . . . 5189. 5194.

5190. The Angels act as one with man, the Celestial being in the first degree and man in the ultimate . . .

5191. The more perfect the Angels are, the more perfectly do they think . . .

5528. Although the Angels always turn their faces to the east, they can see what is in the other quarters, but within themselves . . .

[D.] 5608. Man's natural thought is the plane in which cease all things of Angelic wisdom ; into this plane fall all things that the Angels think ; hence such as is the plane such is their wisdom.

5610. The Angels are sometimes in much wisdom, sometimes in less, according to the direction of their thoughts ; but these are not turned to themselves, but to men . . . and when to those things that are in my thought from the Heavenly Doctrine they are then in a clearer wisdom than at any other time.

5617. Many men may serve as a plane for one Angel . . .

5943. There are four kinds of speech, as there are four kinds of Angels. Enum.

6011. (On the joy the Angels have when children learn truths and afterwards live them as they grow up.)

D. Min. 4720. On the changes of state of the Angels.

E. 8. The reason why by 'Angel' is meant from Heaven is that what an Angel speaks continually flows in, not into his memory, but immediately into his understanding and words . . . Hence it is that everything said by Angels to the Prophets was Divine . . .

92. (Why it is said 'Write to the Angel of the Church,' and not 'Write to the Church.') 130.

130. 'Angel'=one who is recipient of Divine Truth, and in the highest sense, the Divine Truth itself proceeding from the Lord. Ex. and Ill.

—⁸. Since Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord makes an Angel, an 'Angel' in the highest sense=the Lord. Ill.

—⁹. 'Behold, I will send an Angel before thee'=the Word which is Divine Truth.

140⁴. The Angel who appeared to Balaam with a drawn sword=the Divine Truth enlightening, and fighting against falsity.

185. The Angels that are with a man do not see his works, but only the intentions of his mind, and thence conclude what is the quality of his state.

235³. I have heard the Angels say that when it is given them to look into the Church, and to see those who believe themselves to be intelligent from doctrine, they see mere thick darkness, and those persons as it were deep under the waves.

278⁸. 'Lions roaring after their prey . . . '=the states of the Angels of Heaven when they are not in an intense state of love and wisdom, and when they return into it.

302. 'A mighty Angel'=Heaven. Ex.

307. An 'Angel' does not mean one Angel, but a whole Society.

335⁵. 'Angels of peace'=the goods of doctrine.

401⁴. 'Angels'=something Divine from the Lord, for the Divine that appears from them is not theirs, but the Lord's with them ; in like manner the Divine truth they speak they do not speak from themselves, but from the Lord . . .

—²³. 'Praise Him all His Angels'=those who are in Divine truths from the good of love . . .

412⁶. 'Their Angels always see the face of My Father.' It is said that their Angels see, because there are Spirits and Angels with every man, and such Spirits and Angels as the man is ; with infant children there are Angels from the inmost Heaven. These see the Lord as a Sun, for they are in love to Him, and in innocence. In the proximate sense this is meant by the Angels seeing the face of His Father . . .

—⁷. 'The Angel of His faces delivered them. . .' Here the Lord is treated of, Who is called the 'Angel of the faces of Jehovah' from the Divine Truth that is from His Divine Love, for by 'Angel' is signified Divine Truth ; whence the Angels are called 'gods.'

— The Lord was Divine Truth as to His Human, and hence is called an 'Angel.'

417. 'The four Angels standing upon the four corners of the earth'=the Divine from the Lord proceeding into the universal Spiritual World. Ex.

419¹¹. 'Angels'=those who are in the Spiritual Kingdom . . . 'Ministers,' those who are in the Celestial Kingdom . . .

422. 'I saw an Angel ascending from the rising of the sun'=Divine Love going forth from the Lord. An 'Angel'=something Divine proceeding from the Lord ; for in the proximate sense by an 'Angel' is understood a whole Angelic Society ; but in the general sense, by an 'Angel' is signified everyone who receives Divine Truth in doctrine and life ; but in the highest sense, by an 'Angel' is signified something Divine that proceeds from the Lord, specifically Divine Truth.

472. The Angels . . . never inquire who and whence is anyone, but what is his quality . . .

490. 'Another Angel came and stood at the altar'=the conjunction of Heaven with the Lord through celestial good ; an Angel, when presented representatively=either a Society of Heaven, or many Societies together, or the universal Heaven as to that principle of Heaven and the Church that is being treated of. This Angel who stood at the altar=the inmost Heaven, because the 'altar'=the good of love to the Lord.

529. 'An Angel flying in the midst of Heaven'=the Lord enlightening all in the Heavens concerning the state of the Church at its end. An 'Angel,' here,=the Lord as to the manifestation of what the Church would be at the last times as to the reception of Divine Truth.

562. 'The Angel of the bottomless pit'=Hell where the falsities of evil are. As by an 'Angel' are understood whole Angelic Societies who are in similar good, so by an 'Angel' in the opposite sense are signified infernal Societies that are in similar evil.

569. 'Angels at the river Euphrates'=reasonings from the fallacies of the sensual man . . .

573⁵. The Angels when gathered together are called 'armies' because they=Divine truths and goods, since they are recipients of them from the Lord.

606. 'The Angel whom I saw standing upon the sea and upon the earth'=the Lord, to whom all things of Heaven and the Church are subject ; also the Lord as to the Word. 628.

650^e. The 'Angels' who came and ministered to the Lord=the Divine Truths by means of which He of His own power conquered the Hells.

653¹⁴. That the Sodomites desired to do violence to the Angels=that it was to Divine Good and Divine Truth [that they wanted to do violence], for these are signified by the 'Angels.'

687¹⁸. 'The Angel at the head'=Divine Truth in first principles, and 'the Angel at the feet'=Divine Truth in ultimates, both proceeding from the Lord.

742. 'The Angels of the dragon'=falsities from evil. 740¹².

822². (A man's sphere is sometimes visible to the Angels. Des.)

888. 'The holy Angels'=Divine Truths from the Lord.

915. 'An Angel went out'=manifestation by the Lord.

928. 'Angels'=Divine Truths from the Lord.

949. 'Seven Angels having the seven plagues'=the manifestation of all the evils and falsities that have devastated the Church. 957.

971. 'The Angel of the waters'=the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom.

978. 'The Angel from the altar'=the Lord's Celestial Kingdom.

1085². Thus the wisdom of the Angels subsists upon the science, intelligence, and wisdom of men from the sense of the letter of the Word . . .

1145¹⁰. (On man-Angels and man-Devils.)

1147². Some Angels of the lowest Heaven . . . when led through infernal Societies, thought exactly as the Devils there . . .

D. Wis. (Post.) viii. There neither is nor could be any Angel or Spirit who had not been born a man in the world. Gen.art.

—². That there is an Angelic mind in man . . .

—-. (Such then become as wise as the Angels, although they had not been so here. Ex.)

—⁶. That the Angelic mind cannot be procreated and be by procreations multiplied, except in a man . . .

—-. The Angels would be dissipated like other substances there unless they had been born on earth. Ex.)

C. 6. Man appears in his own image before the Angels, yea, out of himself . . .

5 M. 6. (The reception of novitiate Spirits by the Angels, and what they say to each other.) 8.

16. The understanding and wisdom of Angels and Spirits are from the light of the spiritual Sun, and their will and love are from its heat . . .

De Conj. 4. From the sphere of love of two married partners the Angels plainly perceive whether there is anything lascivious in it . . . and so far as there is they remove themselves. The reason why they do so is that the lasciviousness of adultery communicates with the Hells, and the chasteness of marriage with Heaven.

42. On marriage love with the Angels. See MARRIED PARTNER at this ref.

43^o. When an Angel in Heaven merely thinks of more wives than one, the Heavenly and Angelic perish, and also his joy and wisdom, and he falls from Heaven.

53. All the marriages of the Angels are provided by the Lord . . .

Coro. 14. When the Angels look down towards the earth, they see nothing of it, but only the Church in men.

19^o. The Angels lament bitterly when the Church on earth is desolated by falsities and consummated by evils, and then liken the state of their life to sleepiness; for Heaven is then to them like a seat withdrawn, or like the body deprived of its feet; but when the Church on earth has been restored by the Lord, they liken the state of their life to one of wakefulness.

49. It was the Lord our Saviour that appeared (to Abraham) in His Divine Trinity, which the three Angels represented.

Docu. 302. A^o. The Angels then kissed me for what I had told them . . .

Angel of Jehovah. Angelus Jehovah.

Angel of God. Angelus Dei.

A. 1924. 'The Angel of Jehovah found her'=interior thought from the Lord's Inward [man], or the thought of the interior man with the Lord. 1925. 1926. 1935. 1938. 1943.

1925. Wherever the 'Angel of Jehovah' is mentioned in the Word in a good sense, he represents and signifies something essential with the Lord and from the Lord. What he represents and signifies may be known from the connection. They were Angels who were sent to men, and also spoke through the Prophets; but what they spoke was not from the Angels, but through the Angels. For their state then was that they did not know but that they were Jehovah, that is the Lord; but presently, as soon as they had spoken, they returned into their former state, and spoke as from themselves. This was the case with the Angels who spoke the Word of the Lord . . . This is the reason that the Angels were sometimes called 'Jehovah'; as is manifestly evident from the Angel who appeared to Moses in the bush . . . 'There appeared the Angel of Jehovah to Moses in a flame of fire from the midst of a bush; Jehovah saw that he turned aside to see, and God cried to him out of the midst of the bush. God said to Moses, I am who I am; and God said to Moses further, Thus shalt thou say to the Sons of Israel, Jehovah God of your fathers hath sent me unto you.'

—³. In order that what is said may come to men by words of articulate sound, and in ultimate nature, the Lord uses the ministry of Angels, infilling them with the Divine, and laying to sleep what is their own, so that they do not know but that they are Jehovah Himself. Ill.

—⁴. As the Lord speaks through Angels when He speaks with man, hence it is that the Lord is also called an 'Angel' in the Word throughout, and then by an 'Angel' there is signified something essential with the Lord and from the Lord . . . wherefore the Angel is also called Jehovah and God in this chapter. 2821.

2332. Formerly, when they saw the Angel of Jehovah they believed that they were about to die. Ill. and Ex.

2692. 'The Angel of God cried to Hagar out of heaven'=consolation. . . The 'Angel of God'=the Lord.

2821. 'The Angel of Jehovah cried to him (Abraham) out of heaven'=consolation from the Divine Itself. 2841.

3088. The person who is sent puts on the person of him who sends him, as we read of Angels in the Word, that they are first called 'Angels,' and then 'Jehovah.'

4235. 'There ran to meet him (Jacob) an Angel of God'=illustration by good. The 'Angels of God'=something of the Lord, here, the Divine that is in the Lord. . . 'The Angel of God running to meet him,' in the proximate sense=the influx of the Divine into the Natural, thence illustration . . .

6831. 'The Angel of Jehovah appeared unto him (Moses at the bush)'=the Lord as to the Divine Human. . . . The reason why 'the Angel of Jehovah'=the Lord's Divine Human, is that before the Lord's Advent, when Jehovah passed through Heaven, He appeared in a human form as an Angel; for the whole Angelic Heaven has relation to one man . . . wherefore when the Divine Itself passed through it, it appeared in a human form as an Angel before those to whom He was speaking. This was the Divine Human of Jehovah before the Lord's Advent . . . 9303. 10579⁴.

8192. 'The Angel of God advanced'=arrangement in order by Divine Truth. Ex.

9315. 'When My Angel went before thee'=life according to the Lord's precepts. . . The Lord is here 'the Angel of Jehovah' . . . 'The Angel of Jehovah'=the Lord as to the Divine Human. The reason why the Lord as to the Divine Human is understood by 'Angel,' is that many Angels who appeared before the Lord's Advent into the world were Jehovah Himself in a human form, or in the form of an Angel, as is manifestly evident from the fact that they called the Angels who appeared 'Jehovah.' Ill. Jehovah Himself in a Human form, or what is the same, in the form of an Angel, was the Lord. His Divine Human at that time appeared as an Angel. (Proved from the Word.)

10508. See ANGEL at this ref.

P. 96⁶. The Lord sometimes infills an Angel with His Divine, so that the Angel does not know but that he is the Lord; so infilled were the Angels seen by Abraham, Hagar, and Gideon, who thence called themselves 'Jehovah.' So also can one Spirit be infilled by another, even to his not knowing but that he is the other. This I have often seen.

R. 938. The Lord sometimes presents Himself to view outside His Sun, but He then veils Himself over and presents Himself to their sight, which is done through an Angel, and also was done in the world before Abraham, etc. Wherefore those Angels were called 'Angels' and also 'Jehovah,' for there was in them the presence of Jehovah from afar.

T. 135⁴. We do indeed read that Moses saw Jehovah face to face, and spoke with Him mouth to mouth, but this was done through an Angel, in like manner with Abraham, etc.

Angelic Spirit. Spiritus Angelicus.

A. 41. Every word, idea, and smallest atom of thought of an Angelic Spirit is alive; in the smallest particular of it there is affection proceeding from the Lord, Who is life itself.

167. Whatever is represented visibly (in the World of Spirits) is perceived in the Second Heaven, by Angelic Spirits, as to the more minute things that are in the things represented. Those which [are represented] with Angelic Spirits [are perceived] in the Third Heaven by the Angels copiously, and full of inexpressible angelic ideas.

201. The Angels and Angelic Spirits who are called celestial are of a similar nature and character to the regenerate most anciently before the Flood; but the Angels and Angelic Spirits who are called spiritual are of a similar character to the regenerate who were after the Flood . . .

394⁹. Those are called 'eunuchs' who are in the heavenly marriage; 'those born from the womb,' who are like the Celestial Angels; 'those made by men,' who are like the Spiritual Angels; 'those who made themselves,' who are like Angelic Spirits, who [act] not so much from charity, as from obedience.

459. There are three Heavens . . . the Second is where Angelic Spirits are . . . who are distinguished into celestial and spiritual . . . 1525. 1642. 1752².

538. Some were walking in Heaven . . . When they came to the first court, or into the lower sphere of Angelic Spirits, they were so smitten that they cast themselves headlong backwards.

546. Some upright Spirits were admitted into the same Society, who, the moment they entered, became much more intelligent, and spoke like Angelic Spirits.

552. I once saw some Angelic Spirits most carefully forming a candelabrum with its lamps and flowers most richly ornamented in honour of the Lord . . . D.2646.

641. When Angelic Spirits flow in, they do so softly, like a very gentle breath of air.

911². In the Heavens, which are three, and all together relate to one man, Spirits constitute the outward man, Angelic Spirits the interior man, Angels the inward man.

978². The Rational (in man) corresponds to the Heaven of Angelic Spirits . . .

994². Still more interior (affections) with their pleasantnesses (manifest themselves) in the Heaven of Angelic Spirits . . .

996². In like manner the delight of these Spirits becomes vile when they are elevated . . . into the Heaven of Angelic Spirits; and in like manner the delight that Angelic Spirits have had in their own Heaven becomes vile when they are elevated . . . into the Angelic Third Heaven.

1480². From this (spiritual) food there exists a food which also is celestial and spiritual, but is a lower angelic [kind of food], from which Angelic Spirits live . . .

1629. The dwellings of good Spirits, and of Angelic Spirits, described.

1642. But the speech of Angelic Spirits is still more universal and perfect . . . 1876⁹.

1769². He was carried up to the Angelic Spirits who are in front a little to the right at the first boundary of (their) Heaven . . . 3474.

1770. Twice afterwards I saw others carried up into the Second Heaven among Angelic Spirits . . . 3474⁴.

1799². Angelic Spirits, who are in the Second Heaven, are more interior . . .

1802³. No one can be borne from the First . . . into the Second . . . Heaven until he has been instructed . . . but when instructed he can . . . come among Angelic Spirits . . .

1931. The Angelic Spirits (perceive) the still more interior things of (man's) thoughts . . .

1972. The things I have seen in the World of Spirits I have seen in clear light, but more obscurely those in the Heaven of Angelic Spirits . . .

1976. There are three kinds of dreams . . . The second kind (come) through Angelic Spirits, especially those who are in front above to the right, where there are paradisiacal things. 1977. 1980.

2303. The Angelic Spirits who were in front above spoke with me by angelic speech, not distinguished into words, saying that their state is one of the tranquillity of peace, and that there were little children with them, from whose company they perceived bliss. These Spirits were of the female sex.

3693⁷. When good and Angelic Spirits fall into a state of self-love and thence into a state of falsity, they are remitted a little into their natural or lower state, and are there imbued with knowledges of good and truth as to that thing. Sig.

5313¹³. The Angelic Spirits, to whom there is given perception by the Lord, know what these things signify . . .

7805. When these (instructor) Spirits are present, there are also present Angelic Spirits, who are also from that Earth (Jupiter), who sit at the head, and as it were infill it in a special manner; their presence there is perceived as a gentle breathing . . .

9457². In the Ultimate Heaven are represented those things that are thought of in the Middle and Inmost Heavens . . . these appear before the eyes of Angelic Spirits there . . .

9543. Very many things that are in the Lord's Celestial Kingdom . . . hardly (fall) into an idea of thought of the Angelic Spirits who are in the Ultimate Heaven.

9577. The Angelic Spirits who are in the Ultimate or First Heaven constantly see forms of such things as there are in the world, as paradises, palaces, etc.

9741. They who are in the Ultimate Heaven, which is called 'the court,' are called Angelic Spirits . . .

10785. When the Angelic Spirits who were from that (sixth) Earth came into view . . .

H. 517. Thus are Angelic Spirits instructed, and prepared for Heaven.

W. 140. He who is being prepared for Heaven is called an Angelic Spirit. . . An Angelic Spirit is meanwhile conjoined with Heaven.

R. 566⁶. The Angelic Spirits who were present wondered . . .

875⁴. Then one of the Angelic Spirits looked back at me. Those are called Angelic Spirits who are being prepared in the World of Spirits for Heaven, and afterwards become Angels. That Spirit came to me, and said . . . —¹⁶. T. 387.

M. 44². (Three novitiates instructed by two Angelic Spirits.)

T. 335². Suddenly an Angelic Spirit stood there in the midst of them, and speaking in a loud voice, said . . .

D. 3523. (Two Angelic Spirits at the head of every man, by whom the Lord guards him; they regulate the evil Spirits who come to him; without reflection they suppose they are the man, but the inward man, acting in the interior things of his thoughts . . .)

3538. (How Angelic Spirits regard whatever comes to pass.)

3552³. (The indefatigable efforts of good and Angelic Spirits to insinuate life into the Spirits who come there from the common people . . .) 3556.

3640¹. Angelic Spirits, being in the Grand Man, think and perceive from within when Heaven has been open to them, and therefore their ideas are most beautiful representations . . .

4166. As man is to Spirits, so are Spirits to Angelic Spirits, and Angelic Spirits to Angels.

4208. The speech of Angelic Spirits was perceived, but not heard or understood . . . 4210.

4242. On Angelic Spirits. They are most distinct in Societies, midway between Angels and good Spirits; Angels flow into them and they flow into good Spirits; when in their Society or among themselves they know nothing about men, yet they flow into men . . .

4249. But the case is otherwise with Angelic Spirits who love others better than themselves; for it is only self-love, of the existence of which in themselves they are not aware, that produces such an effect. See 4270.

Angelo. Angelo.

R. 752. The Castle of Angelo, mentioned.

Anger. Ira.

Angry, To be. Irasci.

See ANGRY—succensere, and also under ZEAL.

A. 245. The Lord is never angry with anyone. . . The reason why it is said in the Word that Jehovah God is angry, punishes, etc., is in order that they may believe that the Lord rules and disposes all things . . .

and after they have received this most general idea, that they may afterwards learn how He rules and disposes . . . 592.

[A.] 327. That their state was changed into evil . . . is described by 'anger being kindled.' (Gen. iv. 5.)

355. 'Anger'=that charity has departed. 359.

357. Anger is a general affection resulting from all that goes contrary to man's own proper love and its cupidities. This is manifestly perceived in the world of evil Spirits, for there is a general anger against the Lord, because they are in no charity, but in hatreds. Whatever does not favour our own proper love and the love of the world excites contrariety, which is manifested by anger. Anger, wrath, and fury are many times predicated of Jehovah in the Word; but they are of man, and are attributed to Jehovah because it so appears. Ill. Hence it is evident that 'anger'=evils, or what is the same, departure from charity.

1010. 'Whosoever is angry with his brother rashly' . . . 'To be angry,' here, =to depart from charity . . . thus it is hated.

1093. It is as far from the Lord to . . . be angry with anyone as heaven is from earth. Who can believe that the Lord . . . who is infinitely above all infirmities, is angry with such miserable dust, that is, with men, who hardly know what they are doing, and are not able to do anything of themselves except what is evil; wherefore with the Lord there is no such thing as being angry, but there is being merciful.

1408³. Many things are said in the Word according to appearances, yea, according to the fallacies of the senses, as that the Lord is angry, punishes, curses, kills, and many such things, when yet in the inward sense there are the contrary, namely that the Lord is never angry and punishes, still less curses and kills. Nevertheless it does no harm to those who from simplicity of heart believe the Word as they apprehend it in the letter, while they live in charity . . . 1798⁴.

1580. It is known to those who have been in temptations and combats, that they perceive in themselves what is discordant, but so long as the combat lasts they are not able to get away from it, but still they desire to do so, sometimes to the extent of being angry with what is evil, and wanting to expel it. Sig.

1874. Many things are said in the Word according to appearances and according to the fallacies of the senses, as that Jehovah is in anger, wrath, and fury against the wicked, etc., but they are said in order that persuasions and cupidities should not be broken, but bent; for to speak otherwise than as man apprehends . . . would be to sow seed in the waters. . . Yet these things are able to serve as general vessels containing spiritual and celestial things, for there can be insinuated into them that all things are from the Lord; then that the Lord permits, but that all evil is from diabolical Spirits; afterwards that the Lord provides and disposes that evils be turned into goods, and at last that there is nothing but what is good from the Lord. So perishes the sense of the letter as it ascends, and it becomes spiritual, then celestial, and at last Divine.

2351. 'They cried to Lot, and said unto him'=falsity from evil being angry against good. . . From the affection of anger in these words it is evident that this is the signification. . . It is this kind of falsity especially that is angry against good. . . The cause of anger is everything that endeavours to destroy the delight of any love. It is called 'anger' when evil assaults good, but 'zeal' when good rebukes evil.

2369. 'And they said'=an answer from anger.

2370. 'Come on'=threats of anger.

2553. If doctrinal things were set forth otherwise, they would not be received at all . . . as may be sufficiently evident from various things in the Word. For this reason purely Divine things are there set forth naturally, yea, sensually, as that Jehovah has ears, eyes, a face, affections such as man has, anger, and many other things.

3131³. It is a Divine truth that the Lord is never angry, never punishes anyone, still less does evil to anyone. . . In infancy this truth stands thus; that the Lord is angry when anyone sins, and that the Lord therefore punishes, yea, with some, that evil is from the Lord. As, however, man progresses from infancy, and grows up and matures in judgment, he puts off that which was a truth from the appearance to him . . . and by little and little puts on the truth itself, namely that the Lord is never angry, nor does He punish, still less does He do evil. Thus through the former truth he is initiated into the latter . . .

3605⁴. Since the mercy of the Lord inflowing among the Jewish and Israelitish people was turned into such hatred . . . they therefore could not but believe that Jehovah also felt hatred, was angry, wrathful, furious; wherefore it has been so spoken in the Word according to the appearance; for such as a man is, so does the Lord appear to him.

3614. 'Until thy brother's wrath depart'=until the state changes; and 'until thy brother's anger depart from thee'=what is successive of the state with natural good. . . 'Wrath' and 'anger'=states that are opposed.

— 'Wrath' is predicated of truth, here, of the truth of good that is represented by Esau; but 'anger' is predicated of that very good itself.

—² 'Wrath' and 'anger' are often mentioned in the Word, but in the inward sense they do not sig. wrath and anger, but that which is opposed, and this because whatever is opposed to any affection produces wrath or anger, so that in the inward sense they are only resistances. 'Wrath' is said of that which is opposed to truth, and 'anger,' of that which is opposed to good. But in the opposite sense 'wrath' is that which is opposed to falsity or to its affection, that is, to principles of falsity; and 'anger,' that which is opposed to evil, that is, to the love of self and of the world; and in this sense 'wrath' is properly wrath, and 'anger' is anger. But when they are predicated of what is good and true, 'wrath' and 'anger' are zeal that appears like wrath and anger in the outward form, and is therefore so called in the sense of the letter.

—³ That 'wrath' and 'anger' in the inward sense are only resistances. Ill.

—⁵ 'Anger' is predicated of the punishment of what is evil; 'wrath,' of the punishment of what is false; and 'burning heat=feror'-of both. (Jer.xxi.5.) 'Anger' and 'wrath,' being resistance, are also punishment, for the things that make resistance come into collision, and then evil and falsity are punished. . .

3909. 'Jacob kindled with anger against Rachel'=indignation on the part of natural good. . . The reason why 'to be kindled with anger' is to be indignant, in the inward sense, is that every natural affection becomes milder when it ascends towards interior things . . . and is at last changed into a heavenly affection.

— Spiritual indignation does not derive anything from the anger of the natural man, and still less does celestial indignation; but from the interior essence of zeal, which in the outward form appears like anger, but in the inward is not anger, not even the indignation of anger . . .

4164. 'Jacob was inflamed with anger=succensuit, and chode with Laban'=the zeal of the Natural. . . The reason why 'to be inflamed with anger,' or to be angry, and thence to chide, is zeal, is that with the Angels there is not anger, but instead of anger there is zeal. For anger differs from zeal thus; that in anger there is evil, but in zeal, good. In other words, he who is in anger intends evil to another with whom he is angry; but he who is in zeal intends good to another towards whom he has zeal. Wherefore also he who is in zeal can be good in a moment . . . but not he who is in anger. Although in the outward form zeal appears like anger, in the inward form it is altogether unlike it. 6997⁶.

4307². The descendants of Jacob believed that Jehovah leads into temptations, that all evil is from Him, and that He was in anger and fury when they were being punished, wherefore it has been so said in the Word according to their faith. . . 5798⁶. 6997³.

5034. Potiphar's 'anger was kindled'=turning away from spiritual truth. . . 'Anger'=departure from the good of charity, thus turning away. . . The reason why 'anger' is turning away, is that so long as a man is in anger against anyone he turns away his mind from him. For anger exists or is excited when anyone or anything goes contrary to anyone's love, through which there is conjunction with anyone or anything. When this conjunction is broken, the man is wrathful or angry, as though something had been lost from the delight of his life. This sorrow is turned into grief, and grief into anger. 5080.

5120⁸. 'Cup of wine of anger' (Jer.xxv.15)=falsity through which comes evil. —¹¹,Ex.

5164⁹. Such are indignant and angry if the Divine does not favour them. . .

5585³. 'Inundation of anger' (Is.liv.8)=temptation. 6997⁴.

—⁶. 'My anger shall be kindled' (Deut.xxxi.17)=to turn Himself away. . . This is predicated of the Lord, although He never is angry. . . but it is so said from the appearance with the man who is in evil. For the man who is in evil turns himself away.

5725. When a man who has lived in good is let into his proprium, thus into the sphere of his own life, there appears as it were an inundation. When he is in this inundation, he is indignant, is angry, etc. . . in one way when the left side of the brain, where there are falsities, is inundated; and in another when the right side is inundated, where there are evils.

5798. 'Let not thine anger be kindled against thy servant' (Gen.xliv.18)=that he should not turn himself away. . . 'Anger'=turning away, for he who is angry turns himself away, for he does not think as the other does, but while in that state [he thinks] against him. That 'anger' is turning away, is evident from many places in the Word, especially from those where anger and wrath are attributed to the Lord, by which is signified turning away; not that the Lord ever turns Himself away, but that man does so, and when man turns himself away, it appears to him as if the Lord had done so, for he is not heard. The Word speaks so according to the appearance. And since 'anger' is turning away, it is also opposition to good and truth on the part of those who have turned themselves away. Ill.

—⁷. See under PUNISHMENT=poena-at this ref.

[A.] 5888. 'Let there not be anger in your eyes' (Gen. xlv. 5)=sadness of the spirit or of the understanding. Ex.

6071². He who has imbibed the notion from the literal sense of the Word that God is angry, punishes, leads into temptations, casts into Hell, and does what is evil, may be drawn away into false ideas about God . . . but this scientific appears with a different face if interior truths are insinuated into it; as for instance this truth, that evil is with man, that it causes man to be angry, that it leads into temptations, punishes, casts into Hell, and continually produces evils from itself.

6343³. 'Cursed be their anger for it was vehement, and their wrath for it was hard'. . . Here 'anger'=turning away from good, and 'wrath,' turning away from truth.

6356. 'In their anger they slew a man'=that they turned themselves away altogether, and in turning away they extinguished faith. . . 'Anger'=departure from charity and turning away.

6358. 'Cursed be their anger for it was vehement'=grievous turning away from good, and thence damnation.

6997. 'The anger of Jehovah was kindled against Moses' (Ex. iv. 14)=clemency, as is evident from the signification of the 'anger of Jehovah,' which is not anger, but what is opposite to anger; thus mercy; here, clemency. That there is not any anger in Jehovah is evident from the fact that He is love itself, good itself, and mercy itself, and anger is the opposite, and is also infirmity into which God cannot fall. Wherefore when 'anger' is predicated of Jehovah or the Lord in the Word, the Angels do not perceive anger, but either mercy, or the removal of the evil from Heaven; here clemency, because it is said to Moses, by whom is represented the Lord when He was in the world as to Divine truth.

—². The reason why 'anger' is attributed to Jehovah or the Lord in the Word, is that it is a most general truth that all things come from God, thus both evil and good things. But this most general truth, which is necessary for children and the simple, must afterwards be illustrated, namely, that evils are from man, but that they appear to be from God, and that it is so said in order that they may learn to fear God, lest they should perish through the evils which they themselves do; and afterwards they may be able to love Him, for fear must precede love in order that in love there may be holy fear. . .

—⁴. 'Behold the name of Jehovah cometh from far, burning with His anger' (Is. xxx. 27) . . . where 'anger' denotes reproof and warning lest they perish through evils.

—⁵. 'Anger,' 'wrath,' 'fury,' 'fire'=the punishments and condemnations into which a man casts himself, when he falls into evils. . . Ill.

7735. 'Pharaoh said to him (Moses)'=the wrath of anger against truth.

7791. 'Moses went out from being with Pharaoh in wrath of anger'=the sundering of truth Divine from those who are to be condemned. . . 'Wrath of anger'=opposition and turning away, but when it is attributed to the Divine, as it is here to Divine Truth which is represented by Moses, it is not understood that the Divine turns itself away, but that they who are in evil do so. 'Wrath' is predicated of what is false, and 'anger,' of what is evil.

8265². 'Hide us from . . . the anger of the Lamb, for the great day of His anger is come' . . . The 'anger of the Lamb'=torments, for it appears as if the Divine inflicts torments from anger, when yet it is evils and falsities.

8483. 'Moses was inflamed with anger-succensuit-against them' (Ex. xvi. 20)=that they turned truth Divine away from themselves; as is evident from the signification of 'to be inflamed with anger'-succensere, or of 'to be angry,' when said of Moses, by whom is represented truth Divine, that it is turning away from it.

— In the Word 'wrath' and 'anger,' yea 'fury' are often attributed to Jehovah, when yet there are pure love and pure mercy towards man in Jehovah. This is said in the Word from the appearance, for when men are against the Divine, and thus shut off from themselves the influx of love and mercy, they cast themselves into the evil of punishment. . .

8598². They who are in zeal fight, not from any enmity and hostility, but rather from charity, for zeal differs from anger in this, that zeal has in it the good that is of charity, wherefore when zeal fights it only removes those who are in what is false and evil lest they should injure those who are in what is good and true. But anger not only removes them, but also persecutes them from hatred and revenge. For from the charity that is in it, zeal wishes well to those also who are in what is evil and false, and also does it to them so far as they do not injure the good; but anger, from the hatred and revenge that are in it, wills evil to all with whom it fights, whether they are good or evil.

8875. Hence it is that the Lord's zeal, which in itself is love and pity, appears to them as anger; for when the Lord from love and pity protects His own in Heaven, they who are in evil are indignant and angry against the good, and invade the sphere where Divine Truth and Divine Good are, endeavouring to destroy those who are there, and then the Divine Truth of Divine Good operates upon them and causes them to feel torments like those of Hell. Hence it is that they attribute to the Divine wrath and anger, and also all evil, when yet there is nothing whatever of anger in the Divine. Hence it is evident why 'zealous'=what is false and evil, and why 'zeal'=anger. Ill.

8902. Hatred against the neighbour is meant by 'being angry rashly with his brother.'

8989⁴. 'Hide thyself as for a little of a moment until the anger be overpast' (Is. xxvi. 20)=no communication with evils, which are 'anger.' Refs.

9143. 'When fire shall have gone forth' (Ex. xxii. 6)=anger from affection of what is evil. . . for anger is from that source; for when that which a man loves is assaulted, fiery (feeling) breaks forth and as it were burns. Hence it is that anger is described in the Word by 'fire.'

9144². When these loves (of self and of the world) are assaulted, there breaks forth fire from the will into the Intellectual, and conceives a flame there; this flame is what is called anger. Hence it is that a man is said to be inflamed etc., when he is angry. This flame attacks truths and goods that are in the Intellectual, and not only hides, but consumes them; and, what is an arcanum, when this evil fire from the will breaks forth into the Intellectual, the Intellectual is closed above and opened below. . . Hence it is that evils and falsities then flow in that conceive a flame when an evil man blazes up with anger.

—³. The state of an evil man, when he is angry, is like the case of smoke, which conceives a flame when fire is applied to it, for falsity of evil in the Intellectual is like smoke, and anger is like the flame of smoke that has been set on fire. Hence it is that in the Word 'smoke'=falsity, and its 'flame'=anger. Ill.

9204. 'And My anger shall blaze out' (Ex.xxii.24)=the state of those who do this, as is evident from the signification of 'anger,' when it is attributed to Jehovah, that is, to the Lord, being clemency and mercy. . .

9809^b. 'He smote kings in the day of His anger'=the destruction of falsities then. 'The day of anger' was when He fought against evils and destroyed them.

9930^b. 'Thou exercisest anger with Thine Anointed' (Ps.xxxix.38)=a state of temptations when the Lord was in combats with the Hells. Lamentation then is described by 'anger'. . .

10431. 'My anger shall blaze out against them' (Ex. xxxii. 10)=that thus they turn themselves away from inward, thus from Divine things. . . 'To blaze out with anger,' when said of Jehovah,=turning away on the part of man. . . In many places in the Word it is said of Jehovah that He 'blazes out with anger,' and also that He consumes and destroys. But it is so said because it appears so to the man who turns himself away from the Lord, which is the case when he does what is evil. And because he is then not heard, he believes that the Lord is in anger against him, when yet the Lord never is angry, and never consumes, for He is mercy itself and good itself.

10440. 'Turn again from the wrath of Thine anger' (Ex. xxxii. 12)=that so the turning away of that nation would not be injurious.

10460. 'The anger of Moses was kindled' (Ex.xxxii. 19)=the turning away of that nation from the Internal of the Word, of the Church, and of worship.

10618. 'Longsuffering to angers' (Ex.xxxiv.6)=the Divine clemency. . . 'Longsuffering to angers,' when said of Jehovah,=that He long bears the evils of man. . . 'Angers' are the evils with man. The reason why 'angers,' when predicated of Jehovah, are evils with man, is that evil is angry, and good never is; and evil is with man.

—². Evil is angry and good never is, for to be angry is to will evil to another. . . and moreover evil hates good, because it is opposed to its delights; hence when evil is not able to injure good, for it is always in the effort to do so, it is first indignant, and afterwards is angry. . .

—³. Hence it is that an evil man is always angry against the Divine. . .

H. 545. That God never is angry. Refs.

562. The evils that are in those who are in self love. . . As to religious things, there is not only contempt of the Divine, and for Divine things, which are the truths and goods of the Church, but even anger against them, which is also turned into hatred when the man becomes a Spirit. . .

S. 84. 'Anger' . . . is predicated of good, and in the opposite sense of evil; 'wrath' is predicated of truth, and in the opposite sense of falsity. R.635,Ill.

94. In many places in the Word, 'anger,' 'wrath,' and 'revenge,' are attributed to the Lord, and that He punishes, casts into Hell, tempts, and many like things. He who believes this simply, and on that account fears God, and takes care not to sin against Him, is not condemned on account of this simple faith. But he who so far confirms these things as to believe that anger, wrath, and revenge, thus things that are evil, have place with the Lord, and that from anger, wrath, and revenge, He punishes man, and casts him into Hell, is condemned, because he has destroyed the genuine truth, which is that the Lord is love itself, mercy itself, and good itself, and He who is these things cannot be angry, wrathful, and revengeful. The reason why these things are attributed to the Lord is from appearance.

P. 211^a. If a man felt this (the operation of the Divine Providence) he would be angry and provoked against God, and would perish. . .

632. 'Anger of whoredom' (Rev.xiv.8)=adulteration and profanation. E.881.

635. 'Wine of the anger of God mixed pure' (Rev. xiv.10)=the truth of the Word falsified.

651. 'And cast it into the great winepress of the anger of God'=exploration of the quality of their works, that they were evil. . . 'The anger of God' is said of what is evil.

658. 'Because in them has been consummated the anger of God' (Rev.xv.1)=the devastation of the Church, and then its end. . . By the 'anger of God' is signified evil with men, which being against God is called the 'anger of God'; not that God is angry with man, but that man from his evil is angry with God, and because when he is punished and tormented on that account, as takes place after death in Hell, it appears to man as if it were from God, therefore anger and wrath are attributed to God in the Word.

673. It is said that 'the vials were full of the anger of God,' because they were full of plagues, by which are signified the evils and falsities of the Church; but still they were not full of them, but they were full of pure and genuine truths and goods from the Word, through which the evils and falsities of the Church were uncovered. . . It is according to the style of the Word in the sense of its letter that they are said to be 'full of the anger of the Living God' . . . There are no anger and wrath with Jehovah, but with man against Him.

[R.] 365. Zeal appears like anger and wrath with everyone in externals, for it is love kindled and inflamed to protect itself against a violator, and to remove him. See under ZEAL at this ref.

366. Since zeal appears similar in externals with both the good and the evil, and since the ultimate sense of the Word consists of correspondences and appearances, it is often said there of Jehovah that He is angry, wrathful, that He revenges, punishes, casts into Hell, besides many other things that are appearances of zeal in externals. Hence it is that He is called 'Zealous.' Yet there are not the least anger, wrath, and revenge in Him; for He is mercy, grace, and clemency itself, thus good itself, in which no such thing is possible.

B. 60. The doctrine of faith of the present Church ascribes to God human properties, as that He views men from anger . . . Gen.art.

— Who does not know that God is mercy and clemency itself, because He is love itself and good itself, and that these are His Esse or Essence; and who does not thence see that it is a contradiction to say that mercy and good itself can view men from anger? T.132.

62. But by the 'anger of God' in the Word is signified evil with man, which being against God, is called the 'anger of God'; not that God is angry with man, but that man from from his evil is angry with God.

T. 56^e. From these few considerations it may be seen how wildly those rave who think, and still more who believe, and still more who teach, that God can condemn anyone, curse anyone, cast anyone into Hell, predestinate the soul of anyone to eternal death, revenge injuries, be angry, punish. He cannot even turn Himself away from a man and view him with a hard face. These things are contrary to His Essence, and to be contrary to this is to be contrary to Himself.

134². (The Old Church doctrine of the wrath of God, fully stated.)

D. 3028. That good Spirits when angry sometimes break forth suddenly into such things that it cannot be known but that they are from the worst ones.

3604. On anger. I have wondered that sometimes a tumult heard in the streets suddenly ceased. But I have been instructed that when there was a tumult, there reigned a sphere of anger in the World of Spirits, and when it ceased, that sphere ceased, for there was a sudden calm. Hence it was given to know that when I was in a state of anger-iracundia—it was suddenly taken away by the Lord, and immediately there was nothing tumultuous heard in the world, but there appeared a calm.

E. 412. 'The anger of the Lamb'=casting into Hell through influx of Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord. Ex.

443⁶. 'Cursed be their anger for it was vehement'=grievous turning away from good, and thence condemnation; 'and their wrath for it was hard'=turning away from truth thence.

481^e. In many places 'anger' and 'wrath' are predicated of God, and by 'anger' is signified zeal for good; and by 'wrath,' zeal for truth.

504¹⁹. Since such is the effect of the Divine Love flowing down from Heaven, 'anger' and 'wrath' are so often attributed in the Word to Jehovah or the Lord; 'anger' from fire, and 'wrath' from the glow and ardour of fire; and it is also said 'the fire of His anger' . . . which in its origin is Divine Love, but becomes of such a character with the evil, who are angry and wrathful from the influx of it.

684¹³. 'Lest He be angry'=lest evils invade you, for 'to be angry,' when said of the Lord=the turning away of men from Him, thus their anger, and not the Lord's, and evils are the things that turn themselves away and afterwards are angry.

— 'His anger will kindle shortly'=the Last Judgment, and the casting of the evil into Hell.

693. 'And the nations were angry'=contempt, enmity, and hatred of the evil against the Lord, and against the Divine things that are from Him . . . The reason why these and many similar things are signified by 'being angry,' is that everyone is wrathful and angry when his love is attacked, and the delight of his love. All wrath and anger are from this source. The reason is that everyone's love is his life, wherefore to injure the love is to injure the life, and when this is injured, there takes place a commotion of the mind—animi, and thence anger and wrath. It is similar with the good when their love is attacked, but with the difference that wrath and anger do not have place with them, but zeal. This zeal is indeed called 'anger' in the Word, but still it is not anger. It is called 'anger' because it appears like anger in the outward form, but interiorly it is nothing but charity, goodness, and clemency. Wherefore zeal that is like anger does not last long, but only until he against whom it is kindled, repents and turns himself away from evil. Anger with the evil is different. Since it interiorly stores up in itself the hatred and revenge that they love, it lasts, and is rarely extinguished. Hence it is that anger has place with those who are in the loves of self and of the world, for they are also in evils of every kind; but zeal has place with those who are in love to the Lord and in love towards the neighbour; wherefore zeal has regard to man's salvation, but anger to his condemnation . . .

—⁴. In all evil there is anger against the Lord, and against the holy things of the Church . . . as is evident from the fact that when those who are in the Hells merely hear the Lord named, they are kindled with vehement anger not only against Him but against all who confess Him. . . Hence it is manifest that evils are angry with goods and falsities of evil with truths. And hence it is that by 'anger' in the Word is signified evil in the whole complex. III.

—⁸. 'To be angry with a brother rashly'=enmity and hatred against good and truth. . . The reason why he who 'is angry with his brother rashly' is in danger of the judgment, the same as he who commits murder, is that by 'being angry' is signified to think, to intend, and to will evil to another, and all evil of the will is in the life of man's spirit, and returns after death.

—e. It follows of itself that all evil stores up in itself anger against good, for it wills to extinguish it, and also wills to murder him in whom good is, if not as to the body, as to the soul, which altogether comes from anger and with anger.

[A.] 1902. All animals . . . are born into everything scientific that is necessary for or that is conducive to their food, protection, habitation, and procreation, because their nature is according to order. (So it would have been with man.)

2179. The animals mentioned in the Word, and offered in sacrifices, signified things good and true, or, what is the same, celestial and spiritual things . . . Various representatives are presented to view in the World of Spirits, including frequent presentations of animals before the eyes of Spirits; as horses with various trappings, oxen, sheep, lambs, and others of various kinds; sometimes such as are never seen on Earth, but are only representative; such also as were seen by the prophets . . . The animals that appear there are representative of affections of what is good and true, and also of what is evil and false. Examps.

2722⁶. (Men then began to believe) that they were in a like state to animals, except only that they could think . . .

2781³. 'This shall be the plague with which Jehovah shall smite all the people that will fight against Jerusalem; there shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of every beast.' . . . They who will then fight against Jerusalem, that is, against the Lord's Spiritual Church, and its truths, are signified by these animals, being as to intellectual things afflicted with plagues.

3000. In the animal kingdom not only man, but also each animal, even the smallest and lowest of them, is representative . . .

3020². All natural affections that man has in common with brute animals.

3175². The good that man possesses above animals is to love God, and to love the neighbour; all human good is thence.

3218. When the Angels are in affections, and are at the same time in discourse about them, such things then fall into a lower sphere among Spirits into representative species of animals; when the discourse is about good affections, there are presented beautiful, gentle, and useful animals such as were employed in the representative (worship of the Jewish Church), as lambs, sheep, kids, she-goats, rams, he-goats, calves, bullocks, oxen; and then whatever appears upon the animal represents some effigy of their thought . . . Hence it is evident what was signified by animals in the rites of the Jewish Church, and what by the same when mentioned in the Word; namely, affections. But when the discourse of the Angels is about evil affections, it is represented by hideous, ferocious, and useless beasts, as tigers, bears, wolves, scorpions, serpents, mice, and the like, which also have the same signification in the Word. 3786, refs.

3408. The natural good that is born with us, is in itself something animal, for it exists also with animals.

3634. It is from what is good and true that man is man, and is distinguished from brute animals.

3646. The case with brute animals as to influx and correspondence is similar to what it is with men; namely, that there is with them an influx from the Spiritual World, and an afflux from the Natural World, by means of which they are held together and live; but the operation presents itself diversely according to the forms of their souls, and thence of their bodies . . . The souls of brutes are such that they cannot do otherwise than look downwards, thus merely to earthly things, and so can be adjoined to them only, wherefore they perish together with the body. It is the ends that show the quality of the life of a man, and that of the life of a beast.

3647⁶. (The Spirits who had been common sailors and rustics) are thus brought out more and more from life like to that of animals, into human life.

3747². Man, differently from brute animals, can think about Heaven, and God, and can thus be elevated above himself; consequently can, through love, be conjoined with the Lord, and so cannot but live to eternity.

—³. It is the ultimate degree of life, which is called the outward or natural man, by which man is like animals as to concupiscences and phantasies; and it is the second degree, which is called the inward and the rational man, by which man is above animals, for by this he is able to think and to will what is good and true, and to command the natural man . . . by reflecting within himself about Heaven, yea about the Divine, which brute animals cannot do at all.

3951. By the conjunction of good and truth man becomes man and is distinguished from brute animals.

3957⁸. Love to God and love towards the neighbour are what make man to be man, distinct from brute animals.

4219. See MAN at this ref.

4364⁴. Unless the truth (that man is a spirit clothed with a body) is insinuated to good, the man does not care for Heaven, for he then thinks of himself as he does of the brute animals.

orbits of their eyes ; for their Intellectual depends upon their sight . . .

4760². (Argument against the immortality of man drawn from the seemingly similar life and action of brute animals.)

—³. Such see that brute animals act from instinct . . . and that they cannot do otherwise than look downwards . . .

4776⁴. That all things are in loves may be illustrated by many things in nature. Animals, both those that walk upon the earth and those that fly in the air and swim in the water, are all borne along according to their loves, and into their loves there flows in whatever is conducive to their life . . . hence every kind knows its own food, place of abode . . .

4906⁶. With animals devoid of reason, spiritual heat also flows in and constitutes the life, but a life according to the reception in their organic forms. Hence sciences and affections with them are connate.

4988³. Natural good from the former origin may be compared with the good that also exists with gentle animals . . .

5032^e. But they were told that they had done good no otherwise than as gentle animals devoid of reason . . .

5084⁵. The fallacy . . . that man is only a more perfect animal.

5125³. Such a man is but little removed from the condition of irrational animals, for these are carried along in the same way ; yea he is in a worse condition if he abuses his intellectual or rational faculty to confirm what is evil and false . . .

5302. Man is man from the fact that he is able to think what is true and will what is good . . . and is then able to look at and recognize what is Divine, and perceptibly to receive it ; in this is man distinguished from brute animals. Otherwise he only appears to be a man, by being able to speak and think, for if he thinks what is false and wills what is evil, he not only makes himself like a brute animal, but even worse . . . Ad.988.

5561^e. Man's life without (the affection of good and of truth) is life natural, worldly, bodily, earthly, which is 5993. Man cannot possibly live by general influx, like animals devoid of reason, because all his life is against order . . .

6323. Brute animals are actuated merely by the loves and their affections in which they have been created and afterwards born. Every animal is carried whither its affection and love draw it ; and since this is so, it is also in all the scientifics that ever belong to its love . . .

6398. The reason why a 'serpent'=ratiocination from the Sensual, is that the interior things of man are represented in Heaven by 'animals' of various kinds, and thence the same things are signified by the same ones in the Word.

7161^e. Such are like those animals that pass their time in carcasses and excrement, and there have the delight of their life.

7503. These three animals (the horse, ass, and camel) signify those things that belong to the intellectual part ; the rest, which belong to the herd and to the flock, are those that are of the voluntary part.

7750. There are for example animals of the earth, and also animals of the heaven, or birds. They have the knowledge of all things that belong to their love. Their loves are to nourish themselves, to dwell in safety, to propagate offspring, to feed their young ; wherefore they have all the requisite knowledge, for it is in these loves, and inflows into them as into its own receptacles . . . This knowledge is said to be connate, and is called instinct, but it is of the love in which they are.

8378^e. Thus does the likeness of man become that of a brute animal, with which also such, not incongruously, compare themselves.

9509⁶. This guardianship and providence of the Lord is described by the 'four animals.' . . . By the 'four animals' is signified good under various forms proceeding from the Lord, and guarding and protecting lest anything should be intromitted except the good of love to the Lord and the good of love towards the neighbour.

10042. The animals that were sacrificed enumerated. . . . All animals that are on the earth signify such things as are with man, which in general relate to the affections that are of his will and the thoughts that are of his understanding, thus to things good and true . . . The reason why animals of various kinds signify such things, derives its cause from the representatives in the other life; there appear animals of many kinds, and of innumerable species. Such there are appearances that are presented to the very life, and corresponding to the affections and thoughts that are in the Spirits and Angels (as is evident from the Word). Man is nothing but an animal as to his outward man, but is distinguished by his inward . . .

[A. 10042]⁶. (Classification of the animals used in the sacrifices into three degrees.)

10161. They said that in that (second) Earth . . . there are animals greater and smaller . . .

10236². This (outward) Sensual is common to man with the brute animals; but the outward Sensual that is not common to man with them, and still is an outward Sensual, is what man has in his memory from the world . . .

10284³. All the interior things of (such men) are turned outwards, almost like the interior things of animals.

H. 39. By this Inmost or Supreme, man is man, and is distinguished from brute animals, for these have it not. J.25.

103. Each and all things of the animal body are correspondences.

1038^o. The reason why the animals of the Earth, and the birds of the heaven are born into all this knowledge . . . is that animals are in the order of their life, nor have they been able to destroy what is in them from the Spiritual World, because they have no Rational. 296^o. 352³.

110. The animals of the earth in general correspond to good affections; the gentle and useful ones to good affections, the ungentle and useless ones to evil affections. Examps. Refs.

—². The reason why animals according to their genera and species are affections, is that they are alive, and the life of everything is from no other source than affection, and is according to it. Hence each animal has innate knowledge according to the affection of its life. Man is also like them as to his natural man, wherefore he is also compared to them in the common way of speaking . . .

135. The nature of the correspondence of both kinds of heat may be evident from animals; in that their loves, the chief of which is that of procreating their kind, break forth and operate according to the presence and afflux of heat from the sun of the world . . .

Life 86. The natural mind may be called the animal mind . . . Man is distinguished from an animal by having a spiritual mind . . .

—⁵. So long as concupiscences block up the interiors of the natural mind, so long man is an animal, differing only in that he can think and speak, even of such things as he does not see with the eyes, which he derives from the faculty of the elevation of the understanding into the light of Heaven.

W. 60^o. Is it not evident also (that the Divine is in everything) from every animal, even the smallest, in that in it there are organs of the senses, brains, hearts, lungs . . .

61. The relation to man in each and all things of the animal kingdom is manifest from this; that animals of every kind have members by which they move themselves, organs by which they feel, and viscera by which they actuate these things, which are common to them with man; they have also appetites and affections like the natural ones in man; and they have connate knowledges corresponding to their affections, in some of which there appears as it were a Spiritual . . . Hence it is that merely natural men make the living things of this kingdom like themselves, with the exception of speech.

66. There are three degrees of ascent in the Natural World, and three in the Spiritual World. All animals are recipients of life; the more perfect animals are recipients of the life of the three degrees of the Natural World, the less perfect are recipients of the life of two degrees of that World, and the imperfect are recipients of one degree of it. Man alone is a recipient of the life of the three degrees not only of the Natural, but also of the Spiritual World; hence it is that man can be elevated above nature, differently from any animal . . .

134. Yet there is such knowledge in birds and animals, for it is implanted in them to know of themselves their homes and habitations . . . a sign that there is such knowledge in the Spiritual World.

158^o. Unless all the earths were encompassed with spiritual things that proceed from the Sun of the Spiritual World, they could not be actuated, and produce forms of uses, which are plants, or forms of life, which are animals.

200². The perfection of forces is the perfection of all things that are actuated and moved by life, yet in which there is not life; such forces are . . . the interior and exterior organic substances with man, and also with animals of every kind.

223. There is not the least thing in which there are not degrees of both kinds; there is not the least in any animal . . .

270. For man is born an animal, but becomes a man.

331. Created uses for the nourishment of the body . . . are all things of the animal kingdom that are eaten; as oxen, cows, stags, sheep, kids, goats, lambs, and the milk from these, also birds and fishes of many kinds. E. 388²³.

338. (Animals that are evil uses enumerated.) 339. 341.

340. It is the Spiritual that derives its origin from the Sun where the Lord is, and proceeds to the ultimates of nature, that produces the forms of plants and animals . . . and fills them up with matters from the Earth, in order that these forms may be fixed and constant . . . Hence it may be seen that plants and animals have existed from no other source than through that World from the Lord, and that through it they perpetually exist. 343. 344, Examp.

346. There are two forms into which operation is effected by means of influx, the vegetable form and the animal form. Gen.art. E. 1208², Gen.art.

—². All animals, greater and smaller, derive their origin from the Spiritual in the ultimate degree, which is called natural, only man from all the degrees . . .

— Since every discrete degree decreases from its Perfect to its Imperfect as light does to shade, by continuity, so also do animals; wherefore there are perfect, less perfect, and imperfect ones. The perfect animals are elephants, camels, horses, mules, oxen, sheep, goats, and the others that belong to the herd and the flock. The less perfect are birds. And the imperfect are fishes, shell-fish; which being the lowest of that degree, are as it were in the shade, while the others are in the light. Yet since they live merely from the ultimate spiritual degree, which is called natural, they are not able to look anywhere else than to the earth, and to food there, and to their mates for the sake of propagation. The soul of all of them is natural affection, and appetite. . . . Plants derive from the Spiritual which is their source that they are uses, and animals from the Spiritual which is their source that they are affections and appetites.

347°. Hence it is evident that although imperfect and noxious animals and plants originate by immediate influx from Hell, yet they are afterwards propagated mediately by means of seeds, eggs, or grafts.

351°. Those who confirm themselves in favour of the Divine, attend to the wonderful things that are conspicuous in the productions of animals. Des. M.416. T.12.

P. 161. The life of animals . . . is the life of affection merely natural with its concomitant knowledge; and is a mediate life corresponding to the life of those who are in the Spiritual World.

296°. Every concupiscence appears in Hell, when represented, as a noxious animal; as either a dragon, a basilisk, a viper, an owl, a screech-owl, and so on. . . In like manner appear the concupiscences of evil with an evil man when he is looked at by the Angels . . .

317°. Why should not man in some measure see from influx the interior things of his own life, which are spiritual and moral, when there is no animal that does not from influx know its own necessities, which are natural?

R. 224°. Every man whose soul desires it can see the truths of the Word in light; there is no animal that does not know the food of its life when it sees it, and man is a rational and spiritual animal; he sees the food of his life, not so much that of the body as that of the soul, which is the truth of faith, if he hungers for it, and begs it of the Lord.

239. 'In the midst of the throne and round about the throne four animals'=the Word of the Lord from first principles in ultimates, and its guards. . . These animals were the same as the Cherubs in Ezekiel; for there in the first chapter they are called 'animals,' but in the tenth, 'Cherubs.' In the Hebrew language they are there called 'Chajoth,' which word does indeed signify animals, but is derived from Chaja, which is life, whence the wife of Adam was called 'Chaja' (Eve). Animal in the singular is also called 'Chaja' in Ezekiel, wherefore the animals there may be called Living Creatures. It is no wonder that the Word is described by animals, when the Lord Himself is called a 'Lion,' and frequently a 'Lamb,' and they who are in charity from the Lord are called 'sheep.' 268. 314. (=the Lord's guard and providence. E.277. 313.)

275. The higher Heavens are signified by the 'four animals and by the four-and-twenty elders;' for by the Cherubs, which are the 'four animals in the midst of the throne' are signified the Lord as to the Word, and by the Cherubs, or 'four animals around the throne' are signified Heaven as to the Word . . . for the Heavens are Heavens from the reception of Divine Truth through the Word from the Lord. E.322.

369. By the 'animals' and the 'elders' are understood the Angels of the higher Heavens, and by the 'Angels' are understood the Angels of the lower Heavens, thus all in the universal Heaven. 617. 8o8.

417. I knew that the animals seen in the Spiritual World are not animals, but correspondences of affections and thence of thoughts from those who are there . . . 430. T.506.

655°. (Animals caused to appear there by phantasies.)

672. The sense of the letter of the Word is here signified by 'one of the four animals.'

M. 96. Man alone can become spiritual, for he can elevate his understanding above his natural loves . . . this no animal can do, for its loves are entirely united with its connate knowledge, wherefore this knowledge cannot be elevated into intelligence, and still less into wisdom; whence an animal is carried along by the love implanted in its knowledge as a blind man is led through the streets by a dog.

183°. All fructification, propagation, and proliferation originate from the influx of love, wisdom, and use from the Lord; from immediate influx into the souls of men, from mediate influx into the souls of animals, and from influx still more mediate into the inmost parts of plants.

246. Such marriages of dissimilitudes are not unlike conjunctions of animals of different species, as . . .

T. 34°. If he does not acknowledge God . . . he puts off the image of God and becomes like some animal, except that he enjoys the faculty of understanding and thence of speaking . . .

66. Animals of every kind appear there, and they are likenesses of the affections of love and thence of the thoughts of the Angels. Ex.

78. I will now show thee how animals and plants of every kind were produced by God. Ex.

—°. (Evil animals were not created by God, but originated together with Hell . . .) E.1201°.

296°. The sensual and corporeal man, being merely natural, regarded in himself is altogether animal, nor does he differ from a brute animal except in being able to speak and reason . . .

415. This (spiritual) life distinguishes man from life merely animal.

417. When a man is born he is more a brute than any animal . . .

566. The Natural of man regarded in itself is merely animal . . . 673.

Ad. 916. Will is given to man, but not to brute animals. Animals are indeed carried along to ends, but by a certain natural impetus, nor do they previously view them, nor choose them. A certain mind is also given to them, which is called the animus, from which they are called animals; and a similar one is also given to man which we have called the natural mind, in order that it may serve his intellectual mind, precisely as in general animals themselves are subject to the power of men, in order that they may be of service to them. This is the origin of the fact that the acts of animals appear like those of man, and hence it is that they are endowed as if with understanding and will.

[Ad.] 918. The essential parts of brute animals are three; namely, a soul, which is the principal essence of them; a natural mind, or animus; and outward sensation, which is fivefold. But they have no intellectual mind endowed with will, but instead of it a soul that rules their natural mind, and this the body.

919. Hence it is evident that men differ from brutes in that to man there is given a soul which is purely spiritual, and supercelestial, but to brute animals, a soul which is lower than Heaven, and participates of the Spiritual and the Natural. Hence is the human pre-eminence above animals . . . which are carried along to natural ends alone, and that by a certain impetus, called instinct. 988.

921. Brute animals excel man in this, for they are all born into their natural impetuses, but variously according to their kinds . . .

D. 192. Evil Spirits . . . can, when permitted, by mere phantasy represent their companions into various forms of animals, as into serpents of various kinds; and when thus represented, their companions cannot deliver themselves from the phantasy until the permission is taken away . . .

E. 282^s. 'Animals that walk upon the earth'=affections of good from which is wisdom.

322^o. 'The four animals'=specifically, the Third or Inmost Heaven. 348. 462.

388². When 'wild beast' is used in a good sense it should be rendered animal, which means living soul. . . . Hence the translators have called the Cherubs 'animals.' Ill.

514¹. 'Animals great and small'=knowledges of good and truth of every kind, higher and lower, and in general and particular.

582². Animals in various forms appear in the Spiritual World daily . . . and he who knows correspondences knows what each of them signifies; for all the affections that flow from Angelic minds are effigied before their eyes by every kind of animal upon the earth, in the air, and in the sea . . .

1196. On the life of animals. Gen.art.

1197². It is generally known that animals of every kind, great and small; both those that walk and creep upon the earth, and those that fly in the air and swim in the waters; know from what is innate and implanted, called instinct and nature, how to propagate their species, etc. The knowledge of such things, regarded in itself is spiritual, and so is the affection that is the source of it; the covering of them is from nature, and also production thereby. Moreover an animal is like a man as to the organs, members, and viscera of the body, and as to their uses . . . The likeness is such that man as to these things is an animal. All these things with man have correspondence with the Societies of Heaven; consequently so have the same things with animals.

1199². No one can know the quality of the life of beasts of the earth, birds of the heaven, and fishes of the sea, unless he knows what their soul is, and the quality of it. That every animal has a soul is known, for they live, and life is a soul, wherefore also they are called in the Word 'living souls.' That soul in its ultimate form, which is corporeal, such as appears before the sight, is animal, cannot be better known than from the Spiritual World. Every kind of beast, bird, and fish is as plainly seen in that World as in the Natural World, and in so similar a form that they cannot be distinguished from those in our World; but the difference is that in the Spiritual World they exist apparently from the affections of Angels and Spirits, so that they are appearances of affections; wherefore also they vanish as soon as the Angel or Spirit goes away, or his affection ceases. Hence it is evident that their soul is just that. Consequently there are as many genera and species of animals as there are genera and species of affections. The affections that are represented there by animals are not interior spiritual affections, but exterior spiritual ones that are called natural. There is not a hair or thread of wool on any beast, nor a fibre of a quill or feather on any bird, nor a speck of a scale or tuft on any fish, that is not from the life of their soul, thus that is not from what is spiritual clothed with what is natural.

1200². Since the animals there are appearances of affections, therefore one genus of animal with its species appears in one Society, and another in another, and all the genera of animals with their species in the whole together. In the Societies of Heaven there appear gentle and clean animals, in the Societies of Hell ungentle and unclean beasts, and in the World of Spirits beasts of an intermediate kind. Enum.

—4. Since there is such a likeness of the animals that appear in that World with the animals in this World that no difference can be discerned, and since the former derive their existence from the affections of the Angels of Heaven and the cupidities of the Spirits of Hell, it follows that natural affections and cupidities are their souls, and that these being clothed with a body are in effigy animals.

1208². The forms of the animal kingdom, which in one word are called animals, are all according to the flux of spiritual substances and forces; which flux, from the endeavour that is in them, is into the human form . . . This animal form derives the endeavour to such things from the First . . .

1209². Wherefore the productions, which are chiefly animals and plants, are continuations of creation.

—3. The forces that are in nature from its origin, which is the sun of the world, are not living, but dead forces, that are no other than as the forces of heat in man and animal . . .

1210². From the Spiritual through these forces exist plants, and also animals; both those that appear in Heaven and those that appear in the world. Gen.art.

1212². Both animals and plants have the same origin and thence soul, with a mere difference of the forms into which there is influx. Gen.art.

—3. Angels and Spirits are known from the appearances of animals and in like manner from the appearances of plants (about them); the agreement with their affections is plenary; being so complete that an animal can be changed into a concordant plant, and a plant into a concordant animal.

—4. It has been given me clearly to know the correspondence, not only of animals, but also of plants, with the Societies of Heaven, and with the Societies of Hell; thus with their affections, for Societies and affections in the Spiritual World make one.

D. Love x³. There are two universals in the animal kingdom; in one are the beasts of earth and in the other are the birds of heaven . . . Natural affections are the souls of animals.

xxi. The Divine Love, which is Life itself, by means of heat produces the spiritual animal forms, with each and everything that are in them. Gen.art. There are in general two forms that the Lord . . . produced from His Sun in the ultimates and intimates of the world, the animal form and the plant form. By animal forms are meant animals of every kind, also men and Angels. . . The Divine Love . . . bears nothing else in its bosom than to create and form for itself images and likenesses, which are men, and from men, Angels; and also on affections of every kind to induce a corresponding body, which are animals. All these forms, both perfect and imperfect, are forms of love, and they are alike as to life in externals . . . but are unlike as to life in internals . . .

—e. Hence it is that the animals of earth and the birds of heaven, every year in spring and summer, enter upon the duties of their procreation . . .

D. Wis. viii². Seed also is the first of an animal . . . it afterwards grows and becomes a similar animal . . . thus does everything in the animal kingdom also arise from its first to its last, and from its last rises again to the first from which it came. The same with man, with this difference, that the first of an animal and a plant is natural, and therefore when it rises again it falls back into nature . . .

4322. Influx through Heaven from the Lord produces all things that are in the three Kingdoms of the Earth, especially in the Animal Kingdom.

8603⁴. The forms in the Animal Kingdom are created to receive life; thence are forms recipient of life in successive order; so also are the lives which thence result . . .

S. 66. This (evolution of the spiritual and celestial senses of the Word from the natural sense) shall be illustrated by comparisons from the three Kingdoms of nature, which are called Animal, Vegetable, and Mineral . . .

H. 104. All things of the Earth are distinguished into three kinds, called Kingdoms; namely, the Animal Kingdom, the Vegetable Kingdom, and the Mineral Kingdom; those in the Animal Kingdom are correspondences in the first degree, because they are alive. . . . Correspondences in the Animal Kingdom are animated things of various kinds, both those that walk and creep on the earth, and those that fly in the air.

108. That all things in the world that are from the Divine, exist, and are clothed with such things in nature as enable them to be there, and perform a use, and thus correspond, is manifestly evident from every single thing in both the Animal Kingdom and the Vegetable. Examps.

W. 52. The correspondence of man's affections and thence of his thoughts is with all things of the Animal Kingdom, that of his will and thence of his understanding is with all things of the Vegetable Kingdom, and that of his ultimate life is with all things of the Mineral Kingdom. Ex.

61. The relation to man of each and all things of the Animal Kingdom. Des.

65. Ultimates are each and all things of the Mineral Kingdom . . . Mediates are each and all things of the Vegetable Kingdom . . . Primitives are each and all things of the Animal Kingdom. (The objects and the uses of the objects of each Kingdom described.) The lowest things of the Animal Kingdom are called worms and insects, the middle things birds and beasts, and the highest things men; for in each Kingdom there are lowest, middle, and highest things; the lowest for the use of the middle ones, and the middle ones for the use of the highest . . .

[W.] 313. Forms of uses are of three kinds . . . of the Mineral Kingdom, of the Vegetable Kingdom, and of the Animal Kingdom.

316. In the forms of uses of the Animal Kingdom there is a similar image of creation . . . Their progression is like that of the forms of uses of the Vegetable Kingdom; seeds are their beginnings, the uterus or egg is like the earth, the state before birth is like that of a seed in the earth while it is putting forth a root, the state after birth even to proliferation is like the growing of a tree even to the state of its fructification . . . Thus as there is a likeness of creation in the forms of plants, so there is also in the forms of animals; to wit, a progression from primates to ultimates and from ultimates to primates.

346. That there are only two universal forms produced from the Earth is known from the two Kingdoms of nature, called the Animal Kingdom and the Vegetable Kingdom; and because all the subjects of one Kingdom have many things in common, as, for instance, in the subjects of the Animal Kingdom there are organs of sense and organs of motion, also members and viscera that are actuated by brains, hearts, and lungs. . . Both the Animal Kingdom and the Vegetable, as to productions in their own forms, derive their origin from spiritual influx and operation from the Sun of Heaven, where the Lord is, and not from the influx and operation of nature from its sun, except their fixation.

Animal Spirit. Spiritus animalis.

A. 4050². This lymph is of a twofold kind, namely, that which is mixed with the animal spirits, which is among the useful lymphs . . .

4227³. These Spirits correspond to the vitiations of the purer blood with man, which is called the animal spirit . . .

5180. These are they to whom the subtle chyle corresponds which is drawn up towards the brain, and is there commingled with new animal spirit, in order to be committed to the heart.

8530. That truths are vessels recipient of good . . . is like a blood-vessel and a fibre in relation to the inclosed blood and animal spirit.

9154². Good with man is what receives all truths into itself . . . the case is as with a fibre or a vessel in a living animal; in so far as a fibre has spirit in it . . . it lives; in like manner in so far as a blood-vessel has fibres around it in which there is spirit. The case is similar with truth and good; truth without good is like a fibre without spirit. . . Since good has quality from truths, it also has its form from them . . . the case is similar to that of the spirit and the blood in a living animal; the spirit takes its determinations, thus its form, through the fibres . . . in like manner the blood through the vessels.

S. 66. From the food, when made into chyle, the vessels draw and call forth their blood; the nervous

914. Thus these spirits, being loosed from the globules of the blood, and conjoined in the cortical beginnings with new spiritual essences, are conveyed through their fibres into the ventricles, and so through the infundibulum into the blood, that they may vivify the dry and lifeless blood in the ends of the sinuses, and then be borne to meet the chyle that is newly from the body, and with which they are conjoined in the heart, and thus they vivify the mass of blood in the heart.

962. The succenturiate kidneys take away the impurities of the spirits of the blood . . .

1968. Unless the globules of the blood were such, the spirits and the life of the spirits in them would not be able to be in them.

3419. The Lord alone, being life, vivifies and actuates them, thus is also represented by the animal spirits or bloods in the ultimate nature of the body.

3459. On the animal spirits and the fibres. . . Very few of the learned of the world suppose that any animal spirit exists, but they suppose that the fibres are empty, like dry threads, when yet it may be evident to everyone that no such fibre could operate without its fluid within, as a patient could not without an agent. It was perceived that this was impossible, for the fibres would then be destitute of all vital operation, like a vessel without blood. . . So long as they dispute whether there exists an animal spirit in the fibres, as they may still do for a thousand years, they can never come to the courtyard of knowledges . . .

5575. The Celestials in general correspond to the heart and pulse of the Grand Man . . . but the Spirituals, to the lungs, also to the various fibres, and to the blood and animal spirits.

H. 110. The animate things of the earth in general correspond to good affections . . .

N. 56. Man has for an end that which he loves above all things . . . it is in his will like the hidden current of a river which draws and carries away, even when he is doing something else, for this is what animates.

W. 383³. The word spirit derives its origin from animation . . .

T. 371⁴. The animations of the lungs . . .

D. Wis. xii. 5. Souls of life, and living souls, and vegetative souls are animated through uses and according to them by life that is from the Lord. Gen.art.

— By animation is meant not only that they live, but also that they are and exist. The reason why they are continually animated; that is, live, are, and exist from the Lord, is that when once creation has been perfected, it is continued through influx from the Sun of Heaven.

Animus. See MIND—animus.

Ankle. Talus.

P. 212. Take dice, or cards, and play . . .

M. 510³. Such have no loins, but their ankles commence from the region of the bottom of the belly.

T. 405. In proportion as the love of self increases, the love of Heaven descends through the ankles to the soles.

E. 629⁸. By 'waters to the ankles' is signified intelligence such as is in the sensual and natural man; for 'the ankles'=the Sensual and Natural.

Annihilate. Annihilare.

Annihilation. Annihilatio.

A. 3994. No one can ever be in true humiliation unless he is in this acknowledgment and faith from the heart, for he is then in annihilation of self, yea in aversion to self, and thus in absence from self; thus he is then in a state of receiving the Divine of the Lord.

4741. 'They stripped Joseph of his coat'=they dispersed and annihilated the appearances of truth . . . To disperse and annihilate the appearances of truth takes place after truth itself has been rejected; for truth shines forth in minds of itself, and however it is extinguished, still appears, especially with those who are in good. This is also clearly seen by those who have annihilated truth with themselves; wherefore they also endeavour to disperse and annihilate these appearances. Examp.

7299. The Angels, from the Divine power of the Lord, annihilate the magical practices of the magicians in the other life.

8282. 'With Thy right hand Jehovah Thou breakest in pieces the enemy'=the effect of omnipotence upon evils and falsities thence, whose power is annihilated. . . 'To break in pieces'=to annihilate.

9349. He who does not know how the case is, may suppose that the Word as to its literal sense is thus annihilated, because it is not attended to in Heaven. But it is to be known that the literal sense of the Word is by no means thus annihilated, but rather confirmed. Ex.

9965. 'Lest they bear their iniquity and die'=the annihilation of all worship. . . 'Strange fire'=love from Hell; the annihilation of worship is signified by offering incense from this fire.

—². Through this they annihilated representative worship.

10481. 'For annihilation to those who rise up against them' (Ex.xxxii.25)=without any power of resisting evils that are from Hell. 'Annihilation'=without any power of resisting evils and falsities, for in the Spiritual World this is to have no power.

W. 224. To separate love and wisdom . . . from substance in form is to annihilate them . . .

T. 134³. Is it not contrary to His Divine Essence to annihilate the Call that has been made to each and all of the human race?

439. To place merit in works . . . is injurious, for evils lie hidden in it, as . . . the annihilation of the Divine mercy and grace.

Announce. Annuntiare.

Annunciation. Annuntiatio.

A. 220. 'A voice crying'=annunciation of the Lord's Advent; in general it=every annunciation of His Advent; as with the regenerate, to whom there is a dictate.

1731. The things contained in this verse announce and preach the conjunction of the Lord's Human Essence with His Divine Essence.

6971. 'If they will not hear the voice of the first sign'=if they will not obey what is announced from the Word. . . 'Voice'=what is announced from the Word.

9926. 'Voice'=Divine Truth, for 'voice' is the announcement of it; and since it is the announcement, it is with those who are in the Heavens and in the earth. . . Such an announcement was represented by the voice from the little bells of gold when Aaron entered into the holy place.

E. 324⁹. 'To show forth the praises of Jehovah' = to evangelize concerning the Lord and the worship of Him.

406⁵. 'To declare praise' = worship from external things, for external things declare.

Anoint. Ungere.

Anointing. Uctio.

Ointment. Unguentum.

See OIL.

A. 886. The oil of the olive was employed for the anointings and lamps because it represented everything celestial . . .

1361². Every king could represent the Lord . . . the anointing itself, whence they were called 'the anointed of Jehovah,' involves this.

2833¹⁰. The kings being anointed with oil out of a horn represented truth from good.

2921⁰. 'Christ' stands for Messiah, Anointed, King; 'Lord' for Jehovah; the former as to truth, the latter as to good. 3007. 3009, Ill.

3009. That kings were anointed, and were thence called 'the anointed' was because the oil with which they were anointed = good, and the truth that a king signified must be from good . . .

4090. 'Where thou anointedst the pillar' = where is the good of truth . . . 'To anoint' or pour oil on the head of a pillar = to make truth good.

4580². The pillars that were used in worship were anointed and then were holy . . .

5620. 'Resin' = truth from good, because it ranks among ointments = unguentosa . . .

9144¹⁰. 'King' = truth from the Divine; in like manner 'the Anointed,' which in the Hebrew idiom is Messiah, and in the Greek, Christ.

9272⁵. 'To tread the olive but not to anoint himself' = to instruct concerning the good of life, but still not to live in it.

9277². 'Not to be anointed with oil' = not to be in the good of celestial love.

9474. 'Spices for the oil of anointing' = inward truths which are of inaugurating good . . . 'Anointing' = inauguration to represent. Ill.

— . Anointing was done by oil because oil = celestial good . . . which is the very Essential itself in each and all things of Heaven and eternal life.

—³. Why the oil of anointing and also the incense were made sweet-scented.

—^e. The spice of the oil of anointing = what is grateful of inward perception, but that of the incense, what is grateful of outward perception. The spice of the oil of anointing was devoid of smoke . . .

9780⁸. Since oil = the good of charity, therefore the sick also were anointed with oil and were healed. Ill.

9954. 'Thou shalt anoint them (Aaron and his sons)'

— . Anointing has remained in use from ancient times until now, for kings are anointed, and anointing is still held to be holy. With the ancients, when all outward worship was effected through representatives . . . anointing was instituted because the oil with which the anointing was performed = the good of love, for they knew that the good of love is the very Essential itself . . . therefore the things that were anointed were said to be holy, and were also held to be holy things, and served the Church to represent Divine and heavenly things, and in the highest sense the Lord Himself, Who is good itself; thus to represent the good of love that is from Him, and also the truth of faith so far as it lives from the good of love. Hence it is that they anointed stones set up for pillars, arms, afterwards the altar and all its vessels, the Tent of the Assembly and all things in it, those who were to fill the office of the priesthood and their garments, prophets, and at last kings, who thence were called 'Jehovah's anointed.' It was also received in common use to anoint themselves and others in order to testify gladness and goodwill. (All these points Ill. and Ex. seriatim.) R. 779. E. 375⁹ et seq. Fully Ill. and Ex.

—¹¹. 'Jehovah's anointed' = the Lord as to the Divine Human. Ex.

9994. 'Wafers of what is unleavened anointed with oil' = what is celestial in the outward man . . . The wafers are said to be anointed with oil, but the cakes mixed with oil, because wafers are in the third order, but cakes in the second. Ex.

10010. 'Thou shalt take the oil of anointing' = a representative of the Divine Good in the Lord. . . 'Anointing' = inauguration to represent that good.

10011. 'And thou shalt pour it upon his head and anoint him' = a representative of Divine Good in the Lord as to the whole Human. . . 'To anoint' = a representative of that thing.

—². The oil with which the priest was anointed flowed down from the crown of the head upon the body. Ill.

— . Hence to anoint the head is to anoint the whole body.

10019. There were two things by means of which inauguration into the priesthood were effected, anointing and filling of the hand. By anointing was effected inauguration to represent the Lord as to Divine Good, for the oil by which the anointing was effected = the good of love.

10075². The breast and the flank are called the 'anointing' for the sake of the representation of spiritual and celestial good. . . 'Anointing' = a representation of the Lord as to Divine Good.

10076⁷. The first state of the Lord's glorification is called 'anointing,' and the second state is called the 'filling of the hand.'

10100. 'To the anointing in them (the garments)' = to represent the Lord as to Divine Good. 'Anointing' = inauguration to represent the Lord as to Divine Good.

10118. The 'anointing' was a representative of the glorification of His Human, and the 'filling of the hand' was a representative of His influx thence into the Heavens and into the Church. 'Anointing' represented the Divine Good of the Lord in His Divine Human, consequently glorification, which is the union of the Divine Human with the Divine Itself that is called 'the Father.'

10125. 'Thou shalt anoint it (the altar)'=inauguration to represent the Divine Good of Love from the Lord in Heaven and the Church. 'Anointing'=inauguration to represent the Lord as to the Divine Good of Divine Love from His Divine Human; here, from the Lord in Heaven and the Church . . . for whatever represents the Lord also represents Him with the men of the Church, and with the Angels of Heaven.

—². All things were anointed that were to represent the Lord and the Divine things that are from the Lord; as the altar, the Tent of the Assembly, the tables in it, the candlestick, the ark, Aaron himself, his sons, and their garments; and when anointed they were called holy, not that the oil induced any holiness upon them, but because they thus represented Divine things from the Lord, which alone are holy.

—^e. These things are said that it may be known that the Lord alone as to His Human was the Anointed of Jehovah, not indeed anointed with oil, but with the Divine Good itself of the Divine Love, which is signified by oil, and was represented by anointing.

10182¹. That the kings were anointed with oil out of a horn represented truth from good in its power.

10258³. 'God hath anointed thee, thy God, with the oil of gladness' (Ps. xlv. 7) . . . 'Anointing' was nothing but a representative of the Divine Good in the Lord's Divine Human.

10264. 'Ointment of ointment'=in each and all things of His Human. 'Ointment,' when said of the oil of anointing, by which is signified a representative of the Divine Good of the Lord's Divine Human, is the Divine in each and all things of His Human. That this is signified by 'ointment of ointment,' is because all the spices mentioned above . . . are understood by 'ointment of ointment.' In the Original Tongue also spice in general is signified by that word, but the interpreters say 'ointment from anointing.'

10265. 'The work of the ointment maker—unguentarii'=from the influx and operation of His Divine that was in the Lord from conception. The 'ointment maker,' or spicer=him who operates that, wherefore when said of the Lord it=the Divine Itself.

10268. 'Thou shalt anoint therewith the Tent of the Assembly'=to represent the Divine of the Lord in the Heavens. 'To anoint with the oil of holiness'=to induce a representation of the Divine Good of the Lord's Divine Love as to the Divine Human. For 'to anoint'=to induce a representation; for the things that were anointed were called holy, not from the oil, but from the representation of the Divine that is signified by the oil . . .

10269. 'And the ark of the Testimony' . . . 'To anoint the ark of the Testimony'=to induce a representation of the Divine in the celestial good that is of the Inmost Heaven. 'To anoint'=to induce a representation of the Divine of the Lord.

—². Anointing represented the Lord as to the Divine Human, for the Lord as to His Divine Human was alone the 'Anointed of Jehovah;' for in Him was the Divine of the Father from conception, and thence in His Human . . .

10276². Hence it is manifest that all these things that were anointed were called 'holy of holies' from the influx and presence of the Lord's Divine Human.

10286. 'The man who shall make an ointment like it'=the imitation of Divine things from art. 'Ointment'=the Divine Truths that are of the Lord alone, and from the Lord alone.

10299. 'The ointment the work of the Ointment maker'=from the influx and operation of the Lord's Divine in each and all things. 'Ointment' or spice=truths in each and all things of worship, and 'the work of the Ointment maker,' or spicer=the influx and operation of His Divine.

L. 42. That the Lord is called 'King' and 'Anointed' is because He was the Messiah or Christ, and the Messiah or Christ signifies King and Anointed.

R. 779². That anointing with the oil of holiness was commanded, was because oil=the good of love, and represented the Lord, Who as to His Human is Himself and alone Jehovah's Anointed. He was anointed not with oil but with the Divine Good Itself of the Divine Love; wherefore He is also named 'Messiah' in the Old Testament and 'Christ' in the New Testament. Hence it is that the priests, kings, and all things of the Church were anointed, and when anointed were called holy; not that they were holy in themselves, but because through that they represented the Lord as to the Divine Human.

—³. It was moreover received into use to anoint themselves and others, in order to testify gladness and goodwill; but with common or some noble oil, and not with the oil of holiness. III.

E. 31⁵. The Lord as to His Divine Human was alone 'Jehovah's Anointed.' —⁸. 375⁸, Ex. 684³.

205⁵. By 'David,' 'Anointed,' and 'King' in various places in the Psalms is meant the Lord. III. 272².

316⁹. 'Mine Anointed'=the Lord as to Divine Truth. 419⁷, Ex.

—²². From these things it may be known why it was such sacrilege to injure 'Jehovah's Anointed,' III.

320²⁴. 'To anoint with oil' (Ezek. xvi. 9)=to endow with the good of love.

427⁸. (Why kings formerly were and now are anointed on the forehead and hand at their coronation.)

659¹⁹. What the Lord said concerning the woman who poured the balsamic ointment on His head, that 'she had done it for His burial,' involves this (glorification of the Lord's Human).

684². The Lord is signified by 'Jehovah's Anointed,' for the Divine Itself, called 'the Father' and 'Jehovah,' and which was in its essence the Divine Good of the Divine Love, anointed the Divine Human . . . 'Anointing'=that the Lord's Divine Human proceeds from His Divine Itself, thus Divine Truth from His Divine Good.

—⁸. That in Him alone there was the Divine Good of the Divine Love from which the Divine Truth proceeds, was represented by anointing. Ex.

—¹⁰. 'Jehovah's Anointed'=the Lord as to the Divine Human. Ill.

—¹⁶. 'To anoint with the oil of gladness'=to unite Himself through victories in temptations.

—²¹. 'To be anointed'=to be united to the Divine Truth that was of the Lord's Human in the world.

—²⁹. David as a 'servant'=the Lord's Human as to Divine Truth; and as the 'anointed'=this united to Divine Good.

—³⁰. Hence the Lord is called 'the Anointed,' which is Messiah, or Christ, from Divine Good united to Divine Truth in His Human; for the Lord's Human from that union is understood by 'Jehovah's Anointed.' —³³.

1151. 'Ointment'=the good of celestial love. Ointment defined.

9824⁵. The breastplate was tied to the ephod, and answers were given through the Urim and Thummim there, because that garment (the ephod) was a representative of the ultimate in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, and Divine answers are presented in ultimates, for they pass through all the interior things in succession, and are dictated there, because they cease there. 10548³.

9905. The stones in the breastplate glittered with light from Heaven with variety according to the answers that were being given through them. . . Hence it is evident that by means of the glittering of various colours from that light are presented the Divine Truths that are answers in the Heavens. But (with regard to the Urim and Thummim) it is to be known that when the glittering appeared, the answer to the inquiry was given orally . . .

—⁴. There is also a similar glittering that is presented inwardly with those who are in truths from good, that dictates and as it were gives an answer, when the truth is inquired about from affection of the heart, and is loved as being good.

10602. 'To say,' when Jehovah is speaking to Moses, =an answer; here, a conclusion.

R. 376. 'One of the elders answered, saying unto me . . .'=answer and information. The reason why John inquired . . . is that it is a general principle in all Divine worship for man first to will, desire, and pray;

See NEPHILIM.

A. 259². How the serpent destroyed these lowest things with the antediluvians . . . will be told in what follows.

274^o. The antediluvian time is here treated of, and is understood by 'from afar,' and by 'the days of antiquity.'

303^o. This is the reason why the antediluvians were east out of the garden of Eden, and vastated until they could acknowledge nothing that is true.

310. See MOST ANCIENT CHURCH at this ref.

—². The state of (the Postdiluvians) is altogether different from that of the antediluvians. Ex.

312. The state of these antediluvians is fully described in this verse . . .

554. The state of the antediluvians is treated of (in Gen. vi.).

560. As to what concerns the men of the antediluvian Church; in process of time they conceived direful persuasions, and immersed the goods and truths of faith in filthy cupidities, to such a degree that there were hardly any remains in them; and then they were as it were suffocated of their own accord. 563. 570. 579. 585. 594. 607^e. D.3583.

562. That the antediluvians came at last to have almost no remains, was because they were of such a genius as to imbue direful and abominable persuasions about all things whatever that came up and fell into their thought, so that they would not by any means recede from them . . . supposing themselves to be as gods, and that whatever they thought was divine. Such a kind of persuasion never existed with any other nation either before or since, for it is deadly or suffocative; wherefore in the other life they can never be where other

Spirits are. When they are present, they take away all faculty of thinking, by the influx of their most determined persuasions. 1034^e.

623. 'Violence' is mentioned when violence is done to holy things by prophaning them, as these antediluvians did, who immersed the doctrinal things of faith in all kinds of cupidities.

635. That at the end of the days of the antediluvian Church all understanding of truth and will of good perished, is signified by these words . . . With the antediluvians who were imbued with direful persuasions and filthy cupidities they so perished that not a vestige of them appeared.

660. When the way for remains is closed up . . . the man is wholly possessed by evil Spirits . . . Hence was the death of the antediluvians, which is described by 'the flood.'

661². By filthy cupidities and direful persuasions of falsity they blocked up the way of remains, so that they could not operate; such were the antediluvians who destroyed themselves, and who are understood by 'all flesh in which is the breath of lives, under the heavens.'

731^e. 'To destroy every substance that I have made . . . ' = those who perished . . . Good and truth . . . were extinguished by tares with the antediluvians who perished.

793. From here to the end of this chapter the subject is concerning the antediluvians who perished.

801. The antediluvians . . . are here described as to persuasions; in the following verse as to cupidities; that is, as to the state of their intellectual things, and afterwards as to that of their voluntary things . . .

803. The persuasions of the antediluvians are here fully described; namely, that there were in them affections of falsity, cupidities, pleasures, corporeal and earthly.

808. The cupidities of the antediluvians were those of self-love . . .

1051. With the antediluvians who perished not only was the Voluntary destroyed and made infernal, but the Intellectual also, so that they could not be regenerated . . .

1120. At length in the last posterity of that Church, which was just before the Flood, hardly anything of inward breathing remained, and when it was at last annihilated in the breast, they were suffocated of their own accord.

1124. There were with me some of the posterity that lived before the Flood, not of those who perished, but who were somewhat better than they. Des.

— (Antediluvian Spirits seen, who keep the thoughts bound; but not the Nephilim who perished.) D.4183.

1266. The antediluvians who perished are in a Hell under the heel of the left foot. They are covered over with a certain misty rock that breaks forth from their direful phantasies and persuasions; by which they are separated from the other Hells, and kept at a distance from the World of Spirits. They make a constant effort to rise up, but cannot advance beyond the endeavour. If they came into the World of Spirits, by their direful phantasies and the breathing and venom of their persuasions, they would take away the faculty of thinking from all the Spirits they met, except the good ones; and unless the Lord, by His coming in the flesh, had delivered the World of Spirits from that wicked crew, the human race would have perished; for there could not have been any Spirits with man. 1512. D.4217.

[A.] 1267. Those of (the antediluvians) who persist in their attempts to emerge are cruelly treated by their companions, for they entertain deadly hatred against all, even against their companions; their highest delight consists in holding each other in subjection, and as it were in murdering each other. Those who persist the most strenuously in emerging are let down still deeper under that misty rock; for it is their insane ardour to destroy all that induces their efforts to emerge. (D.4217.) They wrap all they meet in a piece of cloth, in order to take them captive; and cast them into a certain sea, as it appears to them, or otherwise entreat them savagely. 1270. D.3365.

1268. I was led, guarded, towards that misty rock . . . and conversed with them concerning their persuasions . . . They said they had persuaded themselves that there is no God, but that men are gods; thus that they were gods; and that they had confirmed themselves in this by their dreams. D.3580, 1,2. 4174.

suasion which acts, so that whatever they think is persuasive . . .) 3583.

3912. Antediluvians who, on being vastated, can serve as subjects, retaining only so much life as there is in the bony parts of the human body. These were in the head; for those who are from the antediluvians are vastated, and become as skeletons, or as lifeless appendages, and life is afterwards breathed into them. Being scarcely aware of their own existence, or sensible, or conscious, they can thus serve for bones, into whom other Spirits can flow.

A. 261. 'In multiplying I will multiply thy sorrow' =combat, and from combat anxiety.

270. When the evil Spirits begin to dominate, they then rule the outward man, and Angels the inward, of which but little remains, hardly enough for the Angels to be able to take anything thence with which to defend him; hence are misery and anxiety. The reason why dead men rarely feel such misery and anxiety is that they are no longer men . . .

318. (A certain Spirit finding himself in the other world, and thus deprived of all his earthly possessions, was affected with anxiety.)

537^e. Hence it is evident with what . . . anxiety they are tormented who are admitted but a little way into (heavenly joy, when unprepared to receive it).

847². Natural temptations are . . . not temptations, but merely anxieties arising from an assault upon their natural loves, and being excited by misfortunes, illness, etc.

949^e. Those who have acted fraudulently at last come to have faces worse than those of the dead, livid like those of corpses, with horrible wrinkles, from passing their time in the torment of anxiety.

951. Those who have supposed themselves to be saints . . . are held in the most intense desire to ascend into Heaven . . . this desire is increased, and is turned more and more into anxiety that grows hugely until they acknowledge that they are not saints.

963^e. Some when under the veil feel such anxiety and terror that they despair of ever being delivered.

977. With a regenerate man there is joy when he acts according to conscience, and anxiety when he is compelled to do or think anything against conscience; but not so with an unregenerate man . . . Such have anxiety (when anything happens that is against their loves).

1510. These spheres (of false principles and persuasions) can by no means agree with the spheres of Spirits who are in truths. If they approach each other there arises repugnance; and if, by permission, the sphere of falsity prevails, the good come into temptation, and into anxiety.

1778. The Lord . . . in His childhood . . . being anxious about the future state (of the Church) a promise was made Him. Sig. 2275. 2283.

1787. He who is being tempted is brought into anxieties that induce a state of despair concerning the end; the very combat of temptation is nothing else . . .

1820⁴. As soon as (these deceitful Spirits) perceive anything of conscience . . . they form for themselves an affection from the false and infirm things in the man, and by means of this affection bedim the light of truth, and so pervert it; or else they induce anxiety, and torment him.

2284². (The Lord only permits remains to come forth) when the man is in a holy state, or in a certain anxiety, or during illness.

2334. In all temptation there is doubtfulness about the presence and mercy of the Lord, and about salvation; for they are in interior anxiety, even to despair . . .

2493. I spoke with the Angels about the memory of past things, and thence anxiety about future ones . . .

2689. They who cannot be reformed . . . believe that the only anxiety that is possible is lest a man should be deprived of the goods of the body and of the world . . . But they who can be reformed believe quite otherwise; for they are held by the Lord in affection of good and in thought of truth; wherefore they come into anxiety when they are deprived of them. It is known that all anxiety and grief originate from the deprivation of the things that a man loves . . .

2694². (The use of anxiety and grief, even to despair.)

3696. As a man advances in life . . . he removes himself from that state (of childlike tranquillity), because he gives himself up to worldly cares, and thence to anxieties [that are caused] by the cupidities of the love of self and of the world, and by falsities thence.

3742. When the Angels are in a fuller state of reception, they are then in their peace and happiness; otherwise they are in a state of unrest and of some anxiety.

3938⁷. So long as a (good) man lives in the world he cannot perceive the happiness of eternal life . . . the reason being that while in the body he is in worldly cares, and thence in anxieties. The effect of these is that the happiness of eternal life which is inwardly in the man can only manifest itself (by a certain delightful feeling); for when from within it flows into the cares and anxieties that are outwardly in the man, it falls down among the cares and anxieties there, and becomes a certain obscure delight . . .

4274. He who loves his truth is in anxiety lest it should be injured . . .

—e. This is why few are at this day admitted into any spiritual temptation, but only into some natural anxieties, in order that by their means they may be drawn back from the loves of self and of the world, into which they would otherwise rush unchecked.

4341². When good flows in through an inward way . . . the ideas of the natural man, which have been formed by the fallacies of the senses . . . do not endure its approach, for they are discordant; hence there is anxiety in the Natural, and temptation. Sig.

[A.] 4496. When a man is being purified from these loves . . . he is in grief and anxiety; it is the cupidities then being wiped off that cause the grief and anguish.

4555². When evil Spirits approach any heavenly Society they suddenly fall into anxieties and torments . . .

4627³. Conscience . . . is an interior perception (app.) of what is good and true, and if anything is done contrary thereto there is anxiety.

5036. At the present day . . . he who undergoes temptations believes no otherwise than that they are feelings of anguish that come in from the evils that are within him, which first cause him unrest, then anxiety-anxium, and finally torment him.

—². It is this combat that is perceived in the man as temptation, but so obscurely that he hardly knows but that it is only anxiety.

—³. The evil Spirits . . . enter into the affections that the man had had before, and excite them, and also the false and evil things that he had thought and done, and thus lead him into anxiety . . .

5178. Since it is disquietude about future things that causes anxieties in a man, and since such Spirits appear in the region of the stomach, anxieties affect the stomach more than the other viscera; and it has also been granted to perceive how these anxieties were augmented or diminished according to the presence or removal of those Spirits. Some anxieties were perceived more inwardly, and some more outwardly; some higher up and some lower down; according to the differences of such disquietudes . . . Hence also it is that when such anxieties occupy the mind, the region near the stomach is constricted, and sometimes a pain is perceived there; and also that the anxieties appear to rise up thence.

5179. I once perceived anxiety-anxium—in the lower part of the stomach, from which it was evident that such Spirits were present. I spoke to them, saying, that they had better go away, because their sphere, which induced the anxiety, did not agree with the spheres of the Spirits who were with me.

5386. Spirits . . . who excite scruples about matters concerning which there should be no scruple . . . are called the over conscientious. . . For grant there be any scruple or doubt, if the mind is anxious and is fastened in it, there are never wanting confirmations and aggravations. When such Spirits are present they also induce a sensible anxiety in that part of the abdomen that is close under the diaphragm. 5724. D. 1241.

5391. There are chaste maidens that constitute the province (of the Renal Capsules) in the Grand Man, who are prone to anxieties, and timid lest they should be disturbed . . . If anything is thought about Heaven, and about a change of their state, they become anxious and sigh . . . Their anxiety is chiefly caused by their being of such a nature as to keep the thoughts fastened upon one subject, without variety to dispel anxious feelings. D. 970.

5470. If when a man does not receive (the good that flows in from the Lord) he feels any anxiety, which here is 'the anguish of his soul,' there is hope that he can be reformed; but if he feels no anxiety, the hope vanishes.

—². If, when a man reflects upon the evil he has done, he feels any anxiety, it is a sign that he will still receive influx through the Angels . . . but if he feels no anxiety . . . it is a sign that he will no longer be willing to receive influx through them . . .

5472. When a man recedes from good, and feels anything of anxiety, it is not from any innate dictate, but it is from the faith that he has imbibed from infancy; this dictates then, and causes that anxiety.

5476. This violence (that is done to good), when inquired into, causes the inward anxiety that is called the stings of conscience; but only with those who had been in anxiety when they sinned.

5650². When the natural man without the spiritual thinks about (the abolition of his concupiscences) he rejects it, for he loves his concupiscences . . . thence he becomes anxious . . .

5887. 'And now, let it not be for grief to you' = anxiety of heart, or of the will.

6097. All temptations appear to be evil, because they are interior anxieties and pains . . .

6110^e. Morning (in Hell) is the heat of cupidities, noon is the itch of falsities, evening is anxiety, and night is torment.

6138. The man who is being regenerated . . . comes into this state, that when he is left to himself he is in pain and is seized with anxiety . . .

6202. There is another influx that does not take place through the Spirits who are with a man, but through others, who are let out from some infernal Society into the sphere of the man's life; these speak together about such things as are adverse to the man. Hence there commonly flows in what is troublesome, undelightful, sad, or anxious, with much variety. Such have often been with me, and I perceived that they infused anxieties into the province of the stomach . . . The avaricious sometimes appeared in the same region, but a little higher up, and they infused anxiety from care of the future . . . As soon as they were driven away the anxiety altogether ceased. . . Such is the influx with those who for no cause are loaded with melancholy anxiety . . .

7217. They who are in a state near to despair are in inward anxiety, and then are actually in 'straitness of spirit.' 'Straitness of spirit,' in the outward sense, is a compression of the breast . . . but in the inward sense is anxiety on account of the deprivation of the truth that is of faith and of the good that is of charity, and thence is a state that is near to despair. That a state of compression as to the breathing, and anxiety on account of the deprivation of truth of faith and good of charity mutually correspond to each other, as a natural effect in the body from a spiritual cause in the mind, may be seen above. Refs.

—². That the deprivation of spiritual truth and good gives birth to such anxiety, and consequently to such straitness, cannot be believed by those who are not in faith and charity . . .

8131^e. From the Hells through Spirits flow in those things that induce anxiety upon a man in temptations.

8164. The anxieties that exist (in sickness, misfortunes, etc.) are what are meant by natural temptations . . .

—². But spiritual temptations are of the inward man . . . anxieties then are not on account of any loss of the natural life, but on account of the loss of faith and charity, and consequently of salvation.

—^e. There is also a third kind, namely, melancholy anxiety, that for the most part is caused by an infirm state of the body or mind. In this anxiety there may be something of spiritual temptation, or there may be nothing of it. N.197⁴.

8247. These (worldly cares) are what induce sad and anxious minds and thence faces.

8352². The delight of life (of the spiritual man) is to be instructed in truths, and to be illustrated in such things as are of his soul . . . wherefore when these things are deficient, the spiritual life labours and suffers; hence are pain and anxiety. Ex.

8406. 'The Sons of Israel said to them' = thought from anxiety.

8478³. They who trust in the Divine, although they have care for the morrow, still have it not, for they do not think about the morrow with solicitude, still less with anxiety.

8797². Sometimes they who are in a lower Heaven strive to ascend into a higher Heaven . . . they then suffer hard things, are seized with anxiety, and at last with pain . . . H.35.

8890. When a man is in Heaven, he is devoid of all solicitousness, unrest, and anxiety . . .

8981³. . . but still spiritual good may occupy the thought when these (worldly) loves cease, as takes place when they are in anxiety, in misfortunes, etc.

10312. Anxiety was then felt arising from the collision of the spheres . . . D.1672⁴.

H. 299. It has been granted to know whence come to man anxiety, pain of mind, and the interior sadness that is called melancholy. There are Spirits who are not yet in conjunction with Hell . . . these love undigested and malignant things . . . wherefore they are present where there are such things in a man, and speak there together from their evil affection. The affection of their speech flows in thence with the man, which affection, if it is contrary to the affection of the man, becomes with him sadness and melancholy anxiety . . . That thence is anxiety of mind it has been given to know . . . from much experience. I have seen them, I have heard them, I have felt the anxieties rising up from them, I have spoken with them, they have been driven away and the anxiety ceased, they have returned and the anxiety returned, and I have perceived the increase and decrease of it according to their approach or removal.

360. They who have renounced the world . . . desire Heaven more than all others, but when they are elevated where the Angels are they induce anxieties that disturb the happiness of the Angels.

N. 187. When evil Spirits excite the evils that are with those (who are in goods and truth) there arises the anxiety that is of temptation. 196.

188. When the evil Spirits come near, they bring forth his evils, and the good Spirits his goods; thence are collision and combat, from which the man has the interior anxiety which is temptation.

189. There are also interior anxieties with those who are not in goods and truths, natural anxieties however, not spiritual ones. They are distinguished by the circumstance that natural anxieties have worldly things for their object, but spiritual anxieties heavenly things.

P. 141. No one is reformed in a state of sickness of mind. . . Such sicknesses are . . . anxieties and anguishes of mind from a vitiation of the body, etc.

M. 10⁴. The third said . . . presently from the heat of Heaven . . . my heart palpitated, anxiety took possession of me, and I was tortured with interior pain . . .

29². For all waiting and longing cause anxiety . . .

T. 512. A certain species of anxiety, pain, and terror, which they call contrition . . .

D. 5070⁵. There are some who are in the life of piety, and in no life of charity . . . these cause anxiety with others . . . because they despise others in comparison with themselves . . .

E. 117. 'And affliction' = anxiety from a longing to know truths.

601¹⁶. 'Anxiety' (Is.v.30) = evil.

Ape. Simia.

S. 116. It has been given to see people born in islands, who were rational as to civil things, but knew nothing about God; these in the Spiritual World appear like apes, and (at first) have a life almost like them . . . D.393. 5822.

P. 298⁴. If a man is rational and spiritual only in outward form . . . is he not like an ape with a face almost human?

R. 839. I saw an army on red and black horses; those who sat on the horses appeared like apes . . . T.113.

M. 505^e. (They who have confirmed themselves in the lust of defloration) appear, when seen by others looking into their Hell, like apes . . .

T. 148. (They who deny the holiness of the Word and the Divinity of the Lord) are like apes dressed in human clothes, and wearing a mask like the face of a man.

417^e. So far as a man does not will to do goods and understand truths, so far in outward things he may simulate a man, and act his ape.

[T.] 574°. Are there any of the human race who are not born satyrs and priapuses . . . and who among them, unless regenerated, is not an ape? The outward morality that he assumes for the purpose of concealing his internals produces this.

D.4126. On the face of an ape. There appeared to me the face of an ape, and it was said that they are such who apply to themselves all things that belong to others, to deceive them. In the other life they can make a likeness of anyone, and present not only his idea, but also images of his speech and other things . . .

Apocalypse. Apocalypsis.

A. 1532. From the light of the Lord in Heaven there appear wonderful things . . . they are continual representatives of the Lord and His Kingdom, such as there were with the Prophets and with John in the Apocalypse. 4529°.

J. 40. All things foretold in the Apocalypse are at this day fulfilled. Gen.art.

41°. As the state of the Church as to love and faith is described in the Apocalypse in its spiritual sense, no one could know what all things in a series there involve unless it was revealed to him from Heaven, and at the same time it was given him to know the inward or spiritual sense of the Word. 42.

42. Lest the things written in the (Apocalypse) should be hidden from men and should be given up by posterity through not being understood, the things contained therein have been unfolded to me, which being many cannot be described in this little work; wherefore I will explain the whole of that Book from beginning to end, and discover the arcana contained therein; which Explanation shall be published within two years. 47. 50°. 60.

R. Preface. Many have toiled at the explanation of the Apocalypse. (Why they could not explain it.) The Apocalypse, like the whole Word, in its spiritual sense does not at all treat of worldly, but of heavenly things; thus not of empires and kingdoms, but of Heaven and the Church. 1°. E.I.

—⁴. Everyone can see that the Apocalypse can by no means be explained except by the Lord alone . . .

2. In the Apocalypse it does not treat of the successive states of the Church, still less of the successive states of kingdoms . . . but from beginning to end it treats of the last state of the Church in the Heavens and on earth, and then of the Last Judgment, and after this of the New Church, which is the New Jerusalem. That this New Church is the end of this Work is manifest; wherefore the things that precede treat of the state of the Church, such as it was just before it. 227. 523. T.116°. E.5. 39. 224. 258. 369.

36°. In this state was John when he wrote the Apocalypse . . .

932. Preface. That the Apocalypse has been manifested by the Lord, and is to be revealed in His own time. Treated of.

932. 'He showed me a pure river of the water of life clear as crystal going out from the throne of God and of the Lamb'=the Apocalypse now opened and explained as to the spiritual sense, where Divine truths are revealed in abundance by the Lord for those who will be in His New Church, which is the New Jerusalem.

—². The Apocalypse is a Word like the Prophetic Word of the Old Testament; and in the Apocalypse are now unfolded the evils and falsities of the Church that are to be shunned and held in aversion, and the goods and truths of the Church that are to be done, especially concerning the Lord and concerning life eternal from Him; which are indeed taught in the Prophets, but not so manifestly as in the Evangelists and in the Apocalypse . . .

944°. In the Apocalypse not explained there are few things that can be 'kept,' for they are prophetic things hitherto not understood.

947. 'He said to me, Seal not the words of this prophecy, because the time is at hand'=that the Apocalypse must not be shut up, but opened, and that this is a necessity at the end of the Church, for anyone to be saved.

953. 'I Jesus have sent mine Angel to testify unto you these things in the Churches'=testification by the Lord before the whole Christian World that it is true that the Lord alone has manifested those things that are described in this Book (the Apocalypse), and that are now opened.

957. 'I testify unto everyone who heareth the words of the prophecy of this Book, if anyone shall add unto these things, God shall add upon him the plagues that are written in this Book'=that those who read and know the truths of doctrine of this Book (the Apocalypse) now opened by the Lord, and still acknowledge any other God than the Lord, and any other faith than faith in Him, by adding anything by which they destroy these two things, cannot do otherwise than perish by means of the falsities and evils that are signified by the plagues that are described in this Book. 958.

—². There are two things in this Prophetic Book (the Apocalypse) to which all things of it relate; the first is that no other God is to be acknowledged than the Lord, and the other is that no other faith is to be acknowledged than faith in the Lord.

960. 'He who testifieth these things hath said, I also come quickly, Amen, even come Lord Jesus'=the Lord, who has revealed the Apocalypse and has now opened it, testifying this Gospel . . .

M. 522. I then heard a voice from Heaven, Enter into thy chamber, and shut the door, and apply to the work commenced on the Apocalypse, and finish it within two years.

B. 76. Concerning this affliction or infestation of truth by falsities it treats in seven chapters of the Apocalypse. Enum.

88. That in seven chapters of the Apocalypse it treats concerning the perverted state of the Church with the Reformed, and in two, concerning the perverted state of the Church with the Roman Catholics . . .

Apostle. Apostolus.

Apostolic. Apostolicus.

A. 1. Everywhere (in the Word) there are inward things that never appear in the outward ones, except a very few that the Lord revealed and explained to the Apostles.

1877. . . believe that the Apostles will sit on twelve thrones . . . 2129³.

2553². Mere earthly and worldly, and thus outward things held fast all things of their mind [as they did those] of the Apostles themselves, who supposed that the Lord's Kingdom would be like a kingdom of the world, and therefore asked that they should sit, the one on the right hand, the other on the left, and long supposed that they would sit upon twelve thrones to judge the twelve tribes of Israel.

2760 Preface³. The twelve Apostles, like the twelve tribes of Israel, represented nothing but all things of such faith. Refs.

3272. The twelve tribes in the Old Testament, and the twelve Apostles in the New=all things of faith, thus all things of the Church.

3488². By 'you,' or by the Apostles, are signified all things of faith in one complex, thus both its good and its truth. Refs. 5440, Refs.

3858³. By the twelve Apostles are represented all things of the Church, that is, all things of faith and love. Refs.

—e. Hence it may be known why the disciples of the Lord, who afterwards were called Apostles, were twelve in number, and that they represented the Church of the Lord as to goods and truths in like manner as the tribes. Refs.

5313⁸. By the twelve thrones upon which will sit the twelve Apostles, in the inward sense are understood all things of truth, from and according to which judgment is effected. . . That the twelve Apostles are all things of truth, see above. 6397².

8705². That the simple have such an idea (about the heavenly Kingdom) is manifestly evident from the idea of the Lord's Apostles themselves concerning His Kingdom; for they at first believed, like the rest of the Jews, that the Lord, being the Messiah, would be the greatest King on the earth . . . but when they heard from the Lord Himself that His Kingdom was not on earth, but in Heaven, they then could think no otherwise than that His Kingdom in Heaven would be altogether like a kingdom on earth; wherefore also James and John asked that in His Kingdom the one should sit on the right hand and the other on the left; and the rest of the Apostles; who also wanted to become great in that Kingdom, were indignant, and disputed together which of them should be the greater there; and because such an idea was fastened in them, and could not be extirpated, the Lord also said to them that they should sit upon twelve thrones to judge the twelve tribes of Israel . . . and they were not aware what was meant thereby by the Lord. 3417². 3857⁶.

8902¹⁴. 'I will send to them Prophets and Apostles, but some of these they will kill and persecute' (Luke xi.49). 'Prophets and Apostles,' in the spiritual sense, stand for the truths and goods of the Church.

9229⁶. By 'Apostles' are signified all the truths and goods of faith that are from the Lord in the complex. Refs.

9643⁴. 'Twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb' . . . By the 'twelve Apostles' are meant all goods of love and truths of faith in the complex . . . for . . . the twelve Apostles are all things of love and of faith in the complex. Refs.

9820². The Apostles (are called 'holy') because by them are signified all the truth that is of faith and the good that is of love, in the complex. Refs.

H. 526⁴. To the interrogation concerning Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and David, and concerning the Apostles, whether they had not been received into Heaven from immediate mercy, (the Angels) answered, None of them; but everyone of them according to his life in the world; and [said] that they know where they are; and that they are held there in no greater estimation than others. They said that the reason why they are mentioned in the Word with honour is that by them in the inward sense the Lord is meant . . . by the Apostles the Lord as to Divine truths; and (when the Word is being read by man, instead of their names they perceive the Lord).

—(c). That the twelve Apostles represented the Lord as to all things of the Church, thus that are of faith and love. Refs.

[H. 526^(c)]. That the twelve Apostles would sit upon twelve thrones, and would judge the twelve tribes of Israel = that the Lord will judge according to the truths and goods of faith and of love. Refs. E.430¹⁴, Refs.

N. 1². By the 'twelve tribes of Israel' (Rev. xxi.) are meant all things of the Church in general and in special; in like manner by the 'twelve Apostles.'

—4. Its being said concerning the Apostles that they will sit upon twelve thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Israel, signified that all will be judged according to the truths and goods of the Church, thus by the Lord from Whom these are. Refs.

R. 5². By the twelve disciples or Apostles of the Lord are meant all who being of the Church are in truths from good; and in the abstract sense, all things of the Church. 233². E.8².

8¹. All who have received the truths of doctrine, and have lived according to them are meant by 'the Apostles and Prophets.'

79. 'Thou hast examined those who say they are Apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars' = that they scrutinize those things that in the Church are said to be goods and truths, which yet are evils and falsities. . . By 'Apostles' are not meant Apostles, but all who teach the goods and truths of the Church; and in the abstract sense, the goods and truths themselves of its doctrine. That the Apostles are not meant by 'Apostles' is clearly evident from this being said to them. . . 'Ye shall sit on twelve thrones,' etc. Who does not see that the Apostles will not judge anyone, and that neither can they, still less the twelve tribes of Israel, but that the Lord alone [will do it] according to the goods and truths of the doctrine of the Church from the Word. . . and also from these words, 'Exult O Heaven, and the holy Apostles and Prophets' (Rev. xviii. 20)? What is the exultation of the Apostles and Prophets, unless by them are understood all in the Church who are in the goods and truths of doctrine? By the Lord's disciples are meant those who are being instructed by the Lord in the goods and truths of doctrine, but by the Apostles, those who, after having been instructed, teach them. For it is said 'Jesus sent forth the twelve disciples to preach the Kingdom of God, and the Apostles having returned, told Him whatsoever they had done' (Luke ix. 1, 2, 10. Mark vi. 7, 30). 798³. 845. E. 100, Ex. —3.

348². All who are in truths of doctrine from the good of love from the Lord. . . are in general signified by the twelve tribes of Israel, and also by the Lord's twelve Apostles; but specifically, some truth from good by each tribe, and by each Apostle. . . Wherefore the twelve tribes of Israel represented the Church, and in like manner the twelve Apostles.

490^e. That this is so the whole Word teaches, both the old Prophetic one, and the new Apostolic one.

586^e. The reason they are called 'holy' is that 'Angels,' in the abstract sense = Divine truths from the Lord; 'Prophets,' truths of doctrine; 'Apostles,' truths of the Church.

790. 'Exult over her O Heaven, and the holy Apostles and Prophets, because God hath judged your judgment concerning her' = that the Angels of Heaven and the men of the Church who are in goods and truths from the Word should now rejoice at heart because those who are in the evils and falsities of that religiosity have been removed and rejected. . . By 'Apostles' are signified those who are in the goods and thence truths of the Church from the Word, and abstractedly, the goods and thence truths of the Church from the Word.

903. 'In them the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb' = all things of doctrine from the Word concerning the Lord and concerning a life according to His precepts. . . By the twelve Apostles are signified the Church of the Lord as to all things of it; here, as to all things of its doctrine, because their names were written upon the twelve foundations, by which are signified all things of the doctrine of the New Jerusalem. 915³.

T. 4. The infancy (of the Christian Church) was at the time in which the Apostles lived, and preached repentance and faith in the Lord God the Saviour in the whole world. . . 175.

— . Some months ago the Lord called together His twelve disciples (or Apostles), now Angels, and sent them forth into the universal Spiritual World, with a command to preach the Gospel anew there. 108. 791.

137. (A Council there at which were present those who are called the Apostolic fathers, who lived in the ages before the Nicene Council.)

—12. (When the doctrine of the New Church was charged with savouring of Mohammedanism, a voice was heard from the right, where the Apostolic fathers stood, Oh! shame. Oh! what an age.)

154. It is known that the Apostles, after they were endowed with the Holy Spirit by the Lord, preached the Gospel through a great part of the world, and promulgated it by mouth and by writings, and they did this of themselves from the Lord; Peter taught and wrote in one way, James in another, John in another, and Paul in another, each according to his own intelligence. The Lord filled all with His Spirit, but each took thence according to the quality of his perception, and followed it up according to the quality of his power.

174. A trinity of Persons was unknown in the Apostolic Church. . . Gen. art. By the Apostolic Church is meant not only the Church that was in various places in the time of the Apostles, but also the times in two or three ages after them.

176². The Apostolic Church was actually like a new star appearing in the starry heaven.

338. That the faith of the Apostles was no other faith than in the Lord Jesus Christ, is evident from many places in their Epistles. Examps.

339^e. These things have been written in the presence of the Lord's twelve Apostles, who, when I was writing them, were sent to me by the Lord.

356. All the Apostles preached faith, and that in the Lord Jesus Christ.

638. This Apostolic Church, since it worshipped the Lord Jesus Christ, and at the same time God the Father in Him, may be likened to the garden of God.

—³. The Primitive, or Apostolic Church could never have augured that a Church would follow that would worship a plurality of gods at heart and one with the mouth . . .

D. 1321. (The Apostles seen.) 1325.

1330. There are myriads in Heaven who are more worthy than the Apostles . . . The Apostles are only in the interior Heaven.

E. 9^e. The Apostles shall sit upon twelve thrones . . . By the Apostles here are not meant the Apostles, but all the truths from good that are from the Lord. 39^e. 431^e.

39^e. By the twelve Angels, and by the twelve tribes, are signified all truths and goods in the complex; in like manner by the twelve Apostles. —^e.

100². That by 'Apostles' are signified those who teach the truths of the Church, is because they were called Apostles from the circumstance that they were sent to teach and to evangelize concerning the Lord, and the approach of the Kingdom of God through Him, thus the truths of the Church . . . whence it may be evident that by the Apostles, in the spiritual sense, are understood . . . all those who are in the truths of the Church, and abstractedly from persons, the truths themselves.

—³. 'I will send unto them Prophets and Apostles' . . . 'Prophets and Apostles' are mentioned, because by 'Prophets' equally as by 'Apostles' are meant those who are sent to teach truths; but by 'Prophets,' those who [do so] in the Old Testament, and by 'Apostles,' those who [do so] in the New.

—⁴. Since the twelve Apostles=the truths themselves of the Church, it is said in the Apocalypse that 'the wall of the New Jerusalem had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb.'

270². Similar is the signification of the thrones on which the twelve Apostles will sit . . . By the twelve Apostles are signified all truths in the complex. Ex.

430¹⁴. Similar to the representation of the twelve tribes is that of the twelve Apostles; namely, all taken together represent the Church, and each of them some essential of the Church; hence it is that there were twelve.

1179. 'Exult over her O Heaven, and the holy Apostles and Prophets'=joy of heart in Heaven and in the Church with those who are in intelligence and wisdom from the Word. . . 'Apostles'=those who teach from the Word; hence, those who are in wisdom.

A. 588. This is said (that the Lord repents) according to the appearance . . .

589. From these and many other places in the Word it may be evident that it is spoken according to the appearances with man; wherefore he who wants to confirm false principles from the appearances according to which [much] is spoken in the Word, can do so from innumerable things.

633^e. Of the Lord's Divine mercy a man or an Angel is perfected, and receives as it were the understanding of truth and the will of good, but that he has them is only an appearance.

731. When a man undergoes temptations (his proprium) . . . appears as if it were not present. That it does not appear, or do harm, is signified by 'being destroyed,' although it . . . remains.

735². This first temptation . . . hardly appears as temptation.

926. The simple in heart can be instructed from the appearances with man, for they hardly go beyond knowledges from sensual things, wherefore [much] is spoken in the Word according to their apprehension.

1043³. All appearances of truth are 'clouds' in which man is when in the sense of the letter of the Word, for in the Word [much] is spoken according to appearances; but when he simply believes the Word, although he remains in appearances, and has charity, this 'cloud' is comparatively thin . . . 1798⁴.

1116. The habitations of the Angels . . . appear so vividly before their eyes that nothing could be more apparent to the life; but the source of such appearances to the life . . . in what follows.

1311. It cannot be said of Jehovah that 'He came down to see,' except only in the literal sense, where it is so said according to the appearances with man: in the inward sense . . . a thing is presented, not as it is according to appearances, but as it is in itself. Ex.

1376. I have often spoken with Spirits concerning the idea of place and distance with them, that they are not anything real, but appearing as if they were. . . But Spirits to whom corporeal and earthly ideas cling, do not apprehend this . . . such are unwilling to be persuaded that they are Spirits ; thus scarcely that there is any such thing as appearance . . . It was often shown them that change of place is nothing but an appearance, and a fallacy of the senses.

[A. 1376]^e. That all Spirits and Angels constantly keep their own situation in the Grand Man is an appearance. 1380^e.

— That Spirits appear in a place, when yet they are not there, is a fallacy. 1378.

1377. That place, change of place, and distance are an appearance in the World of Spirits has been evident hence, that all the Souls and Spirits there have been from the first creation, appear constantly in their own places . . .

1380². They who have been deceitful often appear above the head, yet they are in Hell under the feet . . . This is not an appearance, but is a fallacy.

1408³. Many things in the Word are said according to appearances ; yea, according to the fallacies of the senses ; as that the Lord is angry, punishes, curses, kills, and many such things . . .

1440. The second state of the Lord, when the celestial things of love appeared to Him. Sig. . . When the Lord arrived at celestial things, it could not be otherwise than that Jehovah should appear to Him.

1530^e. The Lord's Celestial and Spiritual appears before the outward sight of the Angels as a Sun and Moon. H. 118(u), Refs. N. 307, Refs.

1581^e. (The quiescence of evil with the Angels) so that it does not appear, is an appearance.

1652. They were goods and truths that were in the outward man, but appearing as goods and truths, from which the Lord in His childhood fought against evils and falsities. . . The apparent goods and truths appearing are signified by the kings mentioned (Gen. xviii. 1).

1655. That the apparent goods and truths, which in themselves are not goods and truths, occupied the outward man (verse 12). 1698. 1707², Ex.

1661^e. Since these goods and truths were not altogether Divine, they are called apparent things of good and truth . . .

1667. 'Twelve years they served Chedorlaomer' = that the evils and falsities did not appear in childhood, but that they served apparent goods and truths. Ex.

1708. How apparent goods after the combats of temptations become genuine goods.

1712. 'He distributed himself upon them in the night' = the shade in which were apparent goods and truths . . . It is called a state of 'shade' when a man is ignorant whether it is apparent good and truth, or genuine good and truth. Everyone in apparent good and truth supposes them to be genuine good and truth. It is that evil and falsity which are in apparent good and truth which make a shade, and cause them to appear genuine . . .

1715^e. When it is said that they were 'smitten,' and 'pursued even to Hobah that is on the left of Damascus,' there is signified the extension to which apparent goods and truths were purified.

1722. The deliverance and avenging of apparent goods and truths. Sig.

1735^e. See ANGEL at this ref.

1786. When the Lord appeared to the whole congregation at Mount Sinai, that appearance * was a vision that was different to the people from what it was to Aaron . . .

1815^e. In these states it could not otherwise appear to Him, than that when Jehovah spoke it was as if He were speaking to another, when yet He spoke with Himself . . .

1832³. With those who remain in the sense of the letter of the Word, and suppose that the Lord leads into temptation, etc. . . these are apparent truths, but they are not truths ; and since they are not truths in themselves, there is not parallelism and correspondence. Yet the Lord leaves these whole with a man, and through charity miraculously adapts them so that they can serve heavenly things as vessels.

1838. The Lord appears according to the state of everyone . . . for example . . . it appears to man as if the Lord vastated, punished, and condemned, and because it so appears, it is so said according to appearances ; for unless man were instructed through appearances, he would never suffer himself to be instructed. What is contrary to appearance he does not believe, nor apprehend, except in later life, when he has strong judgment and is endowed with the faith of charity. 1861¹². —¹⁴. 1874, Ex.

1911⁷. With the Lord there were no fallacies, but when His Rational was first conceived, there were appearances of truth that were not truths in themselves . . . but successively, as the Rational was made Divine, the clouds of appearances were dispelled . . . which is represented by the expulsion of Ishmael.

1927. 'Until the day of his appearance * to Israel' (Luke i. 80).

1936. How the Lord thought about the appearances that held back the first Rational in Him ; namely, that they were not to be trusted, but Divine truths themselves . . .

1937⁶. The Lord wills that this (proprium) should appear to man as his, although it is not his . . . The Lord wills to communicate what is His to everyone, thus the Celestial, so that it should appear as his and in him, although it is not his.

1954^e. It is the Lord alone who sees, because He alone lives, and He gives to man to see, and that it should appear to him as if he saw from himself.

1990. 'Jehovah appeared to Abram' = manifestation.

2016. What man supposes, that he does good from himself, and thinks truth from himself, is an appearance, because he is in a state of no perception . . .

2053. With man there is not any pure intellectual truth, that is, truth Divine, but the truths of faith that are with man are appearances of truth, to which there adjoin themselves fallacies that are of the senses, and to these falsities . . .

2089. The spiritual receive from the Lord charity through truths appearing to them as truths.

2143. 'Jehovah appeared to (Abraham)' = the Lord's perception.

2149^e. In the inward sense it treats here concerning Jehovah, that He appeared to the Lord, and that the Lord perceived it, but not through such an appearance * as there was to Abraham.

2196². This (human rational truth) is in appearances, which it cannot put off; and the appearances are those which are born from sensual things, which induce the belief that Divine things themselves are also such, when yet they are exempt from all appearances . . . The Rational from appearances supposes . . . [Repeated ten times.] 2209.

—¹². Those in the other life appear to themselves to progress [from place to place] . . . Spirits and Angels appear more manifestly before the inward sight . . . than a man does to a man on earth.

2203². The appearances in which the Rational is are of such a character that they affect, for in the appearances themselves there is delectation; wherefore if it is deprived of appearances, it supposes there is no more delectation; when yet heavenly affection is not in appearances, but in good and truth themselves. Since rational truth is such, it is excused, and it is admissible for it to be in appearances, and to have delectation in them. Such truth as was in appearances is represented by Sarah, when the Lord conjoined Himself with the Divine; wherefore it is said that she stood at the door, and laughed . . .

2209³. There must always be some appearances from sensual things, on which the thought will rest; when these appearances are withdrawn the idea perishes; as has been made evident to me by novitiate Spirits, who are in the highest degree delighted with appearances; and who said, that if these appearances were withdrawn from them, they did not know whether they would be able to think. Such is the Rational regarded in itself.

2242². It is so said (in the literal sense) because it appears to man as though it would be so . . . Hence it may be evident . . . that (the sense of the letter) is according to appearances; and if it were not according to appearances no one would understand and acknowledge the Word . . . But the Angels are not so much in appearances as man . . .

2284⁴. Men from every religion are saved if only they have received the remains of good and of apparent truth through a life of charity.

2395. The Lord never destroys, but since it appears as though it were [done] by the Lord . . . it is so spoken in the Word, in order that men may be kept in the most general idea that all things are under the Lord's eyes . . . 2397. 2447⁵.

2516². That there is no doctrine of faith from the Rational, is because the Rational is in appearances of good and truth, which appearances are not truths in themselves. Refs. 2559.

2576⁴. The 'veil' represented the proximate and inmost appearances of the good and truth of the Rational, in which are the Angels of the Third Heaven, which appearances are described by the 'blue, purple, scarlet double-dyed, and fine linen interwoven' . . . Hence it is evident that the 'rending of the veil' = that the Lord had entered into the Divine Itself, having dispersed all appearances . . .

—⁶. By the 'hanging' (for the door of the tent) were represented appearances of good and truth that are lower or more exterior than the former, or the middle ones of the Rational, in which are the Angels of the Second Heaven; which appearances are described in almost the same manner, yet with the difference that for this hanging there were five pillars and five bases, by which number is signified what is relatively little; for these appearances do not so cohere, or are not so celestial, as the appearances of the Inmost or Third Heaven . . . and since these appearances regard natural things, it was commanded that the bases were to be cast of brass.

—⁷. By the 'hanging' (for the door of the court) were represented appearances of good and truth still lower or more exterior, which are the lowest ones of the Rational, in which are the Angels of the First Heaven. These appearances, since they correspond to the interior ones, are described in a similar manner, yet with the difference that the pillars were not overlaid with gold, but were girded with silver, and that the hooks were of silver, by which are signified rational truths drawing their origin immediately from scientifics; and the bases were of brass, by which are signified natural goods.

2618^e. The appearances (of the state of the union of the Lord's Divine with His Human) are presented by the Lord before the Angels by means of heavenly lights . . .

2654². This (first Rational of the Lord), being born as with another man, namely, through sciences and knowledges, could not but be in appearances of truth, which are not truths in themselves (Refs.); and being in appearances of truth, truths without appearances, such as are Divine ones, could not agree with it, or favour it; both because it does not apprehend them, and because they are adverse to it. Examp.

—⁴. The Angels . . . know and perceive that (the proprium) is from the Lord, and that it altogether appears as theirs.

—⁶. In the other life there is nothing of space and time, but they are states according to which are the appearances.

2657. It is apparent good and truth that are predicated of this first or merely human Rational.

2715⁴. When (the spiritual man) superadds anything from himself, or from thought, then for the most part, the Sensual and its fallacies and the Rational and its appearances prevail, and cause him to be able to acknowledge scarcely any pure truth, such as the celestial acknowledge; nevertheless in these quasi truths the Lord implants good, although they are fallacious truths, or appearances of truth; but the good thence derived becomes obscure, being qualified by the truths with which it is conjoined.

2719. These (rational things from human scientifics) are appearances, not from a Divine origin, but from a human one, which are adjoined for the reason that the Spiritual Church would not comprehend doctrine without them, thus would not receive it.

[A.] 2814. Truth Divine in the Lord's Divine Human, which underwent temptations . . . is not Divine Truth itself . . . but is rational truth, such as is with the Angels, consisting of appearances of truth, and is what is called the 'Son of Man,' but before the Glorification. But the Divine Truth in the glorified Divine Human of the Lord is above appearances, and cannot come to any understanding . . . even that of the Angels.

2842. His glory in Heaven, yea mercy itself, appeared before the people (as the devouring fire and smoke that appeared upon Mount Sinai).

3102³. Many apparent truths are in one company, but only those are conjoined which acknowledge good there . . .

3131². The first truth in the natural man was not truth Divine, but truth appearing as Divine; for all truth in its first infancy is not truth, but an appearing of truth; yet with the progress of time it puts off the appearance, and puts on the essence of truth. Examp.

—^e. Thus fallacies and appearances, which in the time of ignorance are truths, are dissipated and dispelled.

3207. 'She took a veil and covered herself' = the appearances of truth. . . Brides used to veil their faces on their first approach to the bridegroom, to represent the appearances of truth. The appearances of truth are not truths in themselves, but appear as truths. The affection of truth can only approach the affection of good through appearances of truth, nor is it stripped of appearances before it is conjoined . . .

—². Truth is originally not holy . . . but when it is elevated (from the natural man) towards the rational, it is purified by degrees, and at the first aspect of the affection of good is separated from scientifics and puts on appearances of truth, and so approaches good . . . truth does not then any longer regard good from appearances, or through appearances, but from good regarded without them.

—³. But it is to be known that never are any truths pure with man, not even with an Angel, that is, without appearances; each and all are appearances of truth; but still they are received by the Lord for truths if there is good in them. N. 27⁴.

— . Truths with man are appearances imbued with fallacies.

— . The rational things of man are appearances of truth.

— . Good Divine inflows into appearances, even into fallacies.

— . Appearances of truth are adapted by the Lord as if they were truths.

—⁴. But what appearances are, may be manifestly evident from those things in the Word where it is spoken according to appearances. But there are degrees of appearances of truth; the natural appearances of truth are full of fallacies; but when they are with those who are in good, then they are not called fallacies, but appearances, and even in some respect truths; for the good that is in them, in which is the Divine, causes them to have another essence. But the rational appear- ances of truth are more and more interior; in these are the Heavens . . .

—⁵. (Examples of appearances of truth given.)

3235. The Lord appears to everyone such as is he who receives [Him], as . . . is manifestly evident from the fact that the Lord appears in one way to the celestial, but in another to the spiritual . . .

3357. The subject treated of in this chapter (Gen. xxvi.) is concerning appearances of truth of a threefold degree, how they were adjoined to truth Divine, so that truths and their doctrinal things might be received, and a Church exist.

3358. It treats concerning appearances of truth of a higher degree, that are in the inward sense of the Word, in which are the Angels, and in which there are Divine Truth and Good (verses 1-6). And that Divine Good and Truth could not be comprehended, thus not received, unless they were in appearances (verses 7-13).

3359. Then it treats concerning appearances of truth of a lower degree, which are in the interior sense of the Word, in which men can be who are of the inward Church (verses 14-17).

3360. Afterwards concerning appearances of truth of a still lower degree, which are of the literal sense of the Word, in which men can be who are of the outward Church (verses 18-25); and still there is conjunction with the Lord through them (verses 26-33).

3362. It treats concerning the conjunction of the Lord with those who are in His Kingdom in the Heavens and earths through truths, and indeed through appearances of truth of a higher degree with the Angels, and through appearances of truth of a lower degree with men; consequently through the Word, in whose inward and outward sense are these appearances. Truths Divine themselves are such that they can never be apprehended by any Angel, still less by any man, for they surpass all their faculty of understanding. Still, in order that there may be conjunction of the Lord with them, truths Divine inflow with them in appearances, and when they are in these they can be both received and acknowledged. This takes place adequately to the apprehension of each; wherefore there are appearances, that is, angelic and human truths, of threefold degree.

3364^e. Since the Divine cannot be apprehended by any created thing, therefore the doctrinal things that are from the Lord are not truths purely Divine, but are appearances of truth; but still truths Divine are in the appearances; and since these are in them, the appearances are also called truths. Treated of. 3365^e.

3367. 'Jehovah appeared to him and said' = thought from the Divine . . .

3368. 'Go not down to Egypt, remain in the land that I say to thee' = not to scientifics, but to rational things, which, when illustrated by the Divine, are appearances of truth.

—². Whether you say rational things illustrated by the Divine, or appearances of truth, or celestial and spiritual truths such as are in . . . Heaven, and . . . the Church, it is the same. The same are also called doctrinal things, from the truths that are in them. The angelic and human Rational is also called rational, from appearances of truth illustrated by the Divine; without these it is not rational; thus rational things are these appearances.

—³. All appearances of truth in which is the Divine, are of the Rational, so much so that rational truths and appearances of truth are the same. . . Rational truths, or appearances of truth, can never be and exist, except from the influx of the Divine into the Rational, and through rational things into the scientifics that are of the Natural. . .

3374. 'I will give all these lands'=spiritual things; as is evident from the signification of 'lands,' which here are rational things that, being illustrated by the Divine, are appearances of truth; which appearances are truths, as has been shown above; thus spiritual things. . .

3376. The inward sense of these two verses is that Divine Truth, when it flows in through rational things, presents appearances of truth, and thus fructifies and multiplies itself as to good and truth, by which the Lord conjoins Himself with Angels and men.

3384. It treats in this whole chapter concerning . . . rational things, which, being illustrated by the Divine of the Lord, are appearances of truth.

3385. In the things that precede it has been treated concerning the appearances of truth, which exist through Divine influx from the Lord into the rational things of man; here now it treats concerning their reception, and indeed first by those who are in the doctrinal things of faith. . .

—^e. Since (the spiritual) have not perception whether a thing is so, there is given to them what appears as if it were truth, and this according to their Rational. . .

3387². Truths, or appearances of truth, are given to man in order that Divine Good may be able to form his Intellectual. . . In order therefore that man may still have truths, and thence have spiritual life, there are given appearances of truth, and indeed to everyone according to his apprehension, which appearances are acknowledged for truths, because they are such that Divine things can be in them.

—³. In order that it may be known what appearances are, and that they are what serve man for truths Divine (the following examples are given.) 3404².

3391. Rational things, or, what are the same, appearances of truth, that is, spiritual truths, are not knowledges, but are in knowledges. . .

3404. 'Isaac sowed in that land'=interior truths that are from the Lord, appearing to the Rational. . . 'Land'=rational things, which, being illustrated by the Divine, are appearances of truth, or, what is the same, interior truths that are from the Lord, appearing to the Rational; which appearances, or which truths, are of a higher degree. . . In these appearances of truth are the Angels, and they are such as immensely transcend the understanding of man, so long as he lives in the world.

—². The things that are infinite and eternal are presented before (the Angels) in appearances that are finite; but still in such things as are very far above the sphere of man's comprehension. Examp.

—^e. In what follows, it treats in order concerning appearances of truth of a lower degree, that are adequate to the human race.

3405. That the Lord Himself was in appearances of truth when He was in the maternal human; but that, as He put off that human, so He did appearances. . . (is here treated of in the supreme sense).

—². But in the inward, or relative sense, it treats concerning the appearances of a higher degree, that are with the Angels. . . the abundance of which is signified by 'he found in that year a hundred measures.' The case with appearances of truth, or with truths that are from the Divine, is thus, that those which are of a higher degree immensely surpass in abundance and perfection those which are of a lower degree. . .

3412². It treats now concerning the appearances of truth of a lower degree, in which were they who are in the science of knowledges, and who are here meant by the 'Philistines.'

3417. ('Isaac) encamped in the valley of Gerar and dwelt there'=to lower rational things, or from interior appearances to exterior ones. Examps.

3425. 'The shepherds of Gerar strove with the shepherds of Isaac'=that those who teach did not see such a thing there, because they appear opposite. . . The shepherds of the valley of Gerar are they who acknowledge nothing but the literal sense of the Word. The reason why they do not see such a thing, namely, any interior sense, is that they appear opposite; to wit, those things which are in the inward sense and those which are in the literal sense. But they are not opposite because they appear opposite, for they entirely correspond. But the reason they appear opposite, is that those who thus see the Word are in what is opposite. . .

—³. —⁴, Examp.

3438. 'Jehovah appeared to him in that night and said'=the Lord's perception concerning that obscurity. . . So long as the Human was not glorified, the appearance of Jehovah was Divine perception, or perception from the Divine.

3451³. The literal sense is such that in many places it appears opposite to itself; but the cause is, that there are in it appearances of truth accommodated to those who are in outward things. . .

3470⁴. The truths that are first brought in cannot be from a genuine spring, because evils and falsities are in the former or natural good; but they are such quasi truths, or such appearances of truth, as have some affinity with genuine truths, and through which, little by little, there are afforded an opportunity and a place for genuine truths themselves to insinuate themselves. Ex.

3485. The representations that exist in the other life are appearances, but living ones, because they are from the light of life. . .

3519⁴. The Lord cannot appear to anyone, not even an Angel, unless he to whom He appears is in a state of innocence. Sig.

3527. At this day the inmost things of man do not appear in his face, but in some measure the interior things. . .

[A.] 3605². 'Hatred,' predicated of the Lord, in the inward sense is not hatred, but is mercy, for the Divine is mercy; but when this inflows with a man who is in evil, and he runs into the punishment of evil, it then appears as hatred, and because it so appears, it is also said so in the sense of the letter. 3614^e, Ill.

3640. Some (from the Hells) appear also above the head and here and there elsewhere; but it is not that they have their situation there, for it is a persuasive phantasy...

3641. All, both they who are in Heaven and they who are in Hell, appear erect... but yet in themselves, and according to Angelic sight, are in another position...

3704². Divine Good appears (in Heaven) as Divine Truth...

3721. There is apparently an entrance from nature (into interior things), Ex.

3750. They who appear above the head are they who in the world wanted themselves to be worshipped as gods... but they are beneath the feet in Hell.

3857. Interior truths are not received because... they do not fall into man's ideas, and are not according to outward appearances, or the fallacies of the senses, by which every man suffers himself to be led...

—⁴. Wherefore the Lord has spoken in the Word according to man's apprehension, and according to his appearances...

3882. When the regenerate man... arrives at (the Celestial of love) the Lord appears to him...

3901⁸. In these places by 'eagles' are signified falsities induced by reasonings which are induced from fallacies of the senses and outward appearances.

4103. Since Heaven is believed to be elevated, or on high, from the appearance it is so said. 4210.

4151. After the good represented by 'Laban' has been separated from the good represented by 'Jacob,' he comes, through the separation, into another state; for the truths that had appeared to him as his own while good was conjoined, are perceived as if they were taken away. Sig.

—². The case is nearly the same with Spirits... When Societies of Spirits, who are in a middle good, are in Society with Angels, it then appears to them entirely as if the truths and goods of the Angels are their own...

—³. Still it appears as if good and truth were man's own; and this in order that they may be appropriated to him.

—⁵. It may be concluded... that everything of life (both good and evil) flows in, although it appears as if it were in man. From experience.

4237^e. This state cannot be described... except by appearances illustrated by the light of Heaven...

4299³. Temptations and torments appear as if from the Divine, because they exist through the presence of the Lord's Divine...

4302^e. By the 'halt,' in the proper sense, are signified those who are in natural good, into which spiritual truths cannot inflow on account of natural appearances and fallacies of the senses.

4373. The affection of truth... appears to be from truth... but is from good... as life appears as of the body (although it is of the soul)... and as an image appears in a mirror...

4533. When the Angels of Heaven look into evil Spirits, the latter appear altogether otherwise than as they appear among themselves. Des. 4798. 9013².

4623. All that is real which appears to those who are in Heaven, but all that is not real which (appears) to those who are in Hell... What is real is distinguished from what is not real by this, that what is real is actually such as it appears, and that what is not real is actually not such as it appears. Ex.

4643. Conjunction with the affection of apparent truth. Sig.

4674. 'Joseph brought to their father their evil report'=that from (Divine Truth) it appeared of what quality they were...

—². The falsities and evils of the Church... do not appear to those who are there... But the Church, or those who are in the Church, appear altogether otherwise in Heaven, for in Heaven there is Divine Truth... in this light they appear such as they are. From experience.

—^e. They appear to themselves as Devils... wherefore they cast themselves headlong from that Society... into some infernal mist... where they appear to themselves, from phantasy, as Spirits not evil.

4677. 'He made him a coat of various colours'=the appearances of truth thence, from which the Spiritual of the Natural is known and distinguished.

4741. 'They stripped Joseph of his coat'=that they dispelled and annihilated the appearances of truth... The dispelling and annihilating of the appearances of truth take place after the truth itself has been rejected; for truth itself shines forth into minds from itself, and however it is extinguished it appears, especially with those who are in good. This also they who annihilate truth with themselves clearly see, wherefore they also endeavour to dispel and annihilate these appearances. Examp.

4742. 'The coat of various colours that was upon him'=the quality of appearances as to truths from good... That the quality of appearances is according to truths from good, may be evident from the appearances of truth when presented to view in the light of Heaven. Ex.

—². Since colours in the other life exist thence, they are in their origin no other than appearances of truth from good . . .

4768. 'They took Joseph's coat'=appearances. . . It treats now . . . concerning the confirmation of what is false against Divine Truths . . . and this by means of appearances, which are presented through reasonings from the sense of the letter of the Word. Confirmations of what is false by interpretations from the sense of the letter of the Word are all appearances, by which the simple are wont to be led astray, and falsity to be presented as truth and truth as falsity. Treated of.

4771. 'And they sent the coat of various colours'=defiled appearances.

4882. It indeed appears to Spirits and Angels that they also advance and are moved from place to place, entirely as it appears to men; but still it is changes of the state of life that produce this appearance; as it appears to them equally as to men that they live from themselves . . . These appearances, when with Angels, are called real, because they appear as they really are.

—². I have sometimes spoken with Spirits concerning these appearances, and those who are not in good, and thus not in truth either, do not want to hear that it is an appearance that they live from themselves . . .

—³. (To every Angel and Spirit the good always appear on the right, and the evil on the left.)

— The Lord there appears as a Sun . . .

—^e. This cannot but appear as a paradox to man . . .

4925. Since good, while man is being reborn and made a Church, does not appear . . .

—³. (The primogeniture) belongs to good actually, and to truth apparently. Treated of.

— The separation of truth from good apparently. Sig.

—⁴. With the man who is being born anew, good is actually in the first place, but truth apparently, and, while man is being regenerated, good does not appear to be in the first place, but manifestly so when he has been regenerated.

5110³. It therefore pleased Jehovah to present Himself such as He actually is and appears in Heaven, namely, as a Divine Man . . .

5120¹¹. From the appearance, and thence the belief, it is often so said . . .

5198². Hence it is that when there is conversation about mere affections the ultimate forms of them appear like the forms of the bodies of such beasts . . .

5377^e. As a man corresponds, so he appears in the other life in the light of Heaven.

5422². It is so said in the Word on account of the appearance, for it so appears to the simple.

5444. 'And one is not'=that the Divine Spiritual a quo does not appear.

5510³. And then it also appears, with what shades, or with what rays of light, they had kept the truth beset . . . with some it appears among falsities, with some among things ludicrous . . . with some among apparent truths . . . When innocence is insinuated by the Lord, these (fallacies of the senses) appear as truths.

5605². Motions and progressions there are nothing . . . but changes of the state of life; these changes appear in externals entirely as progressions from place to place . . . This appearance is as living and real, as is the appearance of life; namely, that life is in us . . .

5608. The wisest of all in the Heavens nevertheless appear to others as little children.

5658. There do indeed appear things of weight and extension with Spirits, but they are appearances arising from states of good and truth in a higher Heaven.

5694. 'He came into the bedchamber and wept there'=in itself not apparently. 'To come into the bedchamber'=in itself, so as not to appear. Ex.

5695. 'And he washed his faces'=to arrange so that it should not appear. Ex.

5696. The Lord's love and mercy do not appear before conjunction has been effected through a medium; they are also so arranged that they should not appear, for if they appeared, regeneration could not take place . . . not that the Lord ever hides His mercy, but when he who is being regenerated is let into his evils, the Lord then appears to him as if removed and hidden . . .

5721. The most contumacious of all, who in their life in the world had appeared righteous above others . . .

5798. When a man turns himself away, it appears to him as if the Lord [had done so], for he is not heard; according to the appearance it is so spoken in the Word. —³.

—². The punishment that follows, and no hearing, appear as anger. 8875.

—⁶. The simple within the Church also apprehend no otherwise from the appearance than that God is angry when anyone does evil.

6451³. Since all interior things are also together in the ultimate, there is therefore the appearance as if life were in the ultimate . . .

6495^e. Hence he actually appeared moral and civil . . . But . . . in the Spiritual World a man is in the sphere of his interiors; that is, such as he had been inwardly, such he is there; not such as he had appeared in externals.

6700. When the Divine appears (to the inhabitants of other Earths) He appears in the human form, as also formerly to Abraham and others on this Earth.

6832. Since truths in an inward form, or in a spiritual form, could not appear to the posterity from Jacob . . . therefore the Lord appeared in the bush; for when the Lord appears, He appears according to the quality of the man; for a man receives the Divine no otherwise than according to his own quality. Therefore also when the Lord appeared on Mount Sinai, He appeared to the people as a fire burning . . . He would have appeared entirely otherwise, if the people, who below the mountain were looking at Him, had not been of such a character. 8819.

—². That the Lord appears to everyone according to his quality, may be evident from the fact, that the Lord appears to those in the Third Heaven as a Sun . . .

and that He appears to those in the Second Heaven as a Moon . . . but in the First Heaven the Lord appears as neither Sun nor Moon, but only as Light . . . And since the Lord appears to everyone according to his quality, therefore also He cannot appear to those who are in Hell otherwise than as a dusky cloud and thick darkness . . . Hence it is evident that the Lord appears to everyone according to his quality, because according to reception . . . 8781. 8814^e. 8819. 8916. 8928^e. H.118². 120(c) Refs. 159². R.466. 714.

[A.] 6839. It is so said because it is according to the appearance. 7032. 7113. 7533. 8483. 9025. 10431². S.94. R.164. E.719, Ex.

6849³. When the Angels look into any Spirit who is in evil, he appears to be turned into something resembling what is inanimate . . .

—^e. That the Father does not appear except in His Divine Human . . . 6945.

6948². Since such things as are . . . on the Earth appear otherwise than as they are . . .

6991^e. Since it appears as if the Lord induces evil, because He gives life, therefore from the appearance, evil is attributed to the Lord in the Word. 6997².

—⁷. Hence it is evident what the quality of the Word is in the sense of the letter, also what is the quality of Divine Truth in its most general [form]; namely, that it is according to appearances . . .

7042. When a man opposes himself to the Divine, it appears as if there were resistance from the Divine.

7175^e. When (the inhabitants of Mercury) come into the other life . . . they do not want to appear as men . . . but as crystalline globes . . .

7193. 'To appear,' or 'to be seen,' when said of Jehovah=perception from the Divine.

7233^e. For the enlightened Intellectual discerns between apparent truths and truths themselves.

7246. In the planet Venus there are two kinds of men . . . Those who are ungentle and almost ferine, appear on the part of the planet looking this way; but those who are gentle and humane, appear on the opposite part. But it is to be known that they so appear according to the states of their life, for the states of life present all the appearance of place and space.

7252. The inhabitants and Spirits of Venus who appear on the other part of that Earth . . . then appeared near over my head.

7272². If only before expiring the mediation of the Lord is confessed from apparent confidence . . .

7344². Truths cannot be applied to falsities through mere falsities . . . unless there are intermediates that conjoin; the intermediates that conjoin are the fallacies of the outward senses, and are also such things as are said in the Word according to the appearance. Examps.

7475. The Spirits of Mars appear to themselves as men, such as they had been in the world; wherefore they also appear to others in the same way; for everyone in the other life appears to others as he (appears) to himself, because the perception is communicated.

8282. When they devastate themselves, and cast themselves into condemnation and into Hell, it appears as if it comes from the Divine. This appearance, or fallacy, is as one who sees the sun daily making a circle round our Earth, and thence believes that that movement is of the sun . . . 9031. W.108.

8443. The 'glory that was in the cloud' is the Divine Truth that is not so accommodated to perception, because it is above the fallacies of the senses and appearances; thus is also the inward sense of the Word.

8458. The good of truth . . . appears as truth, but is felt as good . . .

8512. When man is led by truth, the Lord does not appear.

8648. In the first state of those who are of the Spiritual Church good does not appear, but only truth.

8718. 'And every small word they shall judge'=the appearance of some particulars and singulars from another source (than the Divine).

8719. The Lord acts mediately through Heaven . . . in order that the Angels may have employments. . . Hence it is that they have the appearance that they act from themselves . . .

8948. Since the (inhabitants of Saturn) esteem themselves relatively small, they also appear small in the other life; for there the appearance of everyone is according to his disposition and according to his life.

8949. The Lord sometimes appears to those who are in that Earth under an Angelic form . . . 10737.

9031. This also is a truth, but an apparent truth, thus not repugnant to the former.

9174. In the Spiritual World there are no other goods that are asked from others, and that are given, than those which are of intelligence and wisdom. There are indeed many others that stand forth before the sight, yea innumerable ones, but they are appearances from those which are of intelligence and wisdom.

9297. 'Three times in the year shall every male be seen at the faces of the Lord Jehovah'=the continual appearance and presence of the Lord thus also in the truths of faith.

9927². (The things in the other life) are correspondences, and thus real appearances.

10042². In the other life there appear animals of many kinds . . . such things there are appearances entirely to the life, corresponding to the affections and thoughts that are with the Spirits and Angels.

10579⁴. When Jehovah appeared before the Lord's advent into the world, He appeared in the form of an Angel . . .

10669³. There appear there fields, crops, plains, flowers, harvests, plantations, and similar things as on the earth; and it is known there that in such a manner appear before their eyes those things which are of Heaven, thus which are of the Church.

10751. The Spirits of that (fifth) Earth, when permission is given, appear to the inhabitants of their own Earth, and speak with them . . . The interior sight of the inhabitants is then opened . . . and it is thus that they appear to them . . .

10809. They then asked how the Lord appears with the Angels from our Earth. I said that He appears in the Sun as a Man, encompassed there by the solar fire . . . but that that Sun appears only to the Angels in Heaven, and not to Spirits . . . But the sun of the world appears to none in the other life . . . H.116.

H. 52. When the Lord appears in the midst of the Angels, He does not appear surrounded by many, but as one in an Angelic Form.

55. When the Lord presents Himself in any Society, He appears there according to the quality of the good in which the Society is, thus not in the same way in one Society as in another . . .

—e. When the Lord appears in any Society, He appears there as an Angel . . .

69. A whole Angelic Society, when the Lord presents Himself there, appears as a one in a human form. Des.

79^e. The wiser the Angels are, the more clearly they perceive (the Divine in a human form); and hence it is that the Lord appears to them; for the Lord appears in a Divine Angelic form, which is the human form, to those who acknowledge and believe in a visible Divine, but not to those who [believe in] an invisible Divine.

118. See SUN at this ref.

121. When the Lord appears in Heaven, as often takes place, He does not appear girt with the Sun, but in an Angelic form . . . (See ASPECT at this ref.).

131. They who are in Hell, among themselves appear as men, but in the light of Heaven as monsters . . . In like manner appears a man as to his spirit, when looked at by the Angels; if good, he appears as a man, beautiful according to his good; if evil, as a monster, ugly according to his evil.

156. The things that are without the Angels are allotted an appearance according to those which are within them.

170. On representatives and appearances in Heaven. Gen.art.

171. The nature of the things that appear in the Heavens cannot be described in a few words; as to a great part they are like those that are in the Earth, but more perfect as to form. Ill. 464. 582, Enum. F.63. E.926, Enum.

175. Since all things that correspond to interior things also represent them, they are therefore called Representatives; and since they are varied according to the state of the interior things with them, they are therefore called appearances; although those things that appear before the eyes of the Angels in the Heavens, and are perceived by their senses, appear to the life, and are perceived, just as those things which are in the Earth are by man; yea, much more clearly, distinctly, and perceptibly. The appearances which are thence in the Heavens, are called real appearances, because they really exist. There are also appearances not real, which are those that indeed appear, but do not correspond to interior things. N.261².

177. On the garments with which the Angels appear clothed. Gen.art.

181. That the garments of the Angels do not appear as garments, but that they really are garments . . . E.395.

188. (The dwelling places of the Celestial Angels) appear as mountains of soil; (those of the Spiritual Angels) appear as hills; (and those of the Angels who are in the lowest parts of Heaven) appear as crags of rocks.

191. Although all things in Heaven appear in place and in space entirely as in the world . . .

194^e. Many who are together in one place there, so long as they agree together, appear; but as soon as they become dissentient, they disappear. Ex.

199. All things (in the Heavens) appear near and remote according to His presence. Ex.

429. The World of Spirits appears as a valley . . . The gates and doors to the heavenly Societies do not appear, except to those who are prepared for Heaven . . . Neither do the gates and doors to the Hells appear, except to those who are about to enter . . .

438. They who think abstractedly from the body . . . sometimes appear in their own Society, and when they appear . . .

479^e. Such ways in the spiritual world are real appearances, because they correspond to truths or falsities.

489. The things that appear (from that light) affect the interiors of the Angels . . . and at the same time their exteriors . . . Examps.

571^e. All things that appear in the Spiritual World, appear according to correspondences. F.63².

582. On the appearance, situation, and plurality of the Hells. Gen.art.

583. The Heavens do not appear to Spirits who are in the World of Spirits, except when their interior sight is opened; yet sometimes they appear as mists, or as bright clouds. . . The Hells do not appear . . .

N. 27⁴. The first truths with man are appearances of truth from the fallacies of the senses, which yet are successively put off, as he is perfected as to wisdom.

J. 32². When a Spirit is in such a state, he then appears in many other places, being also present in all of them as with the body, but this is only an appearance . . .

C. J. 14^e. From these things are the appearances of spaces in that World.

S. 40. The truths of the sense of the letter of the Word are not naked truths, but are appearances of truth . . .

51. Therefore in the sense of the letter, in certain places, there are not naked truths, but clothed truths, which are called appearances of truth . . .

57. Genuine truth . . . in the sense of the letter . . . does not appear to any but those who are in illustration from the Lord. T.231.

[S.] 91. The appearances of truth, which are truths clothed, may be taken for naked truths ; which, when confirmed, become falsities . . . 92.

95. That many things in the sense of the letter are apparent truths, in which genuine truths lie hidden, and that it is not hurtful to think and speak according to the truths, but that it is hurtful to confirm them to the destruction of genuine truth that lies hidden within, Ex.

—³. That the sun is moved is an apparent truth ; that it is not moved, is a genuine truth ; everyone can speak according to the apparent truth, and also does speak, but to think according to it from confirmation, blunts and darkens the rational understanding. —. W. 108².

Life 47. There are many things that appear to be of faith alone . . . 48.

96. It only appears to man as if he combats from himself, and the Lord wills that it should so appear to man, since without this appearance there could not exist combat, thus not reformation.

108. (To shun evils for any other reason than that they are sins, is merely to cause) them not to appear before the world. Gen.art. T. 330^o.

W. 7³. In the Spiritual World . . . there appear spaces like the spaces on earth, but still they are not spaces, but appearances . . .

10. In the Spiritual World . . . spaces . . . are appearances according to spiritual affinities that are of love and wisdom, or of good and truth . . .

40². (One reason why this has not been seen) is that appearances are the first things from which the human mind forms its understanding, and that they cannot be dispelled except from an investigation of the cause . . .

73². Since state determines time, time is only an appearance . . .

108. That the distance between the Sun and the Angels . . . is an appearance according to the reception of the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom by them. Gen.art.

— . All the fallacies that reign with the evil and the simple, arise from appearances confirmed ; so long as appearances remain appearances, they are apparent truths, according to which anyone may think and speak ; but when they are accepted as truths themselves, which is done when they are confirmed, then apparent truths become falsities and fallacies. Examp.

125. The Lord is in an Angel and an Angel in the Lord ; but because it appears as if the Lord as a Sun is outside of him, it also appears that the Lord sees him from the Sun, and that he sees the Lord in the Sun, which is almost as an image appears in a mirror ; wherefore if we are to speak from this appearance, then the thing is thus . . .

252². His spiritual man . . . sometimes appears to the Angels, but because he draws himself back to his natural man, after a short stay there, he disappears. E. 751.

264. From this is the appearance that man thinks, speaks, wills, and acts as from himself.

296. The Divine of Love, the Divine of Wisdom, and the Divine of use . . . are presented in appearance outside the Sun of the Spiritual World . . . Gen.art.

322. All things . . . to the life appear and exist around an Angel, and around the Angelic Societies, as if produced and created by them . . . When the Angel goes away, or the Society passes to another place, they no longer appear.

339². In Heaven appear all those things that are of good use . . . but in Hell appear all those things that are of evil use, Enum. Such things in the Hells appear thus to the life, entirely as these things do upon the earth and in it. It is said that they appear there, but still they are not there as they are on earth, for they are mere correspondences . . .

349. Many things in the world are spoken from the appearance . . .

381. The universal Angelic Heaven . . . before the Lord appears as one man.

P. 14. The good of love not united to the truth of wisdom . . . is apparent good, and the truth of wisdom not united to the good of love . . . is apparent truth. Gen.art.

49^o. Time is only an appearance according to the state of the affection from which is the thought. It is the same with the distance of space in thought. Ex.

50. Since Angels and Spirits are affections that are of love, and thoughts thence, therefore neither are they in space and time, but only in the appearance of them ; the appearance of space and time is with them according to the states of the affections, and thence of the thoughts . . .

74. Whatever a man does from freedom . . . according to his reason, appears to him as his. Gen.art.

76. Man, without the appearance that it is his, could not be in any affection of knowing, nor in any affection of understanding . . .

—². It is known that everything good and true is not of man, but is of the Lord, and yet that it appears to man as his ; and since everything good and true so appears, so also do all things of the Church and of Heaven . . . so appear, and yet nothing of them is of man. No one can receive these things from the Lord unless it appears to him that he perceives them as from himself.

79^o. From this an enlightened man may see the quality and the strength of the appearance in which the Lord wills that man should be ; and this the Lord wills for the sake of his salvation, for no one, without this appearance, can be saved.

87^o. Evil can be equally as well confirmed as good ; but evil [is confirmed] through fallacies and appearances, which, when confirmed, become falsities . . .

116. That evils in the outward man cannot be removed except by means of the man, is because it is from the Divine Providence of the Lord, that whatever man hears, sees, thinks, wills, speaks, and does, should appear entirely as his ; without this appearance man would have no reception of Divine Truth, no determination to the doing of what is good, no appropriation of love and wisdom, or of charity and faith, and thence no conjunction with the Lord, thus no reformation and regeneration, and thus salvation. And that without this appearance there would not be possible repentance from sins, nor indeed faith, is evident; also that man, without this appearance, would not be man, but would be devoid of rational life, like a beast. 174². 176. 210, Gen.art. 321⁴. 330³. M.444⁵.

162. That (man is led through the Angelic Heaven) is said from appearance; but that (he is led from that Heaven) is said from truth. That the appearance is that it is through the Angelic Heaven, is because the Lord appears above that Heaven as a Sun... The Lord is omnipresent, and is not in space... wherefore distance is an appearance according to the conjunction with Him... and since no one can be conjoined with the Lord, as He is in Himself, therefore He appears to the Angels at a distance as a Sun... R.465.

—². But since it is from appearance that the Lord rules the universal Heaven, and through this the world, from the Sun... and since it is allowable for every man to speak from appearance... it is therefore also allowable for everyone who is not in wisdom itself, to think that the Lord rules each and all things from His Sun; from such an appearance also do the Angels of the lower Heavens think; whereas the Angels of the higher Heavens do indeed speak from the appearance, but they think from the truth... Ex.

174. In outward things man is led and taught by the Lord in all appearance as by himself. Gen.art.

183². Evil could not be taken away from anyone unless it appeared... 278, Gen.art.

186. The Lord, in His Divine Providence, does not manifestly appear. Why.

187². They who, from the confirmation of appearances with themselves, have become natural... .

191. [Man's] Own prudence is no prudence; and only appears to be so, and also ought to appear to be so... Gen.art.

200. How then can a man claim for himself what is Divine merely from the fact that these few outermost things appear to him as his own? and still less when he knows... from reason that this appearance has been given to him that he may live as a man... That this appearance has been given to man that he may act from freedom according to reason, thus as from himself... .

213^o. (The Angel would say,) They are all appearances and fallacies.

219⁵. The Lord conjoins man to Himself through appearances. Ex.

220⁶. The Lord conjoins Himself to uses through correspondences, and thus through appearances according to the confirmations of them by man. Ex. —¹⁰.

278⁵. Sins, with them, do not appear, and therefore cannot be removed. Ex.

— . All evil that does not appear foment itself... .

310. They are in their Own prudence who confirm appearances with themselves, and make them truths; especially this appearance, that [man's] Own prudence is everything, and the Divine Providence not anything... .

— . Every appearance confirmed as a truth becomes a fallacy. 461².

R. 465. When He manifests Himself, He appears in the Heavens and below the Heavens as an Angel... .

655³. In the Spiritual World, at a distance, all things appear according to correspondences; which, when they appear in forms, are called representations of spiritual things... Examps. M.76².

M. 132⁵. The 'likeness of God' is the perfect likeness and the full appearance as if love and wisdom are in man... The likeness or appearance that love and wisdom... are in man as his, causes that man is man, and that he can be conjoined to God, and so live to eternity.

158. Since therefore spaces (in relation to spiritual things) are appearances, distances and presences are also appearances... .

271. On the causes of apparent love, friendship, and favour in marriages. Gen.art. 278.

276². It follows that the appearances of love and friendship between married partners are necessities.

T. 29. These appearances (in the Spiritual World) are real, because they are constant, according to the states (of Spirits and Angels).

42². There are some who do not perceive truth, but conclude it from confirmations through appearances; these are represented by singing birds.

344. The states of the faith of the New Church are... 2. The faith of genuine truth and the faith of the appearances of truth.

345. The denominations of merely natural faith are... 7. Visionary and preposterous faith, which is the appearance of falsity as of truth... .

438^e. The appearance (that man has power of his own) is given to every man by the Lord for the sake of regeneration, imputation, conjunction, and salvation.

470. The cause of this fallacious belief, that man also is life... I have deduced from the appearance, but the cause of the fallacy from the appearance is, that at this day many are natural and few spiritual... and the natural man judges from appearances and fallacies thence derived... .

650. When such things are being read in the Word, the very appearances of truth, when they pass from the man to Heaven, are turned into genuine truths... .

777². Hence it is evident that the Lord will also now appear in the Word. That He will not do so in Person, is because after His ascent into Heaven, He is in the Human glorified, and in this He cannot appear to any man, unless He has first opened the eyes of his spirit... .

D. 2906. On Spirits who in life appear good in the eyes of men, and are evil within.

3386. There are innumerable things that appear to be so when they are not, as paradisaical things; wherefore they asked whether they were fallacies. It was then given to say... that such things as belong to angelic Spirits and Angels are not fallacies, but are appearances, and that they are as it were vessels to which may be applied the knowledges of faith. The knowledges of faith, which are not appearances, are . . .

[D.] 3428. Preface. Appearances according to which it is allowable to speak, but not rightly to think. Enum.

3644. Spirits began to doubt whether it were a fallacy or an appearance that Spirits appear thus in relation to the body . . . A phantasy can cause one to appear above when he is below . . . and so on . . . Wherefore, when thought is perverted . . . one appears to himself elsewhere, which then is a fallacy; but when the place is constant to them, it is an appearance.

4292³. (Index). Appearances in Heaven are real and substantial.

5601. (Index). Good Spirits, especially maidens, are instructed by changes of appearances.

5646. That Spirits are appearances.

— . Changes of the state of the interiors . . . appear before Spirits and Angels entirely as walkings, goings, and journeyings . . . These appearances are so real that a Spirit is entirely ignorant that they are thence . . . The Angels know, but do not think about it.

—². A Spirit also is an apparent man, for a Spirit is a man appearing there before the eyes of others. Ex.

5774. (The nature of the real appearances in the other life, shown by comparisons.)

5784. On appearance in the Heavens. There are magnificent things in the Heavens that appear only to the Angels . . . but not to Spirits who are in outward things. Index.

E. 369². These were appearances before the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven, and signify such things as are heard and perceived in the Inmost Heaven, where there were not such appearances; for whatever is heard, thought, and perceived from the Lord in the Inmost Heaven, when it descends through the Middle to the Ultimate Heaven, is turned into such appearances . . .

395. Hence it may be evident that the appearances which exist in Heaven before the Angels are entirely real.

553². Many things (here mentioned) were appearances from phantasy with them . . . whence it is evident that these appearances were not real appearances, but fallacious ones; for all appearances that exist in the Heavens are real, because they are correspondences; for the interior things that are of the affections and thence of the thoughts with the Angels, when they pass through to the sight of their eyes, are clothed with forms such as appear in the Heavens, and because they are visible, they are called appearances, and are said to be correspondences, and are real because from creation. But otherwise are the appearances in some of the Hells . . . From these persuasions exist phantastic visions, in which there is inwardly nothing real, wherefore also they vanish away when only a ray from the light of Heaven flows in. Such are the appearances that are here mentioned concerning the 'locusts.' 575³.

874. These magnificent things, which flash as with gold and precious stones in marvellous forms, appear to (the Angels) entirely according to wisdom with them, for they are correspondences.

1199². See ANIMAL at these refs. 1200².

D. Wis. vii. 5². All these things (in the Spiritual World) are appearances of the wisdom . . . and of the perception of the loves of the Angels; for they are created by the Lord in a moment, and are also dissipated in a moment; they are permanent and they are not permanent according to the constancy or inconstancy of the Spirits or Angels in those things of which they are appearances; which is the reason why they are only the objects of their thoughts and affections, and that the subjects are those things from which they appear. A. 911³. They who place the life in bodily things; that is, in cupidities, pleasures, appetites, and sensuels . . .

1480^e. To the desire of knowledge—scientiarium—correspond the very appetite and taste. 3570⁶.

3570⁶. It is the soul that gives to the body to have an appetite for food . . . Food is introduced through the delight of appetite.

3849². Outermost affections are those of the body, and are called appetites and pleasures.

4017. 'Thirst'=appetite * and longing, thus the affection of knowing and imbibing truth . . . 'Hunger'=the appetite *, the longing, thus the affection of imbuing good.

4792. Spiritual food is knowledge, intelligence, and wisdom . . . from these also Spirits and Angels are nourished, and they long and hunger for them, as men, who are famishing, do for food. Hence appetite corresponds to this longing.

4794. The reason Spirits have not taste . . . is lest that sense should put them away from the longing for knowledge and wisdom, thus from spiritual appetite.

4976². Wherefore good hungers and longs for truth . . . 8562.

5125². If he affirms all that the Sensual persuades and has an appetite for . . . then sensual things are in the first place, and then the man is borne along by appetite . . . —.

5127². He does not know that to think merely from sensual things, and to act from appetite, are of the outward man.

—. The interior man is in the faculty and power . . . of not willing and thinking what the exterior man from phantasy sees, and from cupidity has an appetite for.

D. 333. (Index.) Man after death retains the senses, appetites, etc. 364. 365.

741. On the appetite of Spirits, of knowing.

—. Instead of the appetites a man has in the life of the body, namely, of eating and drinking . . . Spirits have the appetite or pleasure of knowing. [The appetite] of knowing what is good and true only is angelic. But that of Spirits is [to know] whatever is as yet new, which cupidity is almost constant, and succeeds in the place of the appetite of nourishing the body . . .

818. The appetite of eating is also excited with Spirits . . . and indeed for certain kinds of food . . . and when I promised to eat this day similar things, he was satisfied. Wherefore merely bodily appetites are present, because they can be thus excited with Spirits by objects with man, and so be excited by a Spirit in a man.

1563. On bodily appetite.

—. There are Spirits who constitute that which is called appetite, and indeed that of the body. The appetites are various, not only of eating, but of many objects, as it is known that man with appetite also yearns for many things, as for baths; also that he wants wherewithal to be clothed, and similar things.

1564. A certain Spirit had such a craving for an under-garment—indusium—that he could hardly live, as he said, unless I would put one on . . .

1565. But as to sense, as touch, he said he had it not; thus appetite is in Spirits, and sense in man.

1566. Wherefore there are Spirits who are to be called appetites, with which some so blaze as it were, that they can hardly restrain themselves. Such are of manifold genera and species, for innumerable are the things that are the objects of appetite—appetuntur . . . The Spirits called appetites make a man crave, or excite his appetites; thence they have their delights, but the sense is proper to man.

1567. These Spirits have derived this from the life in their body, by ardently craving for certain bodily things.

1568. For the sake of distinction, to crave, or appetite, is said of the body; to desire, or cupidity, of the mind . . .

—. (Index.) Appetite corresponds to cupidity.

3333. There is also another sphere known to man, namely, that he desires this or that kind of food, which is called an appetite that has been determined.

4396. 'And (Jacob) encamped at the face of the city' = application, to wit, to the goods of that truth. Ex.

5006. 'She caught him in his garment' = that truth not spiritual applied itself to the ultimate of spiritual truth.

5135. 'Theft' = the claiming of the things of others . . . when it applies (goods and truths) to evils and falsities.

5368. By this is signified that good is adjoined to truth in the Natural, if only the Natural applies itself and obeys. Ex.

5706. 'And (Joseph) lifted up portions from his faces to them' = goods applied to each one from mercy.

5709. 'And they drank' = the application of truths under good.

5713. If the Internals are applied, they induce diseases, and at last death.

6112^e. The Scientific, which has not been perverted through applications to falsities and to evils.

6117. 'All Egypt came to Joseph' = application to the Internal.

6844. Expressions are to be applied to their own subject that is being treated of.

7332. They would apply the things that are of intelligence in favour of evil.

7344. 'Because they could not drink of the waters of the river' = no application from mere falsities . . . Truths cannot be applied to mere falsities; that is, be falsified through mere falsities . . . The reason is, that they are entirely opposite; and opposites cannot be applied unless there are intermediates which conjoin . . .

7492. With these, the good that is of love and the truth that is of wisdom are explained in a sinister manner, and are applied in favour of evil and thence of falsity.

8311. They almost put off the quality of falsity, which is effected through application to good; for such falsities can be applied to good, and they can be applied to evil; if to good, they become mild, but if to evil, they become hard; for falsities can equally be applied to good, as truths to evil; for all truths whatever, by applications to evil, are falsified. Examp.

8349. 'To drink waters' = to receive truths, and to apply them under good.

8439. 'Draw near before Jehovah' = a state of reception, and application to it . . . The reason why it is also application, is because reception is not anything, unless there is also application, namely, to use. Ex.

8662. 'Moses went forth to meet his father-in-law' = the application of truth Divine to Divine Good. 8666. —. Application precedes conjunction.

8885². This is effected . . . through sinister applications of truths, with the evil.

9018. 'Stealing a man and selling him' = the application of the truth of faith to evil, and alienation.

9020. That they are condemned who apply the truths of faith to evils, and thus alienate them from themselves, is because they had formerly acknowledged them; for the truth of faith that has once been acknowledged, when it is afterwards applied to evil, is commingled with falsity from evil; hence is profanation.

9234. He came to me, applying himself to the left side . . .

9738. 'Hollow boarded shalt thou make (the altar)' = application.

10021. 'Thou shalt make the bullock approach' = a state of the application of the natural . . . man such as there is in his early childhood.

10227³. By the faculty of being wise, is meant . . . the faculty of clearly discerning what is true and good, of choosing what is suitable, and of applying to the uses of life. They who ascribe all things to the Lord do thus clearly discern, choose, and apply.

10307³. When truths Divine are applied to man's loves they are no longer truths, since evil enters them by the applications . . .

10308. '(The incense) shall be holy to thee to Jehovah' = that worship is to be applied to love Divine.

10652². The other conjunction is profanation; this takes place when evil is applied to truth and truth to evil; which is effected through a sinister application of truth, and application to evil, and thus through the insertion of one into the other.

H. 351³. In proportion as a man learns and applies to life, he becomes intelligent and wise . . . 356.

489³. They who have immediately applied to life the doctrinal things of the Church that are from the Word are in the Inmost Heaven . . .

577⁴. Man is continually withdrawn by the Lord from the evils which, from consociation with these Spirits, he applies to himself, and as it were attracts . . .

W. 197. The application may be made . . .

203⁹. Into these degrees no others ascend and are elevated than they who in the world have been in truths, and have applied them to life.

218⁹. This . . . may seem doubtful, because not illustrated by application to sensible and perceptible things in nature. 228.

219. Let application be made of these things to . . .

228. Abstract things . . . are usually better comprehended than applied ones . . .

239³. (A man of no remarkable learning, who after death spoke like an Angel.) The reason was that in the world he had applied to life the precepts of the Word, and had worshipped the Lord, and thence he was elevated by the Lord into the third degree of love and wisdom. 427³.

P. 231³. The third kind of profanation is [committed] by those who apply the sense of the letter of the Word to confirm evil loves and false principles. Ex.

M. 90. That the male is born to become intellectual . . . may be seen from . . . his application, etc. . . From his application, which is to such things as are of the understanding . . .

91. But that the female is born to be voluntary from the Intellectual of the man . . . may also be evident from . . . her application, etc. . . From her application, which is to such things as are works of the hands . . .

170. A wife conjoins herself to the man by applications to the yearnings of his will.

235⁹. Merely natural Spirits are cold with an intense cold when they apply themselves to the side of any Angel who is in a state of love.

T. 70³. These things may be thus applied to the Omnipresence of God . . .

364⁹. Everything takes thence . . . and applies to itself as much as is sufficient.

370⁹. See ACCOMMODATION at this ref.

640. Redemption . . . is not applicable, ascribable, or imputable to any man . . . —⁹. 642. 649.

D. 4312. On those who inhere in general truth without application to circumstances. Examp.

Apply. Apponere.

A. 7319. Falsity does not stink unless it is applied to truth, nor evil unless it is applied to good.

E. 219³. 'Set thy heart to the path . . .' (Jer.xxxi.21) = the affection of truth . . .

Apprehend. Apprehendere.

A. 2411. 'The men caught hold of (Lot's) hand' = that the Lord powerfully withheld from evils.

6289. 'And (Joseph) took hold of the hand of his father' = influx into the power . . .

9144. 'And (the fire) catches thorns' = (anger) that carries itself into falsities. 'To catch,' when said of anger that is from affection of evil, = to carry itself, and thus to kindle.

T. 589. Man . . . can apprehend these things . . .

E. 601¹⁶. 'Lay hold of the prey' (Is.v.29).

701⁵. 'I will hold thine hand' (Is. xlii. 6).

721¹². 'Pain taketh hold of thee' (Mic.iv.9). —²³.

724¹⁹. 'Neither is there any that taketh her by the hand' (Is.li.18).

Apprehend. Capere.

Apprehension. Captus.

A. 32². Cannot be . . . apprehended by any human idea.

39². Man can apprehend no otherwise . . .

129. The principles that have been adopted, even the falsest, rule the man . . .

191. They then began to believe nothing that they did not apprehend by the senses . . . Treated of. 210. 235.

233². That the case is thus can never be apprehended by the senses, by science, and by philosophy . . .

237. The Church . . . so loved itself, or proprium, that it could no longer apprehend anything of truth . . . Treated of.

241. He who attends closely to the sense of the words of one who is speaking, does indeed hear the words, but as it were does not hear; he apprehends only the sense.

314. The spiritual Angels . . . instruct (the Soul) about those things which are in the other life, but [only] so far as he is able to apprehend.

588. Unless there is apprehended by man an idea . . . he cannot think . . .

589. He who confirms false principles, first adopts a principle . . .

590. (This) cannot be explained to human apprehension . . . 1414. 1820. 2004. 2034⁹. 1904⁴. 1914³. 2574. 2636. 2665. 2716. 2786. 2795. 2802. 2822. 3085³. 3573³. 3596. 3677. 3993². 4129. 4136. 4234². 4237. 4269. 5117.

608. In place of the revelations of the Most Ancient Church, there succeeded doctrinal things, which they first apprehended by the outward senses . . .

794². He who adopts the principle, that . . .

926. They who can apprehend nothing except from such things as there are with man . . .

1071. He who is not willing to believe before he apprehends these things, can never believe. Refs.

1072. They are called 'drunkards' who believe nothing except what they apprehend . . . 5120⁸.

—². They who are in the faith of charity . . . say that there are very few things that they can apprehend, and therefore to think that a thing is not true because they do not apprehend it, is insane.

—⁵. They who believe nothing, except what they apprehend through sensual and scientific things, are called 'heroes to drink.'

1164. Here 'Egypt' stands for those who believe nothing unless they apprehend it from scientifics . . .

1255. The principles that a man adopts from early childhood, the Lord never breaks, but bends . . .

1376. But Spirits to whom bodily and earthly ideas adhere, do not apprehend this . . .

1385. They do not apprehend that such perception is possible . . .

1408^e. They who from simplicity of heart believe the Word as they apprehend it in the letter . . .

1409. When the Most Ancient Church . . . saw (the things that are in the world), or apprehended them by some sense, they did not think about them . . . 2896. —.

1510². There was perceived . . . the sphere of those who believe nothing except what they apprehend by the senses.

1630^e. It was said to them that they ought not to doubt because they do not apprehend; for if nothing is believed except what is apprehended, nothing is believed about those things which are of interior nature, still less those which are of eternal life. Hence is the insanity of our age.

1676². Divine mysteries, which human minds, however they were unfolded, would not apprehend, and which many would not be willing to apprehend.

1756. The . . . beauty of (the inward sense) cannot appear . . . as if they were apprehended in one idea . . . This is as when one who hears another speaking attends to the words; he then does not so well apprehend the idea of him who is speaking . . .

1815. Everyone is able to apprehend merely from the fact . . .

1861¹². The Jews, who were unwilling to apprehend anything whatever, except what was according to the senses . . .

1911³. The Rational first conceived does not apprehend this . . .

—⁶. Then are dispelled the shades of fallacies, and it is then a matter of no account with him that he does not apprehend.

1936. This is the case with all Truths Divine; if the (first) Rational be consulted about them they can never be believed, for they are entirely above its apprehension. Examp. 2657⁵.

1954. Unless the interior sight with man continually inflows into his outward sight . . . never can the latter apprehend or discern any object; for it is the interior sight which, through the eye, apprehends those things which the eye sees.

1990^e. The rest . . . shall be explained as far as [is possible to] the apprehension.

2094². These can never receive any faith, unless they first apprehend in some way how it can be so.

2124. At this day with the men of the Christian Church, intellectual good begins to perish . . . The cause is that they believe nothing but what they apprehend by the senses.

2162^e. The feet and the hoofs with which the streams and the waters are disturbed (Ezek.xxxii.13)=scientifics from sensual and natural things, from which they reason concerning the arcana of faith; nor believe before they are apprehended by means of them; which is never to believe . . .

2177⁵. When the man of the Church thus apprehended these (representatives) . . .

2196². Human rational truth does not apprehend Divine things, because they are above the sphere of its understanding . . . —. 2209.

—¹². Man, from appearances, cannot apprehend that . . . —¹³.

—¹³. Yea, in natural things themselves the Rational is blind, as for instance, it is unable to apprehend how (the antipodes) can stand upon their feet . . .

2243. When a man adopts any principle . . .

2249³. Heavenly arcana have this characteristic, that although they are above all apprehension, still everyone forms for himself some idea about them . . .

2364^e. This they do according to their apprehension . . .

2385. Such do they become who hatch doctrinal things from reasoning, and believe nothing unless they first apprehend . . .

—³. Any principle . . . once adopted, can be confirmed . . .

2510. Doctrine is said to regard rational things, when no other truth of doctrine is acknowledged, than what can be apprehended by reason . . .

2520². If truths were set forth nakedly from a Divine origin, they would never be received, but would transcend all man's apprehension, thus also belief . . . Examp.

—⁵. Since the human Rational is such, [everything] is spoken in the Word according to man's apprehension . . . 2533².

2540. See ANGEL at this ref.

2553. Man cannot apprehend anything doctrinal that is purely spiritual and celestial, that is, Divine, because it infinitely transcends his apprehension, thus also his belief . . .

2568⁴. This (insane) principle is to deny all things, or to say in his heart that he cannot believe them until he is convinced by those things which he can apprehend or feel . . .

—³. No one can apprehend higher things from lower ones . . .

2588⁹. They who have blinded themselves through this, that they were unwilling to believe anything that they did not apprehend by the senses, so that at last they believed nothing at all, were formerly called serpents of the tree of knowledge; for from the sensual things and the fallacies thence, which easily fall into the apprehension and belief of man, they reasoned much, and led many astray.

2619. This does not fall into the apprehension even when most highly enlightened through those things which are of the light of the world.

2625². He is unwilling to believe (the arcana of faith) except through those things that are in the world; yea, that he should apprehend them by means of sensual things . . .

2694². From this he gets a sphere of perception . . .

2701³. That they 'saw the Lord' . . . did not make anyone 'blessed,' but that they apprehended with the understanding . . .

2723². By 'Beersheba' is signified human rational things again adjoined to the doctrine of faith . . . and thus doctrine made for human apprehension.

2728. This does not appear to the sense, or the apprehension . . .

2768. No otherwise can man apprehend, than that he who permits also wills.

2814. See APPEARANCE at these refs. 3362. 3387².

2889. Evil Spirits cannot at all apprehend that they do not live from themselves . . .

3024¹. 'The daughter of Egypt' stands for the affection of reasoning from scientifics about the truths of faith, whether they are so; thus for the religiosity that rises forth thence, which is such, that nothing is believed unless it is apprehended by the senses. Refs.

3086². Since the inward sense describes these things . . . it cannot be otherwise than that they should be expounded, however much they may appear to be above the apprehension.

3175⁹. It is good that apprehends . . .

3321². There are innumerable things which the natural man does not apprehend . . . and what he does apprehend, he believes either not to exist, or not to be so.

3325¹². [When] a man no longer believes anything but what he can apprehend sensually and scientifically, he then perverts and extinguishes the things that are of the doctrine of faith, and most of all those which are of charity. Sig.

3343. The ideas (of the Angels of the interior Heaven) not only exceed apprehension, but even belief.

3365². The Rational is such that it can never apprehend Divine things; for it is finite, and this cannot apprehend those things which are of the infinite . . .

3385⁹. Since the spiritual have not a perception whether it is so, there is given to them what appears to be truth, and this according to their Rational, that is, according to their apprehension, for so it is received. Everyone is permitted to believe truths as he apprehends them; otherwise there would be no reception . . .

3386. By rational truth is meant that which appears to be true according to the apprehension, or before the Rational.

3387. Truths Divine themselves . . . exceed all their rational apprehension, thus all their belief . . .

—⁴. The Lord replied according to their apprehension . . .

3388. The first of the confirmation of truth is that it is called Divine; immediately they have an idea of what is holy, which gives a universal confirmation to each and all things that are said, and this although they do not apprehend it; but still the things that are said must be adapted to their apprehension; for it is not enough that man knows that it is so . . .

3394³. No matter of faith, not even the deepest arcanum, is ever apprehended by any man without some rational, and even natural, idea . . .

3410. 'The Philistines envied him' = that those who were in the mere science of knowledges did not apprehend.

3417. That the Lord disposed truths so that they were adapted to the apprehension and genius of those who are not in life, but in the doctrinals of faith. Sig.

3539⁴. A man is able to apprehend this from the understanding, although the will dissents, or even goes into the contrary.

3563. Although most clearly expounded, yet when the knowledge is wanting, they are not apprehended.

3599⁹. (These things) are adapted to the understanding and apprehension of the Angels . . .

3610². They who are in the affection of self and of the world can by no means apprehend these things . . .

3625². Thus the Word could be written, that it should be according to the apprehension of the man who read it, and according to the understanding of the Angels with the man . . . If it had been otherwise, it would not have been adapted to the understanding of readers, especially of that time . . .

3660³. Yet are such things adapted to the understanding and apprehension of Angels, also to the apprehension of Spirits.

3704². For the sake of man's apprehension, the Lord's Divine is distinguished into Divine Good and Divine Truth.

3900¹⁰. Reasonings about goods and truths, that they are not, except in so far as they are assumed . . . (Signified by the 'eagles at the carcase.')

3938. Divine or Infinite things are only apprehended from finite ones . . .

3974³. The things now adduced are indeed such as to fall into the apprehension of but very few . . .

3982². Man is led . . . by many affections of good and truth that are not genuine . . . but are only useful for the apprehending of them . . .

4005³. This arcanum . . . cannot be manifest except to an apprehension instructed . . .

4041. The heavenly form . . . is far above the ideas of the forms that man can ever apprehend from worldly things, even by means of analytics.

4054^e. They live at last in such . . . stupidity, that hardly anything of what is human, as to apprehension, is left in them.

4096^e. The rest care nothing for such (spiritual knowledges) . . . and such a one would say that he apprehends nothing about them . . . But if such things are said to him as relate to his business in the world, although they are very recondite . . . this he not only apprehends, but also perceives the interior things.

4154². This is how it is with man's apprehension . . .

4249. These (truths) cannot come to man's intuition and apprehension until good becomes the primary agent . . .

4286^e. What a man loves, he easily draws in and apprehends, but with difficulty that which he does not love.

4459⁴. They who are in mere outward things cannot apprehend what inward things are, thus cannot be affected by them; for no one is affected by those things which he does not apprehend. Examp.

4967. What a man does not see from the Natural he does not apprehend.

5089². They who are sensual . . . rarely apprehend anything about the things that are of Heaven . . .

5321². This is Infinite, and thus transcends all apprehension, even the angelic.

5373^e. Unless spiritual things are presented representatively in what is natural, thus by means of such things as are in the world, they are not at all apprehended.

5477². All truths of faith that man draws in from early childhood, are apprehended by means of such objects, and thence ideas, as are from the light of the world . . .

5478. 'There was an interpreter between them' = that then spiritual things are apprehended altogether otherwise. Ex.

5648³. The more interior such things are, the more remote they are from the apprehension of men to whom the things of the world and the body are alone pleasant and delightful.

6479. If there are any things that they do not apprehend, they reject them to the sides, and say, that they do not as yet understand them, and still remain in the faith of truth.

6775. Those are said to be in simple good who . . . believe the Word simply as to its literal sense, each according to his apprehension . . .

6839. The things in the sense of the letter are such as accommodate themselves to the apprehension of the simple . . .

6943. Naked spiritual things man does not apprehend . . .

6997⁷. Man is such that what he sees and apprehends from his Sensual, he believes; and what he does not see, nor apprehend from his Sensual, he does not believe . . .

7064. 'He made signs to the eyes of the people' = confirmation to the apprehension.

8325². If the natural man concludes with himself, that nothing is to be believed except what he apprehends, he then casts himself into enormous errors. Ex.

8636. These things no one can know from himself, for man does not apprehend [anything] except what has been in the way of the senses . . .

8705². The sense of the letter is according to the apprehension of simple men, in order that they may be introduced into interior truths themselves.

8782. 'That the people may hear when I speak with thee' = that those who are of the Spiritual Church may apprehend Divine things. . . 'To hear' = to perceive, thus to apprehend.

8783. Truth Divine is not received by anyone, unless it is accommodated to the apprehension . . . for human minds do not at first apprehend [anything] except earthly and worldly things. 8920². 8922.

8941³. The second religiosity is that in which the lumen of nature is everything; those who are in it acknowledge nothing as truth that they do not apprehend . . .

9109. He who is wise only from the world believes nothing except what the senses apprehend; and what he believes, he believes from the fallacies of the senses . . .

9176². These truths can indeed be described, but not to the apprehension, except of those who are in the light of Heaven from the Lord . . .

9348⁸. 'To be taken' (Is.xxviii.13) = to be carried away by (the evils of the love of self and of the world).

9430. When such a man comes into Heaven, he apprehends the Word not at all otherwise than according to its inward sense . . .

9577². (The eyes of the body) are formed to take in earthly and bodily things . . . they are therefore so gross that they cannot even take in by sight the interior things of nature.

9780². Hence man perceives what is good, and feels it, thus apprehends the quality of it.

9993³. These arcana can hardly be apprehended by anyone at this day . . . It would be quite otherwise if the mind were delighted with heavenly things more than earthly ones, for those things with which a man is delighted are apprehended . . .

10099⁴. (Such) can no otherwise apprehend the Spiritual than as a purer Natural . . . Hence it is that by such learned men there is not apprehended the difference between the inward . . . and the outward . . . man . . . Hence also neither can they apprehend anything about faith and love, Heaven and Hell, and the life of man after death. N.47², Refs.

10216. The Angels . . . apprehend what comes up according to its essence; that is, spiritually.

10367⁵. They who love their evils . . . can indeed apprehend and after a fashion understand truths from the Word . . .

10724. The happiness that follows the removal (of the loves of self and the world) is so great as to exceed all man's apprehension.

H. 435. Rational things are, by many, not apprehended.

W. 155. (Captus and Comprehendere used synonymously.)

D. 2930. There are very many such in the world, who reject spiritual things because they do not apprehend with the senses . . . Such were with me . . . They kept me awake the whole night, and so punished me because I have spoken and written so much about spiritual things, when yet these things cannot be apprehended by such things as are of the sense of the body . . .

2931. I could come into no spiritual thought . . . Their Spiritual was represented by them as a leafy cloud . . . This [was] from their conception that a cloud can feel and perceive nothing, so that it is a mere Natural as with beasts. (Their punishment.)

2932. It was given to say to them . . . that man never knows anything, as for instance, how the muscles effect actions . . . there are indefinite things that we do not know . . . and yet they suppose that unless they know and so apprehend, or as they say, understand with the sense how the case is with spiritual things . . .

2934. They have now also confessed that they can never perceive anything of what I write about spiritual things; but that they can only apprehend effects when they apprehend the effects with the sense of the body; other things are nothing.

E. 107. Everything that man apprehends from himself alone is false . . .

811¹⁸. By 'them that are bound' and 'him that is captured in the eyes' (Is. lxi. 1) are signified those to whom it is denied to see truths.

Approach. Accedere. Accessus. Accessio.*

A. 1740. The more horror there is for evils and falsities, the less dare evil Spirits approach . . .

2249. 'Abraham drew near and said'=the Lord's thought from the Human, which more closely adjoined itself to the Divine.

2354³. In proportion as his life approaches what is evil, Hell flows in; but in proportion as the life approaches what is good, Heaven flows in, thus the Lord.

2370. 'Come on further'=threats of anger.

2376. 'They drew near to break down the door'=that they came even to the endeavour of destroying both. . . 'To draw near'=to endeavour.

3402. 'To touch that man and his wife'=to approach Divine Truth and Divine Good.

3441. Thus approach the Divine . . .

3559. 'Draw near'=presence. 3572. 3574. 6259.

3913². When man is being regenerated, the inward man is to be conjoined with the outward . . . means are such things as . . . cause that in so far as the man approaches the one, so far the other is subordinated.

5433². The Angels . . . depart, and then infernal Spirits approach. 5854. 8054³.

5794. 'Judah drew near to him'=communication of the outward man with the inward through good. 'To draw near to speak with anyone'=communication. 5883.

6268. 'He made [them] draw near to him'=adjunction.

6423. Good is such that nothing of evil and falsity can approach it, thus not anyone from the infernal crew. 'To approach-appropinquare,' when said of man [approaching] the Lord, =thought from the Divine, because man cannot approach the Divine with the body as a man to a man, but with the mind . . . there is no other approach to the Divine . . .

7193². The Infernals, who tempt, cannot even approach the Celestial Angels; for when they approach they are seized with horror and anguish . . . Since they cannot approach these, and that on account of the Divine that is with them, still less can they approach the Divine.

7519. As soon as Heaven approaches nearer to them . . . they perceive (their own) falsities and evils . . . and are seized by them more grievously.

7766². If an evil Spirit approaches a heavenly Society, where there is charity, a stench is manifestly smelt from him.

8809. 'Not to approach a woman'=to abstain from what is impure.

8832. 'To draw near to Jehovah' . . . =in whom is the Divine.

8928. 'Moses drew near to the thick darkness where God was' . . . 'To draw near'=conjunction; for to draw near to the Divine is to be conjoined with Him.

10694. 'They feared to draw near to him'=not to endure the Outward of the Church, etc.

10695. 'And Moses called to them'=the approach of that nation to what is outward.

H. 400. So far as they then approach-appropinquant, they come into anguish . . . Hence they rarely dare approach near.

W. 6. There are successively added . . .

M. 231⁴. They only say, I agree with you . . .

T. 89^e. In proportion as man approaches, and approaches-appropinquant-God, which he must do entirely as from himself, the Lord approaches and approaches-appropinquant-man. 100.

126. Every man on his part ought to approach God, and in so far as man approaches, so far the Lord on His part enters.

722. They approach the Holy Supper worthily who . . . 725. 728.

Approach. Adire. Aditus.

A. 6971². When once the avenue is opened for the influx of the light of Heaven . . .

9509. 'Thou shalt make two cherubs'=no intro-mission and approach to the Lord except through the good of love. Ex.

[A.] 10187. Termination from good lest it be approached and injured by evils. Sig. . . Good cannot be approached by evils. Ex.

—². But as to truth, this can be approached by evils . . . but in so far as there is good in the truths, so far they cannot be approached.

P. 230^e. Hence it is evident that the Lord Himself is to be approached in order that anyone may be saved, and that he who approaches Him is 'the shepherd of the sheep;' and that he who does not approach Him is 'a thief and a robber.'

R. 500. They have confirmed themselves . . . that not the Lord, but that God the Father is to be approached.

504². From this the cause is evident why the men of the Church immediately approach God the Father, and many also the Holy Spirit immediately, and rarely anyone the Lord immediately.

566. They disputed whether anyone (can see any doctrinal truth in the Word) unless the Lord is approached immediately. On one side they said that the Lord is to be approached immediately because He is the Word; on the other side that doctrinal truth may also be seen when God the Father is approached; wherefore the dispute rested in this first of all; whether it is allowable for any Christian to approach God the Father immediately, and thus climb above the Lord . . . T. 162.

839¹¹. 'To believe in Him' is to approach Him . . .

883^e. Conjunction with the Lord is given to no others than those who approach Him immediately; there is presence with others.

933². This takes place with those who approach the Lord immediately . . . for they who do not approach the Lord immediately cannot be conjoined with Him, thus neither with the Father, and hence cannot be in the love that is from the Divine. Ex.

M. 70. No others come into (true marriage love) . . . than those who approach the Lord . . . Gen.art. 336, Gen.art.

356. Unless ye shun evils, ye cannot approach the Lord; the Lord does not receive those [who do not].

T. 107. After this, no one from Christians comes into Heaven except he who believes in the Lord God the Saviour, and approaches Him alone. Gen.art. 108.

165. If thou dost not approach the Lord, and redest the Word a thousand times . . . thou wilt understand no otherwise than that there are three Divine Persons . . .

176^e. Jehovah dwells in light inaccessible, who therefore can approach Him unless . . . He has descended and assumed the Human . . .

337. Therefore they who approach (the Lord) at the same time also approach the Father.

358. Man procures for himself (the life of faith and of charity) when he approaches the Lord, who is life itself, and the avenue to Him is not blocked against any man, for He continually invites man to come to Him . . . Ill.

379⁴. Not all who approach the Lord are in faith in Him; for true faith is inward and at the same time outward . . .

1937⁶. Thus is appropriated to them the life of celestial love . . .

2308. No one pays a penalty in the other life on account of hereditary evil . . . but on account of actual evil . . . thus also in so far as he has appropriated to himself from hereditary evil by actual life.

2881. That which is done under compulsion is not conjoined, thus is not appropriated.

3108². As soon as truth is initiated to its good, it is then appropriated to the man . . .

3161². So long as these doctrinal things are only in the memory, they are only scientific truths, nor as yet are they appropriated to the man as his; but they are then for the first time appropriated to him when he begins to love them for the sake of life, and still more when he applies them to life . . . thus are truths appropriated to him, and become of the will. 3911.

3394². The celestial . . . can acknowledge that all good and truth flow in from the Lord, and that there is a Perceptive of good and truth which is communicated and appropriated to them by the Lord . . .

3513. 'To eat'=to be appropriated (Refs.). Appropriation takes place when truths, or the knowledges of good and truth, are insinuated into the Natural by means of pleasant and delightful things; and when these truths are adjoined to good there, there is then effected a communication with the truth and good of the Rational, thus with the Rational; this communication is what is called appropriation, for they are of the Rational in the Natural. 3596.

[A.] 3735. 'To put on' (garments)=to be appropriated and conjoined.

3742. The Angels manifestly perceive the influx... But still the Lord's life is appropriated to them thus, that they have a perception as if they live from themselves, but yet they know that they do not. The appropriation of the Lord's life comes from His love and mercy towards the universal human race, to wit, that He wills to give Himself and what is His to everyone, and does actually give so far as they receive... and since there is constantly such a Divine endeavour from the Lord, His life... is appropriated. 4320. 4735². D.4079.

3744. Hence it is that the evil appropriate evil to themselves, because they do not believe that evils are from Hell, and that they cannot appropriate good to themselves, because they believe that good is from themselves, and not from the Lord. 3812². 4319.

3951. Since all truth comes from the Lord; that is, all appropriation of good through its conjunction with truth...

3986². Varieties exist from affections... which are rooted in and appropriated to man through his life.

4031². He who does not know that no conjunction of good and truth, that is, appropriation, thus no regeneration, can take place except in man's freedom... 5982. 6125. 7290². 8700².

4097. The first state is that the mind is kept in doubt; the second is that the doubt is dispelled by reasons; the third is affirmation; the last is act; thus does good with its truths insinuate itself from the intellectual into the voluntary part, and is appropriated.

4151³. Still it appears as if good and truth were his own; and for this reason, that they may be appropriated to man...

4247. This signifies that good continually flows in, in order to appropriate to itself truths... Since it is influx, it is appropriation.

—². In the beginning, before man is regenerated, good also flows in, but as yet has not vessels, that is, truths, to which it may apply itself, that is, be appropriated...

—³. From this it may be evident how the case is with influx, and the appropriation of truth by good...

—^c. It follows that good is what produces, and that inflows into truths, and appropriates them to itself, in so far as man is in the knowledges of truth, and at the same time in so far as he wills to receive them.

4397. 'He bought a portion of the field'=the appropriation of good from that truth. 'To buy'=to appropriate to himself.

4576. Divine Good appropriated, Sig... 'To give thee'=to appropriate to the Natural.

4577. Divine Truth appropriated, Sig... 'To give the Land to thy seed,' in the supreme sense, =to appropriate Divine Good to Divine Truth; but the reason it is Divine Truth appropriated, is that, before He was glorified, the Lord as to the Human was Divine Truth...

4735³. The appropriation (of Divine Good and Divine Truth) is effected through the life of love and of charity, which also is the life of faith.

4902. Truths are not appropriated to them unless they live according to them. 5276^e.

4976. '(Joseph) ministered to (Potiphar)'=that the Scientific was appropriated to its own good. Ex.

4977^e. Unless (at first) there is given as it were dominion to truth, or unless good so applied itself, truth would never be appropriated to good.

4992. 'The lord knoweth not what is with me in the house'=that natural good did not desire appropriation. Ex.

5069. All who are in the good of charity are called 'the just,' not that they are just from themselves, but from the Lord, whose justice is appropriated to them.

5114⁴. Since there is with man a connexion with the Divine, and his Inmost is such that he can receive the Divine, and not only receive, but also appropriate it to himself through acknowledgment and affection...

5120. Appropriation by the interior Natural, Sig. 5126.

5371. 'To sell'=to appropriate to anyone. 'To sell,' and 'to buy'=appropriation. 5374. 5418. 5582. 6137.

5374. Procuring and appropriation are effected spiritually by means of good and truth; to this correspond the procuring and appropriation which in the world are effected by means of silver and gold.

5376. When a man grows up... he views (truths) from his Own sight, whereby he causes them either to be appropriated to himself, or rejected; for nothing can be appropriated to anyone that is not acknowledged from his Own view...

5402^e. If (a man) consults the Word from the end and affection of knowing truths... they are then appropriated to him from the Divine.

5432. The subject treated of in the inward sense is concerning the truths of the Church, that they are to be appropriated to the Natural, and that they cannot be appropriated to it except by means of influx from the Celestial of the Spiritual through a medium.

5435. These truths are to be appropriated to the Natural by means of good, Sig.

— Truth is never appropriated to a man otherwise than by means of good; but when it is appropriated by means of good, then truth becomes good...

7909. If falsity is appropriated ; that is, firmly believed, there is no reception of the good of innocence . . . It is one thing to appropriate falsity to one's self, and another to adjoin it . . . they who appropriate to themselves falsity retain it . . .

8051. Falsity and what is falsified cannot (as such) be appropriated to anyone that is in good, and thence wills to be in truth, but to him who is in evil, and thence does not will to be in truth.

8179. If man does not fight as from himself, there are not appropriated to him the good and truth that flow in through Heaven from the Lord ; but when he fights as from himself, and still believes that he does so from the Lord, then they are appropriated to him . . .

8422. The arrangement of appropriated goods, Sig.

8439. When the influx of good and truth from the Lord passes in this way, then good and truth are appropriated to man . . .

8497. The good and truth that flow in from the Lord are conjoined and as it were appropriated ; such is the conjunction of Heaven . . . with the Lord.

—². Since life is from the Lord, it cannot be otherwise appropriated than that it may appear as his Own . . .

8500. That there was nothing filthy in it, because it was thus appropriated by the Divine, Sig.

8910. The things that become of the will are appropriated to man, for the will is the man himself. P.233⁹. 296⁸.

8981⁴. What does not enter into the Voluntary is not appropriated . . . P.318^e.

8983. Good adjoined to truth by the Spiritual, with the truths and goods thence derived, shall not be appropriated to truth. Sig. and Ex.

9009². The evils that proceed from one part of the mind, and not at the same time from the other . . . are not rooted in and appropriated to the man ; that only is rooted in and appropriated to him which passes over from the intellectual part into the voluntary part . . . 9132^e. 9224³.

9273. Appropriation takes place when the truths that had been of doctrine, become of life.

9274². Truths are not appropriated to man until he wills and loves those things which he learns and sees. 9386. 9995².

10087. 'Thou shalt take the breast' = the Divine Spiritual in the Heavens, and appropriation there.

10109². So long as a man is in evils and thence in falsities, good cannot be at all appropriated to him . . . By the appropriation of good is meant the implantation of good in the will, for good cannot be said to be appropriated to a man until it is of his will . . .

— . By the appropriation of good with man is only meant the faculty of receiving good from the Lord, with which faculty he is endowed through regeneration.

10110. The first of all that is appropriated to man is good, and successively truth. Ex.

10283⁶. 'Food for fire' = the appropriation of evils . . .

10640². The man who wills to be enlightened by the Lord must take special care that he does not appropriate to himself anything doctrinal that supports evil ; a man appropriates it to himself, when he confirms it with himself . . .

10686². When man is in temptations, the goods of love and truths of faith are not appropriated to him, but after them.

H. 298^e. What man receives in thought from affection is appropriated to him, but what he does not receive in thought from affection is not appropriated to him.

423^e. What is in both (the understanding and the will) is in the man, and is appropriated to him. Ex.

598². Nothing is appropriated to man except what is done from affection that is of love . . .

W. 116^e. See ANGEL at this ref.

425³. Freedom and rationality . . . cannot be appropriated to man as his . . . P.285².

P. 43^e. The Lord never forces anyone, because that to which anyone is forced does not appear as his own, and that which does not appear as his own cannot become of his love, and thus be appropriated to him as if it were his own.

78. Whatever a man does from freedom according to his thought is appropriated to him as his, and remains. Gen.art.

—². A man can also act from freedom against reason, and from no freedom according to reason ; but these things are not appropriated to the man . . . but the things that are of his spirit and heart, when they also become of the mouth and of the body, are appropriated to the man . . . By being appropriated to a man is meant to enter into his life, consequently to become his Own.

—³. All the good that a man does from freedom according to reason is appropriated to him as his own, because in thinking, willing, speaking, and doing it, it appears to him as his own . . . 113.

79. Nothing that a man has appropriated to himself can be eradicated. Ex. (But it can be removed to the circumference. Examp.)

—⁴. Goods are no otherwise appropriated to a man than as being constantly of the Lord with the man . . .

80. There is not appropriated to a man anything that he only thinks, not even what he thinks to will, unless he at the same time wills it to such a degree, that he also, when an opportunity is given, does it. Ex.

[P.] 81. The evils that a man believes to be allowable, although he does not do them, are also appropriated to him. Ex.

85. So long as the delight of the love of evil reigns, man cannot will good and truth freely, and make them of his reason, wherefore he cannot appropriate them to himself . . . and unless they are appropriated as his, the man is not reformed and regenerated. 138.

186°. Hence it is evident that freedom appropriates to man what the Divine Providence introduces . . . To be appropriated is to become of the life.

227. Whatever a man thinks, speaks, and does from the will is appropriated to him and remains, both good and evil. Ex.

285°. What is Divine cannot be appropriated to man as his, but can be adjoined to him, and thereby appear as if it were his. R.854°.

308. The Divine Providence does not appropriate evil to anyone, nor good to anyone, but [man's] Own prudence appropriates both. Gen.art.

320. If a man would believe, as is the truth, that all good and truth are from the Lord, and all evil and falsity from Hell, he would not appropriate to himself good, and make it meritorious; nor would he appropriate to himself evil, and make himself guilty of it. Gen.art. D.4228. 4275. 4286.

327°. Evil is indeed from Hell, but as he receives it as his own, and thereby appropriates it to himself . . .

M. 196. This formation takes place by an appropriation of the husband's affections. Gen.art.

B. 69°. Whatever a man believes that he does from himself he appropriates to himself; if good, he appropriates that to himself, and makes it his own, when yet it is of God and from God; if evil, he also appropriates that to himself, and makes it his own, when yet it is of the Devil and from the Devil.

T. 246. That nation not only did not appropriate to itself any truths from the Word . . .

380°. In so far as anyone believes himself to be more eminent than others in learning and judgment is he more prone to seize and appropriate to himself ideas about the Lord, that He is a man, and not God . . . —.

383. Since man is in the midst between these two opposites . . . he can choose, adopt, and appropriate to himself, from freedom, either one or the other . . .

496. That remains which is received from freedom, because the will of the man adopts and appropriates it to itself . . .

614. All the evil that a man has actually appropriated to himself remains.

651. The essence or nature that anyone has appropriated to himself in the world cannot be changed after death.

659. What he wills is received by the will and is appropriated; but what he does not will is not received, and thus is not appropriated.

See SYRIA.

A. 1223. 'The sons of Shem . . . Aram.' 'Shem' = the inward Church; 'the sons of Shem' = those things that are of wisdom. 'Aram' etc. were so many nations, by whom are signified those things which are of wisdom . . . by 'Aram,' knowledges of good. 1227.

1232. That by 'Aram,' or Syria, are signified knowledges of good follows thence, and also from the Word, Ill.

—e. 'Aram,' or Syria, in the opposite sense, stands for knowledges of good perverted.

1234. 'Aram' = knowledges of good; 'the sons of Aram,' knowledges thence, and the things that are of knowledges. . . Knowledges thence, are natural truths; and the things of knowledges, are things done according to them.

2864. 'Kemuel the father of Aram,' etc. = various religiosities and worships thence.

3051. 'He went to Aram Naharaim' = knowledges of truth thence . . . 'Aram,' or Syria = knowledges of good; and 'Aram Naharaim,' or Syria of the rivers, knowledges of truth, from Naharaim, or the rivers . . .

3249. 'The land of the sons of the east' was Aram, or Syria . . . which = the knowledges of good.

3676. 'Laban the son of Bethuel the Aramean' = collateral good. . . Bethuel is here called 'the Aramean' because by 'Aram,' or Syria, are signified knowledges of good and of truth.

4112. 'Jacob stole the heart of Laban the Aramean' = a change of the state signified by 'Laban' as to good. . . 'Laban' represents mediate good, which is now being separated, and because it is being separated, Laban is now called 'the Aramean'; for 'Laban the Aramean' is such good, in which there is not Divine Good and Truth, as before. The reason why it signifies this, is that Aram, or Syria, was separated from the Land of Canaan by a river, namely, the Euphrates; thus it was outside the Land of Canaan . . .

—2. By 'Aram' and 'Syria,' specifically, are signified knowledges of truth and of good (Refs.), and this because the Ancient Church was there (among other countries), and there its remains lasted long, as is evident from Balaam, who was thence . . . But after idolatry had sprung up there, and Abram had been called forth thence, and a representative Church had been instituted in the Land of Canaan; then Aram, or Syria, put on the representation of a region outside the Church, or separated from the Church, thus remote from those things which are of the Lord's Kingdom, yet retaining the signification of the knowledges of good and truth. 4125.

Ararat. Ararath.

A. 854. 'Mount Ararat' = lumen. . . 'Ararat' = lumen, and, in fact, the lumen of the regenerate. Ex. This lumen is the first lumen after temptation, and being the first, is dim.

Arbitrary. Under FREE-WILL.

Arcade. Porticus.

A. 1629. The habitations of good Spirits and Angels commonly have arcades, or long courts, arched, sometimes doubled, where are their walks. Des. D.2160.

2296. (Laurel arcades in the gardens there where little children walk.) H.337.

7353^e. These are compared to courts, and those which are outside and cohere with interior things, to porches.

9659⁹. Truths leading to good, and from good to truths, are signified by 'the porch,' and 'the steps' (Ezek.xl).

M. 7. He introduced them into a colonnade constructed of pillars and pyramids; in front there was a low palace, through which the entrance into the colonnade opened . . .

17³. Sitting in the porches of the houses . . .

56. Lo! there was seen an arcade of palms and laurels, along which we advanced; the arcade wound in a circuit, and terminated in a garden.

132. Lo! at the foot of the hill there was an arcade of palms, that was continued to its very summit; we entered and ascended. T.48.

316. I saw afar off a grove, in the midst of which there was an arcade leading towards a small palace.

D. 1681. (Arcades formed of trees in Jupiter, Des.)

E. 219^e. 'The porch' (of the Temple) = those things which are of the Ultimate Heaven, and which support the two higher Heavens.

620³. 'The porch,' and 'court' (of the Temple) = all things that are without the Church, but that still regard it, which are all things that, with the man of the Church, are in his natural man.

Arcanum. Arcanum.

Arcanist. Arcanista. R.875^e.

A. 1. The Word of the Old Testament contains arcanum of Heaven . . . 4. 1408.

37. These words contain more arcanum than can be told at present, although in the sense of the letter nothing of an arcenum appears.

47. That the Word contains the arcana of regeneration . . .

64. The arcana are so many, that volumes would not suffice . . . 1676².

167. If anyone knew how many arcana are contained in each verse, he would be astounded ; so many arcana are contained that they could never be uttered . . . 1414.

293. It is evident that (these words) involve more hidden things—arcaniora. 894. 940^e.

299. Here there are two arcana . . . 2715. W.221.

300. For a hidden reason . . . 1756³.

310. Each word of this verse involves so many arcana, that they could never be expounded . . . 1904⁴. 2618. 4560. 4563⁴.

391. And what is as yet an arcenum . . .

1143². There is not a syllable, which, in the inward sense, does not involve arcana.

1301^e. (These things) would not have been worthy of mention in the Word of the Lord, unless these arcana were involved. 1834.

1422². 'In a vision of the night was the secret revealed' (Dan.ii.19).

1763². They who find out the secrets of others with an end of doing injury . . . 5388.

1861¹². They who do not know the arcana of the Lord's Kingdom . . .

1904^e. These arcana are not manifest to man except in the other life.

1984. The sense of the letter . . . is representative and significative of arcana that no one sees, except the Lord, and the Angels . . .

2051². Everyone can see that there is a Divine arcenum (contained here). The arcenum is . . . 2075³. 2310³. 2342². 3952². 3993. 4675. 6574. 7050.

2053³. This is an arcenum not known before . . . 4180⁵. 6472^e.

2069³. The arcenum therein contained is too deeply concealed to be . . . described in a few words.

2161². Hence it may be evident how great are the arcana in the Word, and how deeply they are concealed. 2162. 2176. 3599³.

2162^e. Scientific and sensual things . . . from which they reason about the arcana of faith . . . 2492².

2329⁶. All arcana whatever, yea, the deepest arcana—arcantissima, convey an idea . . . 2249³.

2520². To the ideas that a man cherishes concerning Divine arcana there always adheres some idea from worldly things . . .

2601. They seem to themselves to be building small cities, and to hide some secret thing in the midst of them . . . these cities they give others, with prayers that they will not violate the secret in the midst of them.

2628. From these few words shine forth three arcana to those who are in the inward sense . . .

2629^e. These things are too deeply hidden—arcaniora—to be described ; yea, to be illustrated by anything that is in the world . . . 2643^e. 3086². —.

2665. Many arcana would have to be unfolded, before . . .

2761. 'A serpent' (Dan) = those who reason from sensual and scientific things about Divine arcana.

3952. The arcana of the heavenly marriage are described in (these words). —³.

3993². The arcana that treat about these things cannot be easily expounded to the apprehension . . .

4129^e. To expound these things one by one . . . would be to speak mere arcana . . . But it is sufficient to know that the arcana of that process are here contained in the inward sense ; and, in fact, such great and wonderful ones that they cannot be expounded to the apprehension as to the thousandth part.

4148. (The word arcenum occurs.) 4149. 4162. 4249. 4264. 4266. 4295. 4379. 5006. 5583. 6371. 6516.

4180⁷. Such are the arcana that come before the Angels when these words are being read by man . . . The Angels are in the most profound arcana, when the man does not even know that there is any arcenum in it. But these things that are mentioned are only a very few, for in these arcana the Angels see and perceive innumerable things ; yea, relatively, indefinite ones, which can never be uttered . . .

4321. There are so many and such great arcana (in nature), that what man knows is hardly anything relatively to what he does not know ; how much more must this be the case with the arcana that exist in the . . . Spiritual world. Enum.

4379. These arcana are manifest only to those who are in the light of Heaven, and as to some rough image to those who are in the light of the world, when the light of Heaven is admitted into it.

4502². 'Into their secret come not thou my soul' (Gen.xlix.5). [This is rendered secretum in 6351.]

6724³. Unless this arcenum be known . . .

8772. Whoever knows the formation of good from truths, knows the veriest arcana of Heaven ; for he knows the arcana of the formation of man anew . . .

10831. (This) is an arcenum from Heaven, and is for those who will be in the New Jerusalem. T.154^e.

H. 1³. (These words signify) that the Lord would reveal the arcana of Heaven. The arcana that are revealed in what now follows are concerning Heaven and Hell . . .

269³. An Angel . . . described regeneration, and brought forth arcana concerning it to the number of a hundred in their order, and filled each arcenum with ideas in which there were more interior arcana . . . He said that he could augment the number of arcana to some thousands . . .

P. 70. The laws (of the Divine Providence) are arcana, hitherto stored up in the wisdom with the Angels, but now to be revealed. —.

172^e. This is an arcnum of arcana of angelic wisdom.
 296¹⁰. Withdrawal from evil is effected by the Lord by a thousand modes, even the most secret. Ex.

R. 949^e. This arcnum can only be understood by those who are in wisdom from reception of the light of Heaven from the Lord . . .

M. 76. Representatives of the arcana of marriage love . . . He replied, To us here they are not arcana, and therefore neither are they mystical.

208. . . one other arcnum of marriage love. I replied, Why do you say one, while I have come hither to learn many. They replied, They are arcana . . .

277. There is a communion . . . of certain secrets (between married partners).

T. 360. Wherefore this great arcnum shall be discovered.

508³. Now it is allowable to enter intellectually into the arcana of faith.

617. The learned . . . in the arcana of that faith . . .

D. 3385. They wanted to ask some things that are more arcane, yea, most arcane; but . . . it was given to tell them, that I may answer nothing to such [questions] . . .

D. (Index.) [At the word arcana E. S. gives a cross reference to Mysterium.]

E. 601⁸. 'The Lord Jehovah will not do a word without revealing His secret unto His servants the prophets' (Amos iii. 7)=that the Lord opens the interior things of the Word and of doctrine to those who are in truths from good.

E. 778⁴. Hence the Socinians and Arians are not of Heaven.

Ark. Arca. (Of Noah.)

A. 602. The man of the Church called 'Noah' . . . who is described by 'the ark.' 639. 655. 896.

605. The formation (of the new Church, called 'Noah') is described by 'the ark,' into which were received all the living creatures. 811.

606. The 'Flood,' 'ark,' and the things described in relation to them, signify regeneration, and also the temptations that precede it.

639. By 'the ark' . . . are signified arcana . . . In like manner by the little ark-arculam-in which Moses was hidden . . . and still more loftily by the holy ark in the wilderness . . .

642. This first description of the ark, that it was constructed of Gopher wood, (with) stories, and was bituminated with bitumen outside and inside, involves that the other part, that of the will, was preserved from inundation, and only that part was opened which is of the understanding, and which is described by 'the window,' 'the door,' 'the lowest, the second, and the third.'

649. The numbers, or measures, of the ark, signify . . . the remains that were with the man of this Church, while he was being reformed, and that they were few.

667. 'He entered into the ark . . . ' = that he was saved. 764.

710. 'Enter thou, and all thy house into the ark' = those things which are of the will.

711. 'To enter into the ark' is to be prepared.

719. As to its being here said that unclean beasts were also to be introduced into the ark, the case stands thus; there is here described the man of this Church, what sort of a man he was, and that in fact by the ark, and thus by the things that were in the ark, or that were introduced into the ark; that is, which were with the man before he was regenerated . . .

741. 'Noah entered into the ark from before the waters of the Flood' = that he was safe. 748.

767. 'They entered into the ark' = that they were saved. 779.

789. The fluctuations of the man of this Church are described . . . also by the waters, that is, falsities, 'bearing up the ark'; further, that it 'was elevated above the earth' . . . at last, that the ark 'went upon the faces of the waters.' Ex.

891. So long as he remained in the ark, he was in a state of servitude, or of captivity, or imprisonment; being tossed about by the waters of the Flood . . . His state of freedom is described, not only by Noah's going forth from the ark, but also all things that were with him. 905. 912. 918.

1030. 'All that go forth from the ark' = the men of the Church . . . or the regenerate. 1061.

4334⁵. 'Till the day that Noah entered into the ark' = the end of the former Church, and the beginning of the new one. 'The ark' = the Church itself.

Ark. Arca. (Of the Covenant, etc.)

A. 85². By the journeyings of the ark in the wilderness are signified combats and temptations; by its resting, a state of peace; wherefore, when it journeyed, Moses said, 'Arise, Jehovah, and let Thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate Thee flee from Thy faces;' and when it rested, he said, 'Return Jehovah, the myriads of the thousands of Israel' (Num. x. 35, 36).

[A.] 308. The ark, in which was the Testimony, signified the same as here the 'tree of lives;' that is, the Lord and the heavenly things that are only of the Lord.

878⁷. The ark represented the Lord, thus all that is holy and heavenly; Uzzah's putting forth his hand to the ark represented Own power . . .

2576². The ark, which was the inmost, represented the Lord Himself, for there was the Testimony; but the Tent, being outside, represented the Lord's Kingdom . . .

3478. There was represented before certain (Spirits) the Tabernacle, with the ark . . . The Lord Himself was represented by the Testimony in the ark, upon which was the propitiatory.

4197⁸. Because these tables were placed in the ark, the ark is called 'the ark of the Testimony.' Ill.

4288³. Since they were in outward worship without inward . . . and thus worshipped the mountains and groves themselves . . . they were therefore restricted to what was common . . . and finally to the ark in the temple. 4580³.

4763². When the ark of God was taken by the Philistines . . . the 'rent garments' and 'dust on the head' = mourning on account of Divine Truth and Divine Good having been lost; for since 'the ark' represented the Lord's Kingdom, and, in the supreme sense, the Lord Himself, and thence what is holy of the Church, 'rent garments' signified mourning over Divine Truth lost, and 'dust upon the head,' over Divine Good.

4926⁶. By the ark was represented Heaven, in the supreme sense, the Lord, thus Divine Good; by 'Uzzah' was represented that which ministers, thus truth, for this ministers to good; this separation was signified by 'the breach in Uzzah.' 5945⁶.

6596. (Joseph) was placed in an ark in Egypt' = hiding in the scientifics of the Church. 'An ark' signifies that in which something is stored up, or hidden.

6723. 'A coffer,' or little ark = that which is round about, or that in which something is enclosed.

—³. Since it was provided that Moses should represent the Lord as to the Law Divine, or the Word; specifically, as to the historical word; it therefore came to pass, that, when an infant, he was placed in a coffer, or little ark, but in a common one, because at the first birth . . . But afterwards, that the Law Divine itself, after it had shone forth from Mount Sinai, was placed in an ark that was called 'the ark of the Testimony' . . . Thence the ark was most holy, because it represented the Lord's Divine Human as to the Divine Law . . .

6804⁶. Because the two tables . . . were deposited in the ark . . . therefore the ark was called 'the ark of the Covenant.' Ill.

9229⁵. By the Law in the ark in the midst of the Tent was represented the Lord as to the Word.

9455. By 'the ark' is represented the Inmost Heaven.

9457⁴. The ark, in which was the Testimony, represented the Inmost Heaven, and the Lord Himself there.

9485. 'Thou shalt make an ark' = the Inmost Heaven . . . for by the Testimony, or Law, in the ark, is signified the Lord, because the Testimony is Divine Truth, and Divine Truth is the Lord in Heaven. Hence now the ark signifies the Inmost Heaven. Wherefore it was most holy, and was worshipped by the people as Jehovah, for it was believed that Jehovah dwelt there, and between the cherubim. Ill.

—². That the ark is a representative of the Lord, is manifest from Jer.iii.14,16,17. . . A representative of the former Church, then to be abolished, is (here) meant by 'the ark' . . . (See below, at E.700³⁶.)

9496. (The ark and Habitation represented Heaven, from the relation of their form and construction to the human form. Ex.)

9499. 'The sides of the ark' = the Divine sphere encompassing Heaven in ultimates.

9500. 'To carry the ark in them' = the steadfastness and subsistence of Heaven.

9503. 'Thou shalt give to the ark the Testimony' = Divine Truth, which is the Lord in Heaven. 'The ark' = Heaven.

9506³. The ark = Heaven where the Lord is. 9518.

9519. 'To the ark thou shalt give the testimony' = from the Lord in Heaven . . . 'The ark' = Heaven.

9524. 'Which are upon the ark of the Testimony' = with the Lord in Heaven. 'The ark' represents Heaven.

9594. By the ark where was the Testimony, was represented the Inmost or Third Heaven. E.277⁴.

9668. It is manifest that . . . the ark was on the west.

9670. By the ark, in which was the Testimony, was represented the Inmost Heaven, where the Lord is. Refs. 10206⁶.

9679. 'Thou shalt bring in thither from within the veil the ark of the Testimony' = the existence of the Inmost Heaven within that uniting medium. . . 'The ark of the Testimony' = the Inmost Heaven.

9682. 'Thou shalt give the propitiatory upon the ark of the Testimony in the Holy of Holies' = the hearing and reception of all things that are of worship from the good of love in the Inmost Heaven by the Lord. . . 'The ark of the Testimony' = the Inmost Heaven, where the Lord is.

10195. 'Thou shalt give it before the veil, which is upon the ark of the Testimony' = in the interior Heaven, where that is conjoined to the Inmost Heaven . . . 'The ark of the Testimony' = the Inmost Heaven.

10269. '(Thou shalt anoint) the ark of the Testimony' = in the celestial good that is of the Inmost Heaven. . . By 'the ark of the Testimony' is signified the good of the Inmost Heaven. That the ark is the Inmost Heaven, and that the Testimony is the Lord there, and since the good that reigns in that Heaven is the good of love to the Lord . . . therefore by 'anointing the ark of the Testimony' is signified to induce the representation of the Divine of the Lord in celestial good that is of the Inmost Heaven.

10338. 'The Tent of the Assembly, and the ark with the Testimony'=a representative of Heaven in general, where the Lord is... By the Tent of the Assembly within the veil, where the ark was, was represented the Inmost or Third Heaven...

Life 55². On account of the holiness of the Tabernacle from the law in the ark, the universal Israelitish people encamped around it in order according to the tribes, and in order marched after it... and the ark was called Jehovah there... and therefore the ark was introduced into Zion by David, and afterwards was deposited in the midst of the Jerusalem Temple, and constituted its alytum. T.283. D.6065⁶.

—³. On account of the presence of the Lord in that Law and around it, miracles were also performed by the ark. Enum. T.283². D.6065⁶.

R. 529. 'The Temple of God was opened in Heaven, and there was seen in the Temple the ark of His Covenant'=the New Heaven, in which the Lord is worshipped in His Divine Human, and they live according to the precepts of His decalogue; which are the two essentials of the New Church, by which there is conjunction... By 'the ark in the Temple' is meant the decalogue...

T. 192. (The letter of the Word compared to a cabinet made of jasper, etc.)

260². By the ark is signified the Word, because the decalogue therein was the primitive of [the Word].

E. 283¹⁴. By the Testimony, or Law in the ark, is signified the Lord Himself; by the ark, the Inmost or Third Heaven.

336^o. Since by the ark is signified the Divine Celestial proceeding from the Lord, from the Law, or Testimony, that was in it...

684²⁸. 'The ark of His strength'=Heaven and the Church.

700. 'There was seen in His Temple the ark of His Covenant'=Divine Truth, by which there is conjunction with the Lord. 'The ark of the Covenant'=Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord... That the ark of the Covenant was seen, was because the Temple appeared, and in the midst of the Temple at Jerusalem was the ark, in which were deposited the two tables of the Law, by which, in the universal sense, is signified the Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord, thus the Lord Himself, who is the Divine Truth in the Heavens... That the ark signifies this, was because the Tent of the Assembly represented the three Heavens; its Court, the Ultimate or First Heaven; the Tent itself, even to the veil... represented the Middle, or second heaven; and the ark that was within the veil, upon which was the propitiatory with the cherubs, represented the Inmost, or Third Heaven; and the Law itself, that was in the ark, represented the Lord as to Divine Truth, or the Word; and since conjunction with the Lord is by means of the Word, that ark is called 'the ark of the Covenant.' 701.

—². That the ark, with the Covenant, or Testimony enclosed, signifies the Lord as to the Divine Celestial, which is Divine Truth in the Inmost or Third Heaven...

—³. Hence it was that the ark was overlaid with gold within and without, and that the propitiatory was upon the ark, and upon the propitiatory and from it were two cherubs that were of pure gold; for gold, from correspondence, signifies the good of love, in which are the Angels of the Third Heaven.

—⁵. That the Law, which is called both the Testimony and the Covenant, was put into the ark, and in like manner the book written by Moses...

—⁶. That by the ark was represented the Lord as to Divine Truth, and thence was signified the Divine Truth that is from the Lord, thus the Lord...

—⁷. Since the Lord in Heaven and in the Church is the Divine Truth, or Word, and this is meant by the Law enclosed in the ark, and since the presence of the Lord is in the Law, or Word, therefore where the ark was, there was Jehovah, or the Lord. Ill. From which it is manifest that Jehovah, or the Lord, is here meant by 'the ark,' on account of His presence in the Law that was in the ark, thus on account of His presence in the Word. Since this is here meant by the Law, and thence by 'the ark,' Moses said, 'Arise Jehovah, and let Thine enemies be scattered...' That He continually leads them by means of His Divine Truth, is signified by the ark of the Covenant of Jehovah journeying before them three days' journey to seek for peace for them...

—⁸. That truths from good, which are implanted in man after temptations, are signified by Moses saying, when the ark rested, 'Return, Jehovah, the myriads of the thousands of Israel...'

—¹⁰. By 'the ark of Thy strength' (Ps.cxxii.) is meant the Divine Truth proceeding from Him; for by this the Lord has Divine power.

—¹¹. Since the ark, from the Law that was in it, signified the Lord as to Divine Truth, and since the Lord has omnipotency from Divine Good through Divine Truth, miracles were performed by the ark. (These miracles enumerated, and fully explained).

—²⁷. The translation of the ark from Gath to Zion signified the progression of the Church with man, from his ultimate to his inmost. Ex.

—³⁵. Moreover by the ark is signified a representative of the Church in general... in Jeremiah... 'In those days they shall say no more, the ark of the Covenant of Jehovah'... 'By 'the ark of the Covenant of Jehovah' are signified the outward things of worship, which are then to be abolished.

A. 574. 'Cursed is the man who... maketh flesh his arm'... 'arm'=power.

878^o. In the World of Spirits there sometimes comes into view a naked arm, in which there is such strength that it can break the bones to pieces, and as it were pound the very marrow to nothing; and such terror is struck by it that their hearts melt; yea, there actually is such power in it. 4934. 4935. H.231^o. D.881. 1754, Ex.

1085. 'The hand'=power... 'the arm,' power still greater.

[A.] 1736³. 'He shall come in strength, and His arm having dominion for Him' (Is. xl. 10) = that by His Own power He will conquer the Hells. 1793². 1813. E. 629¹⁰.

4931. On the correspondence of the arms, etc. Gen. art.

4934. I have seen this naked arm twice; and from it I was given to know that the arms signify strength, and the hands, power. Heat was also felt exhaling from that arm.

6424. 'The arms of his hands are made strong' = the power of the forces of fighting. E. 357². 448⁶.

7205. 'I will redeem you with a stretched out arm' = leading out of Hell by Divine power. . . That 'a stretched out arm' is omnipotence, or Divine power, is because by an arm, when it appears outstretched in the Heavens, is represented power from the Divine; but when not outstretched, but bent, there is represented power in a general sense. Ill. 7673³, Ill.

8099³. 'The arm of Jehovah' is the Lord as to the Divine Human.

8319. 'In the greatness of Thy arm' (Ex. xv.) = from omnipotence. 'Arm' = power, but when said of the Divine, it = omnipotence. E. 406⁶.

8409². 'To make flesh his arm' = to confide in his Own power; therefore 'to eat the flesh of his arm' = to confide in himself. 10283⁷.

9163². 'To break the arms (of Pharaoh)' (Ezek. xxx. 22) = to dissipate their forces.

9406⁶. Truth Divine, or the Lord in ultimates, is meant by 'the arms and feet as the splendour of burnished bronze' (Dan. x).

9496². The staves (of the ark) had relation to the arms with man.

9514². Good is to truth as the body to the arms and feet.

9555. The branches of the candlestick have a similar signification to the arms and hands of man . . .

9715⁴. 'The arm that performed salvation for Him, and upon which they will confide = Own power, by which He subjugated the Hells.

9872. 'The wheels of the cherubs' have a similar signification to that of the arms and feet with man; namely, the power of acting and advancing; which is of truth from good.

10019⁶. 'Their arm has not saved them, but Thy right hand, and Thine arm . . .' (Ps. xlv.) . . . 'arm' = strength.

10030². By 'the breast and arms (of the statue)' is signified the second state of the Church.

10061⁴. 'His arm drying shall dry up' (Zech. xi. 17). 'Arm,' here, = the power of truth applied to confirm evil . . . See below, at E. 600¹⁷.

— 'Arm' = the power that is of truth from good.

10186. The horns of the altar also have relation to the arms and hands with man, by which is also signified truth in its power in ultimates, or extremes.

H. 3. Those who, within the Church, have denied the Lord . . . have their arms hanging down and dangling as though they were devoid of force in the joints. D. 6025².

65^e. The Ultimate or First Heaven forms the feet down to the soles, and also the arms down to the fingers; for the arms and hands are ultimates of man, although at the sides.

96. They who are in the arms and hands are in the power of truth from good.

97. Hence it is that . . . by the arms and hands is signified the power of truth.

231². In the greatest power are they who constitute the arms in the Grand Man, because they who are there, are in truths more than others, and into their truths there flows in good from the universal Heaven; the power of the whole man also goes into the arms, and the whole body exercises its force through them. Hence it is that by 'arms' and 'hands' in the Word there is signified power.

M. 325. Her husband had been . . . as it were her arm . . .

E. 386². 'They shall eat [every] man the flesh of his own arm' (Is. ix. 20) . . . = that evil will extinguish all truth, and falsity all good. . . 'The flesh of the arm' is the power of good through truth. 617²⁰.

411⁴. By 'the breast and arms of silver' is signified the Ancient Church.

435⁸. '(Gad) seizeth the arm, also the crown of the head' (Deut. xxxiii. 20) . . . = that he is nourished by outward and inward truths . . . for 'the arm,' and 'crown of the head,' in sacrifices, signified these things.

594⁵. 'Underneath are the arms of the world' (Deut. xxxiii. 27) . . . 'The arms of the world' are Divine truths where men are; the truths of the sense of the letter of the Word are what are meant by 'the arms of the world;' for that sense is the very strength itself of Divine Truth; 'arms' signify strength.

600¹⁷. 'Woe to the shepherd of naught that deserteth the flock! the sword upon his arm, and upon his right eye, his arm drying shall dry up' (Zech. xi. 17) . . . By 'the sword upon his arm' is signified falsity destroying all the good of the will. . . That they must be deprived of all good and truth is signified by 'his arm drying shall dry up, and his right eye darkening shall be darkened.' See above, at A. 10061⁴.

608². By 'the arm of His strength,' etc. (Is. lxii. 8), 'is meant the Lord as to Divine Truth, thus the Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord.

684²². 'With whom My hand shall be firm, Mine arm also shall strengthen him' (Ps. lxxxix. 21) . . . 'The hand' = the omnipotence of truth from good, and 'the arm,' the omnipotence of good through truth.

Armageddon. Armageddon.

R. 707. 'Armageddon'=a state of combat from falsities against truths, and a disposition to destroy the New Church arising from the love of rule and of pre-eminence.

—². In Heaven, Armageddon=the love of honour, of rule, and of pre-eminence, and in Hebrew also aram or arom=loftiness, and in old Hebrew, Megiddo=love from loftiness. Ill. E.1010.

839. An army of armageddoni, seen and Des. T.113.

—⁴. In Heaven, Armageddon=the state and disposition to combat from falsified truths, arising from the love of rule and of pre-eminence.

Army. Exercitus.

A. 82. 'The heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them.' . . 'The host of them' are love, faith, and the knowledges thereof, which before were signified by 'the great luminaries,' and 'the stars.'

1808⁶. 'The host of the heavens and the stars (trampled down by the he-goat)' (Dan.viii.) are goods and truths.

2760². 'The armies in the Heavens who followed Him upon white horses' (Rev.xix.)=those who are in the understanding of the Word as to interior things. W.H.1².

3448. 'Phicol the General of his army' (Gen.xxvi.26) . . . 'army'=the doctrinal things themselves . . . and also, in the opposite sense, false, or heretical things. Ex. and Ill.

—². 'The host of the heavens'=truths.

— Since 'army,' in a good sense, is truth, it is said that 'he cast of the host to the earth,' and then that 'he cast down truth to the earth' (Dan.viii).

—⁴. 'His army who followed Him in Heaven' (Rev.xix.)=truths thence, thus those in Heaven who are in truths.

—⁵. 'By the Word of Jehovah were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth' (Ps.xxxiii.6). 'The host of them,' or of the heaven=truths.

— Since by 'an army' is signified truths, the sons of the Kingdom, and the Angels, from the truths in which they are, are called 'the host of the Heavens,' as in Luke; 'Suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God' (ii. 13). (Further Ill.) 'The host of the Heavens' (in these passages)=truths; thus the Angels, who are in truths.

—⁶. 'I will put the camp at My house concerning the army' (Zech.ix.8) . . . 'The Lord's army'=Divine truths. For this reason, and also because the Lord alone fights for man against the Hells . . . the Lord is many times called in the Word 'Jehovah Zebaoth' . . . that is, of armies. (See ZEBAOOTH.)

—⁷. Since the twelve tribes of Israel represented the Lord's heavenly Kingdom, and since 'tribes,' and also 'twelve,' signified all the things of faith in one complex; that is, all the truths of the Kingdom, they were called 'the armies of Jehovah.' Ill. 3858⁸.

—⁸. That by 'armies' are signified truths, Ill.

—⁹. That 'armies,' in the opposite sense, are falsities, Ill.

3614². That the stars, which are called 'the host of the heavens,' are knowledges, thus truths; and, in the opposite sense, falsities, Refs.

4236. An army=truths and goods.

4581⁸. 'The hosts of the heavens,' in the genuine sense, are truths; but in the opposite, falsities.

4769⁸. 'The host of the heavens, and the stars' (Dan. viii.), are the knowledges of good and truth.

5717². Such were they who formerly slaughtered whole armies . . . D.1783.

6535. 'It was an exceeding great army' (Ex.1.9)=truths and goods conjoined . . . 'An army'=truths and goods.

7236. 'By their armies' (Ex.vi.26)=according to the genera and species of good in truths. . . 'An army'=the truths that are of faith. But the goods of the Spiritual Church, in their essence, are nothing but truths . . . Hence by 'an army,' when said of the regenerate within the Spiritual Church, are signified the goods of truth, or goods in truth. Its being said that the Sons of Israel are to be brought forth 'according to their armies,' is because it is said of them at the time when they will go forth from Egypt; in the inward sense, when they will come out of combats with falsities; thus after they have practised spiritual warfare. Their being brought forth 'according to armies' properly means, that they were to be distinguished as to goods in truths, thus into classes according to the quality of good; and this in order that they might represent the Lord's kingdom in the Heavens . . .

7277. 'I will bring out My army, My people, the Sons of Israel'=that they are to be delivered who are in truths and goods. . . 'Army'=all kinds of good in truths.

7808. Because in this same day I brought forth your armies from the land of Egypt' (Ex.xii.17)=because there was then a state of charity and faith, through which separation took place from those who are in evils and falsities. . . 'Armies'=those things which are of charity and faith.

7988. 'All the armies of Jehovah went forth from the land of Egypt' (Ex.xii.41)=that those who were in truth from good . . . were taken out. . . 'The armies of Jehovah'=the truths and goods that are of the Spiritual Church, thus those who are in truth and good.

8019. 'As to their armies' (Ex.xii.51)=these distinguished according to the quality of good from truth. . . 'Armies'=goods and truths. 'As to armies' signifies that those who are represented by the Sons of Israel were distinguished according to the quality of good from truth . . . for all good has its quality from truth.

8138. 'In Pharaoh and in all his army' (Ex.xiv.4)=the immersion in Hell of those who are in falsities from evil. . . By 'the army of Pharaoh' are signified the falsities themselves. 'Armies' are truths from good; and thence, in the opposite sense, falsities from evil. 8156. 8188.

[A.] 8275. 'The chariots of Pharaoh and his army hath he cast into the sea' (Ex.xv.3)=that the falsities from evil, both specifically and in general, of those who are of the Church and in a life of evil there, cast themselves into the Hells at His presence. . . 'Army'=falsities in general.

9642⁶. 'To the host of the heavens' (Dan.viii.)=against all the goods and truths of Heaven.

9987. 'All the host of them' (Ps.xxxiii.6) are the Angels, in so far as they are receptions of Divine Truth. . . 'The host of the heavens'=Divine Truths.

10217². 'Army' is the truths and goods of the Church and of Heaven. Refs.

10225⁹. By 'army' are signified truths arranged in such an order that they do not fear falsities and evils, but repel them if they make an attack.

R. 447. 'The number of the armies of the horsemen two myriads of myriads' (Rev.ix.16)=reasonings about faith alone, with which the interiors of their minds were filled from mere falsities of evil in abundance. By 'armies' are signified goods and truths, and in the opposite sense, evils and falsities, here, falsities of evil. E.573.

—³. That by 'armies' in the Word, are signified the goods and truths of Heaven and the Church, and in the opposite sense, evils and falsities, may be evident from the places where the sun, moon, and stars are called 'an army,' and by 'the sun' is signified the good of love, by 'the moon,' the truth of faith, and by 'the stars,' the knowledges of good and truth; and contrariwise in the opposite sense. Ill.

826. 'The armies in Heaven followed Him upon white horses' (Rev.xix.14)=the Angels in the New Christian Heaven who are conjoined to the Lord in the interior understanding of the Word. . . By 'the armies in Heaven' are meant the Angels who are in Divine truths and goods.

833. 'I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make war with Him Who sat on the horse, and with His army' (Rev.xix.19)=that all the inwardly evil, who have professed faith alone, with their leaders and their adherents, will make an assault on the Lord's Divine Truths in His Word, and will infest those who will be of the Lord's New Church. . . By 'their armies' are signified all among them who in like manner are in falsities.

—^e. By 'army' are signified those who are in Divine Truths; thus, abstractedly, Divine Truths, and thus those who are of the Lord's New Heaven and New Church.

E. 155³. 'The army of Jehovah' is said of those who are in truths.

275¹¹. 'The host of the heavens'=all things of love and faith.(=all the truths and goods of Heaven and the Church. 316¹⁶.)

401²⁰. 'The host'=all evils.

—²³. 'Praise Him all His host'=goods and truths in the whole complex.

403³. 'The host of the heavens' (that is, the sun, moon, and stars)=all the goods and truths that are of love and faith. 453⁷.

444⁷. 'The host of the heavens'=the knowledges of truth and good in the spiritual man; 'the sand of the sea,' those knowledges in the natural man.

573². By 'armies,' in the Word, are signified truths from good fighting against falsities from evil; in the opposite sense, falsities from evil fighting against truths from good. Ex. and Ill.

— That they signify all truths from good, is evident from the fact, that the sun, moon, and stars, and also the Angels, are called 'the army of Jehovah,' because they signify all truths from good in the complex; and that the Sons of Israel, because by them are signified the truths and goods of the Church, are called 'an army.' Ill.

—⁴. By 'the host of the heavens, of which he cast down to the earth' (Dan.viii.) are meant the truths and goods of Heaven . . . 632⁵.

—⁵. That the Angels gathered together, or the consociation of them, are called armies, is because by 'Angels,' in like manner as by 'armies,' are signified Divine Truths and Goods, since they are receptions of them from the Lord.

—⁶. The reason the Sons of Israel are called 'armies,' in the plural, is that each tribe is called 'an army.' Ill. . . The reason the tribes were called 'armies,' is that the twelve tribes, taken together, represented all the truths and goods of the Church, and each tribe, some universal essential of it.

—⁸. By 'the armies of the heavens' are here meant the sun, moon, and stars, because by these are signified all goods and truths in the complex; but here, all falsities and evils in the complex . . . Ill.

—¹³. 'When ye shall see Jerusalem encompassed with armies' (Luke xxii.20) . . . =the Church occupied by falsities.

—¹⁴. 'Thou goest not forth with our armies' (Ps. xlv.9)=that He did not protect them, because they were in falsities of evil.

—¹⁵. 'The locust, the grub, the unwinged locust, and the caterpillar, My great army that I sent among you' (Joel ii.25). That falsities and evils of every kind are signified by 'the army,' is manifestly evident.

A. 2762². The signification of a horse . . . was derived to the wise men round about.

2973. 'In all its border round about'=exterior knowledges. . . 'Borders,' and 'round about'=those things which are exterior.

—². Those parts that were round about (Zion and Jerusalem in the Land of Canaan), even to the boundaries, represented celestial and spiritual things flowing forth and derived thence in order. Ex.

—⁶. With those whose interiors are darkness, and the exteriors appear as if they were lucid . . . when those things that are round about are destroyed, they are carried headlong into Hell. These things were represented by the city of Jericho, the walls of which fell after the priests with the ark had gone round it seven times . . . and are what are meant in Jeremiah; 'Set yourselves in array against Babylon round about all ye that bend the bow, sound upon her round about, she hath given her hand, her foundations are fallen, her walls are destroyed' (I. 14, 15).

5344. 'What things were round about it, he gave in the midst thereof' (Gen.xli.48)=what things were being in the exterior Natural, he stored up in the interiors of the interior Natural. . . 'Round about'=the things that are outside, thus that are in the exterior Natural.

6723. 'She took a coffer of bulrush'=what is meant that is round about, but is still derived from truth. . . 'A coffer,' or little ark=that which is round about, or that in which something is enclosed.

8815. 'The voice of a trumpet heavy'=the heavenly state that is around.

8823. What is around and without is general relatively to that which is in the middle, or within.

E. 335. By 'around' in the Word is meant that which is in the further boundaries, thus what is distant; but where Heaven is treated of, there is meant what is distant in degree of intelligence and wisdom, thus what is below.

462. 'To stand around'=conjunction.

Arphaxad. Arphachschad.

A. 1223. 'The sons of Shem, Elam and Ashur, and Arphaxad . . . ' (These) were so many nations, by which are signified those things which are of wisdom; by 'Elam,' faith from charity; by 'Ashur,' reason thence; by 'Arphaxad,' science thence. 1227. 1230. 1235. 1329. 1334. 1336. 1339. 1341.

1227. With these nations there was an inward Church.

Arrogate. Arrogare.

Arrogance. Arrogantia.

Arrogantly. Arroganter.

A. 1396. A certain Spirit who wanted to arrogate merit from his acts . . .

4156². Through scientific things they confirm not only evil of life, but also principles of falsity, and this arrogantly and with persuasion . . .

4949. They are in a certain kind of stupidity, for such arrogance extinguishes and suffocates the light of Heaven, thus intelligence.

6203⁹. He then makes evils allowable and clever, and at length even creditable and honourable, such as . . . various kinds of arrogance and boasting . . .

N. 322. The king who regards himself as being above the laws . . . arrogates to himself that which is Divine.

P. 257. They do indeed say that they have not arrogated the Divine power to themselves . . .

Arrow. Sagitta.

See DART and SHAFT.

A. 2686². Arrows, darts, etc. are the doctrinal things from which and with which they combat; especially those who are spiritual, and who on that account were formerly called Shooters with the bow.

2709. Darts, shafts, or arrows=truth. . . That truths of doctrine, or rather doctrinal things, are called 'shafts,' 'darts,' and 'arrows,' Ill.

2799². 'A cleansed arrow' (Is.xlix.2)=truth of doctrine.

E. 357. 'Arrows,' 'darts,' and 'shafts'=the truths of doctrine that combat. Ill.

—¹². In the opposite sense, 'a bow'=the doctrine of what is false fighting against truths and goods and destroying them, and 'the shafts' and 'arrows,' the falsities themselves thereof.

—²⁵. By 'the arrows that will be consumed upon them' (Deut.xxxii.23) is signified that they will be imbued with all evils and falsities.

Arrow-snake. Serpens jaculus.

A. 6399. 'An arrow-snake upon the path'=reasoning from truth concerning good. . . 'An arrow-snake'=reasoning concerning good . . . for 'a serpent'=reasoning, and therefore 'an arrow-snake'=that which throws itself forward; namely, from truth to good; for the truth with those who are represented by 'Dan' is below, and the good is above.

Arsenal. Armamentarium.

A. 6661². The word in the Original Language for 'stores,' also means arsenals, and also treasuries, which, in the inward sense, have almost the same signification. . . Arsenals are where the arms of war are stored up, by which are signified such things as are of truth fighting against falsity, and in the opposite sense, of falsity fighting against truths. . . Thus by 'cities of stores,' or 'of arsenals,' or 'of treasuries' are signified in general doctrines from falsified truths.

Art. Ars.

Under ARCHITECTURE.

A. 695. By means of arts unknown in the world, and by which they know how to induce exquisite sensations . . . also phantasies . . .

831². (Such) seize there upon arts unknown in the world . . . These are, that they can speak as if they were somewhere else, so that the voice is heard as if it came from good Spirits, in another place ; that they can be as it were together with many at once . . . ; that they speak as many at once, and in many places at the same time ; that they can turn away the things that flow in from good Spirits . . . and at once pervert them into their own favour ; that they can induce the likeness of another by means of ideas which they take and effigy ; that they can inspire into anyone an affection for themselves, by insinuating themselves into the very state of another's affection ; that they can suddenly snatch themselves away out of view, and go off invisible ; that they can represent before Spirits a bright flame around the head . . . ; that they can simulate innocence in diverse modes, even by representing infants whom they kiss ; they also inspire others, against whom they bear hatred, to murder them . . . 1983².

[A.] 1495^e. In (the thought and faculty of judging) lie hidden all the arcana of art and of analytical science . . .

1820⁴. Besides innumerable other arts . . . See EVIL SPIRIT at this ref., and at 7501.

522³. The magicians . . . thence learned illusory arts, by means of which they performed their magical miracles.

6493. Evil Spirits by their arts found out how to produce a sphere, whence came misfortunes that had every appearance of being from chance.

6621. They who, in the life of the body, have studied the critical art when they read the Word . . .

6692². In the other life they are very prone to magic . . . especially those who, in consequence of having trusted in themselves, and of having ascribed all things to their own prudence, have excoagitated many arts and cunning [devices] in order to uplift themselves above others . . .

7296². They who, in the life of the body, have been used to cunning, and have excoagitated many arts of defrauding others, and at last, from their success, have attributed all things to their Own prudence, in the other life learn magic . . .

7297. 'Enchantments' = the very arts themselves of perverting order. By 'sorceries' and 'enchantments' in the Word, wherever mentioned, is signified the art of presenting falsities so as to appear as truths, and of presenting truths so as to appear as falsities, which is especially done by means of fallacies.

7437². Then break forth evils, either through arts, or through hostilities . . .

8383. Evil Spirits of our Earth were once permitted to act by means of their evil arts, and to infest the Spirits of Jupiter . . .

9353. The reason the Word could be written on our Earth, is that the art of writing has been here from the most ancient time . . .

9793. Arts (on our Earth which are not on others), as that of ship-building, of the casting of metals, of writing on paper, and of printing the same . . . D.4663¹.

10286. 'The man who shall make ointment like it' = the imitation of Divine things from art . . . The reason imitation from art is signified, is that all imitation of Divine things from man is done from art.

— (Spirits) who attribute all things to fortune, and to their own prudence, and nothing to the Divine, as they had done in the world, know how to imitate Divine things by various methods ; for they present to view palaces such as there are in the Heavens ; they present to view groves and fields almost like those which are from the Lord with good Spirits ; they adorn themselves with splendid garments ; yea, Sirens even induce on themselves a beauty almost angelic ; but all these things from art by means of phantasies . . .

10409⁶. Those of them who, by means of machinations, arts, and cunning, have come to honours, or riches, there become magicians . . .

10755^e. In the world he had been . . . most pathetic, so that he could powerfully move his hearers to holiness, but that pathos had been an acquired art, thus from himself and the world, and not from Heaven.

10777. The reason there is success with the evil according to their arts, is that it is from order for everyone to do what he does from reason, and also from freedom ; wherefore unless man were left to act according to his reason from freedom, and thus also unless the arts which are thence succeeded, man could not be at all disposed to receive eternal life . . .

H. 185. Such is the architecture of Heaven, that you would say the art is there in its art ; and no wonder, because that art itself is from Heaven. M.12².

229. Numbers are of no avail against (the Angels), nor arts, cunning, and confederacies.

241^e. Hence it is that the art of music is skilled to express various kinds of affections.

576. On the malice and wicked arts of infernal Spirits. Gen. art.

580. The nature of the malice of infernal Spirits may be evident from their wicked arts ; which are so many, that it would fill a whole book to enumerate them, and many books to describe them. They have arts unknown to almost all in the world. One kind has reference to the abuses of correspondences ; another, to the abuses of the ultimates of Divine order ; a third, to the communication and influx of thoughts and affections by means of conversions, by means of inspections, and by means of other Spirits outside of themselves, and by means of emissaries ; a fourth, to operations by means of phantasies ; a fifth, to ejections out of themselves, and thence presences elsewhere . . . ; a sixth, to simulations, persuasions, and lies. Into these arts does the spirit of an evil man come of itself when loosed from its body, for they are in the nature of its evil in which it then is. By means of these arts they mutually torment each other in the Hells. But however, as all these arts, except those which are carried on by simulations, persuasions, and lies, are unknown in the world, I am unwilling to describe them here specifically ; both because they are not comprehended, and because they are wicked.

J. 58^e. They who were (in the western quarter) had excoagitated wicked arts, in order to keep the common people under the yoke of their dominion, and also to compel others to submit themselves to that yoke ; these arts it is not allowable to describe, because they are wicked. They were such as are described, generally, in H. 580.

C. J. 18. They were permitted to form Societies for themselves, and to live together as in the world, and there, by arts unknown in the world, to present to view splendid things, and thereby to persuade themselves and others that they were in Heaven.

R. 793. See ARTIFICER at this ref., and at E. 1186.

M. 14^e. The heavenly forms, on which were the dishes and plates, were forms of art from wisdom, and which in the world cannot be produced by any art, nor described by any word . . .

T. 120. From this cause, and from wicked arts unknown in the natural world, the (World of Spirits) is as full of wickedness as a stagnant pond is of frog-spawn.

123³. This is said because very many in Hell are skilled in arts unknown in the world, and which they practise among themselves, how to advance upon, ensnare, obsess, and attack those who are of Heaven.

665⁴. We then turned to the company that consisted of the learned, among whom were also many practised in the art of physic.

D. 4239. See SIREN at this ref.

De Conj. 93. Women (there) fascinate men, and men, women, by diabolical arts, which are many, but which it is not allowable to recount.

Artery. Arteria.

H. 95. The heart reigns (in the body) through the arteries and veins . . .

W. 391. The pulsation . . . of the arteries (with Spirits and Angels).

408^e. In this way the arteries (of the heart) participate in the pulmonic motion . . .

412. The determinations of the heart, which are arteries and veins, correspond to affections; and in the lungs, to affections of truth.

413². This follicular substance is such that it can be expanded and contracted in a twofold state . . . in one state with the heart, through the pulmonary arteries and veins, which are from the heart alone; and in a state almost separate from the heart, through the bronchial arteries and veins, which are from the vena cava and aorta.

420. The same thing is effigied in the lungs, the arteries and veins of which correspond to affections that are of love . . .

T. 147^e. Every artery (consists) of coats in a triplicate series.

577². The heart acts, and the artery, from its coverings, or coats, co-operates; hence is the circulation.

Article. Articulus.

A. 362. Wherever there is any Church, there heresies arise, because when they are thinking about a single article of faith, they make it the principal thing . . .

T. 336^e. The articles of faith (of the New Church) are these . . .

Articulate. Articulare. Articulus.

Articulation. Articulatio.

A. 608. Together with outward breathing came the speech of words, or of articulate sounds, into which were determined the ideas of thought. 1120.

1118. 'The speech (of the men of the Most Ancient Church), when they lived in the world, was not articulate, like the speech of words of our time . . .

— By such speech they could much more fully express the feelings of the mind, and the ideas of the thought, than can ever be done by articulate sounds, or sonorous words . . .

1759. The speech of celestial Spirits cannot easily inflow into articulate sounds or words with man. Why.

6057. Hence are articulate sounds, or words, and harmonious sounds . . .

10587^e. (The Spirits of the fourth Earth) said that they do not know what articulation-articulatum-of sound is.

10588. Their breathing . . . is not articulated on the way as it goes out into sound, as is done with us in the trachea and larynx.

10708. They said that the inhabitants (of the fourth Earth) have no articulate speech such as I have, but still that it ceases in what is sonorous with a sort of speaking that is as it were articulate. Ex.

H. 235. The Angels have an atmosphere, in which the sound of their speech is articulated.

236. The sound of the speech corresponds to their affection, and the articulations of the sound, which are words, correspond to the ideas of thought that are from the affection. 241.

248^e. The speech of an Angel and of a Spirit . . . flows down into the tongue, and vibrates it lightly, but not with any motion, as when the sound of the speech is thereby articulated into words by the man himself.

W. 280. The Angels know a man's love from the sound of the speech, his wisdom, from the articulation of the sound . . .

T. 135. Then were heard ineffable voices from the Heavens, which, when collected, were articulated into this utterance . . .

351. The articulations of each [subject] make series . . .

Artifice. Artificium.

Artificial. Artificialis.

A. 521. He who knows how to think well, has no need to learn to think from what is artificial . . .

1298². 'Hewn stones, and those upon which the iron has been moved' signified things artificial, and thus counterfeit things of worship; that is, what are from the proprium, or from a production of the heart of man; which was to profane worship.

1648. The speech of good Spirits, and of angelic Spirits

... in choirs, has often been heard by me ... no words, or ideas flow in ... to which there adheres anything artificial ...

5188. There are some in the world who act by means of artifices and lies, whence come evils ... the means (they make use of) are deceits, lies, and artifices-artificiosa. Such relate to the sores called tubercles ...

8633. (The inhabitants of Jupiter) do not care for things artificial.

C. J. 57. (Thus the formation again of artificial Heavens is guarded against.)

M. 207³. There are (in Heaven) ... handicrafts and works. T. 694³.

D. 251. That artificial things, relatively to natural ones, are of no value. 252, Ex.

656. False miracles are those which are contrived by evil Spirits, or Devils, by artificial methods ...

657. Evil Spirits study nothing more than ... to imitate those things which are of Heaven, in order by imitations and artifices to make game of minds ...

755. 756 (Index). That the delights and deliciousnesses produced by evil Spirits are like the artificial things in the world [made of] colours and wax.

1629-1635 (Index). I was shown by means of a choir, who wanted to celebrate the Lord by means of representations, and I perceived that it was from themselves, thus artificial-artificiosum ...

1992 (Index). Artificial. That good is turned into evil and truth into falsity, in the World of Spirits, from deceit, from art, or from nature.

2558. Whatever is done artificially, closes the way towards interior things. Ex.

2627. Bread cut with a knife is that which counterfeits what is celestial ... as everything done artificially ...

3750. (On a Spirit who was delighted with artifices for their own sake.)

3948-3955 (Index). Aristotle said that he is a fool who wishes to think from what is artificial, for these things are seen from thought, not thought from things artificial.

4561. There was one whom I supposed to be a good Christian, because he was in natural good, and did his work eagerly; he was also good-natured, and at the same time very ingenious in his handicraft, but I observed that he would not have been of that character if he could have helped it ...

— The evil turn that (sphere) to themselves, with every artifice of dominion ... but the good make use of no artifice, but simply say that that is not good, and do not add artifices, or inspire desires and pleasures, as the evil do.

Artificer. Artifex. See WORKMAN.

A. 421. 'Tubalcain, an instructor of every artificer in brass and iron' = the doctrine of natural good and truth.

424. By 'an artificer' is signified in the Word one who is wise, intelligent, and knowing-sciens; here, by 'the artificer in brass and iron,' those who are knowing in natural good and truth. As in John; (Rev. xviii. 22.) 'Every craftsman of every craft' = one who is knowing, or the science of truth and of good. In Isaiah; 'The artificer casteth a graven image ... he seeketh for himself a wise artificer to prepare a graven image' (xl. 19, 20) = those who invent for themselves what is false (a 'graven image') from phantasy, and teach it so that it appears as true.

—². In Jeremiah '... gold (is brought) from Uphaz, the work of the artificer, and of the hands of the founder ...' (x. 9), which words signify one who teaches falsities, and compiles from the Word wherewithal to produce a figment ... These persons were formerly represented by artificers who produce idols, or falsities ...

3574². 'All of it the work of the craftsmen' (Hos. xiii. 2) = Own intelligence.

8932⁶. 'All of it the work of the craftsman' = that everything is [done] by means of reasonings from proprium.

8941⁷. 'The artificer' (Is. xl.) = those who hatch and produce from proprium ...

9424⁵. 'The work of the craftsmen' (Hos. xiii.) = doctrine from man's Own intelligence, and not from the Lord, thus from the outward sense of the Word separated from the inward; which has place with those who are in outward things only, and not at the same time in inward ones; that is, with those who are in the loves of self and of the world, and not in love to the Lord and love towards the neighbour.

10406⁴. 'The artificer' (Is. xl.) is the man who forms (what is false) from his Own intelligence.

Life 39. That good loves truth may be illustrated by comparisons with ... an artificer. If he devotes himself with assiduity to his work, and loves it as the good of his life, he buys tools, and perfects himself by means of such things as belong to his science: thereby he causes his work to be good.

R. 793. 'Every craftsman of every craft-artis-shall be found in thee no more' (Rev. xviii.) = that with those who are in that religiosity from doctrine and from life according to it, there is not any understanding of spiritual truth, and thence not any thought of spiritual truth either, in so far as it depends upon themselves. By 'an artificer,' in the spiritual sense of the Word, is signified one who is intelligent, and from understanding a thinker; in a good sense, a thinker from understanding of truths which are heavenly, and in an evil sense, a thinker from understanding of falsities which are infernal. And since both the former and the latter are of many kinds, and every kind is of many species, and each species of many kinds and species again, which however, are called particulars and singulars, therefore it is said 'the craftsman of every craft.' By 'craftsmen' also, from their handicrafts and arts, from correspondence, are signified such things as are of wisdom, intelligence, and science. It is said from correspondence, because every work of man corresponds, and in like manner every operation, if only it be for some use, to such things as are of angelic intelligence. To certain things or subjects of angelic intelligence (correspond the works) of artificers in gold, silver, and precious stones; to others, those of artificers in brass, iron, wood, and stone; and to others, those of artificers in other desirable uses, as in cloth, linen, garments, and things to wear of various kinds . . .

—². That 'an artificer'=those who are in the understanding of truth, and thence in the thought of truth. III.

—³. In the opposite sense, by 'the work of the artificer,' is signified that work which is done from Own intelligence, from which nothing but what is false can be produced. III.

M. 207⁶. They were afterwards conducted about the city (in the Spiritual World) . . . to see the wonderful works that are executed in a spiritual method by the artificers. T.694⁶.

E. 585¹¹. By the work of a 'smith,' 'artificer,' and 'workman,' in the Word, is also signified that of doctrine, religion, and worship which is from Own intelligence; hence it was that the altar, and also the Temple, was, from command, built of whole stones.

587⁴. By 'the artificer,' and 'the caster,' also by 'the wise artificer whom he seeks for himself' (Is.xl.) is meant him who produces and forms such doctrine (as is produced from his Own intelligence).

1186. 'Every craftsman of every craft shall be found in thee no more'=no more wisdom, intelligence, and science. 'The craftsman of every craft'=everything that is of the understanding; hence, wisdom, intelligence, and science . . . The reason 'the craftsman of every craft' signifies these things, is that these things are endowments of the understanding, and its endowments are signified by 'crafts.' Ex.

1712⁶. He is like one who will not learn anything unless he has a revelation; or like one who will teach nothing unless the words are infused into him; or like one who will attempt nothing unless he is actuated as one devoid of will. Yet if this were done, he would be still more indignant to be like an inanimate thing; when, nevertheless, what is animated by the Lord with man, is that which appears as if—tanquam—it were from him; as that man does not live from himself, which is an eternal truth; yet unless he appeared as if he lived from himself, he could not live at all.

1904³. Man can never think as from himself from intellectual truth, but from rational and scientific truth, because this appears as his.

2196³. [If it be said] that man has no life except that which is from the Lord; the Rational, from appearances, supposes that he cannot live as from himself; when yet he first truly lives when he perceives that it is from the Lord.

2290⁶. It was given to perceive . . . how an opportunity was given to (the little children) of thinking the same things as from themselves.

2877. What a man does as from himself is [done] in freedom.

3325. 'Sell as today thy birthright to me'=that as to time the doctrine of truth was apparently prior. . . 'As today'=as to time. . . 'Today'=what is perpetual and eternal; and lest it should have this signification here, it is said 'as today;' and thus by 'as' is signified that it is apparently so.

3938². From the being—esse—that is Jehovah are all the things which appear as if they are.

4286⁶. In the Ultimate Heaven . . . they do not love others more than themselves, but as themselves . . .

4319. Neither man, Spirit, nor Angel thinks, speaks, and acts from himself . . . however completely it may appear as from himself.

7401. That thou mayest know that there is none like unto Jehovah our God'= . . . that there is no God besides Him.

8497. The enjoyment of all good and truth as if from proprium, Sig.

—². It is said as if from proprium, because the good that is of faith and of charity cannot be given to a man or an Angel so as to be his Own . . .

Life 31⁶. Every man can, as of himself, shun evils from Divine power, if he prays earnestly for it.

96. See AUTOMATON at this ref.

101. Man ought to shun evils as sins, and fight against them, as from himself. Gen.art.

W. 115. An Angel does not perceive otherwise than that he is in love and wisdom from himself . . . and hence as if love and wisdom were his own . . . Nor is it possible that the Lord can be in any Angel or man, unless he, in whom He is with love and wisdom, perceives and feels them as his own . . . Who can will to love the Lord and the neighbour, and who can will to be wise, unless he feels and perceives what he loves, learns, and imbibes as his own? Who otherwise can retain it? M.132⁶.

116. Since (freedom and rationality) are intimately conjoined to his life, so intimately that they may be said to be joined into it, they therefore appear as his Own . . . and what he thinks, wills, speaks, and acts from them appears as if from himself.

394². The Lord, for the sake of His reception by man, makes it appear that life is as it were man's.

P. 42. The more closely that man is conjoined to the Lord, the more distinctly he appears to himself as if he were his own . . . Gen.art. 43². 44.

43. Whatever a man thinks, wills, speaks, and does from freedom, he perceives as his own.

54. It appears as if the Infinite could not be conjoined with the finite . . .

—^e. Thus the finite is capable of containing the Infinite, not the finite in itself, but as in itself, from the Infinite from itself, in it.

76. Who can have this pleasure of affection, unless that with which he is affected appears as his? . . . If anyone from his own affections should infuse anything into the mind of another who had no affections for knowing and understanding as from himself, would he receive, nay, could he receive it? . . . Hence it may be evident that although all things flow in . . . still it is of the Lord's Divine Providence that it should appear as the man's. 116.

78³. There is not anything proper to man, but it appears to him as if there were.

— . All good that a man does from freedom according to reason is appropriated to him as his own, because in thinking, willing, speaking, and doing, it appears to him as his own . . .

79⁴. Goods . . . are constantly of the Lord with man, and so far as man acknowledges this, the Lord grants that good should appear to man as his; that is, that it should appear to man that he loves the neighbour, or has charity, as from himself; that he believes, or has faith, as from himself; that he does what is good, and understands what is true, thus is wise, as from himself.

88². It follows that man wills and understands nothing from himself, but only as from himself.

90. It follows that man cannot do this from himself, but from the Lord; but still he can do it as from himself; this the Lord gives to everyone.

92³. The Reciprocal with man is this; that the good which he wills and does from freedom, and the truth which, from that willing, he thinks and speaks according to reason, appear as if from him; and that this good in his will, and this truth in his understanding, appear as his. Yea, they appear to man as from himself, and as his, altogether as if they were his.

96⁵. It is this will of the Lord that causes what a man thinks, speaks, wills, and does to appear in the man as his.

100. It is a law of the Divine Providence that a man should as from himself remove evils as sins in the outward man . . . Gen.art. 102.

164⁵. As freedom is not taken away from man, man can be led and taught no otherwise than according to reception as by himself.

210. Unless a man as from his Own prudence disposes all things that are of his employment and life, he cannot be led and disposed by the Divine Providence . . .

321. It is from a law of the Divine Providence that man should think as from himself, and should act prudently as from himself, but still should acknowledge that it is from the Lord. (He who does this) is a man.

R. 224⁹. Wherefore man can reform and regenerate himself as from himself, provided that he acknowledges in his heart that it is from the Lord. Everyone who performs repentance, and believes in the Lord, is reformed and regenerated. Man must do both as from himself, but as from himself is from the Lord. . . Do it from yourselves, and believe that it is from the Lord; thus you do it as from yourselves. But then the Englishmen inquired, whether to act as from one's self, is implanted in man from creation? An Angel answered, It is not implanted, because to act from Self is of God alone, but it is given continually; that is, adjoined continually; and then, so far as a man does what is good, and believes what is true, as from himself, he is an Angel of Heaven; but so far as he does what is evil, and believes what is false, which also is as from himself, so far he is an Angel of Hell. That this also is as from himself surprises you, but still you see that it is so, when you pray that you may be guarded from the Devil . . . But everyone incurs guilt who believes that he acts from himself, whether it be good, or whether it be evil; but guilt is not incurred by him who believes that he acts as from himself. B.69³. T.621⁹.

376. See Ask at this ref.

541². The one thing from which man is man, and by which he is conjoined with the Lord, is his being able to do what is good, and believe what is true, as from himself; that is, as from his own will according to his own judgment.

566^e. For the Lord in His Word enjoins every man who wills to be saved to do what is good to the neighbour as from himself, and yet to believe that it is from the Lord.

875⁹. There then came upon me a longing to know how man can do what is good from God, and yet as from himself. Fully Ex. T.461.

M. 134⁵. Man becomes a 'likeness of God' by his feeling these things in himself, as from himself. This he feels because he is not born into knowledge, but receives it, and what he receives appears to him as if from himself. To feel thus is also given to man by the Lord, that he may be a man, and not a beast, since by willing, thinking, loving, knowing, understanding, and being wise as from himself, he receives knowledge and exalts it into intelligence, and through its use, into wisdom. Thus the Lord conjoins man to Himself, and man conjoins himself to the Lord.

269^e. Every man is constituted of the three loves above mentioned; namely, the love of use, the love of the world, and the love of self . . . in order that he may think from God, although as from himself. . . The highest things in man are turned upwards to God, the middle ones, outwards to the world, and the lowest, downwards to self; and because the latter are turned downwards, man thinks as from himself, when yet [he does so] from God.

I. 14¹. For man thinks and wills as from himself, and this as from himself is the Reciprocal of conjunction. . . God alone acts, and man suffers himself to be acted upon, and reacts in all appearance as from himself, although interiorly from God. T.588^e.

T. 371⁶. For the Lord acts, and man receives action from the Lord, and operates as from himself; thus of himself from the Lord. This operation of man is imputed by the Lord to him as his . . .

438. No one can of his Own power purify himself from evils . . . but still it cannot be done without the man's power and force, as if they were his Own.

442. If there is a belief that all the good which a man does as from himself, is from the Lord, the man is then the instrumental cause, and the Lord is the principal cause, which two causes appear before the man as one . . .

576². Wherefore the power of acting well is from the Lord, and hence the will of acting is as of the man, because he is in free-will . . .

E. 554. 'Their faces were as the faces of men' = that they appeared to themselves as spiritual affections of truth. . . By 'faces' are signified . . . affections of truth; but here, that they appeared to themselves as affections of truth, and thence intelligent and wise, because it is said of the locusts that their faces were seen 'as the faces of men.' See also R.433.

1134². Everyone can see that a recipient of life cannot act at all from itself . . . but still it can act as from itself . . .

—³. The Angels of the higher Heavens feel this plainly, and the wisest of them do not even will to think and to will as from themselves. Ex.

As it were. Tanquam.

R. 47. 'His head and His hairs were white as wool, as snow.' 48. 50. E.69.

617. 'They sung as it were a new song . . . ' = the celebration and glorification of the Lord in the New Christian Heaven; here, specifically, that He is acknowledged as the God of Heaven and earth, as He is acknowledged in the ancient Heavens; the expression 'as it were' involves this; for 'as it were a new song' is as it were this is new, when yet it is not new.

659. 'I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire' = the last boundary of the Spiritual World, where they were gathered together who had religion and worship thence derived, but not good of life. . . Since a gathering together of these is signified, it is said 'as it were a sea of glass.'

Ascend. Ascendere.

Ascent. Ascensus.

A. 951. They are kept in the most intense desire to ascend into Heaven . . .

1543. 'Abram went up out of Egypt' = from scientific things. . . 'To go up' is predicated of coming forth from lower things, which are scientific, to higher ones, which are heavenly.

1871. When (the literal sense of the Word) is being read by man, especially by a little boy or girl; as it ascends, it becomes, by degrees, more beautiful and delightful . . .

1874^e. Thus perishes the sense of the letter, as it ascends, and becomes spiritual, then celestial, and at last Divine. 1876. 3382.

1875^e. These ideas were purified as they ascended higher; the ascents were represented by rejections.

2098. 'God went up from Abraham' = the Lord's entrance into the former state (of glorification).

3084. '(Rebecca) went up' = elevation. Ex.

— Hence it is that 'going up' is predicated of going towards Jerusalem, but 'going down' of going from Jerusalem; also from Jerusalem to Zion, and from Zion to Jerusalem . . . 4539³, Ill. and Ex. . .

3391². 'To go up into the houses' (Joel ii. 9) = to destroy the goods that are of the will.

3436. 'Isaac went up from thence to Beersheba' = that the doctrine of faith was thence Divine.

3701. 'Behold the Angels of God ascending and descending upon it' = infinite and eternal communication, and conjunction thence derived. That from the lowest there is as it were an ascent, and afterwards, when the order is inverted, a descent, is evident from the signification of 'the Angels,' which is something Divine of the Lord.

—². How the case is with this ascent and descent, may be evident from what has been said above. Refs.

—^c. Thus by those truths which were of man's infancy and childhood, the Angels of God as by a ladder ascended from earth to Heaven; but afterwards, by the truths that belong to his adult age, the Angels of God as by a ladder descend to the earth.

3702. All goods and truths descend from the Lord, and ascend to Him; that is, that He is the First and the Last; for man is so created, that the Divine things of the Lord may descend through him to the ultimates of nature, and from the ultimates of nature ascend to Him. Fully Ex. 3726.

3759. By the four sons of Jacob by Leah is described in the supreme sense the ascent from outward truth to inward good; but in the representative sense, the state of the Church . . . that it ascends to interior things according to this order . . . 3902.

3762. What is treated of in the whole of this chapter; namely, ascent to the truths of love.

3882. '(Leah) stood still from bearing' = ascent by a ladder from the earth even to Jehovah, or the Lord. Ex. 3939^e.

—². It is also this ascent which is signified by the ladder seen by Jacob . . .

— Descend then follows, for man cannot descend until he has first ascended . . .

3901². 'They shall go up with strong wing as eagles' = to grow as to the understanding of truth, thus as to the Rational.

3909. Every natural affection, when it ascends towards interior things, or towards Heaven, becomes milder, and at length is changed into a heavenly affection.

4009. The Natural of man on one side communicates with the sensual things of the body, and on the other, with the rational things of the rational mind; by means of these intermediates there takes place as it were an ascent from sensual things which are of the body and open towards the world, to rational things which are of the rational mind and open towards Heaven; thus also a descent from them; namely, from Heaven to the world. This takes place in man alone. It is this ascent and descent which are treated of in the inward sense of these chapters.

4042. Hence now it is, that by man alone is there a descent from the Heavens into the world, and an ascend from the world into the Heavens. It is the brain, and its interiors, by which the descent and ascend take place . . .

[A.] 4283. (The man who wrestled with Jacob said to him) 'Let me go, because the dawn goeth up'=that temptation ceased when conjunction was at hand. 4300.

4539. 'Arise, go up to Bethel'=perception concerning the Divine Natural. 'To arise' involves elevation . . . 'To go up'=more towards interior things.

—². The reason 'to go up'=towards interior things, is that interior things are what are called higher; therefore when advancement towards interior things is treated of in the inward sense, 'going up' is spoken of, as from Egypt to the Land of Canaan; and in the Land of Canaan itself, toward the more interior parts. Ill. 5406².

4578. 'God went up from above (Jacob) in the place in which he spake with him'=the Divine in that state . . . for 'to go up' involves elevation to interior things, and when it is predicated of the Lord . . . elevation to the Divine.

4815. 'To go up' involves elevation to good. Ex.

4853. '(Judah) went up to the shearers of his flock'=something of elevation, to take counsel for the Church. 'To go up'=to be elevated; namely, from what is exterior to what is interior. 4969.

5202. 'Behold seven other kine coming up after them out of the river'=falsities that are of the Natural, also in the boundary. . . That they were in the boundary is also manifest from the fact of its being said that 'they came up from the river'; for 'to come up' is predicated of advancement from what is exterior towards interior things. 5268.

5406. In various places in the Word 'going up' and 'going down' are mentioned, as from one place to another, not because one place was in a higher situation than another, but because 'going up' is predicated of going towards more interior or higher things, and 'going down,' of going towards more exterior or lower things; that is, 'going up' is predicated of going towards spiritual and celestial things, for these are interior, and are also believed to be higher; and 'going down,' of going towards natural and earthly things, for these are exterior, and also, in appearance, lower.

5492². Angelic thought and speech are . . . spiritual, (human thought and speech) are natural; the former falls into the latter when it descends, and the latter is turned into the former when it ascends . . .

5817. 'When we go up to thy servant my father'=elevation to spiritual good.

5964. '(Joseph's brethren) went up out of Egypt'=departure from the scientific things of the Church. 'To go up thence'=to depart. . . Here, by 'going up' is signified going away.

6007. 'I will also make thee come up in coming up'=elevation afterwards. 'To come up'=elevation.

6348. 'Because thou wentest up on thy father's bed'=because separate from the good of charity it has filthy conjunction.

6523. 'There went up with him all the servants of Pharaoh'=that it adjoined to itself the scientifics of the Natural. 'To go up with him'=to adjoin to himself . . .

6658. '(Lest) they go up out of the land'=that so the Church will be established. 'To go up'=to be elevated; namely, towards the interior things that are of the Church.

6855. 'To make him go up out of that land'=that they should be elevated; namely, from the place and state where they are being infested by falsities. 'To make to go up'=to be elevated.

6897. 'And I say, I will make you go up from the affliction of Egypt'=elevation and deliverance from infestation by false scientific things. 'To make to go up'=elevation towards interior things. (Refs.) Elevation towards interior things is elevation from infestation by falsities to the truths and goods of faith; hence also 'to make to go up' is deliverance. 8570.

7675. 'It shall come up upon the land of Egypt'=an outpouring into all things there. 'To come up'=to be poured out. For the 'locust'=what is false in the extremes, and its passing from the extremes towards the interiors is called 'coming up.'

7976. '(A mixed multitude) went up with them'=that were adjoined. 'To go up with them,' when said concerning goods and truths,=that they were adjoined.

8279. Truth from good is of such a nature, that it ascends to higher things, like a light body in the world.

8456. 'The deposit of dew went up'=the insinuation of truth. 'To go up,' here,=to be dissipated, and thus not to appear in view.

8760. 'Moses went up to God'=truth from the Divine which is below Heaven, conjoining itself with Divine Truth which is in Heaven. . . 'To go up'=to conjoin itself, for he who goes up to the Divine conjoins himself to it, as when mention is made of 'going up into Heaven,' there is meant being conjoined with the Lord . . .

8795. 'Take heed to yourselves coming up into the mount'=no extension at all to the heavenly Societies that are in the love of good. 'To come up'=to the Divine that is in a higher Heaven. 8803.

8797. It sometimes happens that they who are in a lower Heaven strive to ascend into a higher Heaven. (The consequence.)

8835. 'The people cannot come up to Mount Sinai'=that they cannot elevate themselves to the Celestial Kingdom. . . 'To come up'=to elevate.

8841. 'Come up, thou and Aaron'=conjunction with truth from the Divine, inward and outward. 'To come up,' namely, to Jehovah=conjunction. 9373. 9380. 9415.

8945. 'Thou shalt not go up by steps unto Mine altar'=no elevation to interior things, which are celestial. 'To go up by steps'=to elevate themselves to higher, or more interior things.

—⁴. If those who are below Heaven desire to ascend into Heaven before they have been prepared, when they are elevated thither, they feel torment almost infernal, and appear to themselves as corpses . . .

9435. The degrees of ascension from the people to the Lord are thus described . . .

9436. 'He went up to the mount'=elevation to Heaven. 'To go up'=elevation towards interior things.

10202. 'In making the lamps to ascend between the evenings, Aaron shall fumigate it'=elevation even in an obscure state of love, when truth also is in its shade. 'To make the lamps ascend,' or to kindle them=to enlighten by Divine Truth, and intelligence and wisdom thence derived.

—^e. 'To make to ascend'=to elevate and augment the light of truth as much as possible.

10400. 'To make the Sons of Israel come up from the land of Egypt'=elevation from the natural or outward man to the inward or spiritual man, in order to be made a Church. 10409. 10421.

10499. 'And now I will go up to Jehovah'=elevation of the interiors to the Lord. 'To go up'=elevation towards interior things.

10677. 'In thy going up to see the faces of thy God three times in a year'=when there is the Lord's presence in the truths of faith.

H. 35. No one can ascend from a lower Heaven, nor can anyone descend from a higher Heaven. He who ascends from a lower Heaven is seized with anxiety even to pain, nor can he see those who are there, still less speak with them; and he who descends from a higher Heaven is deprived of his wisdom, falters in his voice, and is in despair. (From experience.) W.179.

48. The hypocrites . . . then quickly cast themselves down into the Hell where are their like, nor do they venture to ascend any more.

335. They first represented the Lord ascending from the sepulchre . . .

—². Afterwards I saw represented by them the descent of the Lord to the bound, and his ascend with the bound into Heaven . . .

353. Their learning does not ascend beyond such things as appear in the world before the eyes . . .

L. 35¹¹. Since the Lord ascended into Heaven with the Divine and the Human united into one . . . it follows that His Human substance or essence is as His Divine one. . . This union of the Father with the Son, or of the Divine with the Human, is meant in . . . 'If therefore ye shall see the Son of Man ascending up where He was before' (John vi.62); 'No one hath ascended into Heaven, except He who came down from Heaven' (John iii.13). Every man who is saved ascends into Heaven, not of himself, but still from the Lord. The Lord alone ascended of Himself.

W. 65. The uses of all things that have been created, ascend through degrees from ultimates to man, and through man to God the Creator . . . Gen.art.

66. There are three degrees of ascend in the natural world, and three degrees of ascend in the Spiritual World . . .

67. How man ascends; that is, is elevated, from the ultimate degree to the first.

110. An Angel of the Ultimate Heaven cannot ascend to the Angels of the Third Heaven, for if he does ascend and enter their Heaven, he falls as it were into a swoon, and his life wrestles as with death. Ex.

199. All perfections grow and ascend with degrees, and according to them. Gen.art.

— Of degrees of height it is said that they ascend, or descend . . .

218. These ascending and descending degrees, which are also called prior and posterior, also degrees of height, and discrete, are in their power in their ultimate. Ex.

235. These things are said generally, concerning the threefold ascend of the degrees of height . . .

P. 34. The ascend of love according to degrees is not perceived by man, except very obscurely, but the ascend of wisdom, clearly, with those who know and see what wisdom is. Ex.

R. 226. 'Come up hither'=elevation of mind; for in the Spiritual World, the higher anyone ascends, into the purer light he comes, by which the understanding is, by degrees, opened; that is, the mind is elevated. 512. E.263.

513. 'They ascended into heaven in a cloud'=an uplifting into Heaven . . .

611. All who have been prepared for Heaven . . . see a way . . . which they enter, and ascend, and in the ascend there is a gate . . . T.622.

675^e. Then we went away from them, and behold steps before our eyes, by which we ascended, and returned above the earth . . .

861. 'They went up upon the breadth of the earth . . .'=that being stirred up by the dragonists, they spurned all the truth of the Church . . . for 'to go up upon'=to climb over and pass by, thus to spurn.

M. 10². (Various Spirits give an account of their experience when attempting to ascend into Heaven.)

11. (Ten Spirits were chosen, and followed the Angel to Heaven. Their ascend described.)

144. The deliciousnesses of this love ascend and enter Heaven . . .

294⁸. The deliciousnesses of marriage love ascend to the highest Heaven . . .

302. Upon true marriage love is inscribed this order, that it ascends and descends; it ascends from its first heat progressively towards their souls, with an effort to effect conjunctions there . . . but at the same moment at which that love ascends towards their souls, it also descends towards the body, and thereby clothes itself. . .

Marriage love in its descent, is such as it is in the height to which it ascends; if it [ascends] high, it descends chaste; if it does not [ascend] high, it descends unchaste. Ex.

[M.] 305. Into this lowest (degree) man is born, but he ascends into a higher one, which is called spiritual, by a life according to the truths of religion, and into the highest, by the marriage of love and wisdom.

415°. Protection was then given to the Satans, and with the two Angels they ascended into Heaven . . .

E. 422. 'I saw another Angel ascending from the rising of the sun'=the Divine Love going forth from the Lord. . . 'To ascend thence'=to go forth and proceed.

669. 'Come up hither'=separation, and protection therefrom. 670.

889. 'The smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever'=dense falsity encompassing them, and flowing forth from their loves continually. . . 'To ascend'=to encompass and flow forth. Ex.

8088. 'I sacrifice to Jehovah every opening of the womb, the males'=that the faith of charity, which is of the new birth, is to be ascribed to the Lord.

— By ascribing is meant not claiming for one's self, but confessing and acknowledging that it is from the Lord.

9223. 'The first-fruits of thy corn, and the first-fruits of thy wine, thou shalt not delay'=that as all goods and truths are from the Lord, they are to be ascribed to Him, and not to self.

—³. That the first-fruits were to be given to Jehovah, signified that the first of the Church consisted in ascribing to the Lord all the goods and truths of faith, and not to self. To ascribe to the Lord, is to know, acknowledge, and believe that they are from the Lord, and nothing of them from self. 9300.

9224. 'The first-born of thy sons thou shalt give to me'=that also all things of faith which come by them, are to be ascribed to the Lord, and not to self. Ex.

9300. Goods and truths have their life from the Lord when they are ascribed to Him.

10175½. By 'the expiation of everyone by silver' is signified the ascription of all the things of worship to the Lord, and nothing to self, that no one may have merit.

10220. 'This shall give everyone that passeth, upon

10227. 'A rich man shall not give more, and a poor one shall not give less, from the half of a shekel, to give to Jehovah'=that all, of whatever capability, are alike to ascribe to the Lord all things of truth from good.

—². All have the faculty of understanding and of being wise, but the reason one is wiser than another, is that they do not in like manner ascribe to the Lord all things of intelligence and wisdom, which are all things of truth and good. They who ascribe all things to the Lord, are wiser than others, since all things of truth and good, which constitute wisdom, flow in from Heaven, that is, from the Lord there; the ascription of all things to the Lord opens the interiors of man towards Heaven . . .

—³. By the faculty of being wise, is meant . . . the faculty of clearly seeing what is true and good, of choosing what is suitable, and of applying it to the uses of life; they who ascribe all things to the Lord, clearly see, choose, and apply; but they who do not ascribe them to the Lord, but to themselves, only know how to reason about truths and goods; nor do they see anything except what belongs to others; not from reason, but from activity of memory . . .

10299⁴. Man ought to think, will, and act as of himself, and yet ascribe to the Lord everything of the thought of truth and of the endeavour of good; thereby there is implanted in him by the Lord the faculty of receiving Him, and influx from Him.

10660. 'Every opening of the womb is for Me'=that all the good of innocence, of charity, and of faith, is to be ascribed to the Lord.

—². It is said that these things are to be ascribed to the Lord; that is, it is to be acknowledged that they are from Him; for unless they are acknowledged and believed to be from the Lord, they are not goods . . .

717. Since by redemption are meant deliverance from Hell, conjunction with Him, and salvation . . . therefore these fruits are ascribed to man; not, in very deed, as much as the Lord wills, because, from His Divine Love, He wills to ascribe all things, but in so far as man receives . . .

Asher. Ascher.

A. 3939. 'Asher,' in the Original Language, signifies blessedness, but involves all those things which are signified by the words of his mother Leah, 'in my blessedness, because the daughters will make me blessed;' namely, the delight of the affections corresponding to the happiness of eternal life. This is the fourth general principle that conjoins the outward man with the inward . . .

—². 'Asher' is mentioned in various places in the Word, but there is there signified by him, as also by the rest [of the tribes], the quality there treated of; that is, of what quality they are in that state to which the subject there has reference; and [the signification] is also according to the order in which they are named . . .

4609. 'The sons of Zilpah the handmaid of Leah, Gad and Asher'=things serviceable to exterior things. . . By 'Asher,' in the supreme sense, is represented eternity; in the inward, the happiness of eternal life; in the outward, the delight of affection.

6024⁴. 'The sons of Asher; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Ishui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister: and the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel'=the happiness of eternal life, and the delight of the affections, and their doctrinal things. 'These are the sons of Zilpah'=that these are of the outward Church.

6408. 'From Asher'=the blessedness of the affections; namely, of the celestial ones, which are of love to the Lord, and of charity towards the neighbour; as is evident from the representation of 'Asher,' which is, the happiness of eternal life, and the blessedness of the affections; for 'Asher' was so called from blessedness. Ex.

R. 353. 'Of the tribe of Asher were sealed twelve thousand'=mutual love, which is the love of doing the good of use to the community or society prevailing with those who will be of the Lord's New Heaven and New Church. By 'Asher,' in the supreme sense, is signified eternity; in the spiritual sense, eternal blessedness; and in the natural sense, the affection of good and truth; but here, by 'Asher,' is signified the love of doing uses, which prevails with those who are in the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, and is there called mutual love . . . He was also named from blessedness, and they who are in the love of doing uses to the community and to society, in Heaven, are in blessedness above all others.

D. Index. Deliciousnesses can also be produced by Spirits who do not live in order; thus they are 'the deliciousnesses of a king,' or 'Asher.'

E. 70³. 'Asher,' as one of the tribes, signifies the happiness of life, and the delight of the affections.

438. 'Of the tribe of Asher were sealed twelve thousand'=charity towards the neighbour, and that all who are in it are in Heaven, and will come into Heaven. 'The tribe of Asher'=spiritual affection, which is charity. . . Charity towards the neighbour is signified by these three tribes; namely, Asher, Naphtali, and Manasseh.

—². By 'the tribe of Asher,' is meant charity towards the neighbour; by 'Naphtali,' their regeneration; and by 'Manasseh,' the good of life of those who are in that charity.

—³. But what 'Asher' signifies in the Lord's Kingdom, or in the Church, shall first be stated. 'Asher'=the blessedness of the spiritual affections, and thence, the spiritual affection itself, and since spiritual affection is what is called love towards the neighbour, or charity, hence it is that by 'Asher' is here signified charity; consequently, by the 'twelve thousand' from that tribe are here signified all who are in charity, and thus in the Second, or Middle Heaven . . .

—⁴. That 'Asher' signifies the blessedness which is of love and of charity, is further evident from the blessing of him by Israel . . . 'from Asher his bread shall be fat, and he shall give the deliciousnesses of a king.' 'From Asher'=from the celestial and spiritual affections, which are of love to the Lord and of charity towards the neighbour . . .

—⁵. By 'Asher' (in the blessing of him by Moses), and who is there mentioned in the last place, is signified the spiritual affection of truth from the Word . . .

—⁶. Since 'Asher'=the delight of the affections, such as is in those who are in truths from the sense of the letter, therefore that tribe encamped, together with the tribes of Dan and Naphtali, on the north.

—⁷. That 'Asher'=spiritual blessedness, which is blessedness from love and charity, is also evident in Ezek. xlviii. 2, 3; 34, 35. . . There also it is evident that by 'Asher' is signified the affection of spiritual truth, which makes one with charity towards the neighbour.

—^e. That by 'Asher,' in the supreme sense, is signified eternity; in the inward, the happiness of life from the blessedness of the affections which are of love and of charity; and in the outward, natural delight thence, Refs.

441. By the tribe of 'Asher,' is signified charity towards the neighbour, which is the very spiritual Internal itself of those who are in the Second, or Middle heaven.

—². By 'Asher' is signified the Internal, and by 'Manasseh,' the corresponding External.

Ashes. Cinis.

A. 2265. 'I am dust and ashes'=the humiliation of the human . . .

2327. See DUST at this ref., and at 4293³.

4779³. 'To roll themselves in ashes' (Ezek. xxvii. 30) =to be condemned on account of what is false.

9723. 'Thou shalt make pans for the sifting of the ashes—ad decinerantum'=the removing agents after uses. . . For 'ashes'=such things in the natural or outward memory of man as remain after uses, and which are to be removed, lest they should stand in the way of other things following, by which again there may be uses. Ex.

—³. The scientifics which have served for these uses are signified by the 'ashes' that are to be removed; and the knowledges of truth and of good, through which man attains spiritual life, after they have served their use; that is, have imbued life, are signified by 'the ashes of the altar,' which also are to be removed . . .

[A. 9723]⁹. 'Ashes,' in the opposite sense, = what is condemned, remaining after the consuming that is worked by the fire of self love.

P. 278a⁵. Like fire in wood, under the ashes. M. 365^e.

M. 151a⁶. Like a shrub raised up again from its ashes . . . T. 692⁴.

E. 391³⁰. That there was no worship whatever, is signified by 'the altar's being rent, and the ashes poured out' (1 Kings xiii. 3).

637⁹. 'To gird herself with sackcloth, and roll herself in ashes' (Jer. vi. 26) = mourning on account of the destruction of the good and truth of the Church.

—¹³. 'To perform repentance in sackcloth and ashes' (Matt. xi. 21) = to grieve and mourn on account of the non-reception of Divine Truth, and on account of the falsities and evils which have stood in the way.

1175. 'To roll themselves in ashes' (Ezek. xxvii. 30) = mourning still deeper [than is signified by the putting of dust on their heads]. For 'ashes' = what is condemned, because the fire that produces them signifies infernal love.

Ashes. Favilla.

A. 7519. 'Ashes of the furnace' = falsities of cupidities. E. 962⁸.

7520. That 'ashes' = falsity, may be confirmed from the places where 'ashes-cinīs' are mentioned, for they are from a similar origin. Ill.

T. 135⁴. As fire reduces wood to ashes,

Ashkenaz. Aschkenas.

A. 1154. 'Ashkenaz, Riphath, and Togarmah' were so many nations, with whom there was such (outward) worship, and by them are signified so many doctrinal things that were rituals, derived from the outward worship with 'Gomer.' Ill.

— The destruction of Babel is here treated of (Jer. li. 27), where 'Ashkenaz' = its idolatrous worship, or outward worship separated from inward . . . specifically, false doctrinal things.

Asia. Asia.

Asiatic. Asiaticus.

A. 4333. The Ancient Church was spread through a great part of the Asiatic world. 4680².

S. 102^e. In (our) Word are retained many names of places in the Land of Canaan, and round about it in Asia, in which they have a similar signification to that which they had in the ancient Word.

105³. The nations and peoples in Asia and the Indies constitute the last circumference (of the Grand Man).

R. 11. 'Which are in Asia' = to those who are in the light of truth from the Word. . . The reason why by 'Asia' are meant those who are in the light of truth from the Word, is that the Most Ancient Church, and after it the Ancient, and afterwards the Israelitish Church, were in Asia; also because they had the ancient Word, and afterwards the Israelitish one. 34.

—². Concerning that ancient Word that was in Asia before the Israelitish Word . . . T. 279³.

40. 'Send it to the Churches, to those in Asia' = for those in the Christian world who are in the light of truth from the Word.

M. 76⁴. (The Angels of the Silver Age were from peoples in Asia.)

78. (The people of the Iron Age visited, who were from the old inhabitants of Asia.)

D. 4643. There is a Hell where are they who, from falsities, are in evils of violence done to charity, as are they who, during their whole life, do nothing else than kill and plunder, as do many in Asia, and where there is a great desert.

4652. On a method by which they examine some of the Asiatic gentiles; to see whether they gravitate towards Heaven or towards Hell.

4676. Many of those who are in this middle Celestial Kingdom are from the gentiles of Asiatic regions, and very many of those who have been converted to the Christian religion by missionaries. These, when they acknowledge the Lord, and so receive faith, believe in the Lord, nor do they care about those tangled questions and arguments as to whether faith saves, or charity; nor about the Pope, as to whether he is the head of the Church; but they live as Christians. These, for the most part, are there, and enjoy eternal blessedness; blessedness and wisdom that can never be described . . .

4770. (On the commencing of a new Church) as it were in Asia, in the neighbourhood of Africa.

4774^e. It was perceived that those on Earth with whom there is the communication and influx, were round about the region of Africa, partly in Asia also, nearer the Indian sea, but not at the sea.

4779. I was afterwards brought back again, but higher up, where there were Spirits from the regions of the north part of Asia, and I perceived that, from their life in the world, they were of such a genius that they could receive the heavenly doctrine.

E. 21. 'In Asia' = those who are in the light of intelligence. The Angels, when Asia is mentioned, perceive the south . . . and since by 'the south' is signified the clear light of intelligence, that light is signified by 'Asia.' This also it has been granted to me to perceive, whenever I have been in a spiritual idea, and thought of Asia. The reason there is such an idea about Asia, is that the Church was there in ancient times . . . and therefore they who are in Heaven from thence are in the light of intelligence; whence it is that when Asia is thought of, light flows in such as there is in the south of Heaven. . . But still, by 'Asia,' here, are not meant those who are in Asia, but all, wherever they may be, who are in the spiritual light of intelligence; or, what is the same thing, who are in truths from good . . . All these constitute the Lord's Church. 58.

Ask. See under INQUIRE—interrogate.

Ask. Petere.

Asking. Petitio.

A. 2919. When assent is given to that which is asked for . . .

6674³. 'Whatever ye shall ask the Father in My name' . . . It is not meant here that they should ask the Father in the Lord's name, but the Lord Himself, for there is no way of approach open to the Divine Good which is 'the Father,' except through the Lord's Divine Human . . . wherefore, to ask the Lord Himself, is [to ask] according to the truths of faith, and whatever is so asked is granted; as also the Lord teaches in . . . John, 'If ye shall ask anything in My name, I will do it.' 9310³. R.618⁴.

9174. 'When a man shall borrow-commodato petiverit from his companion' = truth from another stock. . . The reason 'borrowing' has this signification, is that in the Spiritual World there are no other goods asked for from others, and given, than those of intelligence and wisdom. . . Hence it is manifest that 'to borrow'=to be instructed by another, and so to receive truths, or knowledges of truth and good from some other source than self. Ex.

—³. In the Word, where 'borrowing-mutuo petere-' and 'lending' are spoken of, there are signified being instructed, and instructing, from the affection of charity; as in Matthew, 'Give to everyone that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow-mutuum accipere-of thee, turn not thou away.' That here, by 'asking,' is not meant asking, is manifest, for it is said, 'Give to everyone that asketh thee' . . . for if a man were to give to everyone that asketh . . . he would be stripped of all his goods; but . . . by 'asking' . . . and 'giving' . . . is meant the communication of heavenly goods, which are the knowledges of good and truth. (See GIVE at this ref.)

S. 51³. 'Ask, and it shall be given you' . . . Without doctrine it is believed that everyone will receive who asks; but from doctrine it is believed, that whatever a man asks, not from himself, but from the Lord, is given; for this the Lord also teaches, 'If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.' R.951⁶. T.226³.

R. 376. We very often read in the Word that the Lord answers when they cry unto Him (Ill.); and also that He gives when they ask (Ill.); but still the Lord gives to them to ask, and also what they shall ask; wherefore the Lord knows it already; but still the Lord wills that man should first ask, in order that it may be as of himself, and so be appropriated to him. If the asking itself were not of the Lord, it would not have been said in these passages that they should receive whatever they ask.

T. 154⁶. The Divine of the Father is the soul of the Lord's Human, and the Human is His body, and the Human does not ask of His Divine to tell it what it shall say and do; wherefore the Lord says, 'In that day ye shall ask in My name, and I say not unto you, that I will ask the Father for you, for the Father Himself loveth you, because ye have loved me.'

E. 325⁸. 'All things that ye shall ask, praying, believe that ye shall receive them, then it shall be done unto you . . .' (Markxi.24). Here also by 'praying,' and 'asking,' in the spiritual sense, is meant the life of love and of charity; for to those who are in the life of love and of charity it is given by the Lord what they shall ask; wherefore they do not ask for anything but what is good, and it is done unto them. 815¹⁰.

411¹⁵. If they 'ask' from the faith of charity, they do not ask from themselves, but from the Lord; for whatever anyone asks from the Lord, and not from himself, he receives.

Ask. Rogare.

A. 8573. The simple think that the Lord sits with the Father . . . and asks Him to give the sinner to Him . . .

8582. 'And thou shalt smite the rock'=that they should urgently entreat the Lord.

Asleep. See LAID ASLEEP.

Asp. Aspis.

A. 3923. 'Dan shall be a serpent upon the way, an asp upon the path' . . . 'Dan,' here=the affirmative of truth, of which affirmative it is said, that 'it shall be a serpent upon the way, and an asp upon the path,' when it reasons about truth from sensual things. See ARROW-SNAKE.

9013³. Poison, in the Word, signifies deceit, and poisonous serpents; as 'asps,' 'vipers,' etc., signify the deceitful; as in David . . . 'Their poison is like the poison of a serpent, as that of the deaf asp' (Ps.lviii.4). 'They have sharpened their tongue like a serpent; the poison of an asp is under their lips' (Ps.cxl.3). In Isaiah, 'They lay the eggs of the asp, and weave spiders' webs; he who eateth of their eggs dieth' (lix.5). In Job, 'He shall suck the poison of asps, the viper's tongue shall slay him' (xx.16). In Moses, 'Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel gall of asps' (Deut.xxxii.33).

E. 355⁸. By 'a serpent upon the way, and an asp upon the path,' is signified the Sensual as to truth and as to good.

519⁷. By 'wine' (in Deut.xxxii.33) is signified the truth and good of faith, and that this is the External in which there is evil inwardly, is signified by 'their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel gall of asps.'

—⁹. That their good is thus infected with evil, and is cast out, is signified by 'his bread being changed in his bowels, and the gall of asps in the midst' (Jobxx.14) . . . 'The gall of asps' is good commingled with evil. That in like manner truth is cast out by falsity, is signified by . . . This falsity is meant by 'the poison of asps' (verse 16).

581⁴. The clandestine evils, to which they cunningly allure, are signified by 'the eggs of the asp which they lay.'

714²⁴. To destroy the interior and exterior falsities which are laying waste the truths of the Church, is signified by 'treading on the lion and asp.'

—²⁷. That their wine is called 'the poison of dragons, and the cruel gall of asps'=that the truth of the Church with the descendants of Jacob was external, containing within it infernal evils and falsities. 'Dragons' and 'asps' signify sensual things, which are the ultimates of the natural man full of heinous evils and the falsities which are used to confirm them.

Aspect. Aspectus. Look, To. Aspicere.

A. 1470. 'Thou art a woman beautiful in look'=that truth from a celestial origin is delightful.

1582. The (quarters) may be either on the right hand, or the left, according to a man's aspect.

2034^e. Each and all things are under His view, Refs.

3080. 'The damsel was exceedingly good in look'=the beauty of the affection of truth. 'Exceedingly good in look'=beauty.

3388. 'Because she was good in look'=that it might be easily received, from the fact of its being called Divine. 'Good in look'=that which, from its form, is pleasing, thus what is easily received.

3821. 'Rachel was beautiful in form and beautiful in look'=the affection of interior truth as to what is spiritual. . . By 'form' is signified essence, and by 'look,' beauty thence derived.

4288³. (In Divine worship) their aspect was towards the rising of the sun.

4985. 'Joseph was beautiful in form'=the good of life thence derived : 'and beautiful in look'=the truth of faith thence derived . . . for 'form'=the essence of the thing, but 'look'=the manifestation thence derived . . .

5199. 'Beautiful in look' [said of the seven kine]=what is of faith. . . Spiritual beauty is the affection of interior truth, and spiritual look is faith. Hence by 'beautiful in look' is signified the affection of the truth of faith.

—^c. The reason spiritual look is faith, is that to look, and to see, in the inward sense, is to understand, and, in a sense still more interior, to have faith.

5203. 'Evil in look'=what is not of faith.

5404. 'Wherefore are ye looking?'=why are they hesitating ?

8237. 'Israel saw the Egyptians dead on the sea shore'=the aspect of the damned scattered from various directions . . .

—, (What is meant by the aspect of the damned, Ex.)

8813³. 'The aspect of the Living Creatures' (Ezek. i. 13).

9434. 'The aspect of the glory of Jehovah'=the appearance of Divine Truth proceeding from the Lord. That 'aspect' is appearance before the eyes, is manifest.

9932^e. That which is in the general view of all people, and thus reigns universally in their minds, enters into everything of thought and affection . . .

H. 17^e. The quarters there . . . are determined according to the aspect of their faces.

121. As to His Person, the Lord is constantly encompassed with the Sun, but is in their presence by aspect ; for it is a common thing in Heaven for them to appear as present in the place where their look is fixed, or terminated, although it be very far away from the place where they actually are.

144. Although the aspect of all the Angels is to the east, they nevertheless have an aspect to the three other quarters also, but to these, their aspect is from their interior sight, which is that of thought.

185. At the boundaries were seen other palaces, in which the looks are terminated.

223. (In the places of worship in Heaven) no one is at either side, where the Preacher's look does not go.

229. If anything makes resistance which is to be removed because it is contrary to Divine order, the Angels cast it down, and overturn it, by a mere effort of will, and by a look . . .

232^e. An evil Spirit falls into a swoon when merely looked into by the Angels. . . The reason such an effect is produced by a look of the Angels' eyes, is that the sight of the Angels is from the light of Heaven . . .

254. The Lord spoke with the Prophets . . . through Spirits who were sent to them, and whom the Lord filled with His aspect . . .

—, (How Spirits are filled with the Divine of the Lord by aspect, Ex.)

344. I saw boys fighting ; a crowd gathered which looked on with great pleasure . . .

383. At the first look they deeply love each other, see that they are each other's partners, and enter upon marriage.

418^e. The reason why perfection in the Heavens grows according to plurality, is that all there have one end, and a unanimous look towards that end . . .

449. The communication of their thoughts was effected by looking into my face ; for communications of thoughts are thus effected in Heaven.

F. 43^e. The Angel then looked at him, and said, Come with me, my friend, and dwell with us. T. 391^e.

W. 52^e. In the Spiritual World . . . all things . . . appear around them in just such an aspect as that of the created universe, with this difference, that it is on a smaller scale.

125². The reason these are in oblique aspect is . . .

P. 29². The Lord looks at the Angels in the forehead, and the Angels look at the Lord with the eyes . . .

31^e. (The Lord is not in Heaven among the Angels as a King in his kingdom) ; as to aspect, He is above them in the Sun there ; but as to the life of love and wisdom, He is in them.

R. 297. 'Come and look'=manifestation . . . 304. 311. 319.

347². The Lord looks at-inspiciet-the Angels in their foreheads, and they, on the other hand, look at the Lord through the eyes ; the reason is, that the Lord views all from the good of love, and wills that, on the other hand, they should view Him from truths of wisdom ; thus is conjunction effected. E. 427. 852.

933². They who do not immediately approach the Lord, cannot be conjoined to Him, and therefore not to the Father, and so cannot be in the love that proceeds from the Divine; for the aspect conjoins; not the intellectual aspect alone, but the intellectual aspect from the affection of the will . . .

M. 42⁴. The colours (of her dress and the gems she wore) were variegated according to her aspect towards her husband, and according thereto sparkled, sometimes more, and sometimes less; in mutual aspect [that is, when face to face with him] more, and in oblique aspect [that is, when looking at him sideways] less.

44⁷. With the men there, all the nerves are relaxed at the sight of a harlot, and recover their tension at the sight of a wife.

267². Everyone is withheld from concupiscence of evil, and is kept in intelligence, according to his aspect towards the Lord, and, at the same time, according to conjunction with Him . . .

444⁶. The Lord looks at every man in his forehead, and this look passes through into the back of his head . . .

T. 151^e. (Such) a man does not follow the direction of his sight, but the delight of his flesh . . .

287^e. God, from his table, regards man; and man, on the other hand, from his, regards the Lord; and thus there is a reciprocal aspect . . .

296⁶. Does not this wise man kiss this picture, carry it home in his bosom, and gladden his own mind by the sight of it?

339². What follows therefrom, except that a man looks at God, as he looks at the ether?

380⁴. All who honour the Lord as the Redeemer and Saviour with the mouth and lips only, but regard Him with the heart and spirit as a mere man . . . —^c.

520². By the 'tree of life' is represented the aspect (of the first Church on this earth) towards the Lord Who was to come, and by 'the tree of knowledge of good and evil,' its aspect towards itself, and not to the Lord.

767². Every angel looks at the Lord before him, however he turns his body and face . . . This looking to the Lord in every turn, originates from the fact, that all truth . . . and good . . . are from the Lord . . .

E. 25. 'Who are in view—conspectus—of His throne'= presence and providence. . . That 'view'=presence, is because by 'view,' and 'sight,' are signified the understanding, and the thought thence derived, and in the understanding everything that is thought of is presented to view as present.

354. 'Come and look'=attention and perception. . . 'To look'=perception, for by 'seeing' is signified understanding; here, perceiving, because it is from the Innmost Heaven, 3716.

739⁸. 'Desirable in look' (Gen.ii.9)=what the understanding longs for.

Ass. Asinus.

She-Ass. Asina.

Ass's Colt, or Young Ass. Asellus.

A. 1486. Scientific things, regarded in themselves, are 'asses and men-servants'; their pleasures of those things, are 'maid-servants and she-asses.' (Gen.xii.16).

1949. 'Horses,' 'mules,' and 'asses,' when mentioned in the Word = intellectual, rational, and scientific things.

2567¹⁰. By 'men-servants and maid-servants, young men, and asses, by means of whom he will do his work' (1 Sam.viii.16) are signified rational and scientific things, by which he will confirm (falsities).

2781. 'Abraham saddled the ass'=the natural man whom he prepared.

— By 'a camel' is signified what is scientific in general; and by 'an ass,' what is scientific in particular.

—². There are two things which constitute the Natural with man . . . namely, natural good and natural truth; natural good is the delight flowing forth from charity and faith; natural truth is the Scientific of them. That natural truth is what is signified by 'an ass,' Ill.

— 'Young asses' (Is.xxx.6)=scientific things in particular.

—⁴. 'Sending the foot of the ox and of the ass' (Is.xxxii.20)=natural things that are of service. 'The ox'=the Natural as to good; 'the ass,' the Natural as to truth.

—⁵. 'Binding his ass's colt unto the vine, and the son of his she-ass to the noble vine' (Gen.xlix.11). 'Ass's colt'=natural truth; 'son of a she-ass'=rational truth. The reason 'the son of a she-ass'=rational truth, is because 'a she-ass'=the affection of natural truth, the son of which is rational truth.

—⁶. A Judge formerly rode upon a she-ass, and his sons upon ass's colts; the reason being that Judges represented the goods of the Church, and their sons, truths thence derived. Ill.

—⁷. 'A she-ass' represented and signified the affection of natural good and truth; 'a she-mule,' the affection of rational truth; 'an ass,' or 'ass's colt,' natural truth itself; and 'a mule,' and also 'the son of a she-ass,' rational truth. Ill.

—⁸. 'To ride upon an ass' (Matt.xxi.5) was a sign that the Natural was subordinated; and 'to ride upon a foal the son of a she-ass,' that the Rational was subordinated.

—¹⁰. As by 'an ox,' and 'an ass' is signified the natural man as to good and truth, there were many laws given, in which oxen and asses are mentioned. Ill.

3048³. 'To carry their wealth on the shoulder of young asses' (Is.xxx.6)=the knowledges which are in their Rational. 'A young ass'=rational truth.

—⁴. 'A chariot of an ass' (Is.xxi.7)=a mass of particular scientifics.

3154². 'Camels, asses,' etc. (Gen.xxiv.35)=truths in special.

4038. 'And camels and asses' (Gen.xxx.43)=the exterior and external truths of good. 'Camels'=general scientific things of the natural man. General scientific things are lower, or exterior, truths of good. And 'asses'=truths of natural good still lower, or external. —^c. 4244.

4264. 'Twenty she-asses and ten foals,' etc. (Gen.

xxxii.15)=things that serve, general and special. 'She-asses and their foals'=those things which are of the natural man.

[A.] 4506. 'And their asses' (Gen.xxxiv.28)=truths thence derived; namely, from natural and rational good.

4648³. 'In his feeding the asses of Zibeen his father' (Gen.xxxvi.24)=when he was in scientifics.

5492. 'They laded their provisions upon their asses' (Gen.xlii.26)=truths collected together into scientific things. . . 'An ass'=what is scientific.

—². These words are spiritually apprehended when the correspondences are understood in place of them; namely . . . scientific things which are in the Natural instead of 'asses'. That by 'asses,' in the Word, are signified things that serve; thus scientific things . . .

5495. 'To give fodder to his ass in the inn'=when they reflected about the scientific things in the exterior Natural. . . 'Ass'=scientific things.

5651. 'To take us for slaves, and our asses'=that whatever is in each Natural is of no account. . . 'Asses'=those things which are in the Natural, which are scientific things; here, in the exterior Natural; because the truths which are signified by the sons of Jacob, are in the interior Natural.

5670. 'He gave fodder for their asses'=instruction concerning good. By 'asses' are signified scientific things. Hence by 'giving fodder to the asses' is signified instruction concerning the good of scientific things.

5741. 'The men were sent away, they and their asses'=that the outward natural man was somewhat removed, with its truths and scientific things. . . 'Asses'=scientific things.

—². As to the signification of asses, it is to be known, that they have one signification when they served for riding on; for upon asses, she-asses, and mules rode the Judges, the Kings, and their sons, and they then signified rational, and also natural truth and good. Hence it was that the Lord, as a Judge, and also as a King, when He entered Jerusalem, rode upon a she-ass with a foal; for this was a sign of the judicial function, and also of the kingly one. But 'asses' had another signification when they served for carrying a burden, as here. They then signified scientific things . . . E.31⁷.

5774. 'Everyone laded upon his ass, and returned to the city'=that truths were brought back from sensual things into scientific things. 'An ass'=what is scientific.

5895². It was forbidden 'to plough with an ox and an ass together' (Deut.xxii.10), because 'to plough with an ox'=good in the Natural, and 'to plough with an ass'=truth there. 'An ass'=scientific truth, thus truth in the Natural. The interior or spiritual cause of this command was, that the Angels could not bear to have a separate idea of good and truth . . . 7601⁸. 10184⁷. 10669⁵.

5958. 'Ten asses carrying of the good of Egypt'=scientific things with many things that serve. . . 'Asses'=scientific things.

5959. 'And ten she-asses carrying corn and bread'=the truth of good and the good of truth. . . 'She-asses'=things that serve.

—^c. The reason 'she-asses' bore the corn and bread, and 'asses,' the good of Egypt, is that by 'asses' are signified things which serve in so far as they have reference to truth, and by 'she-asses' are signified things which serve in so far as they have reference to good.

6127. 'Asses'=things that serve.

6375. 'He binds his ass's colt to the vine'=truth in the Natural for the outward Church. . . 'An ass'=truth in the Natural. E.433⁴.

6376. 'And the son of his she-ass to the excellent vine'=truth from the Rational for the inward Church. . . 'The son of a she-ass'=rational truth. E.433⁴.

6389. 'A bony ass'=the lowest service. 'An ass'=service. Ex. E.445⁴.

6390. The works that flow from the affection of love (towards self) are like the burdens which the lower sort of asses carry.

7024. 'Moses made (his wife and sons) ride upon an ass'=those things which might serve the new intelligence. . . 'An ass'=truth serving; here, of new intelligence.

7503. 'Into the horses, into the asses, into the camels' (Ex.ix.3)=intellectual and scientific things of the truth that is of faith. . . 'Asses'=things that serve the Intellectual, thus also scientific things.

8078. 'Every opening of an ass thou shalt redeem in small cattle'=that faith merely natural must not be ascribed to the Lord, but the truth of innocence which is therein. . . 'An ass'=what is natural, for by 'an ass' is signified what is scientific, also what serves, and thus also the Natural, for scientific things are of the Natural, and the Natural, relatively to the Spiritual, is what serves.

8912. 'Ass'(in the tenth commandment)=the affection of natural truth. T.325. E.1022².

9086. 'And an ox or an ass hath fallen therein'=that it has perverted good or truth in the Natural. . . 'An ass'=truth in the Natural. Refs. 9088.

9134. 'From an ox even to an ass' (Ex.xxii.4)=from good or truth exterior. . . 'An ass'=the truth of the Natural.

9255. 'When thou meetest the ox of thine enemy, or his ass, going astray'=good not genuine, and truth not genuine, with those who are out of the Church. . . 'An ass'=the truth of the outward man.

9257. 'When thou shalt see the ass of him that hateth thee lying under its burden'=falsity not agreeing with the good of the Church, from which it is about to perish. . . 'An ass'=scientific truth; thus, in the opposite sense, scientific falsity.

9272⁶. 'To send forth the foot of the ox and of the ass'=to be instructed in outward goods and truths.

9280. 'That thine ox and thine ass may rest'=the tranquillity of peace for outward goods and truths together. . . 'Ass'=outward truth.

9755¹⁵. 'An ass'=the Natural, because it=what serves. Hence 'a millstone turned by an ass-asinaria'

10227⁵. 'An ass' (Is. xxx. 6) = science. Refs.

Ad. 3/7535. (The speaking of Balaam's ass, Ex.)

E. 140⁴. I will here explain . . . the arcanum about the she-ass on which Balaam rode . . . As Balaam rode on the she-ass, he continually meditated his sorceries against the Sons of Israel . . . By the 'she-ass' on which he rode, in the spiritual sense of the Word, is signified an enlightened Intellectual; wherefore to ride upon a she-ass, or she-mule, was an ensign of a Chief Judge, or of a King . . . Hence by the she-ass turning three times out of the way, is signified that an enlightened understanding does not agree with the thought of a sorcerer . . . It sounded to Balaam as if the she-ass had spoken to him, but still she did not speak; yet still the speech was heard as if from her. From experience.

355³³. 'White she-asses' (Judges v. 10) = the Rational as to good.

537⁶. 'Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit' (Luke xiv. 5). By 'an ass' and 'an ox' are signified the truth and good of the natural man . . .

654⁴. 'Asses' (Is. xxx. 6) = the things of the sensual man.

—⁶⁹. 'The flesh of asses' (Ezek. xxiii. 20) = man's Own Voluntary.

Assyria. *Aschur. Assyria.

Assyrian. *Aschur. Assyrius.

A. 118. 'The name of the third river, Hiddekel, it goeth to the east towards Assyria.' 'Assyria'=the rational mind. That the river 'goeth eastward towards Assyria'=that the clearness of reason comes from the Lord through the inward man into the rational mind, which is of the outward man.

119. That 'Assyria'=the rational mind, or the Rational of man, is manifestly evident in the Prophets; as in Ezekiel, 'Behold, Assyria is a cedar in Lebanon, beautiful in branch, and a shady grove, and lofty in height, and her shoot was among the dense [leaves]; the waters made her grow, the depth of waters exalted her, the river drawing round about the plant' (xxxi.3,4). The Rational is called 'a cedar in Lebanon.' 2588¹⁵. 2831⁶. (See below, 9489. E. 372⁴. 650²⁶.)

— Still more manifestly in Isaiah, 'In that day there shall be a path from Egypt to Assyria, and Assyria shall come into Egypt, and Egypt into Assyria, and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians. In that day Israel shall be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land, whom Jehovah of Hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt My people, and Assyria the work of My hands, and Israel Mine inheritance' (xix.23-25). By 'Egypt' . . . is signified science, by 'Assyria,' reason, and by 'Israel,' intelligence. 1186⁷, Ex. 1462³. (See below, 2588¹⁵. E. 313¹⁰. 340¹⁸. 654¹⁰.)

120. 'What hast thou to do in the way to Assyria, to drink the waters of the river (Euphrates)' (Jer.ii.18). 'Assyria'=reasonings from scientific things. 1186⁴. 5113⁴.

130. (With him who wills to be wise from the world) the [third] river, where is 'Assyria'=mad reasoning, the source of falsities.

655⁹. 'Assyria' (treated of in Zeph.ii.14)=the understanding, here, laid waste.

705². 'The Lord maketh to come up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, the King of Assyria, and all his glory, and he shall come up upon all his channels, and shall go upon all his banks, and he shall go through Judah, he shall inundate and go through, he shall reach even to the neck' (Is.viii.7,8), where 'the King of Assyria'=phantasies, false principles, and reasonings thence derived, which desolate man, and which desolated the Antediluvians. 1613³.

776⁵. 'Assyria,' which=the Spiritual Church, is treated of in Ezek.xxxi., and is called 'a cedar.'

870³. 'Ephraim shall be like a stupid pigeon with no heart; they have called Egypt, they have gone away to Assyria *' (Hos.vii.11). In the same, 'Ephraim, they shall tremble as a flying creature out of Egypt, and a dove out of the land of Assyria *' (xi.11), where 'Assyria *'=the Rational.

1071⁶. 'The threshing-floor and the wine-press shall not feed them, and the new wine shall tell lies in her, they shall not dwell in the land of Jehovah, and Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and they shall eat what is unclean in Assyria, they shall not pour[out] an offering of wine to Jehovah, they shall not be [going to Him]' (Hos.ix.2-4), where . . . 'Assyria *'=reasoning.

1164⁴. 'The King of Assyria shall lead the captivity of Egypt, and the captivity of Ethiopia, boys and old men, naked and barefoot, with their buttocks uncovered, the shame of Egypt' (Is.xx.4); here, . . . 'Assyria'=reasoning, which leads them captive. (See below, E.240³.)

1184. 'Out of that land went forth Asshur, and built Nineveh, and the city of Rehoboth, and Calah' (Gen.x.11) . . . 'Asshur'=reasoning.

1185. That 'out of that land went forth Asshur'=that those who were in such outward worship began to reason about the inward things of worship, may be evident from the signification of 'Asshur' in the Word, which is reason, and reasoning. A double meaning is apparent here, namely, that Asshur went forth out of that land, also that Nimrod went forth out of that land into Asshur, or Assyria. It is so said because both are signified . . .

1186. That 'Asshur'=reasoning, is evident from the signification of 'Asshur,' or 'Assyria,' in the Word, where it is constantly taken for those things which are of reason, in both senses, namely, for rational things, and for reasonings. By reason and rational things are properly meant those things which are true, but by reasoning and reasonings, those things which are false. 'Assyria,' because it signifies reason and reasoning, is for the most part joined to 'Egypt,' which signifies scientific things, because reason and reasoning are from scientific things.

— That 'Assyria'=reasoning, is evident in Isaiah; 'Woe to Assyria, the rod of Mine anger, he thinks not what is right, and his heart meditates not what is right, he hath said, In the strength of mine hand have I done it, and in my wisdom, because I am intelligent' (x.5,7,13); where 'Assyria'=reasoning, of which it is therefore declared that 'he thinks and meditates what is not right,' and it is said, 'by his own wisdom, because he is intelligent.' (See below.)

[A. 1186]. In Ezekiel, 'Two women, the daughters of one mother, have committed whoredom in Egypt, in their youth they have committed whoredom, one hath committed whoredom, and hath loved her lovers Asshur (the Assyrians) her neighbours, clothed in deep blue, leaders and governors, all of them young men of desire, horsemen riding on horses; the sons of Babel have come to her, and have polluted her by their whoredom' (xxiii. 2, 3, 5, 6, 17); where 'Egypt' = scientific things; 'Asshur,' reasoning; 'the sons of Babel,' falsities from cupidities. 6534⁵. Life 79². (See below, E. 141³, etc.)

—³. In the same, 'Jerusalem, thou hast committed whoredom with the sons of Egypt, thou hast committed whoredom with the sons of Assyria, thou hast multiplied whoredom even into the Land of Canaan to Chaldea' (xvi. 26, 28, 29). 'Egypt,' in like manner, = scientific things; 'Assyria' = reasoning. Reasoning from scientific things about spiritual and celestial ones is called 'whoredom.' That there was no whoredom with the Egyptians and Assyrians, everyone can see. (The 'sons of Assyria' = reasonings. 1368². 8904⁴.)

—⁴. In Jeremiah, 'Israel is a scattered sheep, the lions have driven him away, first the King of Assyria hath devoured him, and here at last the King of Babel hath made away with his bones' (l. 17). 'Assyria' = reasoning about spiritual things.

—⁵. In Micah, 'There shall be this peace; when the Assyrian shall come into our Land, and when he shall tread down our palaces, and we shall set up upon him seven shepherds, and eight princes of men, and they will eat up the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in his gates, and he shall deliver from the Assyrian, when he shall come into our Land, and when he shall tread our border' (v. 5, 6). Here, Israel, or the Spiritual Church, is treated of, of which it is said, that 'the Assyrian shall not enter,' that is, that reasoning shall not.

—⁶. That 'Assyria,' in the Word, is also reason with the man of the Church, by means of which he clearly discerns what is true and good, is evident in Hosea, 'They shall tremble as a bird out of Egypt, and as a dove from the land of Assyria' (xi. 11); where 'Egypt' = the science of the man of the Church; and 'Assyria,' the reason of the same.

1188. By 'Nineveh' are signified falsities of doctrinal things . . . There are falsities of this kind from three origins; the first is the fallacies of the senses, the darkness of an understanding which is not enlightened, and ignorance; hence is the falsity called 'Nineveh.' The second origin is from the same cause, but with a predominating desire either of innovating, or of being pre-eminent; the falsities thence derived are 'Rehoboth.' The third origin is of the will, thus of cupidities; they not being willing to acknowledge as truth anything except what favours their cupidities; the falsities thence derived are what are called 'Calah.' All these falsities arise by means of 'Asshur,' or reasoning about the truths and goods of faith. III.

1189. The King of Assyria carried away the Sons of Israel into Asshur, or Assyria (2 Kings xvii. 6; xviii. 11) . . . 'Israel,' here, = the perverted Spiritual Church; 'Assyria,' reasoning.

1223. 'The sons of Shem, Elam and Asshur,' etc. (Gen. x. 22). By 'Shem' is signified the inward Church; by 'the sons of Shem,' those things which are of wisdom. 'Elam, Asshur,' etc. were so many nations, by whom are signified those things which are of wisdom; by 'Elam,' faith from charity; by 'Asshur,' reason thence derived. 1227.

1238². (Assyria * included among the countries of the Ancient Church. See ANCIENT CHURCH at this ref.)

1368. 'Behold the land of the Chaldeans, this people is not, the Assyrian hath founded it in tziim, they will set up their watch-towers, they will raise up their palaces, he will set it for a ruin' (Is. xxiii. 13). 'The land of the Chaldeans who are not a people' = falsities; 'The Assyrian hath founded it' = that reasonings have done so.

1463². 'Thus said the Lord Jehovih, My people went down at the beginning into Egypt to sojourn there, and the Assyrian oppressed him for nought' (Is. lii. 4); where 'the Assyrian' = reasonings.

1888². 'Thus saith the Lord, Jehovah of Hosts, Fear not My people, inhabitant of Zion, on account of the Assyrian; with a rod he shall smite thee, and shall lift up a staff upon thee in the way of Egypt: Jehovah of Hosts will stir up a scourge upon him, according to the plague of Midian at the rock of Horeb . . .' (Is. x. 24, 26) . . . That by 'the Assyrian' is signified reasoning, which is the subject here treated of . . . 4876⁵.

1949³. 'For they have gone up to Assyria, a wild ass alone by himself . . .' (Hos. viii. 9) . . . 'To go up to Assyria *' = to reason about truth, as to whether it is truth.

1951. 'They dwelt from Havillah, even to Shur, that is towards the faces of Egypt, by which one cometh into Assyria . . .' (Gen. xxv. 18) . . . 'Assyria *' = what is of reason.

2466³. 'To commit whoredom with the sons of Assyria' (Ezek. xvi. 28) = to pervert by means of reasonings. 'Assyria' = reasoning.

2468¹⁴. 'Assyria' also is associated with them, they are an arm to the sons of Lot' (Ps. lxxiii. 8) . . . 'Assyria' which is an arm to the sons of Lot' = reasoning by which they fight for outward things and attack inward things.

2588¹¹. In all these passages, by 'Assyria,' as before shown, is signified reasoning . . . and there is here described, as in many other places, of what quality the Rational of man becomes, when it reasons from a Negative about the truths of faith.

— The same is involved [in this]. When Rabshakeh was sent by the King of Assyria, and spake against Jerusalem and King Hezekiah, the Angel of Jehovah then smote in the camp of the King of Assyria a hundred and eighty and five thousand (Is. xxxvi and xxxvii), by which is signified what an overthrow of man's rational things takes place when he reasons against things Divine, however it may appear to him while he is doing it, that he is wise.

—¹³. Concerning those who, from the doctrine of faith, enter into rational and scientific things, and are thereby wise . . . 'In that day there shall be a path from Egypt to Assyria,' etc. . . where the Spiritual Church is treated of, the Spiritual of which is 'Israel'; the Rational,

'Assyria;' and the Scientific, 'Egypt; which three constitute the intellectual things of that Church, and which thus succeed each other . . . (6047⁵.) In the same, 'It shall come to pass in that day, that the great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come who are perishing in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall bow themselves to Jehovah in the mountain of holiness, in Jerusalem' (Is.xxvii. 13). In Micah, 'I look back unto Jehovah, I await the God of my salvation, my God will hear me, the day to build thy walls, this is the day, and they shall come even unto thee from thence, from Assyria, and the cities of Egypt . . . ' (vii. 7, 11, 12).

2607². Names (in the Word) signify things, as . . . 'Assyria,' the Rational.

2761^e. 'Take away all iniquity, and receive good, and we will render the young bullocks of our lips, Asshur shall not save us, we will not ride upon a horse, and we will not any more say, Our God, to the work of our hands' (Hos.xiv.2,3). 'Asshur'=reasoning.

2799². 'The Assyrian shall fall by the sword, not of a man, the sword not of a man shall devour him, and he shall flee to himself before the sword, and his young men shall be for tribute' (Is.xxxi.8). 'The Assyrian'=reasoning in Divine things. E.131⁸. (See below, E.411¹⁸.)

3241. 'The sons of Dedan were Asshurim, and Letushim, and Leummim' (Gen.xxv.3)=the derivations from the second lot (of the Spiritual Church). Ex.

3391². 'Jehovah will stretch out His hand upon the north, and will destroy Assyria, doves shall lie in the midst of her, every wild beast of his nation, the cormorant and the bittern shall also pass the night in the pomegranates thereof, a voice shall sing in the window, drought in the threshold, because he hath made bare the cedar' (Zeph.ii.13,14); where the subject treated of is the destruction of the truths of faith by means of reasonings, which are 'Assyria.' E.388¹¹.

3654². 'There shall be a path for the remains of His people, which shall be left, from Assyria' (Is.xi.16) . . . In the inward sense, a new Church is treated of in general; and in particular, everyone who is being regenerated . . . 'Assyria'=reasoning (from scientific things), which they have perverted. 5897⁴.

3767². Hence it is that it is sometimes said that names signify things, as . . . 'Assyria,' reasoning; but it is meant they who are in it.

4236^e. By 'the camp of the Assyrian, in which the Angel of Jehovah smote one hundred and eighty and five thousand,' is meant (Hell).

4581¹⁰. 'In Assyria * they shall eat what is unclean' (Hos.ix.3)=impure and profane things from reasoning. 6377⁴.

5044⁵. 'Assyria' (Is.x.7,8)=reasoning about Divine truths, whence come falsities; thus perverted reasoning.

5212³. 'They who are perishing in the land of Assyria' (Is.xxvii.13)=interior truths.

5354⁶. Since the Intellectual of the Church is signified by 'Ephraim,' it is often said of Ephraim that he goes away into Egypt, and into Assyria *; for by 'Egypt' are signified scientific things, and by 'Assyria,' reasonings from them. . . That 'Asshur,' and 'Assyria *'=reason and reasoning, Refs.

7879². (The slaughter of the 185000 in the camp of the Assyrians) was done by the Hells, which were then open. (See also 5717².)

8185². 'I will gather them, for I will redeem them, I will bring them back from the land of Egypt, and from Assyria I will gather them; and I will bring them to the land of Gilead and Lebanon; he shall pass through the sea of straitness; but he shall smite the waves in the sea, and shall dry up all the depth of the river: and the pride of Assyria shall be cast down, and the staff of Egypt shall depart; and I will make them powerful in Jehovah' (Zech.x.8-12). It treats here of those who trust in themselves and their own wisdom, in spiritual things, and of the dissipation of falsities by means of temptations; 'the land of Egypt'=scientific things; 'Assyria *,' reasonings thence derived . . . 'The pride of Assyria shall be cast down, and the rod of Egypt shall depart'=that they will no longer trust in their own wisdom, but in wisdom from the Lord, which is signified by 'I will make them powerful in Jehovah.'

8904⁴. That 'Assyria'=reasoning, through which, by means of scientific things, the truths of faith are perverted, and its goods adulterated, Refs.

9011^e. See ANCIENT at this ref.

9331⁴. 'The bee in the land of Assyria' (Is.vii.18)=falsity perverting the reasonings of the mind; for 'Assyria'=reasoning.

9466⁴. 'To love the Assyrians * her neighbours'=to love reasonings derived from (scientific things).

9489². 'The Assyrian' (Ezek.xxxi.5)=an enlightened Rational; 'a cedar in Lebanon'=the Spiritual Church.

9656^e. 'Thou shalt be ashamed on account of Egypt, as thou art ashamed on account of Assyria . . . ' (Jer.ii.36); 'Assyria'=reasoning from (scientific things).

9659³. 'Assyria'=reasoning from man's Own intelligence about the truths and goods of the Church; total and complete deliverance from the falsity thence derived is signified by 'eight princes of men who will destroy' (Mic.v).

9780¹¹. 'Ephraim feedeth on wind, they make a covenant with the Assyrian*, and oil is carried down into Egypt' (Hos.xii.1) . . . Here is described the Intellectual of the man of the Church, which is perverted by reasonings from scientific things . . . 'The Assyrian*'=reasoning.

9960³. 'In that day the Lord will shave by the King of Assyria, the head, and the hairs of the feet, and will consume the beard' (Is.vii.20) . . . 'By the King of Assyria'=by reasonings from falsities . . . That 'the King of Assyria'=reasoning, Refs. 10044³.

10227⁴. 'I will visit upon the fruit of the pride of the King of Assyria, because he hath said, In the strength of my hand have I done it . . . ' (Is.x.12,13) . . . 'The King of Assyria'=reasoning, here, from man's Own intelligence.

S. 18³. By 'Assyria' (when mentioned in the Word) is signified reason.

[S.] 21. (How it was that the science of correspondences came to be cultivated in Assyria, etc.) 102.

79⁴. 'They will not dwell in the land of Jehovah, Ephraim will return to Egypt, and will eat what is unclean in Assyria*' (Hos.ix.3) . . . 'Egypt'=what is scientific of the natural man; 'Assyria*' = reasoning thence derived, from which the Word is falsified as to the understanding thereof; therefore it is said that 'Ephraim will return into Egypt, and will eat what is unclean in Assyria*.'

102. The ancient Word was in Assyria, etc.

W. 325. By 'the Assyrian' (Ezek.xxxi.) is signified the Church as to intelligence.

P. 251². When the sons of Israel profaned the holy things of the Church by filthy idolatries, they were punished by the Assyrians* and Chaldeans, for by 'Assyria*' and 'Chaldea' is signified the profanation of what is holy.

R. 134². By 'Egypt' in the Word is signified the science of the natural man, by 'Assyria,' reasoning therefrom . . .

206². By 'Assyria' (Is.x.13) is signified the Rational, here, which perverts the goods and truths of the Church . . .

444². The Spiritual of the Church is signified by the Land of Canaan, and by the rivers therein; the Rational, or Intellectual of the Church, by 'Asshur,' or 'Assyria,' and by its river the Euphrates; and the Natural of the Church, which also is the Scientific, by 'Egypt,' and its river the Nile.

791⁰. The river Euphrates bounded and separated Assyria*, where Babel was, from the Land of Canaan.

T. 467². 'The Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon, the cedars have not hidden him in the Garden of God, every tree in the Garden of God was not equal to him in beauty, all the trees of Eden in the Garden of God have envied him' (Ezek.xxxi.) . . . This is said of the Assyrian, because by him in the Word is signified rationality, and intelligence thence derived.

E. 110². By 'Assyria' in the Word, are meant those who have become rational by means of knowledges of good and truth; thus whose mind is enlightened from Heaven. That 'Assyria'=the Rational of man, Refs.

141². 'The sons of Egypt with whom she has committed whoredom'=scientific things and knowledges of every kind wrongly applied to confirm falsities; 'the sons of Assyria'=reasonings from them. 355²⁰. (See above, A.1186².)

195⁸. 'Asshur and Chilmad were thy merchants' (Ezek.xxvii.23) . . . By 'Syria' is signified the Church as to the knowledges of truth and good; by 'Asshur,' the Rational of that Church.

240³. By 'the King of Assyria leading the captivity of Egypt, and the crowd of Ethiopia that was to be carried away,' is meant that the perverted Rational will confirm evils and falsities by means of scientific things and fallacies. 406². (See above, A.1164¹.)

304²⁶. 'I will break the Assyrian in My Land, and upon My mountains I will trample him' (Is.xiv.25) . . .

By 'the Assyrian' is signified reasoning from falsities against truths; 'to be broken'=to be dissipated . . .

313¹⁰. By 'Israel' is meant the Spiritual of the Church; by 'Assyria,' the Rational of its men; and by 'Egypt,' knowledges and scientific things. Hence it may be evident what is signified by 'Israel being the third with Egypt and Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land;' namely, that the Spiritual will be everything there, rational, cognitive, and scientific . . . 340¹⁸.

328¹⁶. By 'the Assyrians having oppressed them for nought' is signified the falsification (of scientific things and knowledges) by the reasonings of the natural man. 'The Assyrian'=reasonings.

372⁴. By 'the Assyrian' is here signified reasoning about the truths of the Church from man's Own intelligence; and by 'a cedar,' the truth of the Spiritual Church. 388¹². —²⁸.

405²⁰. 'The King of Assyria*' (Is.xxxvii.24)=the perverted Rational.

411¹⁸. 'The Assyrian' (Is.xxxi.8)=the perverted Rational, and thus those who are in falsities from their Own intelligence; 'to fall and be devoured by the sword'=to perish. This was also represented by the King of Assyria being killed by his own sons (Is.xxxvii.38).

419¹⁸. 'To make a covenant with the Assyrian*' =to reason from falsities and to destroy truths.

502⁶. 'They who are perishing in the land of Assyria'=those who have been ensnared by false reasonings.

504¹⁶. By 'the Assyrians*' are meant those who, from falsities and fallacies, reason against the truths and goods of the Church from their Own intelligence, thus from self-love.

518³⁰. 'The pride of Assyria' (Zech.x.11)=man's Own intelligence, which is that of the perverted Rational.

—³⁶. By 'Assyria,' and its 'King,' in the Word, is signified the Rational, here (Is.viii.7), the perverted Rational.

538⁵. 'The pride of Assyria shall be cast down' (Zech.x.11) . . . By 'Assyria' is signified reasoning from falsities against truths. . . 'The pride of Assyria which shall be cast down'=man's Own intelligence, from which comes reasoning.

569²². 'They who are left from Assyria' (Is.xi.16)=

those who have not perished by means of reasonings from falsities.

58⁵. 'Jehovah hath given the gods of the Kings of Assyria into the fire, because they are not gods, but the work of man's hands, wood and stone' (Is.xxxvii.18,19). By 'the gods of the Kings of Assyria' are signified reasonings from falsities and evils, which agree with the proprium of man, wherefore they are also called 'the work of man's hands.'

60⁷. 'As a dove from the land of Assyria'=that they have rational good and truth; 'a dove'=rational good; and 'the land of Assyria'=the Church as to rational truth. There are with man both natural and rational good and truth; the natural is lower or exterior, looking to the world; the rational is higher or interior, conjoining the Natural with the Spiritual; the natural is 'Egypt'; the rational is 'Assyria'; and the spiritual is 'Israel.'

63⁴. 'Wherefore, when Hezekiah the King heard the words of Tartan the commander of the King of Assyria, he rent his garments . . .' (2 Kings xix.1) This was done, because by 'the King of Assyria' is there signified the perverted Rational, or the Rational which perverts the truths and goods of the Church, and destroys them by means of falsities. 706⁷⁷.

650²⁶. By 'the Assyrian a cedar in Lebanon' is signified the Rational which is from scientific things on the one hand, and the influx of spiritual truth on the other.

—⁵⁶. By 'Assyria which Jehovah will destroy' (Zeph.ii.13) are signified reasonings from falsities.

—²². It is said 'as a dove from the land of Assyria*' because 'a dove'=rational good from spiritual; 'Assyria*', the Rational itself.

—²⁴. 'He shall pass through the sea of straitness, but he shall smite the waves in the sea, and the pride of Assyria shall be cast down, and the staff of Egypt shall depart'=that the evils and falsities of the natural man shall be dispersed, and also the reasonings from scientific things which confirm them. . . 'The pride of Assyria'=reasonings from conceit of their Own intelligence.

—⁵⁵. 'They have called Egypt, and gone away to Assyria' (Hos.vii.)=that they have trusted in the scientific things of the natural man, and in reasonings thence derived, which are deceptive.

—⁵⁶. 'They shall eat what is unclean in Assyria'=the Rational abounding in falsities of evil.

—⁵⁷. 'Israel shall not return into Egypt, the Assyrian* here is their King' (Hos.xi.5). 'Israel shall not return into Egypt'=that the man of the Church who has become spiritual shall not become natural; 'the Assyrian* here is their King'=that then reasonings from falsities would prevail. . . When a man is natural, he is in Egypt; when he becomes rational, he is in Assyria*; and when he becomes spiritual, he is in the Land of Canaan, thus in the Church.

—⁶¹. 'Our inheritance is turned to strangers, our houses to foreigners; we have drunk our waters for silver; our woods come for a price; we have given the hand to Egypt, to Assyria* that we may be satisfied with bread; servants rule over us, nor is there any that delivereth out of their hand' (Lam.v.2,4,6,8) . . . Since to be instructed by our own selves is to be instructed by the natural man, his scientific things, and the conclusions thence derived, it is said 'we have given the hand to Egypt, to Assyria* that we may be satisfied with bread;' by 'Egypt' is signified the natural man, which is the source of falsities; by 'Assyria*', the natural man reasoning from falsities, which is the source of evils . . .

—⁶³. 'She hath loved the Assyrians* her neighbours, and hath given her whoredoms above the delight of all the sons of Asshur'=confirmations by means of many reasonings. . . 'Therefore I delivered her up into the hand of her lovers the sons of Asshur'=reasonings which confirm idolatries. . . 'She doated on the sons of Asshur'=by means of reasonings against truths and goods. . . 'Wherefore, Aholibah, I will stir up thy lovers against thee, the sons of Babel and all the Chaldeans, and the Assyrians* with them'=the destruction of the Church through evils from self-love, and through falsities from the conceit of their Own intelligence, in which there is deadly hatred against the goods and truths of doctrine.

—⁷¹. 'Thou hast committed whoredom with the sons of Asshur' (Ezek. xvi) = falsifications through reasonings.

659⁴. 'Lament over the multitude of Egypt, and make her go down with them that go down into the pit, they shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the sword, there is Asshur and all his congregation, his graves are about him, all of them slain who have fallen by the sword, whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and his congregation is round about his grave . . .' (Ezek. xxxii.18,20,22,23). By 'the multitudes of Egypt' are signified the scientific things of the natural man, which are dead . . . By 'Asshur' are signified reasonings from such scientific things. . . By 'the slain by the sword' are signified those who are condemned to the Hells on account of falsities; 'there is Asshur and all his congregation'=reasonings from those falsities; by 'the graves which are around Asshur and in the sides of the pit . . .' are signified the Hells where are these falsities, that is, those who are in such falsities.

811¹⁰. By 'the King of Assyria' (Is.xx) is signified reasoning from the scientific things of the natural man; and by 'Egypt' is signified the natural man; hence by 'the King of Assyria leading Egypt captive' is signified that reasoning from falsities will destroy all truths in the natural man, which are such as the truths of the sense of the letter of the Word.

[E.] 827⁷. By 'Asshur' (Ezek. xxiii) are signified rational truths, also, in the opposite sense, falsities. Hence it is manifest what is signified by 'committing whoredom with them.'

846². By 'Egypt,' 'Assyria,' 'Israel,' and 'Ephraim,' in many passages, is signified the understanding of the Word; but by 'Egypt,' the understanding of its Natural; by 'Assyria,' the understanding of the Rational; by 'Israel,' the understanding of the Spiritual; and by 'Ephraim,' the understanding itself of the Word in the Church. But these three degrees of understanding, namely, the natural, the rational, and the spiritual, must be all together in one, in order that man, from enlightenment, may see and perceive the genuine truths of the Word. Ex.

923⁴. 'I will put My hook in thy nose, and My bridle on thy lips, and I will bring thee back by the way by which thou camest' (Is. xxxvii. 29). These things are said of the King of Assyria, by whom is signified reasoning from falsities; for by 'Assyria,' in a good sense, is signified the Rational.

1029¹³. 'I will break Assyria in My Land, and upon My mountains I will trample him'—that in the New Church there shall not arise any reasonings from falsities against truths and goods.

1100²⁰. By 'a dove from Assyria' is signified the Rational . . . for by 'Assyria' is signified the Rational.

L. 55. The Athanasian doctrine of faith agrees with the truth, if only by a Trinity of Persons there is understood a Trinity of Person, which is in the Lord. Gen. art. B. 33^e. E. 1103^e. 1104^e. 1106². Ath. 19. 30.

—^e. I will now quote the whole doctrine which has its name from Athanasius, and will afterwards demonstrate that all things therein contained are true, if only instead of a Trinity of Persons there is understood a Trinity of Person.

57. When this Trinity is understood, man can think of one God . . . Otherwise he cannot but think of three gods . . . This also Athanasius saw . . .

58. (The Athanasian Creed altered so as to read correctly.)

R. 961⁷. I then told (the Angels), that my natural thought about a Trinity and Unity of Persons, and about the birth of the Son of God from eternity, was in me from the doctrine of faith of the Church that has its name from Athanasius, and that that doctrine is just and right, if only instead of a Trinity of Persons there is understood a Trinity of Person . . .

962². The second debate (in the Council) was concerning the Lord, whether God the Father and He are one, as the soul and body are one . . . Then one of those who sat on the third row of seats, read from the Symbolical Faith, which is called Athanasian, these words; Although our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is God and Man, yet they are not two, but He is one Christ; nay, He is altogether one, He is one Person; for as the soul and the body make one man, so God and Man are one Christ. . . They then said, What more do we need?

B. 31. See APOSTLES' CREED at this ref.

— The Athanasian Creed was composed after the Council (of Nicæa) by some person, or persons, in order to utterly overthrow the Arians, and was afterwards received by the Churches as ecumenical. . . From this third, or Athanasian Creed, there flowed forth the profession of a Trinity of Persons. That hence came the idea of three gods, will be seen in what follows.

33. The reason the idea of three gods flowed forth chiefly from the Athanasian Creed . . . is that the term Person begets such an idea; and this idea is also implanted by the following words in it . . .

—^e. That nevertheless the doctrine in the Athanasian Creed agrees with the truth, if only for a Trinity of Persons there be substituted a Trinity of Person, which is in God the Saviour Jesus Christ . . .

T. 110³. This also the composers of the Athanasian Creed saw from afar; wherefore after they had divided God into three Persons, they still said that in Christ God and Man, that is, the Divine and the Human, are not two, but are one, like the soul and body in man.

172. That a Trinity of Divine Persons from eternity is a trinity of gods, is palpably evident from these words in the Athanasian Creed . . .

632°. This Athanasian Creed was written immediately after the Council of Nicæa was held, by one or more persons who had been at the Council, and has also been received as ecumenical, or catholic.

D. 4338. I have read the Creed of Athanasius before Spirits, before the learned, and before Angels, but no one could comprehend anything of it; nay, the learned did not even remember what was in it. That they had read it they knew, but had retained no more in the memory, except that they had said, three persons, but one. . . Even the learned had had no other idea than that there are three eternal, which is contrary to the Creed of Athanasius. . . They could not apprehend otherwise than that there are three lords, thus what is contrary to the Creed. They then confessed that they had not believed according to the Creed, because they could have no other idea than of three.

5397 (Index). A compendium of all that is said in the Creed of Athanasius about the Lord.

5959. On Athanasius.

— I have spoken with Athanasius. He said that he did not know his own God. He had sought the Father, he had sought the Son, and he had sought the Holy Spirit; thus three, and had never found them, so that he could not find his own God. He greatly bewailed his lot. The reason was that he had confirmed himself in the opinion that there are three Persons; whereas others who have only heard about them from his belief, and have not confirmed themselves as he did, if they have lived a life of charity, are at last settled in the acknowledgment of the Lord as the only God; wherefore it is of the Lord's Providence, that few think about the matter, but only hear about it from that Creed, and keep but a slight hold of it, nor do they confirm it. Ath.43.

E. 183¹¹. (It was provided by the Lord that these words in the Athanasian Creed concerning God and Man being one Christ) should be in the doctrine of the whole Christian World, because this is an essential of the Church, and of the salvation of all. Ath.60.

343². There is one God, and the three names of the Divine are those of the one God. As Athanasius did not understand this, he believed the three names to be three gods, but one as to essence.

1091². (The Athanasian Creed quoted entire.)

1092². On the Athanasian Faith. Gen.art. 1093², etc.

9394². A vast number of (the learned men of the European World in the other life) are atheists to the very heart. . .

J. 56². It was perceived that more than half of those who had usurped the power of opening and shutting Heaven, were complete atheists. . . R.765².

C. J. 61. In proportion as a man . . . rushes into this love (of commanding) he turns away from God, turns to himself, and becomes an atheist. Ex.

W. 350². But still they who have made themselves atheists by means of confirmations in favour of nature are not to be excused, because they could have confirmed themselves in favour of the Divine. M.422².

357. They who have confirmed themselves in favour of nature from the visible things of the world, until at last they became atheists, have been seen by me in the Spiritual World; and in spiritual light their understanding appeared open below, but closed above, because in thought they looked downwards to the earth, and not upwards to Heaven. Above the Sensual, which is the lowest part of the understanding, appeared as it were a veil; with some flashing with infernal fire; with some black as with soot; with some livid like a corpse.

P. 99. I have heard that atheists, who have become Devils and Satans, have understood the arcana of wisdom as well as Angels, but only while they heard them from others; and when they returned into their own thoughts, they did not understand, because they did not will to do so.

M. 269⁶. Hence it is that even atheists, who are in the glory of reputation from the love of self, and thence in the conceit of their Own intelligence, enjoy a more lofty rationality than many others. This, however, is only when they are in the thought of the understanding, but not when they are in the affection of the will. The affection of the will possesses a man's Internal, whereas the thought of the understanding possesses his External. T.507^s.

T. 382. All these are evil, who deny the creation of the world by God, and thus deny God, for they are naturalistic atheists. Ex.

453. The charity of (atheists) is not spurious, nor hypocritical, nor dead, but is none at all, because there is nothing of faith adjoined to it; it cannot be even called charity . . . The charity of these, when looked at from Heaven, is like bread made of ashes, pastry made of fish scales, and fruit made of wax.

612. Man from birth inclines to evils of every kind . . . Hence it is that he makes nothing of adulteries, of plunderings which are clandestine thefts, of slanders which are also false witness; and he who makes nothing of these things is at heart an atheist. Such is man from birth . . .

628. Wherefore, unless the error concerning imputation were to be abolished, atheism would overrun the whole of Christendom, and then the King of the Bottomless Pit would reign over them . . .

759^s. Who speaks more persuasively about the certainty of his phantasy than a naturalistic atheist . . .

771^s. (The cause of modern atheism.) D.4727.

D. 4727^e. Hence it is evident what is the character of the learned men of the world, and that the most learned are atheists, and that they confirm themselves more than others. The more knowledge they have, the more self-confidence they have, and the greater abundance of confirmations of what is false . . .

4769. On the atheistical crew within Europe, where the Church is.

— It was shown how great is the number of atheists within the Church. All of them who are living are, as to their souls, in the other life, and are there in society with other Spirits, which they themselves do not know. These spirits, namely, of the men who are living, are presented to view, towards the right. They who at this day are atheists, and are living in the world, were a vast multitude, so great that it could not be counted. There were counted by classes up to three millions; besides many who appeared as it were to rise up from the sea; that is, from the sciences.

Atlas. Atlas.

A. 5378. (These Spirits) seemed thus to become huge, but only as a single one, who so swelled in his body, that he seemed to touch the sky, like Atlas . . .

T. 822^e. If such a one be raised to the highest honours, he is in his own idea like Atlas carrying the terraqueous globe on his shoulders.

Atmosphere. Atmosfera.

Atmospheric. Atmosphaericus.

A. 1519. The spheres of the Angels are sometimes presented to view as atmospheres, or auras, so beautiful, so pleasant, and so various, that they can never be described.

1621. As to the atmospheres in which the blessed live, and which are of the light, because they are from that light; they are innumerable, and of such beauty and pleasantness, that they cannot be described. There are diamond atmospheres, which flash in all their smallest parts as with diamond spherules. There are atmospheres which resemble the glittering of all precious stones. There are atmospheres as of pearls transparent to the centre, and irradiated with the most brilliant colours. There are atmospheres flaming as with gold, with silver, and also with diamond-like gold and silver. There are atmospheres of many-coloured flowers, which are in their smallest and invisible forms. Such (atmospheres), with endless variety, fill the Heaven of little children. Nay, there are atmospheres presented to view which consist in their smallest and invisible forms as of little children playing together, but only perceptible to an inmost idea; and from which the little children get the idea that all things around them are alive, and that they are in the Lord's life; which affects their inmost [thoughts and feelings] with happiness. Besides many more, for the varieties are innumerable, and are also ineffable. 2297. 4528^s.

1623. As to rainbows; there is as it were a rainbow Heaven, where the whole atmosphere appears to be entirely composed of very small rainbows; here are they who appertain to the province of the inner eye . . . The whole atmosphere or aura there consists of such flashings, irradiated thus as it were in all its starting-points.

1759. The speech of the Spirits who are intermediate between the celestial and the spiritual is soft and sweet, flowing like a very soft atmosphere . . .

2299^s. They then admitted into the sepulchre a kind of atmospheric appearance verging to a thin watery appearance . . .

3000. Each and all things in the created universe represent the Lord's Kingdom, so much so, that the Universe with its stars, its atmospheres, its three kingdoms, is nothing but a kind of theatre representative of the glory of the Lord which is in the Heavens.

3627. That the human body is outwardly held together in its form by the atmospheres, is known . . . 3628^s.

3628^s. There are always two forces which hold everything together in its connexion and in its form . . . namely, a force acting from without, and a force acting from within . . . That the atmospheres are what hold the whole body in connexion from without by their continual pressure, or incumbency, and their acting force thence derived, is known; and also that the atmosphere of air, by its influx, (does the same for the lungs); and (does the same) also for its organ, the ear, with the forms which are constructed for the modifications thereof; and that the ethereal atmosphere in like manner (holds together) the interior connexions; for this atmosphere flows in freely through all the pores, and by a very similar pressure, or incumbency, and thence acting force, holds together in their forms the interior viscera of the whole body; and the same atmosphere (does the same for) its organ, which is the eye, with the forms in it which are prepared for its modifications . . .

3643. They who are in the Heavens are in a serene aura of light . . . But they who are in Hell are in a gross, misty, and darksome atmosphere.

4407. The eye is also modified by a more subtle atmosphere than the ear . . .

5084³. It is a fallacy of merely natural sense . . . that there is only one single atmosphere . . . and that where it ceases there is a vacuum.

5658³. When they are speaking about good in a higher Heaven, there is a golden appearance below with those who are in the First Heaven; and when they are speaking about truth, there is a silvery appearance; sometimes so, that not only the walls of the rooms where they dwell sparkle with gold and silver, but also the very atmosphere there.

6603⁹. Hence there are extensions in every direction in freedom . . . with a variety according to the serenity or obscurity of the atmosphere. To a serene atmosphere, in the Spiritual World, corresponds the affection of knowing what is true and good.

8823. This is like sound on high, which is silent where the atmosphere is purer, but when it descends to where the atmosphere is grosser, it becomes greater and louder . . .

9235. The inhabitants of the moon do not speak so much from the lungs as the inhabitants of other Earths, but from the abdomen, and thus from some air there collected, for the reason that the moon is not surrounded by an atmosphere like that of other Earths.

9499. Divine Good conjoined with Divine Truth, which is the ultimate of Heaven and that which encloses and holds things together there, is relatively like the atmosphere in the world, which flows round man, and holds together in its connexion the whole surface of his body, so that it does not dissolve away.

H. 235. See ANGEL at this ref.

240. (The thought and speech of the Angels), when presented to view, are like a thin wave, or circumfluent atmosphere . . .

589. In the natural world there is equilibrium in each and all things; in general, in the very atmospheres, in which the lower parts react and resist in proportion as the higher ones act and press down.

W. 147. Light and heat inflow first into the universal recipients, which, in the world, are called atmospheres . . .

152. If anything be entirely withdrawn from the inflow of the sun through the atmospheres, it is at once dissolved; for the atmospheres, which are purer and purer, and are actuated in their power by the sun, hold all things in connexion.

158. As the sun of the natural world is pure fire, and consequently is dead . . . in like manner the atmospheres, which are called ether and air, and which receive and carry down in their bosom the heat and light of that sun, are dead.

173. In the Spiritual World there are atmospheres, waters, and earths, as in the natural world; but the former are spiritual, whereas the latter are natural. Gen.art.

174. As regards the atmospheres, which are called ethers and airs, they are alike in both worlds . . . with this difference, that those in the Spiritual World are spiritual, and those in the natural world are natural. [The former] are spiritual because they come forth from the Sun which is the first proceeding of the Divine Love and Divine Wisdom of the Lord, and from Him they receive into themselves the Divine fire which is Love, and the Divine light which is Wisdom, and carry both down to the Heavens where the Angels are; and cause the presence of that Sun in the greatest and the least things there. The spiritual atmospheres are discrete substances, or least forms, originating from the Sun; and as they receive the Sun molecularly—singillatim, the fire of the Sun, thus divided into so many substances or forms, and as it were enveloped by them, and tempered by these envelopments, becomes heat . . . in like manner the light of the Sun. The natural atmospheres are similar to the spiritual atmospheres in this respect, that they are also discrete substances and least forms, originating from the sun of the natural world; which also receive the sun molecularly, and store up its fire in themselves, and temper it, and carry it down as heat to the earth where men are; and in like manner the light.

175. The difference between the spiritual atmospheres and the natural atmospheres is this, that the spiritual atmospheres are receptacles of Divine fire and Divine light, thus of Love and Wisdom, for they contain these within themselves; whereas the natural atmospheres are not receptacles of Divine fire and Divine light, but are receptacles of the fire and light of their own sun, which in itself is dead . . . Wherefore there is not anything within them from the Sun of the Spiritual World, but still they are environed by the spiritual atmospheres which are from that Sun.

176. That there are atmospheres in the Spiritual World, equally as in the natural world, may be evident from the fact, that Angels and Spirits breathe, and also speak and hear, equally with men in the natural world; and their breathing is effected by an ultimate atmosphere which is called the air; in like manner their speech and hearing. Also from the fact, that Angels and Spirits see equally with men in the natural world, and sight is not possible except by means of an atmosphere purer than air. Also from the fact, that Angels and Spirits think and are affected equally with men in the natural world, and thought and affection are not possible except by means of still purer atmospheres. And lastly, from this; that all things of the bodies of Angels and Spirits, both outward and inward, are held together in connexion, the outward things, by an aerial atmosphere, and the inward things, by ethereal atmospheres. Without this circumpressure and action of these atmospheres, it is evident that the interior and exterior forms of the body would dissolve away.

178. Atmospheres, waters, and earths, are here mentioned, because these three are the generals, through which, and from which, each and all things come into existence, with infinite variety. The atmospheres are the active forces, the waters are the mediate forces, and the earths are the passive forces, from which all effects come into existence . . .

[W.] 179. There are degrees of Love and Wisdom, and thence degrees of heat and light, and also degrees of atmospheres. Gen.art.

183. Since the atmospheres are receptacles and containants of heat and light, it follows that there are as many degrees of atmospheres as there are degrees of heat and light, and also that there are as many as there are degrees of Love and Wisdom. That there are a number of atmospheres, and that they are distinct from each other by means of degrees, has been made evident to me by much experience in the Spiritual World; especially from this, that the Angels of the lower Heavens cannot breathe in the region of the higher Angels . . . Spirits below the Heavens also appear to be in a mist. 191.

184³. The atmospheres, which are called ethers and airs, from the highest to the lowest, or from the sun to the Earth, are discretized into such degrees (of height); and they stand as Simples, as Congregates of these, and as Congregates of these again, which, taken together, are called a Composite.

185. Without a knowledge of these (discrete) degrees, nothing can be known of the difference . . . between the atmospheres which environ and hold things together.

191. (Structure of the atmospheres in three discrete degrees. See 190.)

192. The atmospheres, from the pure ether to the air, are homogeneous.

197. In the atmospheres, etc. . . what is first is what is solely regnant in all that follows; nay, it is the one only thing therein . . .

200². The perfection of forces is the perfection of all things which are actuated and moved by life, and yet in which there is not life. Such forces are the atmospheres as to actualities.

205. In a like successive order are the states . . . of the spiritual atmospheres.

291². The substances which are contiguous to the body (of an Angel, and which continually emanate from it), continually actuated by the two fountains of the motion of his life, the heart and lungs, excite the atmospheres into their own activities, and by this means produce a perception as of his presence with others . . .

296. (The Divine of use, in the Lord, is presented in appearance outside the Sun of the Spiritual World) by means of the atmosphere, which is the containant. Gen.art.

299. The reason the Lord presents Himself as to use by means of the atmosphere, is that the atmosphere is the containant of heat and light, as use is the containant of love and wisdom; for the heat and light which proceed from the Divine Sun, cannot proceed in nothing, thus not in a vacuum, but [must proceed] in a containant which is their subject, and this containant we call the atmosphere, which environs the Sun, and takes him up in its bosom, and carries him to the Heaven where the Angels are, and thence to the world where men are, and thus effects the Lord's presence everywhere.

300. From the origin of the spiritual atmosphere proximately environing the spiritual Sun, it may be evident that everything belonging to it is in its essence of the same nature as is the Sun in its essence. . . The one only substance, which is the Sun, proceeding by means of atmospheres according to continuous degrees, or those of breadth, and at the same time according to discrete degrees, or those of height, presents the varieties of all things in the created universe. . . These things cannot be comprehended unless space be removed from the ideas . . .

302. The atmospheres, which are three in both worlds . . . in their ultimates cease in substances and matters, such as are those in earths. Gen.art.

— Since in their progression downwards the atmospheres decrease, it follows that they continually become more compressed and inert, and at last, in ultimates, so compressed and inert, that they are atmospheres no longer, but substances at rest, and, in the natural world, fixed substances, such as are those in earths, which are called matters. From this origin of substances and matters it follows; first, that these substances and matters are also of three degrees; secondly, that they are held together in connexion with each other by the environing atmospheres.

303. That substances, or matters, such as those in earths, have been produced by the sun, through its atmospheres, will assuredly be affirmed by all who consider that there are perpetual mediations from the First to the ultimates, and that nothing can come forth except from something which is prior to itself, and at last from the First. . . Now as the atmospheres are these prior things, through which that Sun presents itself in ultimates, and as these prior things continually decrease in activity and expansion down to the ultimates, it follows, that when their activity and expansion cease in the ultimates, they become substances and matters such as there are in earths, which retain in themselves from the atmospheres from which they originated, an effort and endeavour to bring forth uses.

305. The substances and matters of which earths consist . . . are the ends and terminations of the atmospheres, whose heat has ended in cold, their light in darkness, and their activity in inertness; but still, by continuation from the substance of the spiritual Sun, they have brought that which was there from the Divine, which . . . is the sphere environing God Man, or the Lord. From this sphere, by continuation from the Sun, by means of the atmospheres, have originated the substances and matters of which earths consist.

310. The substances and matters of which earths consist are the ends and terminations of the atmospheres . . . and since the substances and matters of which earths consist are from this origin, and their Congregates are held together in connexion by the circumpressure of the atmospheres, it follows that they have a perpetual endeavour to produce forms of uses. The very quality of being able to produce, they derive from their origin, which is, that they are the ultimates of the atmospheres, with which therefore they are in agreement. It is said that this endeavour and this quality are in earths, but it is meant that they are with those substances and matters of which earths consist, whether they are in earths, or exhaled from earths in the atmospheres. That the atmospheres are full of such things, is known.

311. The atmospheres, in ultimates, become such (ultimate) forces, by which the substances and matters, such as are in earths, are actuated into forms, and held together in forms, both within and without.

311^e. These forms of the three degrees of the mineral kingdom reproduce the creation in an image in this, that, actuated by the Sun through the atmospheres and their heat and light, they produce uses in forms, which were the ends of creation.

315. The heat, light, and atmospheres of the natural world contribute nothing whatever to this image of creation, but only the heat, light, and atmospheres of the Sun of the Spiritual World; these bring that image with them, and clothe it with the forms of the uses of the vegetable kingdom. The heat, light, and atmospheres of the natural world only open the seeds, keep what grows from them expanded, and clothe them with the matters that fix them, (and even this not by forces from their own sun).

316^d. The fibres going forth from these forms or substances (of the Brain) are comparatively like the atmospheres from the Spiritual Sun, which are containants of heat and light; and bodily acts are like the things which are produced from earths by means of the atmospheres, the delights of the uses of which return to the origin from which they sprang.

R. 238. In the Spiritual World there appear atmospheres, and also waters, as in our world; atmospheres as it were ethereal, where the Angels of the highest Heaven are; atmospheres as it were aerial, where the Angels of the middle Heaven are; and atmospheres as it were watery, where the Angels of the ultimate Heaven are; and these last are the seas which appear at the boundaries of Heaven . . . 878^e.

290^e. In the Spiritual World such (sensual) affections appear at a distance like fishes, and as if they were in the sea, because the atmosphere in which they are appears as if it were watery . . .

907². Otherwise the height of the City would be 12000 furlongs, and would thus rise far above the clouds, nay, above the aerial atmosphere, the height of which does not exceed 30 furlongs; nay, it would rise far into the ether towards the zenith.

M. 10³. The second in order said . . . The Angels who saw me fled away, and said to each other, What monster is this? How came this bird of night here? and I actually felt changed from a man, although I was not changed; this came upon me from the attraction of the heavenly atmosphere . . .

20. On the walls hung lamps of silver, which, on being lighted, made the atmosphere appear as it were golden.

137⁴. The reason why, when we approached, there blew on thee as it were a vernal heat, is that marriage love and that heat act as one in our Heaven; for with us heat is love, and the light with which the heat is united is wisdom, and use is as it were the atmosphere, which contains both in its bosom. What are heat and light without their containant? And so what are love and wisdom without their use? There is no marriage principle in them, because the subject in which they are does not exist.

188^o. For the human mind is in distinct regions, as the world is in regions in respect to the atmospheres; of which the lowest is watery, the higher is aerial, the one still higher is ethereal, above which there is also the highest of all.

235². The sun of the natural world has been created, in order that its heat and light may receive into themselves spiritual heat and light, and, by means of the atmospheres, carry them down to ultimates on the Earth, in order to produce the effects of the ends which are of the Lord in His own Sun, and also in order that they may clothe spiritual things with garments adapted to them, that is, with matters . . .

266³. The other Angel said . . . Our love of dominion is not from self-love, but from the love of uses; and since the love of uses is from the Lord, all good uses in the Heavens are resplendent and refulgent; and as, in our Society, we are all in this love, the atmosphere there appears golden, from the light there, which is conditioned by the Flaming of the Sun, and the Flaming of the Sun corresponds to that love. T. 661³.

I. 16³. Each and everything in the worlds, Spiritual and natural, are in both these kinds of degrees . . . and also the atmospheric expanse, from the Sun down to the Earth. There are therefore three atmospheres discretely distinct according to the degrees of height in both the Spiritual World and the natural world, because in both there is a sun; but the atmospheres of the Spiritual World, because of their origin, are substantial; and the atmospheres of the natural world, because of their origin, are material; and since the atmospheres descend from their origins according to these degrees, and since these (atmospheres) are the containants of heat and light, and as it were the vehicles which carry them along, it follows that there are three degrees of light and heat, and . . . it also follows that there are three degrees of wisdom and three degrees of love; thus three degrees of life; for they are graduated by the things through which they pass. Hence it is that there are three angelic Heavens . . .

T. 24^e. Hence it is that man abides in the mere atmospheres and matters of nature, in which he keeps his eyes, ears, and nostrils; whence he imbibes no other ideas concerning Heaven, and the being and essence of God, than atmospheric and material ones . . .

32^o. This may be illustrated by the atmospheres, of which there are three degrees; for there exists a highest aura, the ether under it, and the air below this; and no quality of the air can be elevated to any quality of the ether, and no quality of this, to any quality of the aura; and yet elevation of perfections to infinity exists in each of them.

[T.]⁷⁶. When I was in enlightenment I perceived, that by means of light and heat from the Sun of your World, spiritual atmospheres were created, one from another, which, in themselves, are substantial; and which, being three, and consequently there being three degrees of them, three Heavens were made . . . But as this Spiritual Universe could not come into existence without a natural universe, into which it might direct its effects and uses, the sun from which all natural things proceed was created at the same time, and through this, in like manner, by means of light and heat, three atmospheres environing the former ones, as shells do nuts, or bark does wood; and at last, through these, the terraqueous globe . . .

364³. It is the same with every general, as, for instance, with the atmospheres and oceans; the atmosphere is such in its least parts as it is in its greatest . . .

619⁶. These three spheres are like atmospheres driven by the tempest, and pouring forth from the breathing holes of dragons . . .

641². This heat, in its essence, is His Divine Love, and this light, in its essence, is His Divine Wisdom. The Lord adapts this light and heat to the capability and quality of the recipient Angel and man, which He effects by means of the spiritual auras or atmospheres, which carry them and bear them along.

78⁴. The reason why, in our World, creation takes place instantaneously, and in yours, creation is lasting, through generations, is that the atmospheres and earths of your World are spiritual, and the atmospheres and earths of your World are natural, and natural things have been created in order to invest spiritual ones, as the skins do the bodies of men and animals . . . Hence it is that all things in your world are constant, and return constantly, from year to year.

Ad. 646. The active forces themselves, which act as conductors, are called atmospheres, or the air and the ether.

D. 222. There are three solar atmospheres which operate into the natural mind, but not into the more inward one . . . Gen.art.

— . There are four natural spheres which originate from the sun. The atmosphere that produces hearing is known. A purer atmosphere, separate from the aerial one, is what produces sight, or visual images, by means of the reflexions of the shades of all objects: how far this atmosphere penetrates into the natural mind, and whether it presents material ideas, as they are called, or fancies and imaginations, cannot as yet be so well established, but from many things it appears probable. This, then, must be the first atmosphere which reigns in the natural mind. Another atmosphere is a still purer ether, and is that which produces the forces of magnets, which reign, not only about the magnet in particular, but also around the whole globe . . . It produces the position therein of the whole terraqueous globe in relation to the poles of the world, and also many things which are known to the world respecting the magnetic elevations and inclinations. This (atmosphere) would seem to produce reasonings in the natural mind, with which, however, for them to live, the Spiritual must be present; as it must be with the sight, and every other sense, for them to perceive. The purest ethereal sphere is that universal (sphere) in the universal world, which is presented about the reasonings of the same mind. Hence that mind is called the natural mind, and its interior operations, when perverted, are called reasonings; but, when according to order, simply reason, which is a species of the thoughts arising from spiritual influx. These spheres are of the sun, and may be called solar, and thus natural.

418. The permissions in Heaven are represented in nature by the threefold or fourfold atmospheres, the one purer, according to degrees, than another; and the following one composed from the one prior to it, which acts into the one proximately composed from it, both within and without; thus in every part of the ultimate atmosphere are the prior ones in order. Now when the ultimate atmosphere is disturbed by a tempest, the one which is proximately prior exercises a moderate calming action, both without and within, upon every point of it; thus both particularly and generally. An atmosphere which is still prior to that one exercises a greater calming action; and the first (atmosphere), which is all in all of the following one, in both particular and in general, exercises a most eminent calming or peaceful action. Thus does a prior, and especially the first atmosphere, exercise a calming action upon the following ones, and, through these, upon the ultimate one, and reduces it to equilibrium, however the ultimate atmosphere may be agitated by the wind or the tempest. Thus is it in the Heavens, with the heavenly lives, and spirits, which are as it were the ultimate atmosphere, where the tempests exist.

1176. Thinking to myself, I compared the disorderly states of a spiritual crowd to a tempest in the air, and to the stormy clouds, and the dust then flying through the atmosphere, which are then out of their equilibrium; but the purer atmosphere, or ether, remaining meanwhile in a calm state, and acting by its hidden and silent force of equilibrium, and continually acting upon that tempestuous condition of the atmosphere, reduces it into equilibrium and calm. 2717.

1830. It may be known that the organs of the body correspond precisely to their own atmospheres, and to their methods of acting; as the eye, to the ether; the ear, to the air; the tongue, to those things which float in the waters and stimulate; the nostrils, to those things which are in the atmosphere . . .

2089. But it was then represented, that in the sphere of the world, or in the atmospheric one, it comes to pass, that the things which do not agree are dispersed, and thus the sphere, by its own forces, reduces all things to equilibrium, as is sufficiently evident from tempestuous atmospheres and waters, which gradually become fair and calm; and that the cause of this is to be found in the spiritual spheres . . .

4063. The whole man is held together by the atmospheres, the air and the ether, and we may perceive its [existence] on high, because the ether gravitates into all the least parts of the body, towards the centre. Thus man could not endure without the pressure of the atmospheres, thus could not be kept in his form. It is evident also that the eye is formed entirely according to all the modifications of the ether, and the ear according to all the modifications of the air; and that so the eye and the ear have a connexion and correspondence with the ether and the air. . . The eyes and the ears are passive and recipient forces, and the ether and the air are active or acting forces. Thus are these atmospheres able to flow in, and operate; and thus can these organs subsist; no otherwise.

E. 342¹⁰. All the Societies (in the Spiritual World) appear encompassed with an atmosphere corresponding to their affections and thoughts; those which are in the Third Heaven, appear in a pure and as it were ethereal atmosphere; those which are in the Second Heaven, appear in an atmosphere less pure, such as is the aerial one; but the Societies which are in the Ultimate Heaven, appear encompassed with an atmosphere as it were watery; whereas those who are in the Hells, appear encompassed with gross and impure atmospheres, some as it were in black waters, and others otherwise. It is the affections and the thoughts thence derived which produce these (atmospheres) around them; for spheres are exhaled from all, and these spheres are turned into such appearances. 538¹⁴. 1287^e.

538. They in whom the third degree has been opened are as it were in a pure ethereal atmosphere; in such a one are they who are in the Third, or Inmost Heaven; they, however, in whom only the second degree has been opened, are as it were in an aerial atmosphere; in such a one are they who are in the Second, or Middle Heaven; but they in whom only the first degree has been opened, are as it were in a watery atmosphere, thin and pure; in such a one are they who are in the First, or Ultimate Heaven. The reason is, that the more interior perceptions and thoughts, being more perfect, correspond to a similar purity of the atmosphere in which they are; for they pour themselves forth from every Angel, and more so from every angelic Society, and present a corresponding sphere; which sphere appears in a similar purity to that in which are the perceptions and thoughts of the Angels, or in which are their intelligence and wisdom. This sphere appears as an atmosphere; as an ethereal atmosphere in the Inmost Heaven, as an aerial one in the Middle Heaven, and as a thin watery one in the Ultimate Heaven. Hence it is evident that an atmosphere which is as it were watery corresponds to natural thought and perception; but one which is thinly watery, to the spiritual natural thought and perception in which are the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven; but one which is densely watery, verging to either black or red, corresponds to the natural thought in which there is nothing spiritual. . .

—¹⁴. The reason the atmosphere of the Ultimate Heaven is as it were watery, is that the truths with them are the truths of the natural man, and the atmosphere of the natural man is as it were watery.

594. The universal angelic Heaven consists only of the Divine Truth which proceeds from the Lord, the reception of it constitutes the Angels; that in the highest Heaven appears like the pure aura which is called the ether; in the lower Heaven, as one less pure, almost like the atmosphere which is called the air; in the lowest Heaven it has a thin watery appearance, above which there is vapour, like clouds. Such is the appearance of Divine Truth according to degrees in its descent.

726³. From the sun of the world, as from their spring, auras and atmospheres went forth, which are called ethers and airs. Thus nearest around it there is the pure ether, and further away from it, ethers less pure, and at last airs; but these two last mentioned are around the Earths. These ethers and airs, when acted upon in the mass give heat, and when modified molecularly give light. Through these (atmospheres) this sun exercises all its power, and produces all its effects outside of itself, thus through the ethers and through the airs, by means of heat and at the same time by means of light. 944.

—⁴. From this some idea may be formed of the infinite power of the Lord through Divine Truth. From Him as a Sun have in like manner emanated auras and atmospheres, but spiritual ones, because from the Divine Love which constitutes that Sun. That there are such atmospheres in the Spiritual World, may be evident from the breathing of Angels and Spirits. Those spiritual auras and atmospheres which are nearest to the Lord as a Sun, are the purest; but further away, they are, by degrees, less and less pure. Hence it is that there are three Heavens; the Inmost Heaven in the purer aura; the Middle Heaven in an aura less pure; and the Ultimate Heaven in an aura still less pure. These auras, or atmospheres, which are spiritual, because they have sprung forth from the Lord as a Sun, when acted upon generally, present heat, and when modified molecularly, present light. . . 944.

832⁷. They who are in the third degree of love and thence of wisdom, live as it were in a pure ethereal atmosphere; they who are in the second degree of love and thence of intelligence, live as it were in a pure aerial atmosphere; and they who are in the first degree of love and thence of knowledge, live as it were in a pure watery atmosphere. . .

1208⁸. The second form, which is the natural form, and in which are all plants, derives its origin from the endeavour, and thence the flow, of natural forces, which are the atmospheres, and are called ethers, and in which that endeavour is present from the ending therein of the spiritual forces which are in the animal form; and from the continuous operation of these into the natural forces, which are the ethers, and through them into the matters of the Earth, of which plants are composed.

D. Wis. xii. 5². The Divine, proceeding, is what, around Him, appears to the Angels as a Sun; from this proceeds His Divine through spiritual atmospheres, which He had created for the transmission of light and heat down to the Angels, and which He had accommodated to the life of both their minds and their bodies, in order that they may receive intelligence from the light, also in order that they may see, and also that they may breathe, according to correspondence; for the Angels breathe, like men. Also [again] that they may receive love from the heat, may feel, and also in order that their hearts may beat, according to correspondence; for the Angels have a beating of the heart, like men. These spiritual atmospheres are increased in density through discrete degrees . . . down to the Angels of the lowest Heaven, to whom they thus become accommodated. Hence it is that the Angels of the highest Heaven live as it were in a pure aura, the Angels of the middle Heaven, as it were in ether; and the Angels of the lowest Heaven, as it were in air. Under these atmospheres, in each Heaven, are earths on which they dwell . . .

Ath. 26. An arcanum in Heaven and in the world; namely, that creation has taken place in order that all good which is conjoined with truth may clothe itself with forms, chiefly with the human form, since the Divine Good and the Divine Truth proceed from the Lord's Divine Human, and from every part of the Body. The putting on of the form which is everywhere in the atmospheres, is an arcanum which, as yet, no one knows, and is the Essential of the atmosphere, both spiritual and natural. Hence it is that insects are born, each according to its spiritual genius; and hence it is that affection everywhere clothes itself with a body . . .

191. The Divine, proceeding, is what is extended into the universe, and is the Divine Truth . . . It was afterwards formed successively into spheres, of which the ultimate is the atmosphere of the natural world.

J. [Post.] 312. There are three natural atmospheres originating from the sun of the world, and three spiritual atmospheres originating from the Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord. The three natural atmospheres originating from the sun of the world, are the purer ether, which is universal, and from which is all gravity; the middle ether, which makes a vortex about the planets, in which also is light, in which are the satellites, and from which comes magnetism; and the ultimate ether, which is the air. By means of these three atmospheres, all corporeal and material things of the Earth are held together, all of which are compounded in adaptation to these three degrees. The three spiritual atmospheres originating from the Sun of Heaven, are those in which are the Angels of the three Heavens; in the two higher ones are the Angels in the Lord's Celestial Kingdom; in the third, and in the first natural one, which is the pure ether, are the Angels in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom; in the two following atmospheres, which are the middle ether and the ultimate ether, or air, are men while they are in the natural world.

313. But it is to be known, that the atmospheres originating from the Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord, properly speaking, are not three, but six; three above the sun of the world, and three below the sun of the world. The three below the sun of the world continually and immediately follow the three natural atmospheres, and cause man, in the natural world, to be able to think and feel. For the atmospheres originating from the sun of the world, have not life in themselves, because they originate from a sun which is pure fire; whereas the atmospheres originating from the Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord, have life in themselves, because they originate from a Sun which is pure Love and pure Wisdom. The atmospheres originating from the sun of the world, which is pure fire, cause those things which are in the Earth, and in the human body, to remain in existence, and to be held together in connexion, and not to be changed, except according to the laws of natural order. Hence is the difference of things in the natural and Spiritual Worlds.

314. That in the Spiritual World which is above the natural world, there are also atmospheres, may be evident from the light and heat there, which, before the eyes and senses of the Angels appear similar to what light and heat do before the eyes and senses of men; and the Angels are spiritual, but men natural, and light and heat, with their differences, cannot exist without atmospheres. That there exist spiritual atmospheres, may also be evident from many appearances there, as from the appearance of colours there, of meteors, of clouds both thin and dense, of winds, also of weight, of pressure, and thence of permanent endurance . . . That there are spiritual atmospheres, may be especially evident from the breathing of Angels and Spirits, for Angels and Spirits breathe in the same way as do men in the world; but the latter from their own atmospheres, and the former from theirs; the Angels in the Celestial Kingdom, from their own atmosphere, which is purer; and the Angels in the Spiritual Kingdom from theirs, which is less pure. (Confirmed from experience. 315.)

Coro. 17². Since everything that is perfect must be a trine, in order that it may be one, and be held together in coherence; each world, Spiritual and natural, consists and remains in existence from three atmospheres, or elements; of which the first proximately environs the sun, and is called the aura; the second is under this, and is called the ether; and the third is under the two former, and is called the air. These three atmospheres, in the natural world, are natural, and are, in themselves, passive, because they proceed from a sun which is pure fire; but the three which correspond to them in the Spiritual World are spiritual, and are, in themselves, active, because they proceed from a Sun which is pure Love. The Angels of the Heavens dwell in the regions of these three atmospheres; the Angels of the highest Heaven, in the celestial aura, which proximately environs the Sun where the Lord is; the Angels of the middle Heaven, in the spiritual ether beneath them; and the Angels of the lowest Heaven, in the spiritual natural air under both the others. Thus are firmly established all the Heavens, from the first, to this last, which is being built up by the Lord at this day.

Atom. Atomus.

A. 5084⁴. It is a fallacy of the merely natural sense that there are simple substances, which are monads and atoms; for whatever is within the external Sensual, the natural man believes to be of such a character, or else nothing.

I. 17². They who do not know these things, and who do not thus distinguish the objects of reason, cannot but terminate the ideas of their thought in either the atoms of Epicurus, the monads of Leibnitz, or the simple substances of Wolff, and so shut up their understanding as with a bolt . . .

Attack. Adoriri. T. 510.Attack. Aggredi.

A. 1683. Evil Spirits are they who attack. . . The Lord has never begun a fight with any Hell, but the Hells have attacked Him; as takes place also with every man who is in temptation, or in combat with evil Spirits; with him, the Angels never attack, but always and continually the evil or infernal Spirits . . . This follows from the nature of evil and the nature of good. It is the nature of evil to want to assail everybody; it is the nature of good to want to assail nobody. The evil are in their very own life when they are attacking, for they continually desire to destroy; the good are in their very own life when they are attacking nobody, and when they are able to perform a use for others by defending them from the evil.

1950°. No evil can attack good, it cannot even stay in a sphere where there is good . . .

9954¹⁷. Assault on Divine Truth by falsities and evils, treated of.

N. 196. It is called spiritual temptation, when the truths of faith, which he believes in his heart, and according to which he loves to live, are attacked inwardly in a man; and especially when the good of love, on which he sets his spiritual life, is attacked. These assaults are effected by various methods; by an influx of scandalous things against goods and truths into the thoughts and also into the will; also by the continual coming forth and recollection of the evils which the man has done, and of the false things which he has thought, thus by an inundation of such things; and at the same time, by the apparent closing up of the interiors of the mind, and thus of communication with Heaven, by means of which he is cut off from thinking from his faith, and willing from his love. These things are done by the evil Spirits who are with the man . . .

R. 98. 'Fear nothing which thou shalt suffer'=do not despair when ye are infested by evils, and attacked by falsities . . .

M. 358². He who attacks the love, attacks the very life; and a state of wrath is then excited against the attacking party, like the state of any man whom another attacks—aggreddur—to kill.

359. The blazing up, or flame, of this love, which is zeal, is a spiritual blazing up, or flame, originating from the infestation and assault upon the love. Gen.art.

— The reason zeal originates from an assault upon the love, is that love is the heat of everyone's life; wherefore, when the life's love is assaulted, the heat of the life kindles itself, makes resistance, and breaks forth against the assaulting party . . .

360. How the love is kindled . . . into zeal from an assault upon it shall be told. . . Wherefore, when the love is assaulted, it exasperates itself in the understanding . . .

361. The reason a man is kindled by an assault upon his love shall be thoroughly opened. . . Since therefore the human form is composed of these things, it is evident, that if the love is attacked, that universal form, together with each and everything therein, is simultaneously attacked . . . Hence, when the love is attacked, it defends itself through its understanding, and the understanding, through the rational and imaginary things by which it represents the outcome to itself; especially by those things which act as one with the love which is attacked. Hence it is that the love, in order to resist assaults, hardens the substances of its form . . .

E. 650. 'The beast coming up from the bottomless pit shall make war with them'=an assault from infernal love.

—². Something shall be said about assaulting. . . The Hells where self-love reigns are the more direful and malignant Hells, and are diametrically contrary to the Lord, and hence continually assault the goods of love and of faith, because these are from the Lord alone, and these are the Lord with a man and an Angel . . .

Attack. Oppugnare. Oppugnatio.

A. 2183³. If the Natural conquers, the Angels remove themselves further away, that is, more towards his interiors, but the evil Spirits approach nearer to the Rational, and continually attack it, filling its lower part with hatreds, etc.

2851¹¹. In the prophecy of Deborah and Barak, 'the gates being assaulted'=that goods and truths were.

—E. Hence it may be evident, that there is nothing but what is good from the Lord, and that everything evil is from those who turn themselves away, are in what is opposite, and assault.

6419. The Spiritual Church, which is represented by 'Joseph,' is continually being attacked, but the Lord continually protects it. Hence, in the Word, the things of this Church are compared to a city, with walls, outworks, gates, bars; and by the attacks made on that city are described the attacks made on truths by falsities.

6677. When the Infernals are infesting, they are allowed to attack—aggreddi—truths, but not goods; the reason is, that truths are what can be attacked, but not goods . . .

7118. 'They are negligent'=because they are not sufficiently attacked.

8096. 'Peradventure the people will repent when they see war'=that they will turn aside from the truth through attacks.

—². As to attacks by those who are in the truth of faith which is not from good, who are signified by 'the Philistines,' it is to be known, that, in the other life, these infest the upright, and continually attack the good of faith, or charity . . . It has often been granted to me, both to hear the reasonings for faith alone, which are sharp, and the attacks made upon charity, which are stubborn.

10455. 'There is a voice of war in the camp'=an attack upon the truth and good which are of Heaven and the Church, by falsities and evils which are from Hell.

—². The interiors of that nation were taken possession of by the loves of self and of the world, and where these reign, the truths and goods of the Church are continually being attacked, however much the externals may appear to be in holy worship.

1086. 'They went backwards' = that they did not attend to errors and perversities . . . 1088, Ex.

1756. When one who hears another speaking attends to the words, he then does not so well apprehend the idea of him who is speaking, as if he did not attend at all to the words and the signification of them. The inward sense of the Word, in relation to the outward or literal sense, is like speech, of which the words are scarcely heard, still less attended to, when the mind is held only in the meaning of the things signified by the words of the speaker.

1783². When the mere historical sense, or that of the letter, is attended to, the inward sense is obliterated . . .

1983^o. This may also be known to themselves, if they attend to their own thoughts.

3796³. If anyone wants to know what his ends are, let him just attend to the delight which he perceives in himself from the praise and glory of self, and to the delight which he perceives from the use separate from self; if he perceives this latter delight, he is in genuine affection. He should also attend to the various states in which he is, for the very states themselves usually vary the perception . . .

3869². Since this lies hidden in hearing, namely, obedience and faith in will; therefore these things are also signified by hearing, hearkening, and attending, in common discourse.

4493⁴. If a man of the Most Ancient Church had read the historical, or the prophetic Word . . . he would have been like one who hears another speaking, and who only drinks in the sense, but does not attend to the words of the speaker. Whereas if a man of the Ancient Church had read the Word . . . he would have been like one who hears another speaking, and, in thought, is fixed in the words, and meanwhile does not attend to the meaning, which is therefore lost upon him.

4793². Interior obsessions are produced by such (Spirits); and the nature of them may be evident if the thoughts and affections are attended to, especially the interior intentions which they are afraid to show . . .

5165². Without such an interior face, or such a plane, a man in the body cannot think at all of the things which are above sensual things; for he sees them there, as when a man sees affections and thoughts in another's face, not attending to the face itself; and as when he hears another speaking, not attending to the words, but to the meaning of the speech . . .

6469. Once, when I was thinking about the influx of life from the Lord, and was turning over some doubts in my mind, there flowed in from Heaven that no attention should be id to a thousand objections and reasonings from fallacies.

7306. 'Morning,' here = elevation, because it is predicated of those who are in falsities, who cannot be enlightened, but whose attention may be elevated.

7342. 'Not to set the heart to anything' = not to attend; and since the want of attention to Divine things with the evil is caused by the resistance of the will, this also is signified by the same words.

7391. The reason why 'supplication' = humiliation, is that the Angels do not attend to the supplication, but to the humiliation in which the man is when he supplicates . . .

9058^e. In the inward sense, no attention is paid to persons, but to the actual things. Refs.

9300⁸. They pay no attention whatever to the thousands of things which the Lord Himself has taught concerning the good of life . . .

H. 236². He who pays attention may know that . . . W.96.

— From a single course of speech the wiser Angels know the quality of the dominant affection, for they attend chiefly to that.

496. Evil Spirits are known from good ones especially by this, that the evil ones attend with avidity to all that is said about outward things, and but little to what is said about inward ones, which are truths and goods of Heaven and the Church; these they do indeed hear, but not with attention and joy.

307². The thoughts of the Angels make one with the thoughts of man, because they correspond; they make one almost as do the words of a speaker, and the understanding of them, with a hearer who does not attend to the words, but only to the understanding.

563. Some Spirits . . . who said that they had been in stations of great dignity in the world . . . but who had not had regard to uses, but to themselves . . . were eager to be set over others, and they were allowed to be among those who were deliberating about matters of great importance; but it was perceived that they could not attend at all to the business in hand . . .

B. 67. The non-attention of God to the acts of man, but to faith alone, is a new heresy . . .

T. 96^e. Who does not know another from his works, if he attends to them, and to what end and purpose of the will, and what intention and cause they owe their existence? To these things do all the Angels attend, and also all wise men in our world.

628. From the setting up of God's arbitrary election, they have fallen into enormous and fanatical errors, and at last into . . . this abominable one, that God does not attend to the deeds of a man's life, but only to the faith which is inscribed on the interiors of his mind . . .

D. (Index). (At the word attention, E. S. refers to Reflection.)

1925. I wondered that when certain had no understanding, or no attention, I perceived that the Angels had fuller (attention). Hence it may also be evident that the Angels perceive a still fuller understanding from little children, who do not understand what things are prayed for. 2435.

4248. 4249. It was occasionally observed that when angelic Spirits wanted to pray from me, and also to know what it was that I was reading, they would snatch thought away from me by various methods, and direct my attention to various objects that were about me, in order that my idea might be obscured. They were thus in light. So that they were in greater light of the understanding in proportion as I was in less, and was, as it were, in darkness. But it is otherwise with the angelic Spirits who love the neighbour more than themselves; for it is only self love, of the existence of which with themselves they are unaware, that is attended with such an effect.

1763. These Spirits . . . induce a pain in the head, as of the drawing of a syringe.

5180. There are Genii and Spirits who induce a kind of suction or drawing in the head, of such a character that the place where such drawing or suction exists, is in pain . . . D.1129. 1130.

—3. (They assent with affection) thus drawing out even the secret thoughts.

54642. The lust of gain, and of honour, and of reputation for their sake, takes hold of all the means of persuading, and of nothing more gladly than of such things as in themselves are true, for these have latent in them a force of attracting minds.

6476. Whenever I have read the Lord's Prayer, I have plainly perceived an elevation towards the Lord, which was a kind of attraction . . .

6655°. If they do what is good, it is only in the outward form . . . for they know that what is good and true, just and fair, and honest, possesses a strong latent force of attracting minds, even those of the evil.

86043. This Divine Truth, which is from the Lord, inflows into the good with man, and through it draws the man to Himself; for the life which is from the Lord is attractive, because it is from love; for all love possesses in itself a force of attraction, because it wills to be conjoined, even into one. When therefore a man is in good, and from good in truth, he is attracted by the Lord, and conjoined with Him. This is meant by looking upwards to the Lord. But when a man is not in good, thus not in truth from good, he is then also attracted by the Lord, but cannot be elevated, for evils and falsities turn themselves away. This is meant by looking downwards, or to self and the world. Sig.

87722. In the interior man there is good which continually flows in from the Lord, and there conjoins itself with truths, and causes them to be faith, and afterwards to be charity. This good draws truths to itself . . .

91842. The Lord then attracts to Himself all things which are of life with man, so that they may look upwards.

H. 449°. It was especially granted me to perceive, and also to feel, that there was an attraction, and as it were a pulling out of the interiors of my mind, thus of my spirit, from the body; and it was said that this was from the Lord; and that from this is resurrection. D.322. 328.

M. 108. See ATMOSPHERE at this ref.

T. 350. The multiplicability of Divine Truth to infinity is from this cause, that the Lord is Divine Truth itself, or Truth in its infinity, and attracts all to Himself, but Angels and men are not able to follow the vein of the attraction, because they are finite, except according to their own capacity, the force of attraction to infinity remaining constant . . .

652. (The Lord's attraction of all men to Heaven, Ex.)

D. 203. The reason Angels and Spirits then perceive is that they then attract, as it were, the man's perceptions . . .

962. Wherefore the succenturiate kidneys carry off the impurities of the spirits of the blood, as the kidneys do the impurities of the serum of the blood; they act as it were in a similar manner, by attraction . . . In like manner also the Spirits who are in that province . . . They associate themselves together, excite, attract, and thus deliver the better and purer things from impurities . . .

964. That there is such an attraction, is sufficiently evident from various attractions and multiplied experience that are known to me, as that they have attracted—subtraxerint—my skull in a manner distinctly felt by me, sometimes with pain . . . which was nothing but the effect of such Spirits keeping their minds intent upon things most external, in order that interior things might be opened to better Spirits, and so on.

E. 646³. While he lives in the world, man does not know, because he does not feel, that he is thus elevated above his proprium; but still there is elevation, or as it were attraction of the man's interior understanding and interior will to the Lord, and thence a turning to Him of the man's face as to his spirit. This, however, is manifested to a good man after death, for then the turning of his face to the Lord is perpetual, and there is as it were an attraction to Him as to a common centre. . . But as it is according to Divine order, that where there is attraction there ought to be impulse, for there is no attraction without impulse, it is therefore according to Divine order that there also be impulse with man . . .

Attribute. Attribuere. Attributum.

A. 2724³. It was customary for the Ancients to add something to the name of Jehovah, and thus to remember His benefits, or attributes. III.

3667. In ancient times they distinguished the Supreme God, or the Lord, by various names, and that according to attributes, and according to the goods which were from Him, and also according to the truths. Examp. 4162³, Examps.

4151⁶. Some (of the Spirits) said that if everything evil and false flows in, nothing evil and false can be attributed to them, and therefore they are not in fault, because it all comes from elsewhere. But they received for answer, that . . .

4658⁴. (Aristotle) said, that he had believed in only one God, whose attributes and qualities they had distinguished by as many names as there were gods which they had worshipped. S. 117. T. 9^e. 275.

5135. 'Theft' = the claiming of other things, when it attributes to self and makes its own goods and truths . . .

6003. In the Original Language, 'God' is here first mentioned in the singular, and then in the plural; namely, first 'El,' and then 'Elohim.' The reason is, that by 'God' as first mentioned, is signified that God is one and only; and by 'God,' as mentioned the second time, is signified that He has many attributes. Hence 'Elohim,' or 'God,' in the Word, is almost everywhere in the plural. As there are many attributes, and the Ancient Church bestowed a name on each of them, their descendants, with whom the knowledge of such matters was lost, believed that there were a number of gods . . .

L. 18. Vindictive justice is not a Divine attribute. Divine attributes are, Justice, Love, Mercy, and Good . . .

34³. Redemption and Salvation are the attribute proper to His Human which is called Merit and Justice . . .

S. 67². By 'stealing,' a Celestial Angel understands attributing to self those things which are the Lord's, and claiming for self His Justice and Merit.

W. 289. Hence may be seen the inanity of the ideas of those who think of God otherwise than as a Man, and of the Divine attributes otherwise than that they are in God as a Man . . .

P. 187². They attribute (the Divine Providence) either to man, or to nature.

231⁵. The fifth kind of profanation is committed by those who attribute Divine things to themselves. Sig.

R. 611⁷. There are many attributes of the Divine Essence; as Omnipotence, Omniscience, Omnipresence, Mercy, Grace, Eternity, and others; and there are attributes proceeding from the Divine Essence, which are Creation and Preservation, Salvation and Redemption, Enlightenment and Instruction; everyone who thinks of God from Person only, makes three gods . . . T. 623⁴.

961⁶. (The Angels then) saw that by three Persons I understand three proceeding Divine attributes, which are, Creation, Salvation, and Reformation, and that these are the attributes of the one God. B. 119. T. 26.

M. 154a. The New-comers replied that they had confirmed themselves in this truth, that in proportion as they attribute all the good of charity and truth of faith to the Lord, and not to self, they are men, and become Angels of Heaven.

T. 36. Infinity is what is annexed to the Essentials and attributes of God, which are all said to be infinite, as the Divine Love, the Divine Wisdom, and the Divine Power . . .

797². (Melancthon) replied that there is nothing of the Church in charity, for if that were to be received as any essential attribute of the Church, man would also ascribe to himself the merit of justification . . .

Attribute. Perhibere.

T. 16². By those things which are attributed to the Holy Spirit, are meant the operations of the Divine Omnipresence.

Attribute. Tribuere.

A. 878. 'To put forth the hand, take the dove, and bring it in to himself' = to apply and to attribute to himself the truth signified by 'the dove.'

1936⁵. It is a Divine Truth that the wiser anyone is, the more he believes that there is no wisdom from himself; and the more insane he is, the more he believes that it is from himself, thus the more he attributes prudence to his own self.

2386⁴. The reason some suppose themselves not to be in good when they are, is that while they are reflecting on the good that is with them, the Angels in whose society they are, at once insinuate that they are not in good, lest they should attribute good to themselves . . .

2447⁵. That in the Word there are attributed to Jehovah, or the Lord, evil, punishment, etc., III. 2826³, Ex. 8284.

2609^e. By 'not stealing,' the Angels . . . perceive that they are to take nothing from the Lord, nor attribute anything of righteousness and merit to themselves.

2686³. Since (weapons) have such a signification, they are attributed to Jehovah . . .

[A.] 2694³. They who attribute all things to their own prudence, and little or nothing to the Divine Providence, if convinced by a thousand reasons that . . .

2720⁴. 'On account of the well of water which the servants of Abimelech had snatched'=the doctrine of faith, that they wanted to attribute scientific things to themselves.

3108. They who are not in good, and thus not in faith . . . do not know what the Spiritual is, nor even what the Rational is in the genuine sense, but only what the Natural is, to which they attribute all things . . .

4007⁴. The truth of faith . . . is with those who believe from the Lord, for to them are given faith and wisdom; for these attribute no truth and good to themselves . . .

4096⁶. See ANGEL at this ref. 4295².

4174². When the Lord flows in through the inward man with the light of intelligence, and thus enlightens the outward man, he then begins to believe otherwise, and does not attribute what is good to himself, but to the Lord.

4214¹. They who attribute all things to nature . . . also belong to the same category.

4380^e. In Heaven they thus speak and think by abstract things, because they do not attribute what is good and true to themselves, but to the Lord . . .

4911. See AVARICE at this ref.

4932. They who correspond to the hands and arms, and also to the shoulders, in the Grand Man, are they who are in power through the truth of faith from good; for they who are in the truth of faith from good are in the Lord's power, for they attribute all power to Him, and none to themselves, and the more they attribute none to themselves, not with the mouth, but with the heart, the more they are in power.

4950. Under the left foot, a little towards the left, are such as have attributed all things to nature, but still have professed that there is a Being of the universe from which are all things of nature . . .

5069. They who believe themselves to be righteous of themselves . . . are not among the just, but among the unjust, for they attribute what is good to themselves . . .

5116². The reason such things come into existence in the vegetable kingdom, is from the influx of the Spiritual World; but those cannot at all believe this who attribute all things to nature, and nothing to the Divine. But they who attribute all things to the Divine, and nothing to nature, can see that every single thing is from that source . . .

—³. They who attribute all things to nature, say that such things have been implanted in fruits and seeds in their first creation . . .

—⁴. If they who attribute all things to nature, and to the Divine so little as hardly to amount to anything, would consider these things . . .

5759. When judgment is given from good at the same time, they who do what is true and good, and from ignorance, or simplicity, attribute it to themselves, are not condemned, but are delivered in the other life by a method of vastation . . .

5798. See ANGER at this ref., and also other quotations in that article.

5990. (Adulterers and those who are cruel) are corporeal and sensual above others, and have cast off from themselves all thought about Heaven; attributing all things to nature and nothing to the Divine . . .

6316. The learned . . . are to a great extent sensual . . . When they are promoted to honours, they live more sensually than the simple, and then they believe it to be a sign of simplicity to attribute anything to the Divine, and not to prudence and nature, and the rest to chance.

6991. See APPEARANCE at this ref., and also that article generally.

7290⁴. (Miracles) would have still less effect at the present day, when it is not acknowledged that anything is from the Spiritual World; and when everything of the kind which takes place, and which is not attributed to nature, is denied.

7296². They who, in the bodily life, have made use of cunning, and have devised many arts of defrauding others, and at last, from their success, have attributed all things to their Own prudence, in the other life are addicted to magic . . .

7352. From mere falsities does he reason who attributes all things to nature, and scarcely anything to the Divine.

7632. In ancient times everything evil was attributed to Jehovah for the sake of the simple . . .

7643. Its being attributed to Jehovah, that is, the Lord, that He hardened Pharaoh's heart, Ex.

7877³. The evil which is permitted appears to be from him who permits it, since he could take it away. So here, the firstborn of Egypt being given to death is attributed to Jehovah . . .

8478⁴. They are in the stream of Providence who trust in the Divine, and attribute all things to Him; and they are not in the stream of Providence who trust in themselves alone, and attribute all things to themselves . . .

8717³. They who trust in their Own prudence attribute to themselves all things which happen prosperously for them, and the rest they ascribe to either fortune or chance, and few (ascribe them) to the Divine Providence; thus they attribute contingent matters to dead causes, and not to living causes . . .

8869. To have this or that 'for a god' is to love all that which proceeds from self above everything. They who do this do not in the least believe that anything of intelligence and wisdom flows in from the Divine, for they attribute all things to themselves, and the rest of what happens to them they refer to either fortune or chance . . .

8875². That evils, punishments, and vastations are in like manner attributed to the Lord, when yet, with the Lord, there is nothing but love and mercy, Refs.

8906. 'Thou shalt not steal'=that no one's spiritual goods are to be taken away from him, and that what is of the Lord is not to be attributed to self.

9010. Wherefore the simple, who are not able to distinguish between those things which take place of permission, and those which are of good pleasure, attribute to the Lord both good and evil; good, because they know that everything good is from Him; evil, on account of the appearance . . .

—c. That evil is attributed to the Lord, when yet it is from man, Refs.

9039³. They who, in Heaven, are in intelligence and wisdom above others, from the truths of faith, are in such humiliation that they attribute everything of Power to the Lord, and none to themselves; wherefore they do not make any of their glory and joy consist in having dominion, but in being of service . . .

9211. When a man believes (that the Lord alone has deserved merit), he sets no merit or reward in what is done by himself, but attributes all good things to the Lord; and since the Lord does it from Divine mercy, the man attributes all things to mere mercy.

10219⁴. There are three plagues which follow those who attribute to themselves the truths and goods of faith and of love. Enum.

10227³. The more they attribute all things to themselves, thus the more they love what they think from themselves, the more insane they are . . .

H. 278. They who are in a state of innocence attribute nothing of what is good to themselves . . .

P. 217³. He who attributes the honour of a thing to himself, or to his own person, in the Spiritual World, when that is represented, appears like a man with his body turned upside down.

T. 105². After this state, there comes another, which is a state of conjunction with God; in this a man acts in a similar manner, but now from God, nor has he any need now, as before, to attribute to God everything good which he wills and does, and everything true which he thinks and speaks, because this is inscribed on his heart . . .

610^e. In proportion as a man is being regenerated, or in proportion as regeneration with him is being perfected, he does not attribute to himself anything of good and truth, that is, of charity and faith, but to the Lord . . .

E. 413³. From this appearance it is, and also from the fact that they are punished when they do evil things, that, in the Word, there are so frequently attributed to Jehovah, that is, the Lord, indignation, anger, etc. Ill.

Audacity. Audacia.

A. 1397. A certain Spirit, from audacity and self-confidence, obtruded himself into a Society that was in the first boundary of Heaven, but . . . could hardly breathe . . .

8295. When the bridle is slackened, the evil are in such a state of audacity and impudence, that they suppose themselves able to destroy Heaven itself.

T. 112². One of them said, in a tone of authority,

How come you to have the audacity to upset the worship which has been established in the Christian World for so many ages?

Augment. Augere.

A. 868^e. All states of good and truth . . . with their delights and happiness immensely augmented and multiplied, are recalled in the other life.

6478. When an Angel . . . is communicating his own good to another . . . good flows in . . . to him much more than he gives, and this continually with augmentations.

6664. '(The more they afflicted him, the more he multiplied) and grew'=that truths were fortified. . . For no other truths then remain but those which are fortified, wherefore whatever truths are fortified grow.

Augur. Augurare. Augurator.

Augury. Augurium.

A. 3698^e. They who were called diviners, augurs, wizards, pythons . . . were of those who studied natural magic, by means of which nothing Divine could be foretold, but only what was against the Divine, that is, against the Lord, and against the good of love and the truth of faith in Him.

9188³. By 'diviners,' 'soothsayers,' 'wizards,' and the rest here mentioned (Deut.xviii.10,11), in the inward sense, are meant those who destroy the truths and goods of the Church by scientific things applied in a wrong way, thus from their Own intelligence; and who learn and teach by means of falsities from the evils of the loves of self and of the world, thus from the lust of gain and honours, and not from the affection of the truth of faith and of the good of life.

M. 3². The second Company from the north brought forth from their wisdom this prognostication . . .

T. 127. Like a man in a dream, who sees unreal things and forms surmises from them . . .

335. From having seen these things I surmised that . . .

631^e. All these signs or evidences of this faith in a man are ridiculous, and are just like the auguries of the ancients from the flight of birds.

754². That similar loves would have burst forth from many leading men of the Church outside of Babylonia, if their Power had not been limited and thus bridled, may be concluded from tokens and appearances by no means groundless.

D. 4849. The ancient auguries and auspices were also from the same source.

Augustine. Augustinus.

T. 840. I have sometimes spoken with Augustine, who was Bishop of Hippo in Africa in the third century. He said that he is there now, and inspires the worship of the Lord into them, and that there is hope of the propagation of this new gospel into the circumjacent regions there.

Augustus. Augustus.

T. 73. They said . . . If the Divine omnipotence is bound by laws . . . is not the Power of God less than that of a worldly King . . . who can act absolutely, like Octavius Augustus, or Nero?

D. 4418. On Augustus. I have spoken with Augustus. He was an upright man, but had a peculiar sphere of authority, which made him unwilling that anyone should speak to him. He put me under such restraint by this sphere of authority that I did not venture to do so, perhaps because he supposed that this would savour of undue boldness towards him. He showed me a round or oval window which he had in his palace, saying, that he had looked through it at those who were outside, and had examined their character without their being aware of it, and when he had found such a one as was pleasing to him, he had given him office and honours, the man himself knowing nothing about it. He was with me for some hours.

1116. The second and third posterities of the Most Ancient Church . . . live in an aura of light, so to speak, of resplendent pearl, and sometimes in a diamond one; for in the other life there are wonderful auras, of innumerable variety. D.4081.

H. 382^e. Affections and thoughts (from marriage love) are represented by diamond auras sparkling as with carbuncles and rubies, and this with deliciousness which affect the interiors of the mind.

M. 7². This mist was an aura of phantasy with which they were inspired.

—^e. A bright cloud veiled them over, in which there was an aura of wisdom, by means of which their sanity came back.

T. 6³. The Angels cannot open their mouths to utter

32⁸. (The highest atmosphere, called the aura.) See also other refs. under ATMOSPHERE.

173³. In Heaven no one can utter [the phrase], a Trinity of Persons, each of whom is by himself God, for the very heavenly aura itself, in which their thoughts fly and undulate, as sound does in our air, is antagonistic to it.

D. 4234. When I was departing, they represented to me an aura composed of chariots and horses, as they appeared, small and very numerous, just as if there were actually such an aura of beautiful horses and chariots; together with a tinge of sky-blue; saying, that they so treat their guests when they are going away.

3191. 'And they went after the man'=from the auspices of Divine truth natural. . . 'To go after,' or follow, in the inward sense, here,=from the guidance, or auspices.

6142. 'Joseph bought all the ground of Egypt for Pharaoh'=that he appropriated to himself the whole natural mind, where scientific things are, and set it under the general auspices (in the Natural). —^e.

6145. 'And the land was for Pharaoh'=that all things were subjected to the Natural, which was under the auspices of the Internal.

6083. 'The land of Egypt, it is before thee'=that the scientific things of the natural mind are under the auspices of the Celestial Internal.

8098. 'God led them'=Providence, or, what is the same, the Divine auspices.

8107. 'To lead them in the way'=the Divine auspices. 'To lead in the way,' when said of Jehovah,=Providence, and the Divine auspices.

8560. The Divine Providence differs from all other guidance and auspices in this . . .

9824⁴. When the Lord is in the (ultimate), interior things are held together in their order, connexion, and form, and in His auspices and guidance at His own good pleasure.

10561. 'Thou hast not made known to me whom Thou wilt send with me'=that it cannot be done without the Divine auspices.

10769^e. The little children . . . are with other little children under the view and oversight of the parents.

H. 50. (The Angels who dwell alone, house by house) are more closely under the Divine auspices of the Lord . . .

63. Such also is Heaven, under the auspices and guidance of the Lord.

124. Therefore all things which are below . . . are in His presence, and under His auspices.

332. The Heaven (where little children are) appears in front, opposite the forehead, directly in the line in which the Angels look at the Lord. The position of that Heaven there is determined by the fact that all little children are under the immediate auspices of the Lord.

333. From the fact that little children are in the province of the eyes in the Grand Man, or Heaven, it is evident that little children are under the immediate sight and auspices of the Lord.

W. 103². If the Lord were in Heaven among the Angels, He could not have the universe under His view, and under His auspices and government.

106. If the Sun of the Spiritual World did not appear distant from the Angels . . . the angelic Heaven, etc. would not be under the view, auspices, omnipresence . . . and Providence of the Lord . . .

252. A natural man is a full man, when the spiritual degree in him is opened ; for he is then consociated with Angels in Heaven, and at the same time with men in the world, and lives as to both under the auspices of the Lord.

R. 484^e. (That these things took place as here described) was from the Divine auspices of the Lord.

T. 20. In proportion as a man lives under the Divine auspices, that is, suffers himself to be led by the Lord he becomes the image of Him more and more inwardly.

165². The reason such a paralytic progeny was born, was that they did not read the Word under the auspices of the Lord ; and everyone who does not read the Word under His auspices, reads it under the auspices of his Own intelligence . . . Authority. Auctoritas.

A. 1507. A certain person, in the life of the body, had seemed to himself greater and wiser than others, but was otherwise upright . . . but who, because he had been born in dignity, had contracted a sphere of pre-eminence and authority ; such a one came to me, and for a long time said nothing, but I noticed that he was enveloped as it were with a mist, which, going forth from him, began to enwrap Spirits, and make them feel distressed ; wherefore they said to me, that they could by no means stay there, for they were deprived of all freedom, so that they did not dare to speak. He also began to speak to them, calling them his sons, and sometimes giving them instruction, but with the authority which he had contracted. From this it may be evident what is the character of a sphere of authority in the other life. (This was Solomon. See D. 2699. 2700.)

1508. Many times has it been granted me to observe that those who in the world have been invested with the highest dignity, could not help contracting from it a sphere of authority, and therefore, in the other life, they could neither conceal it, nor cast it away. With such of them as have been endowed with faith and charity, that sphere of authority is wonderfully conjoined with a sphere of goodness, so as not to be troublesome to anyone ; nay, a kind of corresponding subordination is also yielded them by well-behaved Spirits. Such, however, have not a sphere of command, but only a natural sphere in consequence of their high birth, which, in process of time, they put off, because they are good, and take pains to put it off.

5721. The most contemptuous of all, are they who, in their life in the world, had appeared more righteous than others, and were, at the same time, invested with dignity ; from both sources they had authority and weight, and yet had believed nothing . . .

—². In the other life, such persons speak as they had done in the world, that is, with authority and weight, and as if from what is just . . . but they are most malicious. When they are applied to a man, they induce . . . such weakness of mind, and thence of body, that the man can scarcely get up from his bed . . . D. 4579. 4589.

8078^a. Faith merely natural is faith which is insinuated through an external way, and not through an internal one . . . as the faith of authority, which exists when it is believed that the case is so, because another has said so, in whom faith is placed.

10124³. To reason about truths, as to whether the case is so, is not from what is good ; for then truth is not perceived, but is only believed from authority, and confirmation by one's self thence derived. That which is believed on authority is of others in ourselves, and is not our own . . .

P. 1684. By (interior enlightenment from man) a man sees a thing on one side, and not on the other, and, when he has confirmed it, he sees it in a light which is apparently like the light spoken of above, but it is a wintry light . . . With such persons, it is the same with everything they drink in from the mouth of a man of authority . . . Such persons see no truth from the light of truth, nor any righteousness from the love of righteousness, but only from the light of confirmation, which is a delusive light. In the Spiritual World, they appear like faces with no head, or as faces resembling human faces, with wooden heads behind them; and they are called rational cattle-pecudes, because they have rationality potentially.

[P.] 742°. The interpretation of the Word is not left to (the Pope's) determination alone, as has come to pass, for thus the Divine authority of the Word is perverted, and perishes.

M. 295. Those things of which the spirit is convinced, are allotted a place above those which, without consulting reason, enter on authority and on the faith thereof; for the latter enter the head no further than the memory, and there commingle themselves with fallacies and falsities; thus they are below the rational things of the understanding. From these things any man may speak as it were rationally, but absurdly, for he then thinks as a crab walks, the sight following the tail.

T. 422. There are some who believe a thing to be true because it has been said by a man of authority; these are represented by magpies.

1122. See AUDACITY at this ref.

359. 'Without Me ye can do nothing.' This is to be understood thus; that from himself man cannot procure for himself any faith but natural faith, which is a persuasion that it is so because a man of authority has said so; nor any charity but natural . . .

D. 4418. See AUGUSTUS at this ref.

4445. Those ideas remain with a man, and persuade him, which are from himself; not so much those which are from others, although there is an authority which impresses them; nevertheless, before he has of himself formed ideas for himself, they do not so well inhere, nor persuade.

5577. See ENGLAND at this ref. J.(Post.)3.

Automaton. Automaton.

Life 96. The man who fights against evils, cannot but fight as of himself, for he who does not do so as of himself, does not fight, but stands like an automaton, seeing nothing and doing nothing, and is continually thinking from evil for evil, and not against it.

F. 192. Faith without charity is like the breathing of the lungs without a heart, which cannot exist in any living thing, but only in an automaton.

Autumn. Autumnus.

A. 1837. The Lord's Church is compared to . . . the seasons; its first age, to the Spring, when all things blossom; and the one preceding its last, to the Autumn, when they begin to grow inert.

5725. When a man who had lived in good is let back into his proprium . . . there then appears as it were an inundation . . . this state is the evening, or autumn, of Spirits.

H. 166. (The ideas of autumn and evening are, with the Angels, turned into the idea of love and wisdom as they are in their third state with them.)

E. 37614. The good which has been taken away, on account of which there is lamentation, is meant by 'the fruits of autumn' (Jer. xlviii. 32).

9194. By 'the fruits of autumn' are signified the goods of the Church . . .

Avarice. Avaritia.

Avaricious. Avarus.

A. 303°. The Jews are still kept in such vastation by lusts, especially by avarice . . .

548°. The avaricious are least of all (able to apprehend these statements about love). H. 406°.

938. On the Hells of the avaricious . . . Gen.art.

— The avaricious are the vilest of all, and think, least of all men, about the life after death, about the soul, and about the inward man. They do not even know what Heaven is, because they elevate their thoughts the least of all men, and infuse and immerse them entirely in bodily and earthly things; wherefore, when they come into the other life, for a long time they do not know that they are Spirits, but suppose themselves to be still in the body. The ideas of their thought, which have been made by avarice as it were bodily and earthly, are turned into direful phantasies . . . In the other life the sordidly avaricious seem to themselves to dwell in vaults, where is their money, and to be infested by mice there; but however much they are infested, they do not depart thence, until they are tired out. So, at last, they roll out of those graves. 12002. See below, D. 384.

939. Into what vile phantasies the ideas of thought of those who have been sordidly avaricious are turned, is evident from their Hell, which is deep down under foot. A steam exhales therefrom like the steam from hogs being scraped in a trough. There are the homes of the avaricious. They who come thither, at first appear black, and then seem to themselves to become white by the scraping off of their hair, as hogs do. . . A certain black Spirit . . . was sent thither, who was not so avaricious . . . and on his arrival the avaricious there fled away, saying that he was a robber, because he was black, and would murder them; for the avaricious flee from such, because they are dreadfully afraid of losing their lives. D. 1292-1295.

940. A large proportion of the inhabitants of this Hell consists of Jews, who have been sordidly avaricious. (See JEW.)

954. See MOUSE at this ref.

10402. He who is avaricious, is avaricious (in every single effort of will, and in every single idea of thought).

13274. The Jews, at the present day, are permitted to immerse themselves in avarice, in order that so they may be the further removed from the acknowledgment of inward things . . . Nothing more effectually removes men from inward things than avarice, because it is the lowest earthly lust.

1514°. A stink of mice is diffused around by those who have been sordidly avaricious.

17422. The demons who, for fear of losing their lives, were sent into the swine, were those who, in the bodily life, had been given up to filthy avarice; as may be evident from the fact, that, in the other life, such seem to themselves to pass their time among swine, from the fact that a life of avarice corresponds to the life of swine, and therefore it is delightful to them.

4067³. A man takes to himself Societies . . . for like is associated with like; as for example, he who is avaricious takes to himself Societies of like Spirits, who are in that kind of Inst.

4459⁷. The Jewish and Israelitish nation . . . are more in externals than all others, for they are in avarice. They who love gain and money-making, not for the sake of any use, but only for the sake of the gold and silver, and who make all the delight of life to consist in possessing them, are in the outermost, or lowest things, for the things which they love are entirely earthly. 4865⁸.

4644². See SPHERE at this ref.

4751. 'What gain is it that we kill our brother, and cover up his blood?' . . . This was said from lust and avarice; for the lust of money-making has in it, not only that it wants to possess the universal world, but also, for the sake of gain, to plunder everyone, nay, to kill them; and it also would kill them for a trifle, if the laws did not stand in the way. Moreover, in the gold and silver which such a man possesses, he regards himself as the greatest in power, however different he may appear in outward form. Hence it is evident, that in avarice there is not only the love of the world, but also the love of self, and, in fact, the most filthy love of self; for, with the sordidly avaricious, haughtiness of disposition, or pride, is outwardly not so conspicuous; for in some cases this pride does not care for wealth for the sake of display; neither is it that kind of self-love which is wont to be conjoined with pleasure; for they care little for the body, and its food and dress; but it is a love entirely earthly, having nothing for its end but money, wherein it believes itself to be above all others, not in act, but in power. Hence it may be evident, that in avarice there is self-love the lowest and basest of all; wherefore, in the other life, they appear to themselves to be among swine; and they are, above all others, against what is good of every kind. Hence they are in such thick darkness, that they cannot in any possible way see what is good and true. That there is anything inward in man, which lives after death, they do not apprehend at all, and in their hearts they jeer at those who say there is.

4911. They who are in the dirt of loves, that is, in avarice, as that nation is, cannot elevate the view of the mind and see truth in any other way than from self; wherefore when it is ascribed to them, they then affirm it. Examps.

5177. They who have been much troubled about future things, and still more, they who, on that account, have become niggardly and avaricious, appear in the region where is the stomach. The sphere of their life may be compared to the sickening stench which breaks up from the stomach, and also to the heaviness which is caused by indigestion. They who have been of this character stay a long time in this region . . . 6202.

6310^e. In this (gross, sensual) lumen are especially misers, adulterers, and they who have lived in mere pleasures, and in shameful idleness. Hence they have filthy thoughts, and, frequently, scandalous ones about the holy things of the Church.

8301^f. (The Jews) are, of all nations, the most avaricious; and avarice such as theirs, which loves gold and silver for the sake of gold and silver, and not for the sake of any use, is an affection in the highest degree earthly, and drags down the mind completely into the body, and immerses it in it, and closes up the interiors to such a degree, that nothing whatever of faith and love can enter from Heaven. 10407⁴.

8318^g. They who are in evil from the love of the world . . . desire to possess all things which belong to the neighbour . . . for to deprive the neighbour of his goods is the delight of their life, especially of those who are sordidly avaricious, those, to wit, who love gold and silver for the sake of gold and silver, but not for the sake of any use from them . . .

10407⁴. The love of self does not stand forth with (the Jews), so as to appear, but lies hidden within their hearts, as it is wont to do with all who are sordidly avaricious.

N. 77. See LOVE OF THE WORLD at this ref.

H. 363^e. The reason they are then delighted with dirt, is that filthy pleasures and crimes . . . and also avarice, which is the love of riches without use, correspond to dirt. Spiritual dirt is nothing else.

488^d. They who have been sordidly avaricious dwell in vaults, and love the dirt of swine, and also the stench which break up from undigested matters in the stomach.

P. 220^e. It is otherwise when money is the final love, and trade the instrumental love; for this is avarice, which is the root of evils, and concerning which, see Luke xii. 15, and the parable about them, verses 16 to 21.

I. 18². What good is it to know, unless that which one knows another knows too . . . Spiritual avarice is nothing else.

T. 404². (The love of the world) is very various; it is worse in the degree in which it verges towards avarice; in this the love of Heaven is turned black.

D. 377. That various phantasies follow Souls from their bodily life. . . From avarice there break forth phantasies of horrid and filthy little animals, as of dormice, mice, and innumerable others which have never been seen on earth; also of filthy lice; for they are formed according to the quality of the avarice, and according to the purpose on account of which they are avaricious.

384. That after death, the avaricious seem to themselves to be shut up in subterranean vaults, where there are mice.

— There are degrees of avarice, as well as of ends of avarice. They who [have it] for the mere sake of money, which they bury in vaults, seem to themselves to abide in the vaults where their wealth is, and there, in fact, to be infested by mice as it were mountainous and huge, in order that they may depart thence; but still they do not depart until they are tired out. So, at last, they roll out from their graves.

[D.] 469. On the Jews who were called together by Jacob, and on the avaricious in general. 474.

908. On the avaricious, and their life after death.

— There are many genera and many species of avarice. They who are niggardly, and so, by saving, heap and pile up money and wealth, after the bodily life are punished in a different manner from those who indulge their avarice by despoiling others . . . Here [I shall treat] of that kind of avarice only which heaps up wealth, and [induces them] to heap up wealth, and to have the mind intent upon it, making the happiness of life to consist therein, but not making use of unlawful means. (Then, in no. 910, follows an account of a host of Spirits who cried out, I am of no account, I am of no account, in order to prevent other Spirits from despoiling them; and in no. 911, the reformation of these miserable Spirits is explained.)

2450. On avarice. . . Certain Spirits are of such a character, from the bodily life, that they want money for the sake of money, and for no other use than to be delighted by the money . . . Such a lust is called avarice, and is most filthy . . .

4385. Conversation with the Jews about avarice.

4428. See PLUTO at this ref.

D. Wis. vi³. Those traders are in the man-devil, who love wealth, and trading for the mere sake of wealth; with these there is avarice, which is the root of all evils . . . for to love wealth alone, and not any use derived from wealth, or to regard wealth in the first place, and trading in the second, is avaricious . . .

Aven. Aven.

A. 273. 'The high places of Aven' (Hos. x. 8) = self-love.

E. 391²⁸. 'The high places of Aven shall be destroyed' = that the principles of falsity, and the reasonings thence derived, which are in those who are in that worship, which regarded in itself, is interior idolatry, shall be destroyed; for they who are in evil of life and in falsities of doctrine, worship themselves and the world.

Avenge. See REVENGE, and VENGEANCE.

Avenue. See ARCADE, and APPROACH-aditus.

Aversion. Aversatio.

Aversion, To feel. Aversari.

A. 276. 'To eat bread in the sweat of the countenance' = to feel aversion for what is celestial.

—². The last posterity of the Most Ancient Church, which immediately preceded the Flood, and which is here treated of, was so utterly lost and immersed in sensual and bodily things, that they were unwilling to hear what the truth of faith was, and what the Lord was, who would come and save them; and when they were mentioned, they felt aversion. This aversion is described by 'eating bread in the sweat of the countenance.' So the Jews, who, being of such a character, that they did not acknowledge heavenly things, nor wanted any Messiah but a worldly one, could not do otherwise than feel aversion for the manna . . .

1740³. The more horror there is for evils and falsities, the less dare evil Spirits approach, because they cannot endure aversion and horror for the evils and falsities in which their life consists . . .

2543. 'The men were sore afraid' = even to their feeling aversion. . . Fear, like every affection, involves in it many things . . . and therefore it involves aversion for those things which endeavour to destroy them . . . The aversion is opposite to the affection itself; wherefore, by 'fearing' is here signified aversion. How great the Lord's aversion was, is evident . . .

2732^o. They who have lived in marriage . . . who have felt aversion for each other, are still more separated; and still more, they who have hated each other.

3489. That the Church is of such a character, does not appear to those who are in the Church; namely, that they despise and feel aversion for all things which belong to what is good and true . . . Hence it is that, before the eyes of men, there is no contempt, still less aversion . . .

3605. 'Esau hated Jacob on account of the blessing' = that natural good felt aversion for the inverted conjunction of truth. . . 'To hate,' here, = to feel aversion.

—². The reason 'to hate' = to feel aversion, is that it is predicated of the good which is represented by 'Esau,' and good does not even know what hatred is . . . But good, or they who are in good, instead of hatred, have a kind of aversion. Hence it is, that 'hatred,' here, in the inward sense, is to feel aversion; for the inward sense is chiefly for those who are in Heaven; wherefore, when that sense descends thence, and is turned into the literal sense; then, when the historicals are of such a character as this, the affection of aversion falls into the expression 'hatred.'

3938¹. The more advancement there is made in the delights of the affections of truth and of good, the more does the man begin to hold in slight esteem these delights of evil and falsity, and, at last, to feel aversion for them.

3994. See ANNIHILATION at this ref.

4031³. See AFFECTION at this ref.

4096³. He who, from affection, studies the abstract matters of the sciences, loves to look into, and does look into, more intricate things than these; but when we treat of spiritual good and truth, he feels weariness and also aversion. This is said to show the character of the men of the Church at the present day.

4459⁴. When they reflect upon these things from the bodily and worldly things in which they are, they feel aversion for them.

4727. Which of them believes the Human of the Lord to be Divine? Do they not feel aversion at the very mention of it?

4755⁵. The exteriors of (self-love) are contempt for others, and aversion for those who are in spiritual good . . .

4956. What is opposed to the neighbour is evil and false, for this, he who has charity feels aversion. He, therefore, who has charity towards the neighbour, is affected by good and truth, because these are from the Lord; and feels aversion for evil and falsity, because these are from himself. . .

4990. 'Joseph' refused'=aversion. 'To refuse'=to feel aversion; namely, for this conjunction; for he who refuses to the extent of fleeing out of doors, feels aversion.

5006². There were present Spirits from the Christian World . . . and they were then let into the state in which they had been in the world; and at the mere thought of spiritual good and truth, they were not only affected with sadness, but also, from aversion, were seized with such loathing, that they said they felt in themselves like what, in the world, excites vomiting. . .

5016. 'I cried with a great voice'=that it felt aversion.

5018. 'I lifted up my voice and cried'=great aversion.

5168³. At the present day, within the Church, charity is no longer of any account . . . thus there is no affection for knowing such things as these; wherefore somewhat of aversion is instantly excited, when anything is said which is within, or above, sensual things. . .

5464⁶. When a man has gone off into what is wrong, and has entirely rejected the things . . . of the Church, he is indeed then in a like capability of understanding truths, but no longer wills to understand them, and feels aversion for them on the first hearing.

5648⁶. See ANGEL at this ref. H.230.

5702. 'An abomination to the Egyptians'=what is in the opposite. . . For 'the Egyptians'=those who are in inverted order; and 'the Hebrews' . . . those who are in genuine order; thus they are in what is opposite to each other; hence comes aversion, and, at last, abomination. As to this 'abomination,' it is to be known, that those who are in inverted order, that is, in evil and in falsity thence derived, at last feel such an aversion for the good and truth of the Church, that when they hear of them, and still more when they hear about the interior things of them, they abominate them to such a degree, that they feel as it were sickness and vomiting in themselves.

5786². The Internal then having no sovereignty, merely serves the External to enable it to think and reason against what is good and true . . . Hence it is that such persons utterly despise, nay, feel aversion for those things which are of Heaven.

6201. When a man is in what is sensual . . . he thinks about nothing but what is of the body and the world, and he then does not want to know anything about the things of eternal life; nay, he feels aversion to hear about them.

6315. When a man is immersed in worldly cares, etc., he is in sensual life: in this state he shuns and feels aversion for speaking about God, and those things which belong to faith . . .

6558. 'To hate'=to feel aversion, and to reject.

6665. 'They were affected with loathing on account of the Sons of Israel'=greater aversion. 'To be affected with loathing'=aversion, here, greater aversion, because they were multiplied and increased through their afflictions.

7161. 'Thou hast made our odour to stink in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants'=that on account of these things, all those who are in falsities feel so great an aversion to our compliance. 'To make to stink'=aversion.

—². Since 'odour'=all that which is pleasing to the Lord, so 'stink'=that which is displeasing; thus 'stink'=aversion, and also abomination. 'Stink' also actually corresponds to aversion and abomination which belong to what is false and evil. Since 'stink'=that which is [an object] of aversion, it is said in the Word instead of aversion. Ill.

—³. The reason it is said that 'their odour stank in their eyes' is that all who are in falsities and evils feel aversion for goods, and truths stink to them.

—^e. From this it may be evident, how it is to be understood, that those who are in falsities feel such an aversion for those things which are of the Divine Law, and for doctrine thence derived.

7319. 'The river stank'=aversion for (truth falsified). 'To stink'=aversion.

7320. 'The Egyptians laboured to drink the waters of the river'=that those who are in falsities from fallacies want to know hardly anything about truths, thus that they feel aversion for them. The cause of the aversion is that the truths which they have perverted by means of falsities, still fight secretly and silently, and labour to dispel the falsities from themselves, and so sting them.

7327. There is total falsification when what is false begins to reign; for the man then lives according to his inborn and acquired evil, and feels delight in it; and since the truths of faith forbid such things, he then feels aversion for them, and when he feels aversion, he rejects those truths, and if he cannot reject them, he falsifies them.

7363. (The inhabitants of Mars feel no aversion for those who are not congenial to them) for there is no aversion, still less hatred [there].

7492. With those in whom (good and truth) are rejected, the good which is of love, and the truth which is of faith, are held in contempt and aversion.

7738. The more the Infernals are in falsities from evil, the more they feel aversion for truth, and at last to such a degree, that they are unwilling to hear anything of truth. Sig.

7950. He therefore who is in evil as to life, is in the falsity of his own evil, and does not believe truth, however well he knows it . . . In the other life . . . he will disown, feel aversion for, and spew out the truth . . .

[A.] 7964. 'Egypt was strong upon the people in hastening to send them out of the land' = that from aversion and fear they pressed them to depart. . . The reason it was from aversion and fear is evident; for they who are in mere falsity from evil feel such an aversion for those who are in truth from good, that they are not even able to endure their presence. Hence it is, that they who are in evil cast themselves deep down into Hell according to the quality and quantity of the evil, in order that they may be far away from what is good; and this not only from aversion, but also from fear; for in the presence of good they are tormented.

8711. 'Hating gain' = aversion to persuasions from what is false and evil; for by 'hating' is signified aversion.

9014³. When, from this (new) life, he looks at the evils of his former life, and feels aversion and horror for them, then first are the evils forgiven; for then the man is kept in goods and truths by the Lord . . .

9096^e. The Lord instils affections for what is good, and aversion for what is evil . . .

9261. 'From the word of a lie keep thyself aloof' = aversion to falsity from evil. . . 'To keep aloof from' = to feel aversion. The reason 'keeping aloof' = aversion, is derived from the keepings aloof which appear in the Spiritual World, which are according to dissimilitudes, contrarieties, and aversions as to those things which are of spiritual life . . .

9262. 'And the innocent and just thou shalt not kill' = aversion to destroying interior and exterior good.

9399^e. Wherefore, when they are left to themselves, they fall back even into the falsities of their own evils, and feel aversion for the truth and good which they had understood.

9448. To shun what is evil and false, and to feel aversion for them, is repentance, but these things have no existence, except with those who, through regeneration, have received a new life from the Lord; for these things are of the new life.

9449. The signs that sins are forgiven are . . . that they shun and feel aversion for evils.

10237². They who are being purified, ought not only to know what evil and falsity are, but also to acknowledge them [to be such], and afterwards to feel aversion for and shun them; when this takes place, then first is the man purified from them.

10492². When evils and falsities enter into the thought and into the will, it is perceived that there is then aversion, and from it contraction . . . This is the general cause of the closing of the Internal . . .

10676. 'There shall not anyone covet thy land' = aversion for such things as are of the Church with those who are in evils and falsities of evil . . . 'Not to covet,' when said of those who are in evils and falsities of evil, when they see and perceive goods and truths of good, = to feel aversion; for between evils and goods there is perpetual enmity; evils feel aversion for goods, and hate them; and goods feel aversion for evils, and either put them to flight, or flee from them.

H. 194. In the Spiritual World . . . one person is removed from another in proportion as he feels aversion for him; and since all aversion is from contrariety of the affections, and from disagreement of the thoughts, it comes to pass, that many who are in one place there, so long as they agree together, appear; but as soon as they disagree, disappear.

245. Evil affections, and filthy ideas thence derived, to which the Angels feel utter aversion . . .

344². The good Spirits and Angels, who saw this through my eyes, felt such an aversion, that I perceived their horror.

533. When he has been initiated, the Lord operates all good things with him, and causes him not only to see evils, but also not to will them, and finally, to feel aversion for them. This is meant by the Lord's words, 'My yoke is easy, and My burden light.'

598. Evils . . . cannot be removed, unless the man sees them in himself, and acknowledges them, and afterwards does not will them, and at last feels aversion for them; then first are they removed.

Life 92. No one can shun evils as sins, so as to feel an inward aversion to them, except through combats against them. Gen.art.

W. 427³. These are they who are in the Third Heaven . . . Such have they become who in the world have applied to life the Divine things which they have heard, feeling aversion for evils as infernal, and adoring the Lord alone.

P. 35^e. A man has the love of wisdom in proportion as he feels aversion for the diabolical crew, which are the concupiscences of evil and falsity.

79². These goods then constitute the centre, and remove evils towards the circumference, further and further according to the turning away from and aversion for them.

278. When a man sees this, and knows what sin is, he can, if he implores the Lord's aid, not will it, shun it, and afterwards act contrary to it, if not freely, still he can compel himself to do so by a combat, and at last feel aversion to it, and abominate it; and he then first perceives and also feels, that evil is evil, and that good is good.

283^e. Although good be in the midst, still the man is not in good, unless the evils which are at the sides turn downwards or outwards. If they look upwards, or inwards, they are not removed . . . They turn and look downwards and outwards, when the man shuns evils as sins, and still more when he feels aversion for them, for he then condemns and consigns them to Hell, and makes them look thither.

321⁷. They . . . reflect upon the evils with themselves, and reject them to Hell, whence they come, in proportion as they shun and feel aversion for them as sins. . . Who does not know . . . that in proportion as a man shuns and feels aversion for what is evil, he shuns and feels aversion for Hell; and who does not know from this, that in proportion as anyone shuns and feels aversion for what is evil, he wills and loves what is good . . .

R. 949². The Lord is omnipresent with every man according to conjunction, and conjunction is according to reception, and reception is according to . . . charity and faith, and charity and faith are according to life, and life is according to aversion for what is evil and false, and aversion for what is evil and false is according to the knowledge of what evil and falsity are, and then according to repentance and at the same time looking to the Lord.

T. 42^e. They who have confirmed their own falsities, cannot endure to hear truths, and as soon as any truth knocks at the door of their ears, from aversion, they repel it . . .

183. All who dwell outside of the Christian Church . . . feel aversion for Christianity solely on account of the belief in three gods therein.

310. In the spiritual sense, by 'murders' are meant all kinds of killing and destroying the souls of men . . . persuading them of such things as cause a turning away, and also aversion.

365⁴. Sympathies and antipathies are nothing but exhalations of affections from minds, which affect another according to likenesses, and with aversion according to unlikenesses.

442². See MERIT at this ref.

478^e. He who drinks in the spiritual things of the Church, and controls his free-will by means of them, is withdrawn by the Lord from concupiscences and evil pleasures . . . and feels aversion for what is evil.

495. Infernal freedom is slavery; wherefore the Angels feel aversion for it as for a cadaverous stench.

589. The reason why none in Hell are in intelligence, but all are in insanity in spiritual things, is that they do not will what is good, but what is evil, and hence feel aversion for knowing and understanding truths . . .

4638¹⁰. 'Watch therefore . . . ' = the devoting of the life according to the precepts of faith, which is 'to watch.'

5210. 'To sleep' = an obscure state, for sleep, in the spiritual sense, is nothing else; as wakefulness is nothing but a clear state; for there is spiritual sleep when truths are in obscurity, and spiritual wakefulness when truths are in clearness; in the same proportion also have Spirits wakefulness, or on the other hand, sleep.

9582. In a state of wakefulness I was led as to the spirit . . . to a certain Earth in the universe . . . 9967^e.

184^e. This took place in full wakefulness, when the interior sight was open to me.

440. As to being withdrawn from the body, the case is this. The man is brought into a certain state, which is mid-way between sleep and wakefulness. When he is in this state, he can know no otherwise than that he is quite awake; all the senses are as fully awake as they are during the most complete wakefulness of the body

... and, what is wonderful, the touch, which is then more exquisite than can ever be possible during the wakefulness of the body . . . This state is that of which it is said, that they were withdrawn from the body, and did not know whether they were in the body or out of the body.

R. 158. 'Be watchful' (Rev.iii.2)=that they should be in truths, and in a life according to them . . . For he who learns and lives according to truths, is like one who rouses from sleep, and is awake . . . Natural life in which there is spiritual life is wakefulness; and this can only come from truths . . . Ill. 163.

155a. One morning very sweet singing, which was heard at some height above me, roused me, and in consequence, during the first wakefulness, which is more inward, peaceful, and sweet than the rest of the day, I could be kept for some time in the spirit, as it were out of the body . . .

T. 606. An unregenerate man is like one who dreams, and a regenerate man is like one who is awake; in the Word also natural life is likened to sleep, and spiritual life, to wakefulness.

D. 164. 165 (Index). Three states of Spirits have been observed, in general; namely, such as are those of man in wakefulness, in dreams, and in sleep.

319. Souls . . . have states and very many changes of them merely between their deepest sleep and their most complete wakefulness; they confess . . . that they have a state of wakefulness like that they had in the bodily life, and indeed much more perfect . . . From this their highest state of wakefulness, they are also borne into a state of sleep, as with man when, from wakefulness, he gradually falls into a state of sleep . . . There is also a state of sleep which is as it were awake, in which I also have been; and thus have learned these and the former things through experience. In this state, they do not seem to themselves to be asleep, but to be awake . . . This can be perceived by the man to whom it is given to come from wakefulness into many states of the softest sleep, and afterwards of dozing . . .

320. See SLEEP at this ref.

465. In the first wakefulness I again perceived, as often before, a state of tranquillity, from peace, namely, a delicious delight . . .

2312. In order that I might be in fine perception, this took place immediately after I awoke from sleep, at which time there was a fine perception of those things which were in the World of Spirits; it is otherwise when I have been long awake. For, when first awake, the character of each and all things is perceived in a state of repose, but by no means so when there is turmoil. The thoughts of Spirits are excited and disturbed by the turmoil of wakefulness, wherefore there is then not such fine perception as at the first wakefulness.

2930. These stationary Spirits kept me awake the whole night . . . They kept me in a middle state, nearer wakefulness than sleep; thus harassing me for many hours of the night . . .

4132. He who sees all things from what is eternal, and the consequences of all things in their order and connexion, is in a state of wakefulness; thus the Lord alone [is so].

4250. On interior wakefulness.

— In sleep, during the night, when there was nothing at all to be seen, I was brought into a state of interior wakefulness, of such a nature, that I had not the slightest idea but that I was awake. I thought as if awake, I saw, I was persuaded as if awake that I was awake, so that I believed myself to be wide awake; but there was an interior wakefulness in me, of one of the spirit, not of the body . . .

—². At last I came out of this wakefulness of the spirit into wakefulness of the body . . . and I spoke to those with whom I had been in that interior wakefulness, and heard them. They said that man can be easily reduced to such a state, but that at the present day it is not permitted; and that Abraham was reduced into such a state when he saw the Angels, and also Lot and Gideon, when they saw Angels. They also said that Spirits live in such wakefulness, and do not know but that they are the men; and that they are so, not only during sleep with man, but also in half wakefulness, while he is walking, as has happened to me two or three times. . . When I have been awakened in a different way from the usual one, I have also seen Spirits, which has very often taken place.

4251. When, on being awakened, I thought about that kind of wakefulness, I wanted to get into the state of that wakefulness; for it is thus that the interior man is ruled by the Lord.

4544. On the wakefulness of the good, and the dreaming of the evil.

— The evil . . . are in such sleep because their interiors cannot be any further awakened. When the externals are taken away, their internals have no more light, thus no more wakefulness [than that]. It is otherwise with those who have had conscience . . . When the externals are taken away from them, they are awakened into wakefulness.

4575. When I was in bed and asleep, I was let, by the Lord, into a state of vision, in which I had not been before; I was in a waking vision. Des.

E. 187. 'Be watchful' (Rev.iii.2)=that they should procure for themselves life. 'To be watchful'=to be in spiritual life, but here, because those are treated of who are in moral life and not yet in spiritual life, 'be watchful'=that they should procure for themselves spiritual life. The reason 'awake' and 'wakefulness' signify this life, is that spiritual life is to moral life without spiritual, as wakefulness is to sleep. Ex.

—1. Intelligence and wisdom constitute wakefulness.
 —2. 'Watch therefore, for ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come' (Matt.xxiv.42) . . . By these words is meant man's state as to love and faith when he dies, for then is his judgment also . . . By 'watching' is meant receiving life from the Lord, which life is spiritual life, and by 'sleeping' is meant carrying on natural life devoid of spiritual.

—3. 'Blessed are the servants, whom the Lord, when He cometh, shall find watching . . .' (Luke xii.37). Here also by 'watching' are meant those who are spiritually awake, who are they who receive spiritual life from the Lord, for these come into the light of intelligence and wisdom concerning Divine Truths . . .

—4. 'Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh' (Matt.xxv.13)=that they should receive the spiritual life which those possess who are in love and thence in faith.

—5. 'Watch ye therefore, praying all the time . . .' (Luke xxi.36). 'To watch,' here also = to receive spiritual life; 'to pray all the time' = to prepare themselves. 325⁷.

—6. 'Behold I come as a thief, blessed is he who watcheth and keepeth his garments . . .' (Rev.xvi.15). That 'to watch,' here, = to receive spiritual life from the Lord is evident from . . .

—7. 'Arise, cry out in the night, at the beginning of the watches . . .' (Lam.ii.19); 'night,' here = a state of no faith; 'the beginning of the watches' = the state when faith is commencing, thus a state of enlightenment, which exists when the man becomes spiritual.

—8. Since 'to watch' = to receive spiritual life, 'to sleep' = natural life devoid of spiritual, for the latter life to the former is as sleep to wakefulness. Ill. 355¹¹.

192. 'If therefore thou dost not watch' (Rev.iii.3)=if thou dost not procure spiritual life.

514²¹. That this took place 'in the fourth watch' (Matt.xiv.25), signified the first state of the Church, when daybreak appears and the morning is at hand; for then good begins to act through truth, and then takes place the Advent of the Lord.

650³¹. 'A Watcher and a Holy One came down from heaven . . .' (Dan.iv.13).

750¹⁰. 'As when a hungry man dreameth, he as it were eateth, but when he awaketh, his soul hath fasted . . .' (Is.xxix.8) . . . 'When he awaketh' = when the nature of what is good is disclosed.

1006. 'Blessed is he who watcheth' (Rev.xvi)=the happy state of those who look to the Lord . . . 'To watch' = to procure for themselves spiritual life, and this is procured by the man's looking to the Lord, because the Lord is life itself . . . When a man is in life from the Lord, he is in wakefulness; but when he is in life from himself, he is in sleep; or, what is the same thing, when a man is in spiritual life, he is in wakefulness; but when in natural life separate from spiritual, in sleep.

Aware. Rescire. A.1080^{8e}.

Awl. Subula.

A. 3869¹¹. 'To bore the ear with an awl to the post' = to serve or obey perpetually; in the spiritual sense = not to will to understand what is true, but to will what is true from obedience, which, relatively, is not free.

8989². 'The ear' = obedience; and 'to bore it with an awl' is a representative of the state in which he was to remain.

8990. 'To bore with an awl,' that is, to the door, or post = to affix, here, as obedience is treated of, it is to attach.

—5. The reason the perforation of the ear was done with an awl, was that 'an awl' has a similar signification to a peg or nail, namely, fastening, or joining to; and in the spiritual sense, attaching to anything; moreover, an awl was a tool for labour, therefore served to represent attachment to perpetual obedience on the part of a servant.

T. 110. Every word that is contrary to (the Angels' belief in the personal unity of the Father and the Son) is like . . . an awl boring their ears.

Axe. Securis.

A. 821². Such (Spirits) . . . have an axe by them, and a hammer in their hands, and seem to have another Spirit with them, whom they smite as he stoops, but not to the shedding of blood, because they are afraid of death; nor can they throw down these tools, as with all their might they endeavour to do, to prevent their character from being seen . . .

8942. 'A chisel' = truth fashioned by art, thus from proprium . . . Instead of 'a chisel,' in other places, there are mentioned 'an iron,' and 'an axe,' (Ill.) and by these tools are signified such things as are of man's Own intelligence, and which fashion things by art.

9011². 'When he cometh with his companion into a forest to cut wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the axe, to cut the wood, and the iron is knocked off the wood, and findeth his companion that he die' (Dent.xix.5) . . . A tool = what is scientific; 'a stone,' the truth of faith, and in the opposite sense, falsity; in like manner the iron of an axe.

R. 846. By 'the souls smitten by the axe for the testimony of Jesus and for the Word of God' (Rev. xx.4) are meant men after death . . . who have been concealed by the Lord in the Lower Earth . . . They are called 'smitten by the axe,' because they have been rejected by those who are in falsities from their Own intelligence, who are all who are in evils and thence in falsities, or in falsities and through them in evils, and yet are in Divine worship in externals. That this falsity is signified by 'an axe,' will be seen in the following article.

847. That by 'an axe' is signified falsity from man's Own intelligence, is evident from these passages; 'The statutes of the nations are vanity, if indeed he cutteth wood from the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with an axe' (Jer.x.3). 'The voice of Egypt shall go like a serpent, they have come with axes, as hewers of wood' (Jer.xlvi.22). 'He is known as he who lifteth axes upward in the thicket of the wood, and at this very time they break to pieces its carved work with axes and hammers; they have profaned the habitation of Thy name in the land' (Ps.lxxiv.5-7). 'When thou besiegest a city, thou shalt not destroy its tree by driving an axe into it' (Deut.xx.19). By 'an axe,' in these places, is signified falsity from man's Own intelligence. The reason is, that by iron is signified truth in ultimates, which is called sensual truth, and which, when separated from rational and spiritual truth, is turned into falsity. The reason it = falsity from man's Own intelligence, is that what is sensual is in the proprium. Further Ex. E.458^s.

D.262. It was as if some one wanted to shatter the wall with an axe . . .

1883. (One who tried to get Power through fear) was represented by an axe with which he struck a beam, but the intention was to strike men . . .

2639. By 'the axes of iron' (2 Sam.xii.31) are meant the instruments which the like Infernals make use of through phantasy; the axes are broad ones, like those of executioners, and they do not chop off anything from a man, or kill him, but open his belly, and drag out his intestines, and take them out with the broad axe of iron, and roll them round it, and so drag them out . . .

4648. There was a certain person who in the world had taken delight in provoking others . . . he appeared also with an axe which was not then seen . . . They who appear with an axe have the axe tied to the left arm . . .

1145⁶. 'An axe' (Jer.x)=falsity which destroys good and confirms evil.

—7. 'An axe' (Deut.xix)=falsity; . . . wherefore by this command is signified, if anyone be in natural good, and by falsity, which he does not know to be falsity, destroys anyone as to his soul, it shall be accounted as done by error . . .

5044¹¹. 'To commit whoredom after Baal-Peor, and to adore their gods' (Num.xxv.2,3) was to profane worship.

8130. 'They encamped . . . before Baal-Zephon'=the beginning of the state of undergoing temptations.

E. 160². 'Baal'=worship from the evils of the loves of self and of the world.

Such do they become, who in the life of the body have only babbled, and thought nothing about what they were saying, and loved to talk about everything. It was said that there were regiments of them, and some of them relate to the membranes which cover in the viscera of the body, some to the cuticles which are but slightly sensitive; for they are merely passive forces, and do nothing from themselves, but from others. A. 583. 'The mighty ones of Babel' (Jer.li.30)=those who are given up to self-love.

1154. The destruction of Babel is here treated of (Jer.li.27), where 'Ashkenaz'=its idolatrous worship, or the outward worship separated from inward which destroyed Babel; specifically, false doctrinal things.

1182. That 'Babel, Erech, Accad and Calneh, in the land of Shinar'=that in these places there were such kinds of worship; and that by the same places are signified the kinds of worship themselves, whose externals appear holy, but the interiors are profane, is evident from the signification of 'Babel,' and of 'the land of Shinar.' 'Babel' is much treated of in the Word, and by it is everywhere signified such worship, namely, that of which the externals appear holy, while the interiors are profane. Des. 2466¹³. 2967⁶. 3448¹⁰. 3708²¹. 4335. 5120¹³. Ill. 5536⁵. 6385⁶. 9755⁷.

1186². 'The sons of Babel' (Ezek.xxiii.17)=falsities from cupidities.

1283. The Ancient Church in general is now treated of, and that its inward worship was in process of time falsified and adulterated . . . The falsification and adulteration of inward worship is 'Babel' here. That here also the historical statements are not true, but made up, may be seen from those made concerning the Babylonish Tower . . . and also from the fact that it is said Babel originated thence, when yet in the preceding chapter, Babel is said to have been built by Nimrod. Hence it is evident that 'Babel' does not signify a city, but a certain thing, and here worship, the interiors of which are profane, while the externals appear holy.

1295². The falsity of cupidities exists when cupidity is the source of the falsity . . . as when a man seizes upon some doctrinal matter . . . in order to take captive the minds of men, and lead them, and explains or perverts the doctrinal matter in his own favour . . . The worship thence derived is profane . . . for within there is the worship of self . . . Such worship is what is signified by 'Babel' . . .

1303. The character of 'Babel' is here described by the 'Tower.'

1308. They who build Babylonish towers, make themselves a name by means of doctrinal and holy things, otherwise they could not be worshipped.

1326. 'Therefore he called its name Babel'=such worship, namely, the quality of the worship signified by 'Babel' . . . namely, the worship in which interiorly there is self-love, thus everything that is filthy and profane . . . This is the reason why, with such persons whose worship is called 'Babel,' there is no inward worship, but there is inwardly a dead and cadaverous something or other which is worshipped.

—2. That such worship is 'Babel,' is evident from the various places in the Word where 'Babel' is described; as in Daniel, where the image which Nebuchadnezzar the King of Babel saw in a dream . . . signifies, that from true worship there comes such worship as is called 'Babel' . . . The 'image of gold' which Nebuchadnezzar the King of Babel set up . . . was nothing else. (Further Ill. and Des.)

—4. That ('Babel')=the love of self, or proprium, which is in worship; or that it is the worship of self, Ill.

1327². From this it is evident that such worship as that which is called 'Babel' did not prevail in the first Ancient Church, but in the following ones, when men began to be worshipped as gods, especially after death; which was the origin of so many gods of the nations.

—5. 'To serve the King of Babel, and to give the neck into his yoke' (Jer.xxvii.8)=to be entirely deprived of the Knowledge and acknowledgment of the good and truth of faith, thus of inward worship.

—6. 'To remain in the city, and not to go forth to the King of Babel' (Jer.xxix.16, 17)=those who had been in the Knowledges of inward things . . . and had profaned them.

—7. That by 'Babel' are signified those who deprive others of all the Knowledge and acknowledgment of truth, is also represented and signified by these words in the same prophet, 'I will give all Judah into the hand of the King of Babel, and he shall carry them away into Babel, and shall smite them with the sword . . . ' (xx.4).

—8. In the same, 'With the families of the north I will bring the King of Babel upon this land . . . ' (xxv.9), where the vastation of the interior things of faith, or of inward worship, is described by 'Babel.' For he who is in the worship of self has no truth of faith . . . he destroys and vastates, and carries off into captivity everything that is true; wherefore also 'Babel' is called 'the corrupting mountain' (Jer.li.25).

1368. By 'Babel' is signified worship in which there is inwardly nothing of good, and by 'Chaldea,' worship in which there is inwardly nothing of truth; the worship in which there is inwardly nothing of good and nothing of truth, is worship in which there is inwardly what is profane and idolatrous.

—3. Here the Chaldeans are called 'the sons of Babel' (Ezek.xxiii.17) for truths which have been profaned in worship.

—5. Moreover Babel and Chaldea are described in two whole chapters of Jeremiah (I. and li.), where it is manifestly evident that . . . by 'Babel' is signified the profanation of celestial things, and by 'Chaldea,' the profanation of spiritual things, in worship.

[A.] 1691⁴. Babel and Chaldea = the love of self and of the world.

2220. 'The Chaldeans' = those in whose worship there is profane falsity . . . 'Babel' = those in whose worship there is profane evil.

2973⁶. It is still worse with those whose interiors are darkness, while their exteriors appear as if they were full of light; these are such as outwardly simulate Angels of light, but are inwardly Devils; these are called 'Babel.' These, when the things 'which are round about' are destroyed, are carried headlong into Hell. (Rep. by the fall of Jericho.) They are also meant in Jeremiah, 'Set yourselves in array against Babel round about all ye that bend the bow, sound upon her round about, she hath given her hand, her foundations are fallen, her walls are destroyed' (l. 14, 15.)

3048⁴. The vain reasonings of those who are signified by 'Babel' are thus described . . .

3384². 'Babel shall not be inhabited to eternity' (Is. xiii. 20) = the state of condemnation of those who are 'Babel.'

3419². These doctrinal things . . . of love to the Lord and of charity towards the neighbour, at the present day are rejected, partly by those who, in the Word, are called 'Babylonians' and 'Chaldeans,' and partly by those who are called 'Philistines,' and also 'Egyptians.'

3542⁴. 'To give the neck under the yoke of the King of Babel, and serve him' (Jer. xxvii. 2, 3, 8) = to be desolated as to truth, and to be vastated as to good. 'Babel' = that which vastates.

4680². In process of time this (Ancient) Church turned aside to idolatrous things, and in Egypt, Babel, and elsewhere into magical ones, for they began to worship outward things without inward ones, and so, as they had departed from charity, Heaven departed from them, and in its place came Spirits from Hell, who led them. 6846.

4728². The King of Babel is here treated of (Is. xiv.), by whom is represented the profanation of truth; for 'king' = truth, and 'Babel,' profanation.

4744. 'Babel' = those who vastate, that is, who deprive others of truths.

4748⁵. By 'Babel' are signified those who have turned aside all the worship of the Lord to the worship of self, and thus who are in a profane Internal, while they are in a holy External; wherefore by 'their merchandise' (Rev. xviii. 11) are signified those things which they have found by their own study and art, for the sake of the worship of self, and the doctrinal things and the Knowledges of good and truth from the Word, which they have perverted into their own favour.

4818³. Evil from the falsity of evil, is evil of life from the doctrinal falsity hatched from the evil of self-love; that is, by those who are in that evil, and which is confirmed by the sense of the letter of the Word . . . Such is the origin of evil with some in the Christian World, especially with those who are meant in the Word by 'Babel.' (Nature of this evil described.)

—4. They who, from the evil of self-love, believe that they are the only nation whom Jehovah has chosen . . . as the Babylonish nation have believed . . .

4868². All those conjoin themselves with inward truth as with a harlot, who believe only the outward sense of the Word . . . and entirely reject its inward sense; but chiefly do they [do it] who apply the outward or literal sense of the Word in favour of the cupidities of the love of self and of the world, or of dominion and gain . . . This do they . . . who are meant in the Word by 'Babel.'

—e. As to those who are signified in the Word by 'Babel,' these do in like manner contemplate the inward truths of the Church (that is, as false); but as they are acquainted with inward things, and also, in childhood, acknowledge them, but deny them in adult age, they are described in the Word by filthy adulteries . . . for they are profanations.

4922⁶. The profanation of what is good and true is here treated of, which is Babylonish (Rev. xviii). With the Prophets of the Old Testament 'Babel' = the profanation of what is good, and 'Chaldea,' the profanation of what is true. 8226². N. 172⁵. R. 134².

5044⁹. 'A sword against the Chaldeans, and against the inhabitants of Babel' (Jer. l. 35); 'Chaldeans' = those who profane truths; and 'the inhabitants of Babel,' those who profane good. Refs. 8185⁴.

5319⁴. By 'Babylon' is signified the Church profaned.

5376⁸. The vastation and desolation of the man of the Church, or of the Church with man, was represented by the captivity of the Jewish people in Babel; and the resuscitation of the Church, by the return from that captivity.

7375. See LUCIFER at this ref.

8902⁹. By 'Babel' is signified the profanation of good, (Refs.) also the vastation of it. Life 79².

8904⁵. 'Babylon' (Rev. xvii. etc.) = those who pervert the truths and goods of the Church for the sake of their own dominion and their own gain, and that even to profanation . . . Hence it is that 'Babylon' is called 'the harlot,' and 'the mother of harlots.'

8941³. There are two religiosities in the world which are from man's Own intelligence; one in which the love of self and of the world is everything; in the Word this religiosity is called 'Babel.' Within, it is profane from the love of self and of the world, and without, it is holy from the Word, which they apply for the purposes of confirmation.

9093⁴. There is here described (Belshazzar's feast) the profanation of what is good and true, which is signified by 'Babel.' That 'Babel' = profanation, Refs.

9348⁴. 'To lead to the King of Babel' (Ezek. xix. 9) = the profanation of truth. Refs.

9467⁶. By 'Babylon' here (Rev. xvii.) is signified the Church where the holy things of the Word are applied to profane uses, which are, to obtain dominion in Heaven and on earth, thus from the infernal love of self and of the world. 9468².

9960¹⁰. 'The daughter of Babel' (Is. xlvii. 2) = a Church, or the image of a Church, where there is holiness in externals, but profanity in internals. The profanity which is in internals is this; that they look to themselves and the world as an end, thus to domination and plenty of wealth, and regard holy things as a means to that end.

10177¹⁰. (Babylonia was one of the countries of the Ancient Church.)

10227¹¹. 'Babel, who dwellest upon many waters, great in treasures' (Jer.li.13). 'Babel' = those who possess the Word, and therefore all the truths and goods of the Church, but who apply them to self-love, and thus profane them . . . This was also represented by the King of Babel taking all the vessels of the temple, which were of gold and silver, and drinking from them, and at the same time praising the gods of gold and silver.

10307⁶. Concerning those who, by application to their own loves, falsify truths and adulterate goods, much is said in the Word, where 'Babel' is treated of, especially in the Revelation.

—³. The King of Babel also commanded that he should be worshipped as a god (Dan.vii).

— By 'Babel' are meant those who in externals are holy, but in internals profane; thus those who use the holy things of the Church in order to get themselves worshipped as gods. This is done by all those who, by means of the holy things of the Church, aim at raising themselves up to dignities above others, and to wealth above others, as ends. It is the same with such people in the other life. There also at heart they deny the Divine, and, with wicked arts, toil to make themselves gods. They set themselves high up on mountains, and proclaim somebody from their own ranks as god, and adore him. But while they are engaged in this profane worship, the mountain opens into a cleft, they are swallowed up, and so are cast down into Hell.

H. 544. By 'Lucifer' are meant those who are of Babel, or Babylon, who are they who extend their dominion even into Heaven.

559⁶. This is still more manifestly evident from modern Babylon, which has extended its sovereignty into Heaven, and has transferred the whole Divine Power of the Lord to itself, lusting constantly for more.

N. 129⁴. That outward worship, in which there inwardly reigns the love of self, such as is the case with those who are of Babylonia, is profane, Refs.

J. 53. On Babylon and its destruction. Gen.art.

— Here now follows how (the Judgment) was effected upon the Papists, who are they who are meant by Babylon . . .

54. What is meant by Babylon, and what is the character of it. By Babylon are meant all who want to domineer through religion. To domineer through religion, is to do so over the souls of men, thus over their very spiritual life itself, and to make use of the Divine things of religion as means. All they who have dominion as an end, and religion as the means, are, in general, Babylonia. The reason they are called Babylon, is that such dominion was begun in ancient times, but it was destroyed at its commencement. Its beginning is described by the city and tower whose head was in heaven; and its destruction, by the confounding of the lips, whence came its name, Babel . . . That such dominion was begun and instituted in Babel, is evident from Daniel, where it is said of Nebuchadnezzar, that he set up an image which all adored. (It is also meant by Belshazzar's feast.)

—³. The character of those who are called 'Babylonia' is described in various places in the Prophets (as in Is.xiv, etc.).

—⁴. It is to be known that the Church becomes Babylonia when charity and faith cease, and in their place the love of self begins to reign . . . That this took place before the Lord's Advent, is evident from the passages adduced above. But this Babylon was destroyed by the Lord when He was in the world, both by its becoming entirely idolatrous, and by means of a Last Judgment upon them in the Spiritual World. This is meant by the prophecy, that 'Lucifer,' who there is Babylon, was cast down to Hell, and that 'Babylon had fallen'; and also by the writing upon the wall, and the death of Belshazzar; also by 'the stone cut out of a rock,' which destroyed the image of which Nebuchadnezzar dreamed.

55. But the Babylon treated of in the Revelation is the modern Babylon, which was begun after the Lord's Advent. That it exists among the Papists is known. This one is much more destructive and wicked than the one which existed before the Lord's Advent, because it profanes the interior goods and truths of the Church . . . (Its character fully described.)

—⁶. Hence it is evident, that there is not the Church there, but Babylonia.

56. The character, in the other life, of those who are in Babylon, fully described.

—³. This (Babylonish) nation . . . is more troublesome to draw away from its worship than other nations, because they are not in good from truths, and still less in truths from good; for their truths are not from the Word, except a few, which they have falsified by application to rule . . .

58. Where the habitations of (the Babylonians) in the Spiritual World have been heretofore. Gen.art.

—⁵. Those of the Babylonish crew were in the east, who were in lumen above the others . . . There were some seen who were building a tower which should reach up into Heaven . . . But this was only a representative of their machinations . . .

[J. 58]⁹. All the consultations of this Babylonish nation tend to this, that they may have dominion, not only over Heaven, but also over the whole earth, so that they may possess both Heaven and earth; through the former, the latter; and through the latter, the former. In order to obtain this, they continually devise and hatch new regulations and new doctrines . . .

59. Why (the Babylonians) were tolerated there to the day of the Last Judgment. Gen.art.

60. How (the Babylonians) were destroyed, and their habitations made a desert. Gen.art.

62. Thus, then, was the Spiritual World delivered from such [Spirits], and the Angels rejoiced on account of its deliverance from them, for they who were of Babylon infested and led astray all that ever they could, more than they had done in the world . . .

63. Those of (the Babylonians) who had been in the affection of truth from good, were preserved. Gen.art.

64. On the state hereafter of those (Babylonians) who come from the earth. Gen.art.

L. 65. As not long after its establishment, the Church was turned into Babylonia, and afterwards, with others, into Philistia . . .

Life 79. 'Whoredom' is predicated of Babylon because by 'Babylon' are meant those who arrogate to themselves the Divine Power of the Lord, and profane the Word by adulterating and falsifying it; wherefore also Babylon is called 'the mother of whoredoms and of abominations of the earth.'

F. 49. There are two evil religiosities into which, in process of time, every Church degenerates; one which adulterates its goods, and another which falsifies its truths. That religiosity which adulterates the goods of the Church, takes its rise from the love of exercising command; and the other religiosity, which falsifies the truths of the Church, takes its rise from the pride of man's Own intelligence. The religiosity which takes its rise from the love of exercising command, is meant, in the Word, by 'Babylonia'; and the religiosity which takes its rise from the pride of man's Own intelligence, is meant, in the Word, by 'Philistia.'

P. 231⁵. The fifth kind of profanation is committed by those who attribute Divine things to themselves. These are they who are meant by 'Lucifer' (Is. xiv). By 'Lucifer' there, is meant Babel . . . 'Babel' and 'Chaldea' are mentioned in the Word in many places, and by 'Babel' is there meant the profanation of good, and by 'Chaldea,' the profanation of truth, both with those who attribute Divine things to themselves.

262³. The first cause of their dividing the Divine and the Human, and making the Divine equal to the Divine of Jehovah the Father, and the Human equal to the human of another man, was that the Church, after its rise, degenerated into Babylonia, which transferred to itself the Divine Power of the Lord. But that it might not be called Divine Power, but human Power, they made the Lord's Human like the human of another man.

264². Not long after its establishment, the Church was turned into Babylonia, and afterwards into Philistia; and Babylon does indeed acknowledge the Word, but still despises it, saying that the Holy Spirit equally inspires those in their supreme Judgment as it inspired the Prophets. The reason they acknowledge the Word, is for the sake of the vicarship, which is established by the Lord's words to Peter; but still they despise it, because it does not agree . . .

R. Preface to I. 'Babylon,' in the Revelation, is the Roman Catholic Religiosity.

52². These things are said about Babel, by which are meant those who falsify and adulterate the Word.

631. 'Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city' = that now the Roman Catholic Religiosity, as to its dogmas and doctrinal things, is dispersed.

713. 'And great Babylon came into memory before God, to give to it the cup of the wine of the wrath of His anger' (Rev. xvi. 19) = the destruction at that time also of the dogmas of the Roman Catholic Religiosity. By 'Babylon' as a city, as here, is signified that Religiosity as to its dogmas and doctrinal things.

717. This and the following chapters treat of the Papists, among whom they who have claimed for themselves the Power of opening and closing Heaven are meant by 'Babylonia.' . . . By 'Babylonia,' or 'Babel' is meant the love of domineering over the holy things of the Church from self-love, and as this love climbs as far as the reins are given to it, and the holy things of the Church are also the holy things of Heaven, therefore by 'Babylonia,' or 'Babel' is also signified dominion over Heaven. And since this love thus acts the part of the Devil, who has similar aims, it cannot do otherwise than profane holy things by adulterating the goods and truths of the Word, and therefore by 'Babylonia,' or 'Babel' is also signified the profanation of what is holy, and the adulteration of the good and truth of the Word. These things are what are signified by 'Babylonia' here in the Revelation, and by 'Babel' in the prophetic and historical Word. Fully III.

729. 'Upon her forehead was written, Mystery, Babylon the Great, the mother of whoredoms and of abominations of the earth' = the Roman Catholic Religiosity as to its inward quality, which is hidden; that from its origin in the love of domineering from self-love over the holy things of the Church and over Heaven, thus over all things of the Lord and of His Word, it has defiled and profaned those things which are of the Word, and thence of the Church. . . . By 'Babylon the Great' is signified the Roman Catholic Religiosity, and the whole of its quality.

755. 'And he cried in power with a great voice, Babylon the Great is fallen, is fallen' = that He made it known, that by the Lord's Divine power, all who had been in that Religiosity, and in the same time in the love of domineering therefrom, had been destroyed in the Spiritual World, and cast into many Hells.

768². I once spoke with the Babylonish nation in the Spiritual World about the keys that were given to Peter . . .

769. 'Standing afar off for fear of her torment, saying, Alas! alas! that great city Babylon, that mighty city, for in one hour thy judgment hath come'=their fear of punishment, and grievous lamentation at the same time, that this Religiosity, so strongly fortified, could be so suddenly and completely overthrown, and that they themselves perish.

791^e. The river Euphrates bounded and separated Assyria, where Babel was, from the Land of Canaan.

796^e. It is the reverse in Babylon; the Lord is acknowledged there, but without dominion; and the Word is acknowledged, but without the reading of it; instead of the Lord, the Pope is acknowledged there; and instead of the Word, the papal bulls . . . They who are in the Babylonish Religiosity from doctrine and from life according to it, are entirely without any 'light of a lamp,' that is, enlightenment and thence perception of spiritual truth.

802. It is said that from the Religiosity which is meant by the city of Babylon there are adulteration and profanation of all the truth of the Word and thence of everything holy of the Church . . . and that that Religiosity has not only adulterated the goods and truths of the Word, but has also profaned them, and that therefore, in the Word, 'Babel'=the profanation of what is holy. How that profanation is effected shall now be told. Fully Ex.

804. Because the Babylonians have been removed and rejected, who had vitiated, weakened and impeded the influx from the Lord . . .

812^e. This could not be done, fully, until the Babylonians and Philistines had been severed in the Spiritual World by the Last Judgment . . .

890. 'He that overcometh shall possess all things, and I will be to him God, and he shall be to me a son'=that those who overcome evils in themselves . . . and do not yield when they are tempted by the Babylonians and Dragonists, will come into Heaven, and will there live in the Lord and the Lord in them.

E. 141⁴. 'The coition of loves with the sons of Babel' (Ezek.xxiii.17)=the profanation of good.

240¹⁰. By 'the daughter of Babel and of Chaldea' (Is.xlvii.1) are meant those who profane the goods and truths of the Church.

275¹⁴. By 'Babel' (Jer.li.) are meant those who profane goods. 'The sea of Babel'=their traditions, which are adulterations of good from the Word.

355¹⁶. By 'the King of Babel' (Ezek.xxvi.7) is signified the destruction of truth through falsities, and [also is signified] profanation.

417⁷. By 'the King of Babel' (Jer.xlix.32) is signified evil and falsity vastating . . .

514¹³. By 'Babel' (Is.xliii.14) are meant those who vastate the Church, and who vastate it by holding back all men from the Knowledges of truth and of good, saying that they themselves know, and that they themselves are to be believed, when yet they know nothing of truth; thus keeping others along with themselves in dense ignorance. . . By 'Babel' are meant those who destroy goods by means of evils, and by 'the Chaldeans,' those who destroy truths by means of falsities.

518³⁹. Like things are signified by 'the rivers of Babel' (Ps.cxxxvii).

540⁹. By 'the King of Babel' (Jer.xliii.10) is signified the profanation of truth.

557³. By 'the King of Babel near the Euphrates' (Jer.xlvi.4) is meant the spiritual rational man.

601¹¹. 'Babel' (Jer.li)=those who abuse holy things in order to domineer . . .

650³³. The Church which afterwards becomes 'Babel,' or 'Babylonia,' commences from the worship of the Lord and from love to Him, and then there reigns with them the zeal of extending and perfecting the Church by means of the holy goods and truths of Heaven, and this for a reason which as yet is hidden, and which is the love of domineering, which, however, only breaks forth by degrees. (Sig. by the image dreamed of by Nebuchadnezzar.)

653³. Since by 'the Chaldeans' are signified the profanation and adulteration of the truth of doctrine from the Word, and by 'the inhabitants of Babel,' the profanation and adulteration of the good of love, therefore their overthrow is compared to the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah (Jer.l.37,40).

654³⁹. 'The sons of Babel came to her, and defiled her by their whoredom' (Ezek.xxiii.17)=conjunction with the falsities of evil from self-love.

[E.] 687¹¹. By 'the daughter of Babel' (Is.xlvii.1) is signified the profanation of good ; and by 'the daughter of the Chaldeans,' the profanation of truth ; both from this, that they make use of the Divine goods and truths, which are in the Word and from the Word, as a means of exercising command ; whence the Babylonians and Chaldeans regard themselves, because they regard their own dominion, as the ends, and the holy things of the Church from the Word as the means . . .

724³⁴. By 'Babel' (Is.xiv) are signified the adulteration of the Word, and profanation. The subject here treated of is the total vastation of truth with those who are meant by 'Babel.'

730⁵. The adulteration of the Word, whereby doctrine and thence the Church are destroyed, is here signified by 'Babel' (Is.xiv).

741². There are two principles of evil and falsity into which the Church falls by degrees ; namely, into dominion over all the things of the Church and of Heaven, which dominion is meant in the Word by 'Babel,' or 'Babylonia,' into this the Church falls by means of evil . . .

879. 'Babylon is fallen, is fallen' = the damnation and destruction of those who have transferred the Lord's Divine Power to themselves.

—3. With those who are described by 'Babylon,' all the good of the Church is adulterated, and thence also all its truth, for the one follows the other.

880. 'Babylon has fallen, that great city' = that with those who are meant by 'Babylon' all goods and truths are devastated, and also that they themselves were entirely destroyed at the time of the Last Judgment.

—2. It is believed that by the destruction of Babylon is meant the destruction of that religion in the world, but its destruction in the world is not meant, but its devastation in the world as to all the goods and truths of Heaven and the Church is meant ; thus the destruction as to their souls of those who have transferred the Lord's Divine Power to themselves, and have exercised it from self-love . . . For that religion will still continue with those who persist in that love and act therefrom . . .

960³. By 'Babel' (Jer.li) is signified dominion through the holy things of the Church over Heaven and over the souls of men, from which dominion profane falsities swarm forth.

1021. 'And great Babylon came into memory before God' = . . . that the Church with the Papists and its devastation will be treated of next. 'Babylon' = the Church with the Papists, because by 'Babylon' is signified the love of exercising command over Heaven and earth by means of the holy things of the Church, and this love is chiefly dominant with the Papists.

1029. What is meant by 'Babylon,' both generally and specifically, (shall now be told). By 'Babylon,' or 'Babel' is meant the Church composed of those who, by means of the holy things of the Church, aim at dominion over the whole world, and this by means of dominion over the souls of men . . . The Church which is composed of such, at first, is not like what it becomes in process of time. At the beginning, they are as it were in zeal for the Lord, for the Word, for love and faith, and especially for the salvation of men, but in that zeal is latent the fire of domineering, which breaks forth in process of time, as their dominion grows, and just as it comes into act, so do the holy things of the Church become the means, and dominion itself the end ; and when dominion is the end, they apply the holy things of the Church to the end, thus to themselves, and then not only make the salvation of souls a matter of their own jurisdiction, but also appropriate all the Lord's Divine Power to themselves ; and when they do this, they pervert all the good and all the truth of the Church, and thus profane the holy things of the Church. These things are Babylonia. From experience.

—4. The modern Babylon, Des.

—5. That 'Babel' is of such a character, is evident from . . . the image of Nebuchadnezzar (Dan.ii) . . . The reason it is Babylonia which is described (by it), is that the King of Babel saw it in a dream, and that he saw the image right opposite to him, and it was also openly said to him, by Daniel, 'Thou art its head, which is gold' . . .

—6. The Church which afterwards becomes Babylonia is also described by the tree seen by King Nebuchadnezzar in a dream (Dan.iv). Ex.

—7. The successive states of the Church which at last becomes Babylonia are also described by 'the four beasts coming up out of the sea' (Dan.vii). —12.

—8. That the Church which has become Babylonia will then be destroyed, and a New Church, which worships the Lord, established, is meant by these words (in Dan.vii.13,14,27) . . . That this will be the case when the Church has become Babylonia, that is, so devastated, that there is no longer anything good or anything true remaining therein, is because its end is then ; thus it is when there is no longer any Church there. This is the end which is meant by the end of Babylonia ; not that their idolatrous worship in the world, among themselves, is to be destroyed ; for this will continue, not indeed as the worship of any Church, but as the worship of Paganism ; wherefore also the same persons go among Pagans, and no longer among Christians.

—9. The Babylonish idolatry is described (by the golden image set up by Nebuchadnezzar, and also by the decree of Darius, Dan.iii. and vi.). By these things is described Babel or Babylonia as to dominion over holy things, and as to the arrogating of Divine Power ; and their doom is described by all those who persuaded Darius to make that decree being cast into the pit of lions and devoured.

—10. Babel is also described (by Belshazzar's feast). By this is represented and thence signified the profanation of the holy things of the Church by those who are of Babylonia, and the extension of their dominion even into Heaven (Dan.v.23).

— From these passages in Daniel it may be evident that by 'Babylonia,' or by 'Babel,' in the Word, is meant the love of dominion over the whole world, and also over Heaven and over the Lord Himself, and that the Lord's Church successively becomes Babylonia ; and that as it becomes Babylonia it is devastated as to all the good of love and as to all the truth of faith ; and that this is its end, namely, that it is no longer the Church, and when it is no longer a Church, it is counted among idolatrous nations, except those who adore the Lord, hold the Word to be holy, and admit instruction from it.

—¹¹. Babel, or Babylonia, is also described in Is. xiv.

—¹⁴. In this entire chapter (Is. xiii) the subject treated of is the total devastation of all things of good and all things of the truth of the Church with those who are of Babylonia. By 'so shall Babel be,' in the sense of the letter, is meant the great city called Babel; but by that city in the spiritual sense is meant the Church which has become Babylonia. Babel is called 'the ornament of kingdoms, and the embellishment of the magnificence of the Chaldeans,' from the wisdom of that Church at its beginning. In general, however, by 'Babel,' or 'Babylonia,' is meant the Church in which all the goods of love have been destroyed, and at last profaned; and by 'Chaldea,' the Church in which all the truths of faith have been destroyed, and at last profaned.

—¹⁵. (Other passages quoted in which Babel and its destruction are treated of.)

—¹⁶. When the Church of the Jews had thus become Babylonia, they were given into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the King of Babel . . . By all these things is signified the profanation of the holy things of the Church, the nature of which profanation was also signified by 'Babel;' wherefore lest the Land by which was signified the Church should be profaned by them any longer, and also in order that Babel might thus fully put on its own representation, the Jews were told by Jeremiah to give themselves up of their own accord into the hands of the King of Babel . . .

—¹⁷. But however, as the Lord was to be born in that nation, and where His Word existed, after seventy years of captivity, that nation was brought back from Babel . . . but still no Church remained among them except a Church like that which is called Babylonia . . .

—¹⁸. Every Church at the beginning is like a virgin, but in process of time becomes a harlot, for by degrees it enters into the life of evil, and thence embraces the doctrine of falsity, as by degrees it begins to love itself and the world, and then, from being a Church, it becomes either Babylonia or Philistia; Babylonia, from those who love themselves above all things, and Philistia, from those who love the world above all things . . .

—¹⁹. That the first Church after the Flood would also have become Babylonia, unless the Lord had obstructed the endeavour by the dispersion of their religion, is represented and signified by the 'Tower' . . .

1069. Hence it is that, of the Divine Providence, it has come to pass that certain Churches have severed themselves from the Babylonish one . . .

1070². Lest the Church in the European world should perish altogether, it was provided by the Lord, that not only within the kingdom of Babylonia, but also without it, there should be communities which should not make one with the Babylonians in these two primary truths . . . Within Babylonia are they who are in the kingdom of France, and many in Holland, England, Scotland, and Ireland, who have not taken away from the Lord the Power of saving men, nor Divine holiness from the Word . . .

1097. 'Babylon the Great hath fallen, hath fallen' = that the Last Judgment has been executed upon those who have profaned the holy things of Heaven and the Church . . . 'Babylon' = those who have profaned the holy things of Heaven and the Church by the absolute power they have assumed over them . . .

1106². Here therefore (Rev. xviii. 4), there is an exhortation to all, both those within Babylonia who are in any affection of truth and in the life of good, to come out from her, and not to have faith in her sorceries and enchantments; and also to those who are outside Babylonia, not to suffer themselves to be led astray by them; for that nation is of such a character, that they persuade by means of the delights of everyone's love, and thereby close the understanding, and so lead a man into the belief of everything they say. That this Babylonish nation is of this character, has been made known to me by much experience; for they enter into everyone's delights of life, and thereby captivate their minds, and thus as it were bait the trap and lime the twigs for a man, until they are into his life, and so they lead him wherever they will, like a blind man, and like one who has no command of himself, first of all to embrace their blind faith, by removing all light from the understanding in theological matters, lest their ends should appear, which are, to be lords, not only over the interior things of man, which are of his mind, but also over the exterior ones which are of his body . . . 1107.

1107. The reason they are exhorted to leave (the Babylonians) so as to have no communication with them, is that intercourse with them is dangerous, especially in the Spiritual World, where, in like manner as in the natural world, they send forth emissaries, who persuade by various methods and allure by promises to join their Religiosity . . . And therefore when the Babylonish nation go into the Spiritual World, they who have exercised command from the delight of their loves, learn arts unknown in the natural world, and fascinate the Spirit-men by them, and draw them over to their side against their will; wherefore now, since the Last Judgment has been executed on them, they are strictly forbidden to send out any emissaries into the Societies where the Reformed are, or to the gentiles, and when they do send them, they are found out and punished.

— As the subject here treated of is their state after the Last Judgment, especially the state of those who are in the Spiritual World, what is here and afterwards said about Babylon, is to be understood as said chiefly for them; for as to the Babylon in the natural world, they who are meant by Babylon are not in a similar state to those who are in the Spiritual World; yet still there is an exhortation to them also to beware of them.

1108. As they who are meant by Babylon are in the loves of self and of the world above all in the whole world, and as all evils swarm out from these two loves, and the worst ones from such a love of exercising command, therefore an exhortation is here given to depart from them, 'lest they be partakers in her sins.'

1130. Why the Babylonish nation has falsified the Word shall be told . . . As the Babylonians arrogated to themselves absolute power over all things of the Church, and also over Heaven, and actually assumed it, and as they thereby plunged themselves into all the evils which swarm forth from self-love, it was necessary for them to confirm these evils through the Word, which could only be done by means of its falsification . . . This did the Babylonians. But as they saw truths in the Word which they could not falsify, as for instance all that is said there about Babel, they cunningly weakened the Divine holiness of the Word, and forbade the reading of it by the people . . .

[E.] 1138. There are four kinds of men from that Religiosity (Babylon), which are here described . . .

1200. They who are meant by Babylon as a 'harlot' are they who, through absolute power over the Church and over Heaven, have falsified all the truths and goods of the Word . . .

4253°. 'The Jordan' = knowledges of good, which are said 'to turn backwards' (Ps. cxiv. 3) when the good of love gains the dominion, for then knowledges are regarded from that good, and not good from them.

5895°. 'No one setting his hand to the plough, but looking backwards, is well-fitted for the Kingdom of God' (Luke ix. 62). These words signify the same as those which the Lord says in Matthew; 'He who is upon the house, let him not come down to take anything out of the house; and he who is in the field, let him not return back to take his clothes' (xxiv. 17, 18). The sense of these words is, that he who is in good should not betake himself thence to those things which are of the doctrinal matters of faith . . . Thus he who 'sets his hand to the plough' is he who is in good; but he who 'looks backwards,' is he who then looks to the doctrinal matters of faith, and so leaves good behind.

6401. 'And his rider shall fall backwards' = departure thence. . . 'To fall backwards' = to depart; namely, from truth.

That 'badgers' have this signification, is evident from the fact, that wherever truth is spoken of in the Word, good is also spoken of. . . Hence since 'the skins of red rams'=the outward truths which are from good, 'the skins of badgers'=the goods themselves.

5078. 'The baker'=those things in the body which are subject to the voluntary part. 'The baker'=the outward Sensual, or the Sensual of the body, which is subordinate or subject to the voluntary part of the inward man. The reason 'a baker' has this signification, is that everything which is of service for eating, or which is eaten, as bread, food in general, and all the work of the baker, is predicated of good, and thus relates to the voluntary part . . .

5095. 'The butler and the baker' (represent the Lord) as to those things which are of the outward Natural.

E. 540⁴. That they have perverted goods and truths by means of their own loves, is signified by their all being adulterers, as an oven heated by the baker. 'To commit adultery' = to pervert good and thence truth; this is compared to 'an oven heated by the baker,' because they put falsities together as it were into a lump which is favourable to their own loves. . . That hence come nothing but the evils of their loves, favoured by falsities, is signified by 'the baker sleeping the whole night, in the morning it burneth as a fire of flame, they are all hot like an oven' (Hos.vii.6,7). They are compared to 'a baker,' and 'an oven,' because they put doctrine together from falsities, as a baker makes bread and pastry in an oven.

655⁷. Since by 'a baker' is signified the good of love, the same as by 'bread,' and by 'a butler,' the truth of doctrine, the same as by 'wine,' the baker, for his offence against King Pharaoh, was hung. (That is, crucified; see —⁴).

3762⁵. That there existed such a prophetic [power] from ancient times among the sons of the east, who were from Syria, is evident from the prophecy of Balaam concerning the Advent of the Lord . . .

— That Balaam was from the sons of the east, or from Syria . . . Ill.

3858⁶. That in these things (the order of encamping, etc.) they represented the Lord's Kingdom, is manifestly evident from the prophecy of Balaam . . .

— That Balaam spoke these things from Jehovah is openly said . . .

4112². (In Syria) also was the Ancient Church, and there its remains long continued, as is evident from Balaam . . .

4290⁴. The same is involved by Balaam's not being allowed to curse that people.

6367⁶. When Balaam saw Israel dwelling according to their tribes, he said, 'He bows himself, he lies down like a lion, and like an old lion, who shall rouse him up?' It is the Celestial which is here described, because it is the celestial order, represented by the Tribes in their encampments, which Balaam saw in spirit, when he saw Israel dwelling according to their Tribes . . .

R. 114. 'Thou hast there those who hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the Sons of Israel, to eat things belonging to idols, and to commit whoredom' = that among them are those who do hypocritical works, by means of which the worship of God in the Church is defiled and adulterated . . . For Balaam was a hypocrite and a wizard, for he spoke well concerning the Sons of Israel from Jehovah, and yet in his heart he burned to destroy them, and also did destroy them through the advice he gave to Balak; from which it is evident that his works were hypocritical. That he was a wizard, see Num.xxii.7; xxiv.1; Jos. xiii.22.

D. 1778. If Balaam had cursed the descendants of Jacob, certain in the World of Spirits would have been so persuaded that they would have excited disturbances against them, and the evil would have endeavoured to pervert the good. Such was the character of the World of Spirits before the Advent of the Lord . . .

2354. On Balaam, why he pronounced a blessing.

— Since there were such things in the people of Israel, as were nefarious, idolatrous, and filthy, the Lord was unwilling that these things should be laid bare by Balaam, and so be arraigned, for it was true that they were of such a character. They would then have been condemned (by the World of Spirits), which the Lord forbade . . . That Balaam could speak with Spirits, and that he was led by them, is sufficiently manifest from his confession.

E. 140. 'Thou hast there those who hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the Sons of Israel' = those who are enlightened as to the understanding, and teach truths, but still love to destroy those who are of the Church, by guile. . . Balaam from Pethor of Mesopotamia was a wizard . . . Ill.

—⁴. See Ass at this ref.

—⁵. He who believes that Balaam could have injured the Sons of Israel by his sorceries is much mistaken, for sorceries could prevail nought against them, as Balaam himself confessed . . .

[E. 140]⁶. The reason Balaam was able to lead astray that people by guile, was because that people were at heart of such a character . . .

431¹³. As the encampments of the Sons of Israel represented the arrangement in order of the angelic Societies in Heaven, when Balaam saw their encampments, he as it were saw Heaven in spirit, and prophesied and blessed them . . .

Balance. Lanx. Bilanx.

A. 3104³. 'Balances of justice' (Ezek. xlv. 10).

—'. 'To weigh the mountains in a scale and the hills in a balance—trutinis'=that the celestial things of love and of charity are from the Lord, and that He alone disposes their states.

R. 313⁶. 'He hath weighed the mountains in a balance—libra, and the hills in scales.' E. 373⁴.

M. 318. True marriage love is like a scale, in which inclinations to repeated marriages can be weighed . . .

T. 72. Another said, The salvation of everyone is in His hand, like a balance in the hand of one who is weighing.

478². Spiritual equilibrium, which is free-will, may be compared to a balance, in each scale—scala—of which is placed an equal weight; if then a little be added to one of the scales, the axis of the beam vibrates.

659². Like weights in the scales—scalas—of a balance . . .

E. 373. The weights of the scales were stones, or of stone.

—³. That by 'a balance—statera,' or scales,' is signified valuation, and also just arrangement in order, which is effected by truths . . .

—⁶. When justice means the valuation and the examination of men according to the quality of good and truth with them, it is expressed in various places in the Word by 'scales,' 'balances-stateras,' 'balances-libras,' 'balances-trutinas.'

629¹⁰. 'He hath weighed the mountains in a scale, and the hills in a balance—libra'=to subordinate and balance all things; by 'a scale,' and 'a balance,' is signified just balancing.

Balance. Libra.

A. 6663. They are not immersed in their evils and falsities any deeper, than so that the influx through the Angels from the Lord may get the upper hand; this is effected with the precision of a balance . . .

E. 373⁶. See BALANCE-lanx—at this ref. 629¹⁰.

Balance. Statera.

S. 12². By 'a balance' (Rev. vi.) is signified the value set on truth being so small as to be hardly any.

R. 313. 'And he who sat upon it had a balance in his hand'=the valuation of good and truth with them, and what sort it is.

E. 373. 'And he who was sitting on it having a balance in his hand'=the value set on truth from the Word in that state of the Church.

A. 3110⁶. A more delicate balance . . . (Compare 3116.)

H. 593. The equilibrium between the Heavens and the Hells is lessened and augmented . . . To know and perceive this, and to regulate it to a balance, and equalize it, is what no Angel can do, but the Lord alone . . .

Balancing. Librare, Libratio.

A. 3116⁶. Examination is a most delicate balancing . . .

T. 659². (Evils . . . and goods flow into the thoughts) and are balanced there like weights in the scales of a balance . . .

Bald. Calvus.

Baldness. Calvities. Calvitium.*

See NAZARITE, SHAVE.

A. 3301⁹. 'Baldness'=the Natural in which there is nothing of truth, as in Isaiah, . . . 'On all their heads baldness, every beard shaven' (xv. 2). In the same, 'In the place of plaited work there shall be baldness' (iii. 24). The children who said to Elisha, 'Go up, bald one, (Go up, bald one,' being torn to pieces by bears out of the wood, represented those who revile the Word, as do those who say there is no truth in it. De Ver. 10⁶.

4779³. 'To induce baldness on themselves' (Ezek. xxvii. 31)=mourning on account of there being no truth in the natural man.

5247³. That the sons of Aaron were not to induce baldness on their heads, nor to shave off the corner of their beards (Lev. xxi. 5, 6) . . . What is there holy in this? But to have the outward or natural man subordinated to the inward or spiritual man, and thus both subordinated to the Divine, is holy.

—⁶. The literal sense of the Word is its natural sense, for it is from those things which are in the world; and the inward sense is its spiritual sense, because it is from those things which are in Heaven. These two senses are like the Internal and the External with man; and as the Internal does not exist without the External, for the External is the ultimate thing of order in which the Internal abides, it was a dishonour to the Word to call Elisha 'bald.' It was as much as to say that it is devoid of an External, thus a Word devoid of any sense that is adapted to the apprehension of man.

8850. There was shown me a baldness, but only the uppermost part, which was bony; and it was said that those (inhabitants of Jupiter) who are to die within a year see such an appearance, and that they then prepare themselves.

9656³. 'On all their heads baldness, every beard shaven.' 'Baldness on their heads'=no good and truth in the interiors; 'the beard shaven'=no good and truth in the exteriors.

9960³. When nakedness has regard to the head, which is baldness, it signifies the deprivation of the intelligence of truth and of the wisdom of good. III.

10199⁴. 'Plaited work'=scientific truth, which is outward truth, or the truth of the outward man, and 'baldness'=the taking away of it.

10540⁶. 'Plaited work'=scientific truth. 'Baldness'=the taking away of the intelligence of truth and of the wisdom of good.

S. 35². As the hair and the beard signified the ultimate of truth . . . it was a sign of great mourning, and also was excessively unbecoming to induce baldness on themselves, and also to appear bald. It was for this . . . reason that the Prophet shaved off the hair of his head and beard, in order that he might thereby represent the state of the Jewish Church as to the Word. It was on this . . . account that the forty-two children who called Elisha 'bald' were torn by two bears; for the Prophet represented the Word . . . and 'bald' signified the Word devoid of its ultimate sense. R.47².

—⁴. Hence it was that baldness was excessively unbecoming to them. III. 'To put on baldness, and outspread it' (Mic.i.16)=to falsify the truths of the Word in its ultimates. When these are falsified, as was done by the Jews, the whole Word is destroyed. Ex.

—^e. As the hair signifies truth in ultimates, therefore in the Spiritual World, all who disdain the Word, and falsify the sense of its letter, appear bald . . .

R. 47^e. That by the hair of the head is signified the sense of the letter of the Word, is manifestly evident from those who are in the Spiritual World; they who have disdained the sense of the letter of the Word, there appear bald . . . T.223^e.

386³. Then one arose who was called a syncretist by the Angel . . . He took the turban off his head, and laid it on the table, but suddenly put it on again, because he was bald . . . T.460.

573^e. 'Elisha' represented the Lord as to the Word; and 'baldness' signified the Word devoid of the sense of the letter, thus not anything.

T. 41². (The stripping and making bald-decalvation of the trees in winter.)

74^e. They who wore hats went away with their hats under their arms, praising God; for in that World, they who are intelligent wear hats. But not so those who wore turbans, because they are bald, and baldness signifies gross dulness.

137. Many of these had bald chins . . . the others had bearded ones . . .

D. 5812^e. Some (of the Papists in the Hell of the Nephilim) appear bald, some hairy all over; they who are bald are those who have been inmost in evils; they who are hairy are those who have been completely in falsities.

E. 66³. 'Elijah' and 'Elijah' represented the Lord as to the Word, which is Divine Truth, which has holiness and strength in ultimates from first principles . . . and 'baldness' therefore signified the taking away of these . . . 781⁵.

—^e. In the World of Spirits there appear some who are bald, and I have been instructed that they are those who have abused the Word, and have applied to wicked things the sense of the letter, which is Divine Truth therein in ultimates, and therefore have been deprived of all truth. They are the most wicked of all. Many of them are from the Babylonish nation.

577¹⁰. 'On all their heads baldness, every beard shaven'=not any intelligence. III.

617²⁶. 'In that day the Lord Jehovih will call to weeping and to mourning, and to baldness and to the putting on of sackcloth . . . ' (Is.xxii.12). The vastation of the Church is (thus) described . . . Lamentation that all affection of good (is destroyed) is signified by 'baldness,' and all affection of truth, by 'sackcloth.'

637¹². 'The ship-masters shall induce baldness upon thee . . . ' (Ezek.xxvii.31) . . . 'To put on baldness'=mourning on account of the destruction of all things of intelligence.

—¹⁵. 'Baldness upon the head' (Amos viii.10)=mourning on account of the destruction of the understanding of truth.

—¹⁶. That the understanding of truth has become nought to them, and also the knowledge of truth, is signified by there being 'baldness on all the heads of Moab, and every beard being shaven' (Is.xv.2).

—¹⁷. By 'baldness instead of plaited work' is signified silliness instead of knowledge.

724¹². Mourning on account of the destruction of the truths of the Church is described by 'inducing and spreading baldness,' and by 'shaving themselves' (Mic.i.), for hair signifies truth in ultimates, and they who are devoid of truths in ultimates, are also devoid of inward truths; hence it is that, in the Spiritual World, they who are in no truths from good appear bald.

Balm. Balsam. Balsamum.

A. 3941⁷. The goods of love and of charity, and their happy feelings, are 'wheat minnith and pannag, and honey, oil, and balsam.' (Ezek.xxvii.17).

5620. 'Resin'=the truth of good, or truth from good. . . This resin was aromatic . . . and therefore the same word in the Original Language means balsam. It is evident that these substances were like ointment, or thick oil.

6502³. 'Is there not balm in Gilead' (Jer.viii.22)?

10011². 'A woman poured an alabastrum of balsam upon the head of Jesus, as He reclined; Jesus said, She hath poured this balsam upon My body for My burial' (Matt.xxvi.7,12).

E. 375³⁵. By 'balsam' (Ezek.xxvii.17) is signified the truths which are grateful and pleasing from good; for all truths which are from good in Heaven are perceived as sweet-scented, and thence grateful and pleasing. 433²². 619¹².

654⁴⁴. 'Go up into Gilead, and take balsam, O daughter of Egypt' (Jer.xlvi.11)=the truths of the sense of the letter of the Word, and then reasoning and defending derived therefrom; for by 'Gilead' is signified the reasoning from the sense of the letter of the Word by which falsities are confirmed, for Gilead was not far from the Euphrates, and there came from it wax, opobalsam-opobalsamum, and stacte . . . By 'balsam' is signified the application, and thence the confirmation, of what is false.

Band. Lorum.

E. 365²⁷. 'The bands of the yoke' (Ezek.xxxiv.27)= the delights of evil from the love of self and of the world, which keep them bound.

Band. See TROOP—turma.

Bandage. Fascia.

See CLOTH and VEIL.

A. 950. I then saw (the Spirits). Their faces were black, and they had a white bandage round the head, by which is signified that they regard Divine worship as black, and thus the Lord's Word as black, and useful only to keep the common people in the bond of conscience.

996. As outward things are unrolled, or unswathed-exfasciantur, so do delights become more pleasant and happy . . .

1512⁹. Such spheres are as it were poisoned . . . and they are wont to examine them by means of bandages as it were, which are of a dull azure colour; as these disappear, the sphere is broken up. D.3379. 3395.

5060². (A crowd of adulterous Spirits from Gehenna) who appeared to me as if they were only one . . . they were swathed round with bandages, which they seemed to themselves to be removing, by which was signified that they wanted to remove hindrances. D.4082.

9236. The xiphoid cartilage . . . from which descends the fascia alba, which is the fulcrum of the muscles of the abdomen.

S. 40. As swaddling clothes enwrap an infant . . . T.215.

M. 2. He was girded with a band which flamed . . . with carbuncles and sapphires.

D. 3745. I then saw a face which was black, but there was a white bandage round the head. . . This signified those who regard the Lord's Word as black, and useful only to keep the common people in the bond of conscience, which was the white bandage round the head.

4598. When these (Sirens) have been cast into Hell, these pupæ are unswathed-exfasciantur, and this . . . in a long course. They are also wont to roll themselves up in bandages. . . These bandages are their ideas . . . 4599.

4786. When there is a connexion with anyone, it is represented by a bandage which he holds in his hand.

E. 706¹². 'Ye shall find the Babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes, lying in a manger' . . . It is said 'wrapped in swaddling-clothes,' because 'swaddling-clothes'=the first truths, which are the truths of innocence, and which are also the truths of Divine Love; for nakedness, when predicated of an infant, signifies the deprivation of truth. Hence it is evident why it was that it was said by the Angels, 'This shall be a sign unto you, ye shall find the Babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes. lying in a manger.'

Banish. Ablegare.

A. 2658². When the Lord became Jehovah as to the Human also, that which was not life in itself, that is, which was merely human, was banished. This is signified by 'the son of the handmaid not being able to inherit with the son Isaac.'

2667². They who are of the Spiritual Church are signified by Hagar's son, after he had been banished.

8910³. These (thoughts) cannot make a man unclean, because they are banished . . .

W. 276. If these truths . . . are banished from the midst further away to the sides . . .

P. 296⁸. The things received in thought, and not in will, are separated and banished.

T. 441^e. If they reject (the doctrinal things of charity and faith) they are banished to their like . . .

Banish. See EXTIRPATE—exterminare.

Bank. Ripa.

A. 5205. 'Near the bank of the river'=in the boundaries. 'The river'=the boundary.

6726. 'She set it in the flag by the bank of the river' =at first among false scientific things. . . 'the river' of Egypt=what is false.

7308. 'Stand to meet him near the bank of the river' =influx according to the state. . . 'The bank of the river'=the state of falsity in which were those who were infesting. . . 'The river of Egypt'=what is false; here, falsity from fallacies; and the bank, which is as it were the containant, for it bends round and shuts it in,=the state of that falsity; for every one has its own state, in which, and according to which, it is.

Banner. Vexillum.

A. 8624. 'He called the name of it Jehovah Nissi' =the constant war and protection of the Lord against those who are in the falsity of interior evil. . . 'Jehovah Nissi,' in the Original Language, means 'Jehovah my Banner, or Ensign;' and by an ensign, or 'banner,' in the Word, is signified [calling together] to war; and as it is called 'the war of Jehovah,' it also signifies protection by Him. That by 'a banner,' or ensign, is signified calling together to war, is evident from the fact, that when assemblies took place, whether for journeys, feasts, or war, they sounded the trumpets, and then hoisted an ensign or banner on the mountains. Ill. From these passages it is evident that by 'a banner' is signified gathering together.

—³. That 'a banner,' or ensign, when predicated of the Lord, signifies also protection, Ill.

D. 5069. When they were thus separated to the number of many thousands, a certain Spirit came with a banner, and crossed over the mountains and rocks, waving the banner as he advanced, and they then all appeared to be rolled up in the banner, which however was an appearance; for they became delirious, and could no longer find their homes . . . There followed another Spirit with a banner, who also waved it a second time, and also a third time, but still they would not desist.

E. 411¹⁸. 'His princes shall be alarmed by an ensign'

(Is.xxxi.9). The judgment upon those who believe themselves to be wise in Divine things from their Own intelligence is here treated of . . . 'The Princes who will be alarmed by an ensign'=the principal falsities. It is said 'by an ensign' because they are not dispersed by any combat with truths, but merely by the sign of combat, which is an ensign. Such also have been seen by me cast down from the rocks on which they were, by the carrying round of an ensign.

Banquet. See EATING—comessatio, and FEAST.

Baptism. *Baptismus. Baptisma.

Baptize. Baptizare.

Baptizing. Baptizatio.

See WASH.

A. 870. 'Jesus, being baptized, went up straightway out of the water' . . . Baptism itself=regeneration; therefore, with the New Church which will rise up, it=the truth and good of faith, which they receive from the Lord by means of regeneration.

2299². They then admitted into the sepulchre a kind of atmospheric appearance, verging to a thin watery appearance, by which they signified . . . spiritual life in baptism. H.335. M.412. D.234.

4255⁵. Naaman's healing from his leprosy, by washing seven times in the Jordan . . . represented baptism, for baptism signified initiation into the Church, and into those things which are of the Church, thus, regeneration, and the things which are of regeneration; not that anyone is regenerated by means of baptism, but that it is the sign for the remembering of it. And as those things which are of the Church are signified by baptism, and the same by the Jordan . . . therefore they were baptized by John in the Jordan; and the Lord also willed that he should be baptized there by John.

4904³. He therefore instituted a new Church, which should not be led to inward things by means of representatives, but which should know them without representatives; and in their stead He commanded only a few outward things, namely, baptism and the Holy Supper; baptism, in order that by means of it they might remember regeneration . . .

5120¹². 'With the baptism that I am baptized with are ye able to be baptized? They said, We are able. But Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of, and with the baptism that I am baptized with shall ye be baptized.' Hence it is evident that 'a cup'=temptation, because this arises through evils fighting by means of falsities against things good and true; for 'baptism'=regeneration, which is effected by means of spiritual combats, and therefore temptation is also signified by it at the same time.

5342^o. No one 'enters (into the Kingdom of God)' through baptism, but baptism is significative of regeneration, which (namely, regeneration) the man of the Church ought to remember.

9032². 'He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved' (Mark xvi.16) . . . By 'to be baptized,' in the inward sense, is signified to be regenerated . . . And by its being added that 'he who believeth not shall be condemned,' is meant that he cannot be baptized, that is, regenerated, thus cannot be introduced into the Church, still less become the Church; for baptizing is a symbol of regeneration, and thus of introduction into the Church, which is effected in good by means of truths from the Word.

9088². By means of the truths of faith, man is regenerated. This was signified by the washings by which they were formerly cleansed; and the same is also signified at the present day by the waters of baptism; for waters signify the truths of faith by means of which evils are removed. Baptism=regeneration.

—³. Baptism is for those who are within the Church, because they have the Word, wherein are the truths of faith, by means of which man is regenerated.

9229⁴. 'To baptize with the Holy Spirit [and with fire]'=to regenerate by means of the good of love.

9818²³. 'To baptize'=to regenerate; 'with the Holy Spirit'=by means of Divine Truth; 'and with fire'=from the Divine Good of the Divine Love. L.51⁴.

10238². He who does not know that waters signify the truths of faith, cannot know either what baptism signifies; for he believes that this outward thing saves man; when yet the outward thing effects nothing; but the inward one which is signified, which is regeneration by means of the truths of faith; for they who are of the Church are distinguished from all other people in the whole world by means of baptism, because they are able to be regenerated by means of the truths of faith, but not they who are outside the Church; for within the Church is the Word, in which are the truths of faith.

—^e. That baptism signifies regeneration by means of the truths of faith, Refs.

10239. That (the washing of Aaron and his sons) is a representative of regeneration, is because regeneration was also represented by washing, but by the washing of the whole body, which washing is called a baptizing. That a baptizing, or baptism, signifies regeneration, Refs.

—³. That a complete washing was called a baptizing, is evident from Mark vii.4; and that the washing was that of the whole body, from Matt.iii.13-16; Mark i.10; and also 2 Kings v.2,10,14. The Jordan, in which took place the washings which were baptizings . . . signified what is natural. That by the washing of baptism is also signified temptation (Matt.xx.22), is because all regeneration is effected by means of temptations.

—⁴. The reason why the Lord, when He was in the world, Himself also willed to be baptized, when yet by baptizing is signified the regeneration of man by the Lord, was that the baptizing of the Lord Himself signified the glorification of His Human . . .

[A.] 10386. Baptism was instituted as a sign that the man is of the Church, and as a memorial that he is to be regenerated. For the washing of baptism is no other than spiritual washing, which is regeneration. N.202.

10387. All regeneration is effected by the Lord through the truths of faith, and a life according to them; therefore baptism testifies that the man is of the Church, and that he can be regenerated . . . N.203.

10389. As everyone who is being regenerated is also undergoing temptations, . . . these also are signified by the waters of baptism. N.205.

10390. As baptism is for a sign and a memorial of these things, man can be baptized when an infant, and if not then, he can when an adult. N.206.

10391. Therefore let those who have been baptized know, that baptism itself does not give faith, nor salvation, but that it testifies that they may receive faith, and that they may be saved, if they are regenerated. N.207.

10392. Hence it is evident what is meant by the Lord's words in Mark (xvi. 16). 'He that believeth' = him who acknowledges the Lord, and receives Divine Truths from Him through the Word; 'he who is baptized' = him who is regenerated through them by the Lord. N.208.

H. 329. (Some believe that only those little children who have died go to Heaven who have been born in the Church) saying that they have been baptized, and by baptism have been initiated into the faith of the Church. But they are not aware that Heaven comes to no one through baptism, nor does faith; for baptism is only for a sign and a memorial that the man is to be regenerated, and that those who are born within the Church can be regenerated, because the Word is there, wherein are the Divine Truths by means of which regeneration is effected; and there also the Lord is known, by Whom regeneration is effected.

— (q). Baptism signifies regeneration by the Lord through the truths of faith from the Word. Refs. N.209, Refs.

— . Baptism is a sign that the man is of the Church where the Lord, by Whom regeneration is effected, is acknowledged, and where the Word is, from which are the truths of faith, through which regeneration is effected. Refs. N.209, Refs.

— . Baptism does not give faith, nor salvation, but it testifies that those who are being regenerated will receive them. Ref. N.209.

N. 209⁴. Complete washing, effected by immersion in the waters of the Jordan, signified regeneration itself, in the same way as Baptism. Refs.

—⁵. Baptism (signifies temptations). Refs.

— . How baptism was represented from Heaven. (Ref. to A.2299, which see, above.)

L. 18⁴. By baptism is meant spiritual washing, which is washing from sins, and is called regeneration.

46². The reason the Lord said that they should baptize into the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, is that the Trine, or Trinity, is in the Lord . . .

P. 330⁵. It is said that (the heathen) are not baptized, but baptizing saves none but those who are being spiritually washed, that is, regenerated; for baptism is for a sign and a memorial thereof.

R. I. (The doctrine of the Roman Catholics concerning baptism given in a summary form.)

VIIa. (The doctrine of baptism of the Reformers given.)

224¹¹. Concerning baptism (the Angels) said, that it is spiritual washing, which is reformation and regeneration, and that an infant is reformed and regenerated, when, having become an adult, he does those things which the Sponsors promised for him . . . Moreover, baptism is a sign before the Angels, that the man is of the Church. T.621.

378². 'He shall baptize with the Holy Spirit and with fire' (while John 'baptized with water') means that the Lord will wash or purify man by means of Divine Truth and Divine Good; and that John, through his own baptism, represented these things; for 'the Holy Spirit' = Divine Truth; 'fire' = Divine Good; and 'water' is a representative of these things; for 'water' = the truth of the Word, which becomes good through a life according to it.

531⁸. A voice was heard speaking from Heaven . . . Is not baptism a sacrament of repentance, and consequently introduction into the Church? What else do the Sponsors promise for one who is about to be baptized than that he shall renounce the Devil and his works? B.114. T.567.

776³. They saw further, that baptism is holy, and is a sacrament, because it is for a sign and a memorial that the man is able to be regenerated by the Lord through truths from the Word; a sign for Heaven, and a memorial for man; and that through it a man is introduced into the Church, as the Sons of Israel were into the Land of Canaan by the crossing of the Jordan, and as the inhabitants of Jerusalem were to the reception of the Lord by the baptism of John; for without that sign in Heaven before the Angels, the Jews could not have remained in existence and lived at the coming of Jehovah, that is, the Lord, in the flesh.

B. 69². Is it not a contradiction for it to be said that any Christian is like a stock and a stone in the state of conversion . . . when yet every Christian has been baptized, and from baptism has the power, not only of hearing the Word of God, but also of assenting to it, and of embracing it in faith?

T. 144. When Jesus was baptized, the Heavens were opened, and John saw the Holy Spirit descending like a dove. This took place, because baptism signifies regeneration and purification; in like manner a dove.

—^e. 'To baptize with the Holy Spirit and with fire' = to regenerate by means of Divine Truth which is of faith, and by means of Divine Good which is of charity. 684. 686, Ex.

177². If anyone will take into consideration the various doctrinal matters, as that . . . concerning baptism . . . he will plainly see that there is a Trinity of Gods in every one of them; and even if it does not actually appear in it, still it gushes out from it as from its own fountain-head.

510². That repentance is the first thing of the Church, is plainly evident from the Word. John the Baptist, who was sent before to prepare men for the Church which the Lord was to establish, when he baptized, at the same time preached repentance, wherefore his baptism was called the baptism of repentance; the reason being that by baptism is signified spiritual washing, which is a cleansing from sins; this was done in the Jordan, because the Jordan signified introduction into the Church . . .

530². (That this is the way in which repentance is to be performed, may be seen) from baptism, by the washing of which is meant regeneration; for therein the Sponsors have promised for him that he shall reject the Devil and all his works.

667. Chapter the Twelfth, concerning Baptism.

— Without Knowledge of the spiritual sense of the Word, no one can know what the two Sacraments, baptism and the Holy Supper, involve and effect. Gen.art.

— Unless that sense were opened, who would think otherwise about these two Sacraments, baptism and the Holy Supper, than according to the natural sense, which is the sense of the letter, and therefore say or mutter to himself, What is baptism but the pouring of water over the head of an infant, and what has that to do with salvation? I challenge the laity, and the clergy also, to say whether, in their spirits and hearts, they have had any other perception of these two Sacraments, and whether they have not worshipped them as Divine for various causes and reasons; when yet these two Sacraments, regarded in their spiritual sense, are the most holy things of worship.

668. That baptism has been commanded, is plainly evident from the baptism of John in the Jordan . . . Also that the Lord Himself, our Saviour, was baptized by John; and, moreover, that He commanded His disciples to baptize all nations.

669. The two Sacraments, baptism and the Holy Supper, are, in the Christian Church, like two jewels in a King's sceptre; but if their uses are unknown, they are only like two figures of ebony on a staff. (Other similar comparisons made.)

670. By the washing, which is called baptism, is meant spiritual washing, which is purification from evils and falsities, and thus regeneration. Gen.art.

—^e. Of the whole of these (representatives) the Lord retained only two, which should contain in one complex all things of the inward Church; and which are, baptism in the place of the washings, and the Holy Supper in the place of the lamb . . .

673. Hence it follows that unless the inward man is purified from evils and falsities, washings, and baptisms also, are of no more avail than . . . This is further evident from the fact that the Hells are full of Satans from men who have been baptized, as well as from those not baptized. . . Baptism, therefore, without its uses and fruits, conduces no more to salvation than . . .

674. Baptism was instituted in the place of circumcision, because by the circumcision of the foreskin was represented the circumcision of the heart, to the end that an inward Church might succeed the outward Church, which in each and everything was a figure of the inward Church. Gen.art.

—^e. Circumcision signified the rejection of the concupiscences of the flesh, and thus purification from evils; baptism signifies the same; from which it is evident that baptism was commanded in the place of circumcision to the end both that the Christian Church might be distinguished from the Jewish Church, and that it might be more readily known to be an inward Church, and this is known from the uses of baptism.

676. Both circumcision and baptizing have been given only as a sign and a memorial that they are to be purified from evils, and thus become the elect . . .

677. The first use of baptism is introduction into the Christian Church, and at the same time an insertion among Christians in the Spiritual World. Gen.art.

— That baptism is an introduction into the Christian Church, is evident from many things, as from the following; I. That baptism was instituted in the place of circumcision, and that as circumcision was a sign that they were of the Jewish Church, so baptism is a sign that they are of the Christian Church . . . II. That it is only a sign of introduction into the Church, is plainly evident from the baptizing of infants . . . III. Not only are infants baptized, but also all foreign proselytes who are converted to the Christian religion, both young and old, and this before they have been instructed, merely on their profession that they are willing to embrace Christianity, to which they are inaugurated by baptism; as also was the practice of the Apostles, according to the Lord's words, that 'they should make all nations disciples, and should baptize them.' IV. That John baptized in the Jordan all who came to him from Judea and Jerusalem . . .

—⁵. But this is done on earth. In the Heavens, however, little children are introduced by baptism into the Christian Heaven, and Angels are assigned to them there by the Lord, who administer the care of them; wherefore as soon as little children have been baptized, Angels are set over them, by whom they are kept in a state of receiving faith in the Lord; but as they grow up . . . the guardian Angels leave them, and they attach to themselves such Spirits as make one with their life and faith; from which things it is evident that baptism is an insertion among Christians in the Spiritual World also.

678. That not only little children, but also the whole of them, are inserted by means of baptism among Christians in the Spiritual World, is because the peoples and nations in that World are distinguished according to their religious principles . . . Moreover all of the same religion are arranged into Societies . . . In the Spiritual World . . . all things are arranged in the most distinct order, both in general and in every part . . . On arrangement into distinct order there, depends the preservation of the whole universe; and this distinction would not be possible, unless everyone, after his birth, were known by some sign, [namely] to the congregation of what religion he belonged; for without the Christian sign, which is baptism, some Mohammedan Spirit, or some one from the idolaters, would be able to attach himself to newly born Christian infants, and also to children, and breathe into them an inclination for his religion, and so draw away their minds and alienate them from Christianity, which would be to distort and destroy spiritual order. 679. 680.

[T.] 681. The second use of baptism is that the Christian may know and acknowledge the Lord Jesus Christ the Redeemer and Saviour, and follow Him. Gen.art.

— This second use of baptism, which is to know the Lord the Redeemer and Saviour Jesus Christ, inseparably follows the first, which is introduction into the Christian Church, and insertion among Christians in the Spiritual World . . .

682. For in baptism an infant receives the sign of the cross upon the forehead and breast, which is a sign of inauguration into the acknowledgment and worship of the Lord.

683. The standard of Christ, whose name was inwoven with golden threads in baptism.

684. The third use of baptism, which is final, is that the man may be regenerated. Gen.art.

— This use is the very use itself for the sake of which baptism exists, thus its final one . . .

—^e. The reason the Lord was baptized by John . . . was, not only that He was about to institute baptism, and would set an example; but also that He glorified His Human and made it Divine, as He regenerates man and makes him spiritual.

685. The three uses of baptism cohere together as a one, in the same way as the first cause, the middle cause, which is the efficient one, and the ultimate cause, which is the effect, and is the end itself for the sake of which the former ones exist . . . As these three uses follow in order, and join themselves together in the ultimate, and thence cohere together as a one in the idea of the Angels, therefore when baptism is being performed, read of in the Word, and mentioned, the Angels who are present do not understand baptism, but regeneration; wherefore, by these words of the Lord, 'He who believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he who believeth not shall be condemned,' is understood in Heaven by the Angels, that he who acknowledges the Lord, and is regenerated, will be saved.

—². Hence also it is that baptism is called the Laver of Regeneration by the Christian Churches on earth. Let the Christian know therefore, that he who does not believe in the Lord cannot be regenerated, although he has been baptized; and that baptizing, without faith in the Lord, effects nothing whatever.

— That baptism involves purification from evils, and thus regeneration, may be very well known to every Christian; for when he is baptized as an infant, the Priest, as a memorial of the Lord, makes the sign of the cross with his finger on the forehead and over the breast, and afterwards turns to the Sponsors, and asks whether they renounce the Devil and all his works, and whether he receives the faith; to which the Sponsors reply, instead of the infant, Yes indeed. The renouncing of the Devil, that is, of evils which are from Hell, and faith in the Lord, accomplish regeneration.

687. Baptism, as regeneration, is represented by many things in both Heaven and the world; in Heaven . . . by white and by crimson garments, and also by the wedding of the Church and the Lord; and by the New Heaven and new earth, and the New Jerusalem thence descending . . . Also by the five wise virgins . . . One who is baptized, that is, regenerated, is meant by a 'creature,' and 'a new creature.'

688. By means of the baptism of John a way was prepared, in order that Jehovah the Lord could descend into the world, and accomplish redemption. Gen.art.

689. The reason a way was prepared by means of the baptism of John, was that by its means they were introduced into the future Church of the Lord, and, in Heaven, were inserted among those there who waited and longed for the Messiah, and thus were guarded by the Angels, that the Devils should not break forth from Hell, and destroy them. Ill. —².

690. As to the baptism of John, it represented the cleansing of the outward man; but the baptism which prevails among Christians at the present day represents the cleansing of the inward man, which is regeneration; wherefore we read that John 'baptized with water,' but that the Lord 'will baptize with the Holy Spirit and with fire,' and therefore the baptism of John is called 'the baptism of repentance.' (Ill.) The Jews who were baptized were merely external men, and the external man cannot become internal without faith in Christ. That they who had been baptized with the baptism of John became internal men when they received faith in Christ, and were then baptized in the name of Jesus, see Acts xix. 3-6.

719. As baptism is an introduction into the Church, so the Holy Supper is an introduction into Heaven.

721. The two Sacraments, baptism and the Holy Supper, are like two gates to eternal life; by means of baptism, which is the first gate, every Christian man is admitted and introduced into those things which the Church teaches from the Word concerning the other life, and which are all means through which man can be prepared for Heaven and be led to it.

729. They who die in infancy or childhood, and thus do not reach the age at which they can worthily approach the Holy Supper, are introduced by the Lord through baptism; for, as has been shown in the chapter on baptism, baptism is an introduction into the Christian Church, and at the same time an insertion among Christians in the Spiritual World, and the Church and Heaven are one there; wherefore, for these, the introduction into the Church there, is also an introduction into Heaven . . . But infants and children born outside the Christian Church, are introduced by another means than baptism into the Heaven appointed for their religion . . .

E. 183¹². 'To baptize' in the spiritual sense, signifies to regenerate.

236³. They said that they knew regeneration to be baptism, because the Lord says that unless a man is generated through water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God; but when it was shown them that baptism is not regeneration, but that by 'water' and 'the spirit' are meant truths and a life according to them . . .

374¹⁴. 'To baptize with the Holy Spirit and with fire' = to reform the Church and to regenerate the man of the Church through Divine Truth and Divine Good. 'To baptize' = to reform and regenerate . . .

475¹⁹. Since by the waters of the Jordan were signified the truths which introduce into the Church, which are Knowledges of truth and good from the Word, and by washing there, was signified purification from falsities, and thence reformation and regeneration by the Lord, therefore baptizing was instituted, which was first done in the Jordan by John; and by which was signified that they were initiated into Knowledges from the Word concerning the Lord, His Advent, and salvation by Him. And because man is reformed and regenerated by the Lord through truths from the Word, baptizing was commanded by the Lord . . .

—²⁰. Baptizing signifies regeneration by the Lord through Divine Truths from the Word.

—²¹. The reason washings were instituted in the Ancient Churches, and afterwards baptizings in their place . . . was that Heaven might be conjoined with the human race, and specifically, with the man of the Church. For Heaven is conjoined with a man when the man is in ultimates, that is, in such things, which, as to his natural man, are in the world, and in such things, which, as to his spiritual man, are in Heaven. In no other way does conjunction exist. It is for this reason that baptizing has been instituted, and also the Holy Supper . . .

—^e. He who believes that baptism contributes anything to a man's salvation, unless at the same time he is in the truths of the Church and in a life according to them, is much deceived; for baptizing is an outward thing, which, without an inward, does nothing for salvation; but it does when what is outward is conjoined with what is inward. The internal of baptism is that, by means of truths from the Word and a life according to them, evils and falsities may be removed by the Lord, and thus the man be regenerated.

724⁷. John the Baptist was sent before to prepare the people for the reception of the Lord by means of baptism; for baptism represented and signified purification from evils and falsities, and also regeneration through the Word by the Lord . . . Wherefore unless the representative of purification from falsities and evils had prepared that nation for the reception of the Lord, that nation would have perished by diseases of every kind, from the presence of the Divine Itself . . .

—⁸. The reason the baptism* of John could produce this effect, was that the Jewish Church was a Representative Church . . . The washing and baptizing themselves did not indeed purify them from falsities and evils, but only represented and thence signified purification from them; nevertheless it was received in Heaven as if they were really purified, and thus Heaven was conjoined with the people of that Church through the baptism* of John . . .

893⁵. 'The baptism the Lord was baptized with' (Mark x) = to be regenerated through temptations.

593. This thought and that will, taken together, may be compared to the inner bark which adheres to the inside of the outer bark—cortici—of a tree . . . Within these is the inward natural man, which, if evil, may be compared to the wood of a rotten tree, around which the said outer bark with its inner bark appears entire.

Bark. See BOOK, at W.314, etc., and CORTICAL.

Barley. Hordeum.

See under WHEAT.

A. 3332^e. The more noble kinds of good are signified by 'wheat' and 'barley' . . . as in Ezek.iv.9.

3941⁴. 'Wheat' (Joel i.10–13) = celestial love: 'barley,' spiritual love.

—⁶. 'A measure of wheat for a penny' = that love is so rare; 'three measures of barley for a penny' = that charity is.

—⁸. 'A land of wheat and barley, and of the vine and fig-tree . . . ' (Deut.viii.8) . . . The goods of love and of charity are 'wheat and barley' here; the goods of faith are 'the vine and fig-tree.'

7602. 'The barley (was smitten)' = that the good of the exterior Natural was (destroyed). The reason 'barley' has this signification, is that it is produce of the field, and is a kind of corn which serves for food; for corn in general signifies the good of truth, especially barley and wheat; barley, the good of the exterior Natural; and wheat, the good of the interior Natural. This is the signification of 'barley' in Joel . . . 'The husbandmen are ashamed, the vine-dressers have howled, upon the wheat and upon the barley, because the harvest of the field has perished' (i.11). The vastation of good and truth is here treated of . . . In Judges; 'When Gideon was come to the camp, a man told a dream unto his companion, and said, Behold, dreaming I have dreamed, and lo, a cake of barley bread rolled itself to the camp of Midian, and came even to a tent, and smote it that it fell, and overthrew it from below, and so the tent fell' (vii.13). By 'Midian' are signified those who are in the truth of simple good, and in the opposite sense, those who are not in the life of good; this good is the good of the exterior Natural, and is signified by 'barley bread;' but the delight of pleasures, if regarded as an end instead of this good, is what is signified by 'a cake of barley bread.'

[A.] 7604. 'Because the barley was a ripening ear, and the flax a stalk'=that this good and truth stood prominently out and looked downwards. Ex. 'The barley and the flax'=the good and truth of the exterior Natural.

8468. 'Fifteen [pieces] of silver' (Hos.iii.2) are predicated of truth; and 'a homer of barley,' of good.

9139². Fields full of wheat and barley appear before Spirits when the Angels . . . are conversing about an assemblage of people who are in good. . . These representatives do not exist because there are such things on earth, but from correspondences; for wheat and barley, or bread made of them, nourish the body, as the good of love and of charity nourishes the soul.

9395². See WHEAT at this ref. 10184^o.

10669¹. 'Wheat'=the good of love of the inward man; 'barley'=the good of love of the outward man.

R. 315. 'A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny'=because the value set upon good and truth is so insignificant, as to be hardly any at all. . . By 'wheat' and 'barley' are signified good and truth . . . here, the good and truth of the Church from the Word. The reason is, that all things of the field and of the vineyard signify such things as those which belong to the Church.

—². That 'wheat' and 'barley' signify the good and truth of the Church, III.

—^e. 'Barley'=truths; and 'barley mixed with dung'=truths falsified and profaned.

794. The reason these things are signified by 'the voice of a mill,' or by grinding, is that by the wheat and barley which are ground are signified celestial and spiritual good.

E. 374. 'A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny'=that the genuine good of the Church is nought to them, and also the genuine truth of the Church. . . 'Wheat'=the good of the Church in general; 'barley'=the truth of that good. Ex. and III.

—⁶. By 'wheat and barley' (Jer.xli.8) are signified the goods and truths of the outward man; by 'oil' is signified the good of the inward man.

—⁷. 'Wheat and barley' (Deut.viii) signify good and truth from a celestial origin; 'the vine and fig-tree,' good and truth from a spiritual origin.

—⁹. 'Wheat' (Is.xxviii.25)=good; 'barley'=truth; and 'spelt'=Knowledges.

—¹³. 'A homer of barley,' and 'a half-homer of barley' (Hos.iii)=so little of good and truth that there is scarcely any.

—^o. From these passages from the Word it may be evident, that 'wheat'=the good of the Church in general; and 'barley,' its truth.

375. By 'wheat' and 'barley' are signified good and truth equally as by 'oil and wine;' but by 'wheat' and 'barley,' the good and truth of the Church in general, thus which are in the sense of the letter of the Word, for the goods and truths which are in that sense of the Word are goods and truths in general. . .

—⁴. The reason 'wheat' and 'barley' signify exterior goods and truths, or the goods and truths of the sense of the letter of the Word, is that they are the harvest of a field, and are not fit for eating until they are made into bread, and by loaves of bread are signified, in the Word, interior goods, thus by wheat and barley are signified such things as these goods are from, and such things are the goods and truths of the sense of the letter of the Word.

617²⁷. 'Cakes of barley made with dung' (Ezek.iv)=the adulteration (of Divine truth); 'cakes of barley'=natural good and truth, such as the Word is in the sense of the letter.

1153⁴. By fine flour from barley is signified truth from a natural origin, for barley=natural good, as wheat=spiritual good.

Barn. Horreum.

A. 4926². The 'food with which the garners are filled' (Ps.exliv.13)=spiritual food, that is, truth and good.

F. 31^e. The knowledges of truth which come first are just like stores in a barn, which do not nourish a man, unless, being hungry, he takes thence some corn.

M. 148^o. They compared the outward marriage principle that is derived from the inward one to a granary whose store is never lessened. . .

T. 351. Like magazines, they have sunk down into the earth.

364^e. It is like a barn full of corn; the owner takes his store out of it each day, but the barn itself does not give it out.

E. 336⁷. By 'garners,' and by 'food' (Ps.exliv) are signified the goods and truths of the Church for spiritual food is the Knowledges of truth and good, through which is intelligence.

403⁹. 'Is the seed yet in the barn?' (Hag.ii.19) . . . 'The barn'=where these things are; whether it be the Church, or the man in whom the Church is, or the mind of man, which is the subject.

911⁵. 'To gather into the barn' (Matt.xiii.30)=to conjoin with Heaven.

Barrel. Under JAR.

Barren. Sterilis.

Barrenness. Sterilitas.

A. 1371. 'Sarai was barren, she had no offspring'=that what is evil and false produced itself no more.

1372. A son and daughter signify truth and good, and in the opposite sense, evil and falsity; hence 'barren'=that the evil and falsity of idolatrous worship produced themselves no more.

2586. Barrenness, namely, of doctrine, Sig. This is evident from the signification of 'shutting the womb,' which is, to hinder conception itself. . .

3286. (Rebecca) 'barren'=that there was no Divine Natural yet. Ex.

3857. 'Rachel was barren'=that interior truths were not received. . . 'Barren'=that there were thence no doctrines, and thus no Churches either.

3915. Such a rite (of another's bringing forth upon the knees of the wife) was received when the wife was barren, lest she should represent the dead who do not rise again to life.

6125². Before (man is being regenerated) the good of love and the truth of faith fall like seed into ground that is utterly barren.

9262⁶. 'Barren'=that which is devoid of truths and goods.

9325. See ABORT at this ref. —⁴.

—⁶. 'There shall not be an unfruitful and barren one' (Deut.vii.14)=not devoid of life from truth and good, thus that they shall be spiritually alive. As 'barrenness' has this signification, the women in the Ancient Churches accounted themselves not to be alive when they were barren; as for instance, Rachel, who said to Jacob. . . 'Give me sons, and if not I am dead.'

—⁷. By 'the barren' are also signified those who are not in good because they are not in truths, but still earnestly desire truths in order to be in good, as do the upright gentiles. . . As in Isaiah; 'Sing, O barren, that didst not bear, break forth into singing and shout for joy she who hath not brought forth, for many are the sons of the desolate above the sons of the married' (liv.1). (Further Ill.) In these places, by 'the barren ones' are meant the nations who are summoned to the Church, and to whom the Church is transferred, when the old one ceases to be.

—⁹. 'The land barren' (2 Kings ii.19)=the good of the Church not alive. (Its cure,Sig. and Ex.)

9595². The subject here treated of, is the Church to be established among the gentiles, which is called 'the barren that has not borne,' from being without truths from the Word.

10545³. 'The barren' (Is.liv.)=him who before was not in the truths and goods of the Church. E.223¹⁶. 717⁵. 721⁵.

P. 324⁶. Unless there be delight also, good is barren. . .

R. 10². 'Until the barren has borne seven' (1 Sam. ii.5). . . 'The barren'=the Church from the gentiles, who had not the Word. 535².

T. 38. Without life from (delights), goods and truths are as it were inanimate, and are also barren.

E. 257³. 'The barren bearing seven'=those who are outside the Church, and do not know truths, because they have not the Word; thus the gentiles, to whom will be given all things.

710⁸. By 'the barren,' and 'the wombs which have not borne' (Luke xxiii.29) are signified those who have not received genuine truths, that is, truths from the good of love.

721⁵. (The gentiles) are called 'barren' because they have not known the Lord, nor had the Word, wherein are truths, and therefore could not be regenerated.

—¹³. 'A barren house' (Ps.cxiii.9)=where there was no marriage of truth and good.

Base. Basis.

See ULTIMATE.

A. 2576⁷. 'The bases of brass'=natural goods.

9433³. 'The earth'=the Church; 'the bases upon which it is founded' (Ps.civ.5)=truths in ultimates, like those of the Word in its literal sense; hence it is said, that 'it shall not be removed to eternity.'

9643. 'Forty bases of silver'=plenary support by means of the Word. . . 'Bases'=support, for bases do support. . . The reason the bases were of silver, and the boards covered over with gold, was that by the boards is signified good, and by the bases, truth; and good has power and support by means of truth.

—². The bases also correspond to the feet and soles of the feet in man; and in general, to the bones, which support all the fleshy part of the body. . .

—^e. 'The bases' (Job xxxviii.6)=the truths themselves which support.

9644. That the truth which is signified by 'the bases,' is that which proceeds from that good, is signified by the bases being under the boards.

9645. 'Two bases under one board'=the conjunction of it with good. . . 'The bases'=the truth by means of which there is support. 9661.

9647. 'Two bases under one board for its two hands'=thus in each and all things.

9659. 'There shall be eight boards and their bases of silver'=support in every possible way by good, and through truth from good. . . 'Bases of silver'=support by means of the truth which is from good.

9660. 'Sixteen bases'=complete support. . . 'Bases'=support.

9677. 'Upon the four bases of silver'=the power of conjunction by means of truth. . . 'Bases'=power.

9692. 'Thou shalt cast for them five bases of brass'=the power from outward good. 'Bases'=the power which gives support.

9748. 'Their twenty bases of brass'=truths from good also giving full support. . . 'Bases'=truths of faith from good. 9753.

9757. 'Their pillars and the ten bases of these'=goods and thence truths also giving support sufficient for uses. . . 'Bases'=truths from good also giving support.

9770. 'Their bases of brass'=supports by means of good. 'Bases'=supports.

10126^e. Thus does (the Word) serve as a basis and foundation for the Heavens.

10235⁶. By a base is signified that which is ultimate, and gives support.

10236. 'The base (of the laver) of brass'=the good of the ultimate Natural, which is the Sensual. . . The reason 'the base'=the ultimate of the Natural, which is called the outward Sensual, is that by the laver which is above it, is signified the Natural in which purification takes place; hence by that which is below, is signified that which is in the lowest place, that is, in the ultimate, thus the outward Sensual of man. Ex. —².

[A. 10236⁷. The good of the Sensual, which is signified by 'the base of brass,' is what is called the pleasure and delight which affect the imaginative thought, which thought is merely from earthly, bodily, and worldly things, and is distinguished from other delights by its not having regard to any uses but those which are for self.

10275. 'The laver and its base'=all things which belong to purification from evils and falsities, and to regeneration by the Lord. . . 'Its base'=the Sensual supporting and ministering. 10345.

H. 100^e. The Corporeal of man . . . upon which, as upon its basis, (Heaven) stands firm.

101. Man, who is the basis of the Heavens . . .

304². Hence it is evident, that the ultimate of Divine order is in man, and as he is the ultimate, he is the basis and foundation.

305. But as man broke this connexion with Heaven . . . and no longer served Heaven as a basis and foundation, a medium has been provided by the Lord, which should be in the place of a basis and foundation for Heaven, and also for the conjunction of Heaven with man. This medium is the Word.

307^e. The sense of its letter serves as a basis and foundation.

J. 9. That the human race is the basis upon which Heaven is founded, is because man was last created, and that which is the last created is the basis of all the things which go before. Ex.

—⁸. When a man dies, then, being a Spirit, he does not subsist upon his Own basis, but upon the general basis, which is the human race.

10⁴. The human race on this Earth would have perished . . . unless the Lord had here given a Word of such a character, that it would be as a basis for the angelic Heaven, and a means of conjunction with it.

65. These things are set forth in the sense of the letter by means of, natural things, because natural things serve spiritual ones as a basis, and without such a basis the Word would not be a Divine Work, because not complete . . .

S. 27. The sense of the letter of the Word is the basis, containant, and support of its spiritual and celestial sense. Gen.art. T. 210.

— Hence the ultimate is the basis. . . As the ultimate is the containant and the basis, it is also the support.

34. The human race is the basis, containant, and support of (the Heavens), and with men, and in them, is the Word.

W. 209. The ultimate degree is the complex, the containant, and the basis, of the prior degrees. Gen.art. 216.

212. That an effect is the complex, the containant, and the basis of its causes and ends . . . As the ultimate is the complex, it follows that the ultimate is the containant, and also the basis.

213. Use is the complex, the containant, and the basis of wisdom and love.

221. The sense of the letter is not only the complex, the containant, and the basis of the corresponding interior senses . . .

E. 275¹². 'Jehovah hath founded the earth upon its bases, that it should not be removed to eternity' . . . The 'bases' upon which Jehovah hath founded it to eternity, are the Knowledges of truth and of good.

629¹¹. 'The bases,' etc. (Job xxxviii)=the foundation of the Church with man upon those things which are in the natural man.

741¹⁷. 'The bases of the earth' (1 Sam.ii.8)=exterior truths, such as those of the sense of the letter of the Word, for interior truths are founded upon these.

Bashan. Baschan.

A. 2830⁸. 'Rams, sons of Bashan' (Deut.xxxii.14)=celestial spiritual things.

3923³. It is said 'from Bashan' (Deut.xxxiii.22), because from the good of the Natural.

5201⁵. 'To pasture in Carmel and Bashan' (Jer.l.19)=to be instructed in the goods of faith and of charity. E.433¹⁷.

E. 163⁸. By 'Bashan' (Deut.iii.11) is signified the External of the Church, thus the Natural, for Bashan was out of the Land of Canaan.

314⁷. 'The fat of lambs, of the rams of Bashan, and of he-goats' (Deut.xxxii.14)=the goods of innocence of three degrees.

405¹³. 'The Mount of Bashan' (Ps.lxviii.15)=voluntary good, like that of those who are in the outward things of the Church; for Bashan was a region beyond Jordan that was given for an inheritance to the half tribe of Manasseh (Josh.xiii.29-32); and by Manasseh is signified the voluntary good of the outward or natural man. This voluntary good is the same as the good of love in the outward man, for all the good of love is of the will . . . As by 'the Mount of Bashan' is signified this good, by the 'hills' of that mount are signified goods in act . . .

410³. By 'the cedars of Lebanon,' and 'the oaks of Bashan' (Is.ii.13) is signified conceit from man's Own intelligence; interior conceit, by 'the cedars of Lebanon,' and exterior, by 'the oaks of Bashan.'

513¹⁴. These things are said of those who abound with Knowledges because they have the Word and the Prophets; these are here meant by 'the king of Bashan' in 'the mountain of Samaria' (Amos iv.1).

514⁹. By 'the oaks of Bashan' (Is.ii) are signified (those who boast) on account of their knowledge . . .

650⁴⁷. 'The fatlings of Bashan' (Ezek.xxxix.18)=the goods of the natural man from a spiritual origin.

727⁶. 'Let them pasture in Bashan and Gilead' (Mic.vii.14)=instruction in the goods of the Church, and in its truths, from the natural sense of the Word.

730¹⁵. By 'Lebanon' (Is.xxxiii.9) is signified the Church as to the rational understanding of good and truth; by 'Sharon,' 'Bashan,' and 'Carmel' are signified these things as to Knowledges of good and truth from the natural sense of the Word.

Basilisk. Basiliscus.

F. 53^e. 'Out of the serpent's root shall go forth a basilisk' (Is.xiv.29)=from the conceit of man's Own Intelligence, the destruction of all truth with them.

W. 341. In the torrid zones are larger animals, as serpents, basilisks, etc.

P. 296². Every concupiscence of evil appears in Hell, when represented, as a noxious animal, either as a dragon, or a basilisk, or a viper . . . To turn a basilisk into a sheep . . . can only be done successively . . .

R. 603³. They who are in falsities from evil appear as basilisks and crocodiles.

T. 487⁴. By 'the basilisk which went forth from the serpent's root' is meant its doctrine of three gods, and of imputative faith applied to all, one by one.

D. Min. 4734. On the Hells, and a basilisk.

— Among the Hells there is one . . . where they are skilled in the art of alluring and as it were dragging to themselves other Spirits . . . so that they cannot resist . . . they then cast them into their own Hell, and badly treat them . . . Wherefore such are not let out . . . Such are they who are signified, as I judge, by basilisks.

E. 386⁵. That this false principle, which is faith alone, or faith separated from charity, destroys everything good and true of the Church, is meant by 'from the serpent's root shall go forth a basilisk;' 'the serpent's root' is that false principle; and 'a basilisk' is the destruction of the good and truth of the Church thereby. . . They who, in doctrine and life, have confirmed themselves in the principle of faith alone, in the Spiritual World are seen as basilisks. 727²¹.

410⁹. They who are in the Hells of those who act deceitfully against innocence, appear like vipers; and they who do so against the good of love, like basilisks; and as 'a weaned child'=the good of love, it is said, 'a weaned child shall thrust his hand upon the den of the basilisk' (Is.xi.8).

581⁵. That the cunning and malice of such will not at all hurt those whom the Lord protects, is signified by 'the sucking child shall play upon the hole of the viper, and upon the den of the basilisk shall the weaned child thrust his hand' (Is.xi.8) . . . By 'the hole of the viper,' and 'the den of the basilisk,' are meant the Hells in which are deceitful and cunning Spirits . . .

—⁸. The leading astray of many by means of the sophisms by which that faith is confirmed, is described by 'out of the serpent's root shall go forth a basilisk, whose fruit shall be a flying fire-serpent' (Is.xv.29).

817⁹. 'From the serpent's root shall go forth a basilisk'=that from the sensual man there shall rise up a dogma destructive of all truth; for 'the serpent's root' is the Sensual . . . and 'a basilisk' is the destruction of all truth. . . A 'basilisk,' therefore, has a similar signification to 'the dragon,' which is also called a 'serpent.'

Basin. Crater.

A. 3704⁴. 'From vessels of bowls even to all the vessels of psalteries' (Is.xxxii.24).

9394. 'And put it in basins' (Ex.xxiv.6)=with man, in the things of his memory. 'Basins'=the things of the memory. . . 'Basins,' here=such things of memory as contain Divine Truths within them, and which Divine Truths are signified, in general, by 'blood.' Ex.

—⁵. Scientifics are vessels, and in the Word, are signified by all kinds of vessels, as 'basins,' 'cups,' 'waterpots' . . .

—⁶. Scientific truths from a celestial stock are 'vessels of bowls' (Is.xxxii), and scientific truths from a spiritual stock are 'vessels of psalteries.'

—^e. 'The bells of the horses' (Zech.xiv.20)=scientific truths from an enlightened Intellectual; and 'bowls before the altar'=scientific goods.

— Similar things are signified by the basins of the altar (Ex.xxvii.3, xxxviii.3).

Basin. Pelvis.

A. 1441². 'Moab is My washing basin' (Ps.lx.8; cviii.9).

2468¹⁰. 'A washing basin'=what is good defiled with falsities.

7920. 'Which is in the basin' (Ex.xii.22)=which is in the good of the Natural. 'A basin'=the good of the Natural. By vessels in general are signified the scientific things which are of the Natural . . . therefore they also signify the Natural . . . for the Natural is the general receptacle. Specifically, however, by vessels of wood and brass are signified the goods of the Natural. . . Hence it is that 'a basin'=the good of the Natural (not natural good). Ex.

10243². By 'the water in the basin' (John xiii.5) is meant truth of faith in the Natural.

Basis. See BASE.

Basket. Calathus.

A. 5144⁴. 'A basket' (Deut.xxvi.2,4)=the new Voluntary in the intellectual part.

—^e. See BASKET—canistrum, at this ref.

Basket. Canistrum.

5144. 'Behold three baskets' (Gen.xl.16)=successive voluntary things (5152). . . 'Baskets'=voluntary things. The reason 'baskets'=voluntary things, is that they are vessels for holding meats.

—⁵. 'Basket,' here (Ex.xxix.3,32) is the same word [in the Hebrew] as in this chapter, and=the Voluntary, in which are the good things signified by 'bread,' 'cakes,' 'oil,' etc. By the Voluntary is meant the containant . . .

—⁶. 'A basket' (Num.vi.15,17,19) also=the Voluntary as the containant . . .

—⁷. At that time similar things, which were for worship, were carried in baskets, or baskets—calathi (as in Judg.vi.19) . . . because baskets, or baskets—calathi, represented the containants, and the things which were in them, the things contained.

5145². By 'the baskets full of holes upon his head,' is signified that the interiors were without any termination in the middle. Ex.

5149. 'A bird eating from the basket upon my head'=that falsity from evil consumed. . . 'The basket'=the Voluntary, here, what is evil from the Voluntary, because the basket was perforated.

9996². See BASKET-corbis, at this ref.

M. 137. There appeared two naked infants with baskets in their hands.

Basket. Cophinus.

E. 430¹⁵. 'Twelve baskets of fragments' (Matt. xiv. 20)=the Knowledges of truth and of good in all abundance and fulness.

548⁸. Their taking up 'twelve baskets of fragments'=what is full, thus full instruction and full blessing.

Basket. Corbis.

A. 5144³. 'Baskets-canistra,' or 'baskets'=voluntary things, in so far as goods are there . . . as in Jer. xxiv. 1, 2. Here 'basket' is expressed by another word in the Original Language, signifying the Voluntary in the Natural; the 'figs' in one of the baskets, are natural goods; those in the other, are natural evils.

9996. 'Thou shalt put them upon one basket' (Ex. xxix. 3)=the Sensual in which these things are. 'A basket'=the Sensual. The reason 'a basket'=the Sensual, is that the Sensual is the ultimate of man's life, and all interior things are stored up in order in the ultimate. Ex.

—². Sensual delight, which is the ultimate of the Voluntary, is meant in the Word by 'a basket,' or 'basket-canistrum;' and as the ultimate is the containant of all the interior things, the interior things also are meant by these vessels . . . by 'a basket,' or 'basket-canistrum,' voluntary goods, and in the opposite sense, evils. . . That 'baskets,' or 'baskets-canistra,' are voluntary goods in the complex, see 5144. Whether you say voluntary goods, or celestial goods, it is the same. . . That the things which are placed in a basket signify celestial goods, see above.

10080. 'Out of the basket of the unleavened' (Ex. xxix. 23)=which are together in the Sensual. 'The basket'=the outward Sensual, in which these (goods) are together.

10107. 'And the bread which is in the basket' (Ex. xxix. 32)=the appropriation of celestial good from the Lord. . . 'The basket'=the outward Sensual.

Bastard. See SPURIOUS.

Bat. Vespertilio.

A. 8932⁴. 'Moles and bats' (Is. ii. 20)=those who are in darkness, that is, in falsities, and consequently in evils.

10582⁵. 'To bow themselves to the moles and to the bats' (Is. ii. 20) is to worship such things as are in thick darkness and in the shade of night, which is to worship outward things without anything inward.

R. 566³. Those who are there, and those who are like them, are called owls and bats. T. 162³.

—⁵. They themselves are seen before the eyes of angelic Spirits, some as bats, some as owls. T. 162³.

601³. They who are in falsified truths and adulterated goods appear as owls and bats.

M. 233⁷. In the cloud screech-owls and bats were flying about; and I was told, that the screech-owls and bats flying in the dusky cloud were correspondences, and consequently appearances of their thoughts; for confirmations of falsities so utter that they appear to be truths, are represented in that World under the forms of birds of night. T. 334³.

T. 40². He sees no more than a bat in daylight.

61². At first he sees truths no otherwise than as a bat sees clothes hanging up in a garden, to which it flies as a refuge.

E. 410³. The evils and falsities of doctrine from which is their worship, are signified by 'the moles and the bats' (Is. ii), because their sight is in darkness, and they shun the light. 587¹⁰.

Bath. Balneum.

A. 3340. Sometimes they have heat like that of a dirty bath.

4627. I saw a bath, with long seats . . . D. 4024.

H. 571. (The heat which exhales from some of the Hells) is like the warmth of a bath.

M. 339². Christian polygamists . . . appear in Hell as if lying in warm water in a bath.

344². The heat of the marriage love of polygamists . . . was perceived by me as the foul heat of a bath.

D. 4032. (The heat of a bath felt in the forehead.) Ex.

5 M. 13. Like the water of a bath thrown upon the shoulders . . .

Bath. Bathus.

A. 576. 'Ten acres of a vineyard shall yield a bath' (Is. v. 10)=so few remains of spiritual things.

8468². 'A bath' is predicated of truth, because it is a measure of wine; and as it is also a measure of oil, by which is signified the good of love, it is said that 'a bath shall be of a homer as an ephah' (Ezek. xlv. 10-14), which, in the spiritual sense, is that all things there shall have relation to good, and also that the truth there shall be good . . .

8540. By the bath and hin were measured the liquids which served for drinking; hence truths are signified by these measures. The containant takes this signification from the things contained.

10262⁴. Other measures in common use . . . for liquids, were the cor and the bath . . . The cor contained ten baths, and the bath, ten smaller parts . . . But in Ezekiel . . . the ephah and bath are not divided into ten, but into six. Ex.

E. 675¹¹. By 'a bath' (Is. v. 10) the same is signified as by 'wine,' namely, truth from good.

Battle. Praelium.

See FIGHT-Dimicare.

A. 1683. 'To set the battle in order' (Gen. xiv. 8)=to assault.

4210². Like those who, in battle, fight for their country . . .

P. 251⁶. A few words before he goes into battle; but when he returns into himself, he ascribes the victory . . . to some measure, or occurrence, in the middle of the battle . . .

E. 1003. 'Battle' (Rev. xvi. 14) = disagreement concerning truths and goods, and spiritual combat.

Bay. See LAUREL.

Bdellium. Bdellium.

A. 110. 'Bdellium' (Gen. ii. 12) = the truth of love.

Be. Being. Esse.

See BEING-ens.

A. 630. 'God said' (Gen. vi. 13) = that it was so, as is evident from the fact, that with Jehovah there is nothing but being. 708.

726⁶. Being cannot be predicated of those things which cease to be, but of those things which never cease to be; thus living and being are only in those things which are of the Lord, because all being and living to eternity are of Him.

840⁶. In the other life, charity is the very being and life of man; very Being and Life is Jehovah; wherefore before a man is and lives, Jehovah is not said to be with him, but God.

926. Nothing can be said of Jehovah except that He is.

1096. This is the very being of blessings, for what is, except what is eternal? All other being ceases to be.

1735². This Love itself is Jehovah; I Am, or Is, can be predicated of no other thing than love; the Being of all life, that is, life itself, is from this Love, because it is in it, or of Love itself; and as Jehovah alone is the Being of life, or life itself, because Love itself, each and all things have their being and their life therefrom . . . The Angels clearly perceive that they do not live from themselves, but from the Lord, because they live in the Being of the Lord's life, because in His Love . . .

1738⁶. Until His Human Essence itself was also made Love, or the Being of life, that is, Jehovah.

1894. No one is man except Jehovah, for in its genuine sense, the word man means that Being from which man is; the Being itself from which man is, is the Divine . . . Man is man from Jehovah, or the Lord's Being . . .

1990². Hence it may be evident, that infinite Being, which is Jehovah, could never be manifested to man except through the Human Essence . . .

2001. Where love, or good, is treated of . . . 'Jehovah' is mentioned; where truth, or faith, 'God' . . . the reason of which is, that the Lord's Being itself is of love, and the being thence derived is of faith.

2010. The letter H in the name Jehovah is the only one which involves what is Divine, and means I am, or Being.

2253. Being itself, or Jehovah, is nothing but mercy . . .

2572. 'To dwell' = to live, here to be, because it is predicated of the Lord.

—⁴. The Lord is Good itself, and Love itself, thus the Being itself of good, and the Being itself of the love which is in the Angels, and so the Being itself of their wisdom and intelligence.

2616. 'Jehovah' = the Divine Celestial, that is, Divine Good, or Being itself, which, being of love and mercy, is Good itself.

2621. '(Sarah) conceived and bare' = that (the Divine Rational) was and was manifested. 2625⁴. 2629.

— Being and Manifesting are chiefly predicated of the Lord, for He alone is and is manifested. As to Being and Manifesting, they appear to be almost the same thing, but they are not. Every person and thing has his being from conception, and his manifesting from birth; as therefore conception is prior to birth, so is being prior to manifesting. The soul is the very being of man, and the Sensitive, or Corporeal, is his manifesting, for the former is manifested in the latter. Celestial and spiritual love is the very being of the man who is being regenerated, and when the Rational and Sensitive is imbued with that love, it is his manifesting. So it is with each and everything in the universe, for there never is, nor can be, anything which has not its conception in order to be, and its birth in order to be manifested . . . Every effect has its own cause, and every cause has its own end; the end is the being of the cause, and the cause is the manifesting of the end. So the cause is the being of the effect, and the effect is the manifesting of the cause.

2625. In the other life, states correspond to spaces and times in nature, to spaces as to being, and to times as to manifesting.

2629. 'To bear' (a child) = to manifest, and as birth involves conception, and birth or manifesting is from the Divine Spiritual, and conception, or being, is from the Divine Celestial, which are here united, 'to bear,' here (Gen. xxi. 3) = both being and manifesting.

2649⁶. Divine Being of life, or Jehovah, was in the Lord from conception, and a similar Being of life was manifested in His Human through union.

2788. In God, to become, and to be, are the same.

2796. The very Being of His life was Jehovah.

2798². Jehovah was (the Lord) Himself as to the very Being of life.

2803. In the Lord, there is nothing but what is infinite, and being infinite, it cannot be apprehended by any idea; only that it is the Being and Manifesting of all Good and Truth, or Good itself and Truth itself.

3030². The genuine Rational is from good, and is manifested from truth.

3102. The two expressions, 'it came to pass,' and 'they left off' (Gen. xxiv. 22), signify what is successive, and involve the end of the act which precedes and the beginning of the act which follows; thus, here, acknowledgment.

3141. The Lord's very Being itself was Jehovah, or the Divine Good itself; and the Lord's very Being itself thence derived was of Jehovah, or the Divine Truth itself. 3194⁶. 3210.

[A.] 315⁸². The things of the will constitute the being of man's life, and those of the understanding constitute the manifesting of his life therefrom.

3237. Quality is not predicated of the Divine, but Being; hence by 'name' is signified essence.

3299. Whatever is born, derives its being from the father, and its manifesting from the mother. There must be both in order for anything to have any existence.

3404². The Divine is infinite as to Being, and eternal as to Manifesting . . .

—³. The Angels have no (thought from what is of time and space), but from state as to being, and as to manifesting, in their stead.

3562. Whatever there is in man derives its being from the end that is in him.

3703. 'Jehovah' = the Lord's Divine Being itself.

3737^e. Therefore the whole of the Lord's Human is Divine Being itself, or Jehovah. Refs.

3910. Jehovah is so called from Being, or Essence. . . Ability is predicated of truth, when being is predicated of good.

4559. What is Divine is Jehovah Himself, what is holy is from Jehovah; the former is Divine Being, the latter is what is manifested therefrom. When the Lord glorified Himself, He made His Human also Divine Being, or Jehovah. Refs.

4571. The Divine was in the Lord from conception; this was His Being . . .

formerly, and would at last become one with infinite Being, such as there had also been formerly.

—³. 'The Word' = Divine Truth, which in its essence is infinite Manifesting from infinite Being.

—^e. The Lord as to His Human . . . is the same and one with infinite Being, for He conjoined the Human with the Divine . . .

4985. The good of life is the very being of man's life, because it is of his will; and the truth of faith is the manifesting therefrom, because it is of the understanding; for whatever is of the understanding is manifested from the will; the being of man's life is in his will, and the manifesting of his life is in his understanding . . .

4987. When one state is ended, and another succeeds which is a remarkable one, it is indicated by the words 'it was,' or 'it came to pass.' 5031. 5578.

5002. 'To be' with anyone = to be more closely conjoined, or to be united. The reason 'to be' = to be united, is that the very being of a thing is good, and all good is of love, which is spiritual conjunction. Hence, in the highest sense, the Lord is called Being, or Jehovah, because all the good which is of love is from Him . . . It would be the same with the Church (as with Heaven) if love and charity were its being; for where there is no conjunction, or union, there is no being . . .

—². The being of such society (as now prevails) is also conjunction, or union, but only in outward things; and in so far as inward things are concerned, it has no being . . .

—^e. As (the Angels) are thus reduced more nearly to Divine Being, which is from the Lord, they are more inwardly in affection, in freedom therefrom, and consequently in blessedness, happiness, and joy.

5041. The being itself of man, and therefore the inmost of his life, is from the father; the clothings, or exteriors, are from the mother; therefore the Being of the Lord and the inmost of His life was Divine, because it was Jehovah Himself . . .

5042. This Divine Love from Being itself flowed in through the inmost of life in the Lord . . .

5444. 'One is not' (Gen. xlii. 13) = that the Divine Spiritual does not appear. . . 'Is not' = that it does not appear; for he was with them, but did not appear.

5605^e. 'In God we live, move, and have our being. By 'moving' is meant what is outward of life; by 'living,' what is inward; and by 'having our being,' what is inmost.

5830^e. Good receives its quality from truths, and truths receive their being from good.

6753^e. Afterwards, when glorified, He became Divine Good, which is the Being of Divine Truth.

the Divine Truth which proceeds from the Lord's Divine Human, is Divine Manifesting from Divine Being. From this it is evident, that Divine Being cannot communicate itself to anyone except through Divine Manifesting; that is, the Divine Itself cannot, except through the Divine Human . . .

6882. 'I Am hath sent me unto you' = that the Divine Manifesting will be in the Church. 'I Am' = the Divine Itself, and the Divine Human.

7004². Each and all things are from the First Being, and the order has been so established, that the First Being shall be in the derivatives mediately and immediately . . .

7444. By 'I Jehovah' is signified that I alone am, thus God alone.

7796². The Divine Itself is the Being of all things, and the Truth proceeding from Him is the manifesting thence of all things. Good itself, which is Divine Being, produces all things through its Truth.

8267². 'Jah' is from Jehovah, and is called 'Jah,' because it is not Being, but Manifesting from Being; for Divine Truth is Manifesting, and Divine Good, Being.

8325². States of good, or states of being (exist in Heaven) instead of spaces, and states of truth, or states of manifesting, instead of times.

8722². Peace . . . is the being of the happiness of those who are in good.

8724. Divine Good is Being, and Divine Truth, the Manifesting therefrom, wherefore there must be Being in Manifesting for the latter to be anything . . .

8864. The Lord is called 'Jehovah' from Divine Good, which is Divine Being; and 'God,' from Divine Truth, which is Divine Manifesting. Refs.

8878. Divine Love is the Being of all life, and the Lord was that love from conception, which was thus the inmost Being of His life . . .

8939. Wherefore what is eternal is, for that is which is without end, for it has being from the Divine . . . That which is temporary, relatively is not, because, being finite, it is no more. Hence it is plain, that, in the spiritual sense, 'blessing' is that which has in itself being from the Divine . . . 10409³. 10775^e. N.269.

8988. The being of man's life is his will. 9585.

9282. Knowing, understanding, etc. . . are not in a man until they become of the will; nor are they manifested with him until they become of the understanding from the will; for the being of man is will, and manifesting is acknowledgment and belief therefrom. The things which have no being and manifesting with man are not appropriated to him . . .

9297². By 'Jehovah' is signified Divine Being, and by 'the Lord,' Divine Manifesting from being; hence being, with man, is good, and manifesting therefrom is truth.

9386. The very being of man's life is to will, and to act therefrom.

9806². Good is the being of truth, and truth is the manifesting of good; wherefore good without truth has no manifesting; and truth without good has no being.

9809. Divine Good is in the Lord, thus in His Being, which, in the Word, is called 'Jehovah.' Divine Truth, however, is from the Lord, thus is the Manifesting from that Being; this, in the Word, is meant by 'God.' 10158.

9954. The good of love is the very Essential itself . . . for it is the being of life . . .

9995². For the being of thought is will, and the form of will is thought; as the being of truth is good, and the form of good is truth. . . When truth is devoid of will, it is not appropriated to the man's life, because it has not the being of his life in it . . . Faith also has the being of its life from charity.

10053. By union with the Divine Good which was in Him, and was the Being of His life, the Lord made His Human Divine Good, thus one with Jehovah. The Being of His life was that which with man is called the soul from the father, and was Divine Good itself, or Divine Love.

10125². The Divine Good of the Divine Love is the Divine Itself, for it is the very Being of all things. . . The Divine Itself, which is the Being of all things, was in the Lord alone, for He was conceived from Jehovah; and every man has the being of his life, which is called his soul, from his father . . . Hence it follows, that the very Being in the Lord's Human was Jehovah, which is the Divine Good of the Divine Love, and which is the Being of life.

10262. The reason the Divine Good Celestial of the Lord is the very Conjunctive of all things, is that it is the very Being of the life of all things . . .

10555. Truth has its being from good. . . Truth without good is as manifesting without being, and good without truth is as being without manifesting.

10619. Nothing can be said of the Infinite, except that it is Existence Itself, or that it Is, thus Good itself.

10738². The idea of a Trine and a One at the same time, agrees with the Being and Manifesting of the Lord's life when He was in the world; the Being of His life was the Divine Itself, for He was conceived from Jehovah, and the being of everyone's life is from him from whom he is conceived. The Manifesting of life from that being is the Human in form. The being of the life of every man, which he has from the father, is called the soul, and the manifesting of life therefrom is called the body. 10823. N.287. U.159.

H. 9. All things come forth from the First, which (the Angels) call the Being itself of the life of all.

14. Love is the very being of the life of everyone . . .

139. In the Lord there is only Divine Love, which is the Being from which (Divine Good and Divine Truth) are manifested; Manifesting from Being is meant by Proceeding.

281. Innocence is the being of all good . . .

598². The being of man's spirit is love, or will.

N. 23⁴. Good is the being of life, and truth, the manifesting of the life therefrom, and thus good has its manifesting of life in truth; and truth, its being of life in good. Refs.

[N.] 32. As good is the very being of a thing, and truth is the manifesting of the thing therefrom, so the will with man is the very being of his life, and the understanding is the manifesting of life therefrom; for the good that is of the will forms itself in the understanding, and presents itself to view. 35³, Refs. Life 43^e.

57. The dominant principle of a man's life . . . is his will itself, that which is his very Own, and his nature, for it is the very being of his life.

298. The Divine Itself was the Being of the Lord's life, from which the Human afterwards went forth, and became the Manifesting from that Being. Refs.

305². The Divine Human from eternity was the Divine Truth in Heaven, thus Divine Manifesting, which afterwards, in the Lord, became Divine Being, from which is the Divine Manifesting in Heaven. Refs.

S. 28. These three may be named end, cause, and effect; also being, becoming, and manifesting; and end is being, cause is becoming, and effect is manifesting, consequently in every complete thing there is a trine, which is called . . . being, becoming, and manifesting. T. 210.

Life 13^e. Inquire whence good is good, and you will see that it is so from its own being, and that that is good which has the being of good in it . . .

W. 4. As the Lord is uncreate and infinite, He is Being itself which is called Jehovah . . . No one can be created immediately from the Uncreate, Infinite, Being itself, and Life itself . . .

14. Being and Manifesting in God Man are distinctly one. Gen. art. Where there is Being there is Manifesting; the one has no existence without the other; for Being is, through Manifesting, and not without it.

— Love is being, and wisdom is manifesting . . .

— Being and Manifesting in God Man are distinctly one, as are the soul and the body . . . The Divine soul of God Man is what is meant by Divine Being, and the Divine body is what is meant by Divine Manifesting.

15. The reason being is not being unless it is manifested, is that it is not in a form before, and if it is not in a form it has no quality, and what has no quality is not anything. That which is manifested from being makes one with being by this, that it is from being . . .

34. As Divine Being is Divine Love, and Divine Manifesting Divine Wisdom, Divine Love and Divine Wisdom are also distinctly one. . . Love is in wisdom, and wisdom is manifested in love, and as wisdom derives its manifesting from love, Divine Wisdom also is Being; from which it follows that Love and Wisdom taken together are Divine Being; but taken separately, Love is called Divine Being, and Wisdom, Divine Manifesting.

44. That Divine Being and Manifesting are Being and manifesting in itself was said before. It cannot be said, Being and Manifesting from itself, because that involves a beginning, and also a beginning from something in that beginning which is Being and Manifesting in itself. But Very Being and Manifesting in itself is from eternity. Very Being and Manifesting in itself is also uncreate . . .

45. He who, by some effort of thought, can form an idea of Being and Manifesting in itself, can also quite comprehend that it is the Very and Only Existence. That is called the Very Existence which alone Is, and that is called the Only Existence from which is everything else.

47. The Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom cannot do otherwise than be, and be manifested, in others . . . Gen. art.

53. Being and manifestation can . . . be predicated of created and finite things, but . . . this is finite [being, etc.] Ex.

55. God is Being itself, and that which is, must be from Being. To create what is, from nothing, which is not, is utterly contradictory. Yet that which is created in God by God is not continuous from Him; for God is Being in itself, and there is not any Being in itself in created things. If there were any Being in itself in created things, it would be continuous with God, and what is continuous with God is God.

76. That which is in itself is Being itself from which are all things; and Being in itself is life itself, which is the Divine Love of the Divine Wisdom and the Divine Wisdom of the Divine Love.

99. Thus spiritual heat is the Divine which proceeds from Divine Being, and spiritual light is the Divine which proceeds from Divine Manifesting.

283. All created things are from the substance which is substance in itself, for this is Being itself from which all things which are can be manifested, and as God only is substance in itself, and thus Being itself, it is evident that the manifesting of things is from no other source.

300^e. (These fallacies cannot exist) while it is thought that God is the Being itself from which all things are.

301. Thus it is a truth, that in God we live, and move, and have our being.

368. Love is the being of life, and wisdom is the manifesting of life from that being.

P. 11. Love . . . is the being of a thing, and wisdom . . . is the manifesting of the thing from that being . . . Wherefore, as being without manifesting is not anything, nor manifesting without being, so good without truth, and truth without good, are not anything.

13. Quality, or wisdom, cannot exist except from its being, which is love . . .

27². Spiritual love is of such a nature, that it wills to give what is its own to another, and in proportion as it can do so, it is in its being, its peace, and its bliss.

46^e. In a word, we are, because God is.

48. By the Infinite, the Angels understand nothing but Divine Being, and by the Eternal, Divine Manifesting.

—². See INFINITE at this ref.

59². What is eternal, alone is, because its being does not come to an end. 217^e.

157³. Who does not perceive from reason . . . that there is an Only Being from which is all being? What can be manifested without being, and what Being can there be from which is all being, unless it is Being itself? and that which is Being itself is also the Only Being, and is Being in itself. . . What then follows, but that this Being, which is the Divine Itself which is Jehovah, is the All of all things which are, and are manifested?

324². The Divine Love . . . gives that which is, or that which does not cease to be, and this is eternal.

R. 13. 'From Him Who Is, and Who Was, and Who Is To Come' (Rev.i.4)=from the Lord, Who is eternal and infinite, and Jehovah. 30. 31^o.

—². The name 'Jehovah' means Is, and Him Who Is, or Him Who is Being itself; it is also Was and Is To Come; for past and future things are in His presence.

686. 'Who Is, and Who Was' (Rev.xvi.5)=the Lord as to the Word; that He Is, and that He Was the Word, according to John i.1,2,14 . . .

733. 'The beast which thou sawest, was, and is not' (Rev.xvii.8)=the Word with them, acknowledged as holy, and yet really not acknowledged. 739.

735. By 'the beast which was, and is not, and yet is,' is signified that the Word, thus rejected, still exists.

961². (The Angels) said that Divine Being is One, the Same, the Very Existence, and Indivisible; thus also so is the Divine Essence, because Divine Being is the Divine Essence; thus also so is God, because the Divine Essence, which also is Divine Being, is God. . . They illustrated these statements by means of spiritual ideas, saying that Divine Being cannot belong to several, each of whom is Divine Being, and yet that Being still be One, the Same, etc., for each would think from his own being from himself and through himself. . .

—³. To this they added, that Divine Being is Divine Being in itself, not from itself; because from itself implies Being in itself from which it is . . . It is otherwise in the Lord Jesus Christ; in Him is Divine Being itself from which [all things are], and to which the soul in man corresponds . . . B.119. T.21. 25.

M. 36. From this it may be seen, that love is the being, or essence, of man's life, and that thought is the manifesting, or manifestation, of his life therefrom.

87². Good is the essence, or being, and truth is that through which the essence is formed, and through which the being is manifested.

115³. The Being of the Lord's substance is Divine Good, and the Manifesting of His substance is Divine Truth.

T. 18. On Divine Being, which is Jehovah. Gen.art. —. Divine Being is treated of first, the Divine Essence, afterwards. It appears as if these two were the same, yet Being is more universal than Essence; for Essence implies Being, and Essence is from Being. The Being of God, or Divine Being, cannot be described, because it is above all the ideas of human thought; into which . . . what is uncreate and infinite does not fall, thus not Divine Being. Divine Being is Being itself from which are all things. Ex.

19. This One God is called Jehovah from Being; thus from the fact that He alone Is, and Will Be . . . Gen.art. That Jehovah means I Am, and Being, is known.

— . As God alone is the I Am, and Being, or Jehovah, there does not exist anything in the universe which does not derive its Being from Him.

20. As God is Being, He is also Substance, for unless Being is Substance, it is a [mere] entity of reason . . .

21. Divine Being is Being in itself, and at the same time Manifesting in itself. Gen.art. The reason Jehovah God is Being in itself, is that He is the I Am, Existence itself, the Only and First Existence, from eternity to eternity; from Whom everything is, which is, in order that it may be anything.

— . From the fact that God is Being in itself, it follows that He is Love in itself, Wisdom in itself, and Life in itself, and that He is the existence itself from which are all things, and to which all things have relation in order to be anything.

—². The reason God is not only Being in itself, but also Manifesting in itself, is that unless Being is manifested, it is not anything; and so with Manifesting, unless it is from Being; wherefore the existence of one involves that of the other.

— . The reason we here say Being and Manifesting, and not Essence and Manifestation, is that a distinction is to be made between Being and Essence, and between Manifesting and Manifestation, the same as that which exists between what is prior and what is posterior. What is prior is more universal than what is posterior. The terms infinity and eternity are applicable to Divine Being, but Divine Love and Divine Wisdom, to the Divine Essence and Manifestation. 36. 49.

22. That God is the Very, the Only, and the First Existence, which is called Being and Manifesting in itself, from which are all things . . .

23. Divine Being and Manifesting in itself cannot produce another Divine which is being and Manifesting in itself . . . Gen.art.

24. A plurality of gods in ancient times, and also in modern ones, arose solely from Divine Being not being understood. Gen.art.

31². By the Immensity of God, the Angels perceive the Divinity as to Being, and by the Eternity, the Divinity as to Manifesting.

344. The being of the Faith of the New Church is . . .

418. The will is the being of man's life . . .

E. 23. 'From Him Who Is, and Who Was, and Who Is To Come'=from Him Who is the all in all of Heaven and the Church, from eternity to eternity. Ex. 690.

972. 'Who Is, and Who Was' (Rev.xvi)=the infinite and eternal, for 'Is,' and 'Was,' are the same as Jehovah. . . Being, when predicated of the Lord, is Being from itself which is in itself; and Manifesting, when predicated of Him, is also Manifesting from itself and in itself; and Manifesting, in the relative sense, is Being in all things of Heaven and the Church, which is effected through Divine Truth; this Being is meant by the Eternal . . . The Infinite as to Being is signified by the Is in Jehovah, and the Infinite as to Manifesting, by the Was in Jehovah; the Infinite Manifesting, which also is the Eternal, is the Divine which proceeds, from which is Heaven and everything thereof. Divine Manifesting is also Divine Being; it is called Manifesting in relation to Heaven, where everything in all things is.

[E.] 1054. 'The beast . . . was, and is not' = that in the beginning the Word was received and read in the Church, and was afterwards taken away from the people, and not read . . . 1058. 1067.

1059. 'And yet is' = that it still exists, because it is Divine, and is only rejected by the profane.

1206². Nothing can be manifested except from something else, thus at last from Him Who Is, and is Manifested, in Himself. He is God, therefore God is called Being and Manifesting; 'Jah,' from Being, and 'Jehovah,' from Being and Manifesting in itself . . .

D. Love xix^e. There are two things which cannot be separated, being and manifesting; being is not anything unless it is manifested, and becomes something by being manifested.

D. Wis. i. Love, in the Lord, is Being; and Wisdom, in Him, is Manifesting.

A. 1156^e. 'A beam of a ship from the isles of Chittim' (Ezek.xxvii.6) = the outward things of worship, thus rituals which belong to the celestial class.

9634. 'Thou shalt make beams for the Habitation' (Ex.xxvi.15) = the good supporting that Heaven. 'Beams' = good supporting. . . The reason 'beams' = good supporting, is that they were of wood, and supported the curtains of both the Habitation and the Tent, and also the two coverings upon them. Hence by 'beams' are signified supports, and because they were of wood, they signified what is from good. . . As all the representatives in nature have relation to the human form, and take their signification according to their relation to it, so the beams of the Habitation . . . correspond to the muscular or fleshy part in man, which supports the encompassing membranes and skins. . . Hence it is that the beams were of Shittim wood, by which is signified the good supporting Heaven; also that they were covered over with gold, by which also is signified good. 9640. 9641. 9642. 9643. 9644. 9655. 9659.

9636. The supporting good, which is the good of merit, is signified by the beams of the Habitation made of Shittim wood.

9654. 'Thou shalt make six beams' (Ex.xxvi.22) = where there is good of all kinds from the Lord's Divine Human. . . 'The beams of the Habitation' = good from the Lord's Divine Human supporting Heaven.

E. 746¹⁶. By wood is signified good, and hence by 'a beam,' the truth of good; and, in the opposite sense, the falsity of evil.

386²¹. 'To yield fruit of increase' (Ps.cvii.37)=to do (spiritual truths) and receive goods.

Bear. Portare.

A. 730². 'Thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days' (Ezek.iv.6)=the duration of the vastation of the Jewish Church ; also, a representation of the Lord's temptation, for it is said, that 'he should bear the iniquity of the house of Judah.'

1573⁷. That the Lord bore the iniquities . . . of mankind, is also a common expression of preachers ; but it could never be possible to turn iniquities and evils into Himself, except through the hereditary way . . . (See under BEAR-sufferre.)

1846³. 'Surely He hath borne tulit-our diseases, and hath carried our griefs' (Is.liii.4). By these words are signified the Lord's temptations. (They do not mean) that the faithful will undergo no temptations, nor that He has turned sins into Himself, and thus borne -sustulerit-them ; but that He has conquered the Hells by means of the combats of temptations, and by means of victories ; and thus that He alone, even as to the Human Essence, would endure the temptations which the faithful undergo.

4918². They who are regenerated and made the Church, are said to be 'carried from the womb.' Ill.

8719. 'To bear' [the burden] with him' (Ex.xviii.22)=to be a means of assistance and support.

9500. 'To carry the ark in them' (Ex.xviii.14)=the steadfastness and subsistence of Heaven. 'To carry'=to be continually in a state of good and truth ; thus to come forth and abide. 9540. 9737.

9543. 'The table shall be carried with them' (Ex.xxv.28)=steadfastness therefrom. 'To be carried'=to come forth and abide, thus steadfastness.

9737. 'Even to hoar hairs will I carry you ; I have made, and I will carry, and I will bear-feram' (Is.xlvi.4). Here, 'to make'=that it may come forth ; 'to carry,' that it may abide ; 'to bear-portare,' that it may perpetually come forth. 9937¹⁰.

9836⁶. That to set upon the shoulders and bear=to preserve in a state of good and truth for ever with all one's work and might, Ill.

—7. That 'to carry'=to keep in its own state, see 9500.

—e. That 'to bear upon the shoulder,' when predicated of a state of subjection=slavery, Ill. And when of a state of command, the highest Power, Ill.

9850. See BEAR-ferre, at this ref.

[A.] 9900. 'Aaron shall bear the names of the Sons of Israel' (Ex.xxviii.29)=the preservation by the Lord of good and truth as to every kind. 'To bear,' when predicated of the breastplate,=to preserve; for that which is borne upon the breast is preserved. Also that 'to bear,' when predicated of the Divine,=to keep in a state of good and truth, see 9500, 9737.

9902. 'To bear upon the heart' (Id.)=to preserve to eternity, from Divine Love.

9037. 'Aaron shall bear the iniquity of the holy things' (ver.38)=the removing by the Lord of falsities and evils with those who are in good. . . 'To bear iniquity'=the removing of falsities and evils with those who are in good.

—². The reason 'to bear iniquity'=to remove falsities and evils, or sins, with those who are in good, is that this is said of the Lord, for the Lord was represented by Aaron; and the whole work of salvation, by his office, or priesthood. It is known in the Church, that it is said of the Lord, that He bore sins for mankind; but still it is not known what is meant by bearing iniquities and sins. (The common idea about it is then stated.) But these things are not meant by 'bearing iniquity,' for deeds remain with everyone after death . . . and they cannot be taken away by transference to Another, Who bears them. Hence it is evident that something else is meant by 'bearing iniquities'; but what it is that is meant, may be evident from the real bearing of iniquities, or sins, by the Lord. For the Lord bears them when He fights for man against the Hells, for man cannot fight against them of himself, but the Lord alone does it . . .

—⁴. Its being said of Aaron that he 'should bear iniquities,' was because he represented the Lord; and his priesthood, the Lord's whole work of salvation . . . and the principal part of the work of salvation is to redeem and deliver man from the Hells, and so remove evils and falsities.

—¹⁰. From these considerations it is now evident, that by 'Aaron's bearing the iniquities of the holy things,' is signified the removing by the Lord of sins from those who are in good; and that the removing of them by the Lord is continually going on, and that this is 'bearing iniquities.' As also elsewhere in Moses; 'Jehovah said to Aaron, Thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of the Sanctuary; thou also and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood: the Sons of Israel shall no more come nigh to the Tent of the assembly to bear sin, by dying; but the Levites shall do the work of the Tent, and they shall bear their iniquity' (Num.xviii.1,22,23). 9965⁵.

—¹¹. That 'to bear iniquity'=to expiate, thus to remove sins, in Moses; 'Moses was indignant with Eleazar and Ithamar, because the he-goat of the sin offering was burnt, saying, Wherefore did ye not eat it in the place of holiness, for Jehovah gave it you to bear the iniquities of the congregation, to expiate them before Jehovah' (Lev.x.16,17).

—^e. That 'to bear sins,' when not said of the priesthood,=to be condemned, thus to die, Ill.

9965. 'Lest they bear iniquity and die' (Ex.xxviii.43)=the annihilation of all worship. 'To bear iniquity,' when said of the priesthood of Aaron and his sons,=the removing by the Lord of falsities and evils with those who are in good; but when 'bearing iniquity and dying' is said of them, it signifies the annihilation of all worship. . .

—². In many places in the Word it is said that 'they should bear their iniquity,' when they did not do according to the statutes, and by this was signified condemnation because sins were not removed. . . Ill.

—³. 'To bear iniquity' here also (Lev.vii.18; xix.7,8) signifies to remain in their sins, and so to be under condemnation. . .

—^e. By 'bearing iniquity' is signified true condemnation, when it is said of those who do evils from an evil heart. Ill.

10023⁵. By transference and reception (in relation to the scape-goat) is meant that which is signified by 'the bearing of iniquities.'

10188. By 'bearing' is signified preservation.

10192. 'To carry (the altar) in them' (Ex.xxx.4)=preservation thereby in the state. 'To carry'=to keep in a state of good and truth, thus to come forth and abide; and to preserve.

L. 15. By the passion of the cross the Lord did not take away sins, but bore them. Gen.art.

—². What is meant by bearing iniquities shall first be stated, and afterwards what by taking them away. . . Nothing else is meant by bearing iniquities than enduring grievous temptations; also suffering the Jews to do to Him as they had done to the Word. . . E.655¹. 805⁵. 806².

16. The state of the Church, from the Word, represented in the Prophets, was what is meant by bearing the iniquities and sins of the people. Ill.

—³. That by thus bearing the iniquities of the house of Israel, and of the house of Judah, the prophets did not take them away, and thus expiate them, but only represented and showed them, Ill. T.130². E.805⁵.

—^e. From these considerations it is now evident that by 'bearing iniquities' is meant to represent and effigy in themselves sins against the Divine Truths of the Word.

T. 130⁶. From these considerations it is now evident that by 'bearing iniquities' is not meant taking them away, but the representing of the profanation of the truths of the Word.

E. 314². 'He shall carry them in his bosom' (Is.xl.11).

328⁵. By His having borne the sins of all, is signified that when He was tempted He admitted into Himself all the Hells. . .

—⁸. 'He will carry them all the days of eternity' (Is.lxiii.9). His Divine Love is described (by these words). 412⁷.

409³. 'By His knowledge shall my righteous Servant justify many, in this, that He shall bear their iniquities' (Is.liii.11). . . His combats with the Hells and their subjugation is signified by (these words). By 'bearing their iniquities' is not meant that He will transfer them to Himself, but that He will admit into Himself the evils which are from the Hells, in order to subjugate them.

Bear. Parere.

Birth. Partus.

A. 261. 'In sorrow shalt thou bring forth sons' (Gen. iii.16) . . . By the 'sons whom she should bring forth in sorrow' are signified the truths which the Church would thus produce. 264, Ill.

341. 'She added to bear his brother Abel' (Gen. iv.2) . . . The second birth of the Church is charity, which is signified by 'Abel,' and 'brother.' 342.

342. Like things are signified by the first births of Leah . . .

409. 'Cain knew his wife, she conceived, and bare Enoch' (Gen. iv.17) = that thisschism, or heresy, produced from itself another . . .

533. Such as the Church is, such are its births.

1893. 'Sarai the wife of Abram did not bear to him' (Gen. xvi.1) = no rational man as yet. 1899.

1945. 'Thou shalt bear a son' (Gen. xvi.11) = truth . . .

2208. 'Shall I truly bear?' (Gen. xviii.13) = that it wondered that the Rational would become Divine. . . 'To bear,' here, = Isaac, that is, the Rational which would become Divine.

2584. 'They bare' (Gen. xx.17) = fruitfulness. . . 'To bear' = fruitfulness as to those things which are of doctrine. Ill.

2586. All conception of doctrine is from good as a father; but its birth is through truth as a mother.

2588². Thus doctrine lives with these, and of them it is said that they are healed and bear.

2621. 'Sarah conceived and bore' (Gen. xxi.2) = that the Divine Rational was, and was manifested. (See BE at this ref.) 2629.

2653. 'To bear' = to come forth.

3264. 'Whom Hagar bare. . . ' = the birth-nativitatem of the spiritual man . . . 'To bear' = to come forth.

3298. 'Her days were fulfilled for bearing' (Gen. xxv.24) = the first state of the effect. . . 'To bear' in the spiritual sense, has regard to good and truth, and in that sense = to come forth. Ex.

3860. 'Leah conceived, and bare a son' (Gen. xxix.32) = spiritual conception and birth from the External to the Internal. (3868. 3874. 3879.) 'To conceive and bear' = to be regenerated. . .

3882. 'She stood still from bearing' (Gen. xxix.39) = ascent by a ladder from the earth even to Jehovah, or the Lord. 'To bear,' or 'birth' = truth and good, for these are births in the spiritual sense; for man is regenerated, or born-nascitur-anew through truth and good; these also are what are signified by the four births of Leah . . .

3905. 'Rachel saw that she did not bear to Jacob' (Gen. xxx.1) = that interior truth was not yet acknowledged. . . 'To bear' = to acknowledge in faith and also in act. . . because by 'births,' in the Word, are signified spiritual births. (Refs.) Spiritual birth is the acknowledgment and faith of truth. . .

3908. In ancient times, wives called themselves 'dead,' when they did not bear a son or a daughter, and also believed themselves to be so . . . The cause of this, in the Spiritual World, came from the heavenly marriage of good and truth, in which the births are no other than truths of faith and goods of charity . . . He with whom these births are not . . . is as it were dead . . .

3915. 'Let her bear upon my knees' (Gen. xxx.3) = the acknowledgment of interior truth with affection, whence there is conjunction. 'To bear' = to acknowledge in faith, and also in act. . . As bearing signified the acknowledgment of truth . . . a ritual such as this was accepted when the wife was barren, lest she should represent the dead . . .

3919. 'Bilhah conceived, and bore a son to Jacob' = reception and acknowledgment. 'To conceive' = reception; and 'to bear' = acknowledgment; for conceptions and births, in the spiritual sense, are receptions of truth from good, and therefore acknowledgments. 3925.

3930. 'Leah saw that she had stood still from bearing' (Gen. xxx.9) = that no other outward truths were acknowledged. . . 'To bear' = to acknowledge in faith and act.

3933. 'Zilpah the handmaid of Leah bore a son to Jacob' (ver. 10) = the acknowledgment of outward truth. 'To bear' = acknowledgment. 3937. 3955. 3959. 3968. 3971.

4020. 'The flocks bore variegated, spotted, and speckled' (ver. 39) = that hence natural good had such things. . . 'To bear' = acknowledgment and conjunction.

4586. Rachel bore, and suffered hard things in her bearing' (Gen. xxxv.16) = the temptations of interior truth. 'To bear' = the manifestation of the spiritual things which are of truth, and of the celestial things which are of good; for in the inward sense, by 'bearing' nothing else is meant than what belongs to spiritual birth. Refs.

4588. When the interior man undergoes temptations, the Natural is like a mid-wife, for unless the Natural renders assistance, no birth of spiritual truth ever makes its appearance. . . The case with those things which belong to spiritual birth, is that reception must be wholly in the Natural . . . —², Ill.

4827. 'To bear' (Gen. xxxviii.5) = to be conjoined in act.

4917. '(Tamar's) bearing' = acknowledgment on the part of inward truth. 'To bear' = to acknowledge in faith and act.

4919. 'It came to pass in her bearing' = production. 'To bear' = to acknowledge in faith and act; and as that which is acknowledged in faith and act is produced, by 'bearing' is also signified production, namely, of the good and truth which are of the Church.

4921. There is nothing relating to [natural] birth in the Spiritual World.

6585. 'To bear upon the knees' = the conjunction of good and truth. (See BORN-nasci, at this ref.)

6686. 'Before the midwife cometh to them, they have brought forth' (Ex. i.19) = that the Natural does not know when the scientific truths of the Church receive life. . . 'To bear' = those things which are of faith and charity (Refs.), thus which are of spiritual life.

[A.] 6719. 'She bore a son (Moses)' = the Divine Law in its origin. 'To bear' = manifestation (Refs.), thus origin.

6794. '(Zipporah) bore a son' (Ex.ii.22) = truths therefrom. 'To bear' = is predicated of those things which are of the Church, which are faith and charity; these births come forth from the heavenly marriage, which is that of good and truth.

9042. 'She that bringeth forth' (Jer.xxxi.8) = one who is in the life of faith in act. Refs.

9043. 'And her births shall go forth' (Ex.xxi.22) = if it be confirmed even in the Natural. . . 'Births' = goods from truths acknowledged scientifically and with perception, and thus confirmed; for by 'bearing,' in the spiritual sense, is meant acknowledging in faith and act.

—e. 'To go forth from the womb,' means from the inward into the outward man; and 'birth,' spiritual good, that is, the good of charity and the truths of faith from the inward in the outward man.

9325². By all things belonging to birth are meant, in the inward sense of the Word, such things as belong to spiritual birth, thus to regeneration. The things which belong to spiritual birth, or regeneration, are the truths of faith and the goods of charity; for man is conceived and born anew by means of these. Ill.

—³. 'To bear seven' (1 Sam.ii.5) = to be regenerated to the full.

10132⁹. By 'birth,' in the spiritual sense, is signified a birth of the Church, which is that of the good of love; for no other birth is understood in Heaven.

H. 382 (r). 'Conceptions,' 'bringings forth,' 'births-nativitates,' and 'generatings' signify spiritual ones, which are those of good and truth, or of love and faith. Refs.

W. 316. The state before birth, is like that of a seed in the earth while it is putting forth its root; the state after birth even to proliferation, is like the growing of the tree . . .

404. By the wedding (of the will and the understanding) is meant the state of man after birth, from the state of ignorance to one of intelligence . . .

405². After birth, the heart sends the blood from its right ventricle into the lungs . . .

407. After birth, the lungs are opened . . .

R. 535. 'And having in the womb she cried out, travailing, and tortured to bear' (Rev.xii.2) = the nascent doctrine of the New Church, and the difficult reception of it on account of the opposition of those who are meant by 'the dragon.' . . By 'having in the womb,' 'travailing,' and 'bearing,' in the spiritual sense of the Word, is signified to conceive and bear those things which belong to the spiritual life. Ill. 542.

542. 'To bear' (ver.4) = to receive the goods and truths of doctrine from the Word. By 'the child she would bear' is signified the doctrine of the New Church.

543. 'And she brought forth a manly son' (ver.5) = the doctrine of the New Church. E.724.

M. 474. See ABSTINENCE at this ref.

E. 275⁴. That they have not procured for themselves anything of good and truth through (the Knowledges of good and truth), is signified by, 'the sea hath said, I have not travailed, nor brought forth . . .' (Is.xxiii.4). 'To travail and bring forth' = to produce something from Knowledges. 406¹¹.

381³. 'Ask, I pray, and see whether a male doth bear' (Jer.xxx.6) . . . This is said of those who want to procure love and faith by means of their Own intelligence; the procuring of them for themselves is signified by 'bearing.'

388²⁸. By 'bearing' (Ezek.xxxi.6) is signified to multiply, for all spiritual birth, or multiplication, is effected from affections of truth.

401¹⁹. 'To bear seven' (Jer.xv.9) = to be endowed with all the truths of the Church; as also in 1 Sam.ii.5. 257². 721⁷.

710⁴. 'From the birth, from the womb, and from conception' (Hos.ix.11) = the dispersion of all truth, from its ultimates to its first principles; 'birth' = its ultimates . . .

711. 'She cried out, travailing, and tortured to bear' = no reception by those in the Church who are natural and sensual, and their opposition . . .

721. 'To bear' (Rev.xii.4) = to produce such things as are of the Church, which are doctrinal things; here, concerning love to the Lord, and charity towards the neighbour. The reason such things are signified by 'bearing,' is that by 'generatings,' 'bringings forth,' and 'births-nativitates,' in the Word, are meant those which are spiritual, which are effected through truths and a life according to them. Ill.

—⁴. That it is with difficulty that any truth can be perceived and obtained, is signified by 'as a pregnant one draweth near to her bringing forth, she crieth out in her pangs' (Is.xxvi.17). That in the place of truths they drink in unrealities devoid of truths, is signified by, 'we have travailed and brought forth wind' (ver.18).

—⁵. The Lord's Advent, and the establishment of a new Church by Him among the gentiles, are signified by 'the barren who has not borne,' and by 'the desolate one who shall have many sons' (Is.liv.1).

—⁶. The gentiles who will acknowledge the Lord and receive the Word, and will thus suffer themselves to be regenerated into a Church, are meant by 'the barren who shall bear seven' (1 Sam.ii.5).

—⁸. 'Before she travailed, she brought forth . . .' (Is.lxvi.7). Here also the subject is the Lord's Advent, and the establishment of the Church with the gentiles. Their reformation and regeneration are described by 'travailing,' 'bringing forth,' etc.

—¹³. 'The partridge gathereth, but doth not bear . . .' (Jer. xvii.11). . . 'To bear' = to perform uses, thus to live, and so be reformed.

—²⁷. That they hear and know truths from the Word, and yet that there is no reformation effected by their means, is signified by 'the sons have come to the womb, and there is not strength to bring forth' (Is. xxxvii.3). 'To bear' = to make truths fruitful by doing them, whence comes reformation.

—¹⁸. 'The woman having in her womb, cried out, travailing, and tortured to bear'=that spiritual truths and goods, which are from the Word, cannot be received except with the greatest difficulty and with distress, on account of the evils and falsities which are then in the Church, and which stand in the way, and have taken possession of the minds of those who are attached to religion.

—²³. By 'ask and see whether a male doth bear' is signified whether the truth of the Word can produce anything of the Church without the good of life . . . 'Wherefore do I see every man with his hands upon his loins as of one who is bearing?'=why is it supposed that truth without good produces such things as are of the Church?

—²⁴. That their attempts to receive the truths and goods of Heaven and the Church are then in vain, on account of the falsities of evil in which they have been and then are, is signified by 'torments and pangs lay hold of them; they travail as one who is bringing forth' (Is. xlii. 8). 412²³.

—²⁷. That the man of the Church can with difficulty be regenerated through truths and a life according to them, and that he will undergo temptations in order that truths may be implanted and be conjoined with good, is signified by 'the sorrow and conception being multiplied,' and by 'bringing forth sons in sorrow' (Gen. iii. 16) . . . 'To bring forth sons'=to produce truths from the marriage of truth and good.

724³. 'To bear'=the production and fruitfulness of (truth and good).

—¹⁹. 'There is not one who leadeth her of all the sons whom she hath borne, nor one who taketh her by the hand of all the sons whom she hath brought up' (Is. li. 18)=that no truths from the Word which (the Church) has learned . . . withdraw her from falsities.

D. Wis. iii. 5. Will and understanding do not begin with man until the lungs are opened, which does not take place until after birth.

C. J. 47. Melancthon . . . appears clothed with bear-skin on account of the cold.

R. 47². 'She-bears' (2 Kings ii. 24)=the sense of the letter of the Word separated from its inward sense. They who separate them also appear, in the Spiritual World as bears.

573. 'His feet were as the feet of a bear' (Rev. xiii. 2)=full of fallacies from the sense of the letter of the Word, read, but not understood. . . By 'a bear' are signified those who read the Word and do not understand it, thus receiving fallacies. That these persons are meant by 'bears' has become evident to me from the bears seen in the Spiritual World, and from some there who are clothed with bear-skin, all of whom were those who have read the Word, and have not seen any doctrinal truth therein; and who have also confirmed the appearances of truth therein, whence come fallacies. Hurtful bears appear there, and bears not hurtful, and also white ones, but they are distinguished by their heads; those which are not hurtful have heads like those of calves, or sheep.

— (The signification of 'bears,' Ill.)

574². By 'the bear' (Dan. vii. 5) is described the second state of the Church, which is, that the Word is indeed read, but not understood . . .

M. 78². Bears were seen on the left, leopards on the right. . . These are men, who guard these Inhabitants of the North; they snuff the spheres of life of those who pass by, and rush at those who are spiritual. They who only read the Word, and imbibe thence nothing of doctrine, appear from afar as bears.

193. By 'bears' are signified those who read the Word in the natural sense, and see truths there without understanding.

T. 185². (These boreal Spirits) had their feet covered with bear-skin.

D. Min. 4803. On bears. . . There was a learned man who had confirmed himself in the principles of his own doctrinal matters, especially about faith, and against charity. . . He seemed to meet a bear which got upon him and seemed to gnaw at him, but could not. He afterwards said that he had often met bears, and they seemed to treat him badly, but in vain. He said he had seen them so often that now he cared nothing about them. I was told by the Angels, that those seem to be infested by bears, who have confirmed themselves in the principles of doctrinal matters, and adhere tenaciously to them, and want to rule other minds according to them, and so to exercise command; especially when the doctrinal matters are false. They are infested until they do not care to rule others any more, but are content for everyone to remain in his own doctrine.

4804. I afterwards spoke with him who appeared as a bear. He was a little above the head; and I noticed that there was enmity, and as it were antipathy, between such as debate about truths, and do not allow others to think according to their own understanding, but want to exercise command over the consciences of others. Hence it was evident that every vice has its own opponents. He who was the bear said that he did not know that he appeared so, and also that he did not know the source of the passion which carried him against that other man.

D. 6040. There was a Devil who was among the more cunning and wicked ones; when he walked, his tread sounded deep and heavy, like the tread of a bear . . . He said . . . that when he is in his chamber, he is clothed with a mantle lined with bear-skin to keep him from the cold. (This was Melancthon. See above, C.J.47). J.(Post.)27.

E. 66⁵. 'Bears'=truth in ultimates.

388⁹. 'A bear bereaved' (Hos.xiii.8)=the power of the evil that is from falsity.

556⁵. By this 'beast like a bear' (Dan.vii) is signified the second state, when this dominion is confirmed by means of the Word. They who do this also appear in the Spiritual World like bears.

781. 'His feet as of a bear' (Rev.xiii)=from natural things, which are fallacies . . . 'A bear'=those who are in power from the natural sense of the Word, both the good and the evil. —¹⁰. —¹¹. III.

—⁴. The fallacies which are here signified by 'the feet as of a bear,' Ex.

—¹¹. By 'she-bears out of a wood' (2 Kings ii.24) is signified power from the natural sense, or letter, of the Word.

—¹². The reason that power was given to David to smite a lion and a bear (1 Sam. xvii. 34-37), was that by David was represented the Lord as to Divine Truth . . . and by 'a bear,' is signified the power of Divine Truth natural, and, in the opposite sense, the power of falsity against that truth.

—¹³. By this second beast, which was like a bear, (Dan.vii) is signified the falsification of the truth of the Word, its power in the sense of the letter still remaining.

—¹⁴. 'To meet him as a bear bereaved' (Hos.xiii)=the falsification of the sense of the letter of the Word.

—¹⁵. 'A bear lying in wait for Me' (Lam.iii.10)=that the natural man has perverted the sense of the letter of the Word.

—¹⁶. 'As he who fleeing from a lion meets a bear' (Amos v.19)=fear on account of the dominion of falsity, seeking truths from the sense of the letter of the Word, which cannot but be falsified; for he is said to 'flee from a lion, and meet a bear' who is interiorly in falsity from evil, and is brought to know truths from the sense of the letter of the Word, which he cannot but pervert, on account of the interior dominion of falsity from evil.

—¹⁷. 'The heifer and the bear shall pasture, and their young ones lie down together' (Is. xi.7)=the power and lust of the natural man for falsifying the truths of the Word; and that this shall not do any harm to the good of the natural man, and its affection; 'a heifer'=the affection of good and truth of the natural man; and 'a bear'=the power and lust of the natural man for falsifying the truths of the sense of the letter of the Word.

—¹⁸. 'We growl like bears, and like doves we moan in moaning' (Is.lix.11)=the grief of the natural man, and the grief of the spiritual man therefrom.

—¹⁹. From these instances it is now evident that by 'a bear' is signified the natural man as to power from the sense of the letter of the Word, in both senses, also as to the lust of falsifying that sense. That these things are signified by 'a bear,' has been made evident to me from the bears seen in the Spiritual World, in the form of which were represented the thoughts of those who have been natural, and have studied the Word, all the while wanting to have greater influence through knowledge therefrom.

—^e. White bears also appear there, by which is represented the power of the spiritual natural man by means of the Word.

1086^e. 'Bears'=those who are in strength from the ultimates of truth.

1200². (The bear included among animals of an intermediate character, which appear in the World of Spirits.)

Beard. Barba.

Bearded. Barbatus.

See BALD, HAIR, SHAVE.

A. 1124. (The Antediluvians)said that they represented the Lord as an old man with a hoary beard, and that from Him . . . they were bearded; and this was the origin of the religious feeling in respect to beards among their descendants. D.3355.

3301⁷. 'In that day the Lord shall shear the head and the hair of the feet, and shall also consume the beard' (Is.vii.20); 'Son of man, take thee a sharp sword, take thee a barber's razor, which thou shalt cause to pass upon thine head, and upon thy beard . . . ' (Ezek.v.1). Thus is representatively described that there should no longer be natural truth, interior and exterior, which are 'the hair and the beard.'

4299⁵. Jehovah . . . appeared to Moses . . . as a bearded old man sitting with him, as I have been instructed by the Angels; hence the Jews had no other idea of Jehovah, than as of a very old man with a long and snowy beard . . .

5247. 'He polled himself' (Gen.xi.14)=rejection and change as to those things which are of the exterior Natural. 'To poll,' namely, the head and the beard, = to reject the things which are of the exterior Natural. . . . The hair of both the head and the beard corresponds in the Grand Man to the exterior Natural; wherefore sensual men . . . in the other life appear hairy in the light of Heaven, so that their faces are almost entirely covered with the hair of the beard.

5387⁴. (This pirate) had no face, but something covered with a black beard in the place of it. . . For the beard and teeth signify the lowest natural things. D.1157.

5571. They who have believed that nature is everything . . . and have also lived accordingly . . . appear in the light of Heaven devoid of a face, and in the place of it a bearded mass, shaggy, untrimmed . . . for the hair corresponds to natural things.

7483. The lower part of the face (of the inhabitants of Mars) is black, not from the beard, for they have none, but from a blackness in the place of it. 1545.

9806⁴. 'The beard (of Aaron)' (Ps.cxxxiii.2)=what is in the highest degree external (of good).

9760³. 'To shear the hair and consume the beard' (Is. vii.)=to take away the outward truths of the Church.

— That 'the beard'=sensual scientific things, which are ultimate truths, is evident from the places in the Word where 'the beard' is mentioned.

10044³. As ultimates signify all things, or the whole, the hair and beard, which are the ultimate things growing out of man, are taken for them.

— 'To shear the head, the hair of the feet, and the beard' (Is. vii.) = to take away ultimate things; for when these are taken away, interior things dissolve and perish.

10711. (The inhabitants of the fourth Earth) want to be bearded, and to appear old, because they always choose some bearded old man, and set him over them . . . 3275. 3302.

10754⁴. The lower part of the face (with the inhabitants of the fifth Earth) is black, instead of a beard.

S. 35². By 'the hair' and 'the beard' of the prophet (Ezek. v. 1) was signified the ultimate of truth.

M. 33. Hence it is that the male has a bearded chin . . .

T. 335². You are contending about nothing, or, as they say, about goats' wool, or [an eighteenth century] beard.

504⁸. When I got to the place, instead of the serpent, there was seen a monstrous man, whose face was so covered with beard, that nothing was to be seen of it except his nose.

D. 470. The ancient Jews appear very heavily bearded, the whole face being covered with a black beard, very ugly; the reason being that they had formerly loved their beard so much.

1193. There afterwards appeared a face, with a black, untrimmed beard, and very long; the mouth was fiery, and the rest of the face was nothing but black hair, thus it was wholly a beard, rather than a face. . . This signified the sense of the outward Word, or the letter, which is dead, but still has somewhat of life, which was signified by somewhat of a mouth appearing.

5126. I was taken upon a mountain, where there were those who belong to the Celestial Kingdom, but not of the best of them. . . One who was there, showed me a face, on which appeared a beard consisting of nothing but two or three bunches of hair that stretched out to a great length, and the rest of it was bare. Presently I saw on him what sort of a beard they have in their former, or good state; a large one, covering the whole chin, abundant, yet well-dressed. I perceived that those who are there are delighted with such a beard, and that the celestial are thus bearded; and that therefore it is said in the Word that the Ancient of Days, by whom is meant the Divine Celestial which is of the Lord in Heaven, had a great grey beard; and that the Jews made so much of the beard . . .

5127². (It was the presence of a kind of Sirens exciting their sensuous [thoughts and feelings] which caused that appearance of irregular bunches in the beards of these celestial Spirits, for the beard is derived from those sensuous things.)

5131. I afterwards spoke to these inhabitants of the mountain, about the beard; that from the appearance of it they may know what is the state of their Sensual; and that it was one of those who are in the Celestial Kingdom who spoke with Moses, from which the Jews got the idea that Jehovah has a white beard. I said also that the Word in the letter may be compared to those things of man which appear on the outside; in some places to the beard and hair . . .

De Ver. 10. The ultimate sense of the Word, which is the sense of the letter only, corresponds to the beard and the hair of the head in a man angel. Gen. art.

—³. Hence it is that men who have loved the Word even in its ultimate things, appear with becoming hair when they become Spirits after death; and when the same become Angels, they make the beard grow . . .

E. 66⁶. In these and other passages, by 'shearing the head,' 'shaving the beard,' and 'inducing baldness,' is signified to deprive of all truth and good; for he who is deprived of ultimate things is also deprived of prior ones . . .

375³⁶. By 'the oil upon the head going down upon the beard, Aaron's beard, that went down upon the mouth of his garments' (Ps. cxxxiii) is signified that thence is all the good and delight of Heaven from inmost to ultimate things; for by 'the head' is signified the inmost; by 'the beard,' the ultimate . . .

417⁵. That by 'corners' are signified all things, because they signify the outermost ones . . . is evident from some of the statutes . . . that 'they were not to shave the corner of their beard' (Lev. xix. 27) . . . By the hair of the head, and by 'the beard,' is signified the ultimate of man's life, which is called the Corporeal Sensual.

569¹⁷. By 'the hairs of the head' (Is. vii. 20) are signified the ultimate things of wisdom; by 'the beard,' the ultimate things of intelligence.

577¹⁰. By 'the beard' is signified the ultimate of the rational man, and by their being forbidden to shave the beard, is signified that they were not to deprive themselves of what is rational, by depriving themselves of its ultimate . . .

781⁶. 'I caught him by his beard, and smote him, and slew him' (1 Sam. xvii. 35) . . . 'The beard' = Divine Truth in ultimates, in which its very power consists; which Truth the evil, who are in falsities, do indeed have in their mouths, but abuse it to effect destruction, and yet when it is taken away they no longer have any power.

Beast. Bellua.

T. 574². Every kind of beast . . . tiger, panther, etc.

Beast. Bestia.

See ANIMAL, BRUTE, FLOCK, HERD, WILD BEAST.

A. 12. The sixth state exists when he speaks truths and does goods from faith and thereby from love. The things he then produces are called 'the living soul,' and 'the beast.' 39^o. 48^o.

44^o. The things of the will are here signified by 'the living soul' which the earth produces, and by 'the beast,' and 'the creeping thing,' and also by 'the wild beast-feram' of that earth.

45. Beasts are of two kinds, evil, because hurtful, and good, because gentle. The things in man which are evil, are signified by such beasts as bears, wolves, dogs; those which are good and gentle, by good and gentle beasts, as bullocks, sheep, and lambs. As those who are to be regenerated are here treated of, the 'beasts' are good and gentle, and signify affections. The lower affections, which derive more from the body, are called 'the wild beasts' of that earth, and are cupidities and pleasures. 46, Ill. 143, Ex.

[A.] 46³. A careful distinction is made in the Prophets between beasts and wild beasts of the earth, and beasts and wild beasts of the field.

47. In a former verse it is said that 'the earth brought forth the living soul, the beast, and the wild beast of the earth'; in a following verse, in another order, that 'God made the wild beast of the earth, and also the beast'; for at first man brings forth as if from himself. . . and thus regeneration begins from the outward man, and advances towards the inward. . .

52. Here 'beasts' are mentioned first, then 'the birds,' and also 'the fishes of the sea,' because the celestial man advances from love, which is of the will; differently from the spiritual man, with whom 'fishes,' and 'birds,' which relate to the understanding, take precedence, and 'beasts' follow.

58. 'Jehovah maketh grass to germinate for the beast' (Ps. civ. 14); here 'beast' stands for the wild beast of the earth, and at the same time for the bird of the heavens, which are mentioned in verses 11 and 12.

142. 'Jehovah God formed from the ground every beast of the field, and every bird of the heavens' (Gen. ii. 19). . . By 'beasts' are signified celestial affections; by 'the birds of the heavens,' spiritual ones; or by 'beasts,' the things of the will; by 'birds,' those of the understanding.

143. 'Beasts' in general = affections. 242. 246.

477⁴. 'I will sow the house of Israel, and the house of Judah, with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast' (Jer. xxxi. 27); where 'man' = the inward man; 'beast,' the outward.

594. '(I will destroy) from man to beast, and even to the creeping thing' (Gen. vi. 7) = that whatever is of the will, man would extinguish. . . All things of the will are called 'beasts, and creeping things.' . . But here, as such a man is treated of, good affections are not signified by 'beasts,' but evil ones, thus cupidities.

673. 'From the bird according to its kind, and from the beast according to its kind' (Gen. vi. 20). . . 'The bird' = intellectual things; 'the beast,' voluntary ones. 674.

714. By 'every clean beast' (to be taken into the ark) (Gen. vii. 2) = are signified affections of good. . . The reason affections are thus signified, is that, regarded in himself, man is nothing but a beast, he has very similar senses, appetites, cupidities, and affections of every kind. . . But the reason he is a man, and above beasts, is that he possesses an interior life, which can never exist with beasts, and which life is the life of faith and love from the Lord. . . 744.

715. As the most ancient people knew. . . that they were nothing but beasts and wild beasts. . . they not only likened whatever belonged to them to beasts and birds, but also called them so; the things of the will they compared to beasts, and called beasts; and the things of the understanding they compared to birds, and called birds; but they made a distinction between good affections and evil affections; good affections they compared to lambs, sheep, kids, goats, he-goats, rams, bullocks, oxen, because they are good and gentle, and also useful, being eatable, and their skins and wool good for clothing. These are chiefly clean beasts; but those which are evil and fierce, are unclean beasts. 719.

719. By 'the beast not clean' (Gen. vii. 2) are signified evil affections. . . in the Word these are exemplified by wolves, bears, foxes, swine, and many more; and various cupidities and wickednesses are signified by them.

— (See ARK, of Noah, at this ref.)

774. By 'the wild beast according to his kind' (Gen. vii. 14) is signified every spiritual good; and by 'the beast according to his kind,' every natural good. . . 'Wild beast' involves what is more worthy and excellent than 'beast,' because, in the Hebrew Language, the former term also signifies an animal in which there is a living soul. . .

803. 'As to bird, and as to beast, and as to wild beast, and as to every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth' (Gen. vii. 21) = the persuasions (of cupidities); in which 'birds' = affections of falsity; 'beasts,' cupidities; 'wild beasts,' pleasures; 'the creeping thing that creepeth,' bodily and earthly things. 810.

909. 'Bird' (Gen. viii. 17) = his intellectual things, and 'beast,' his voluntary things, which are of the inward man; and 'every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth' = similar corresponding things connected with his outward man. . .

921. (In the burnt-offering) clean beasts represented goods of charity, and clean birds, truths of faith. . . 922, Ill.

985. 'The fear of you and the terror of you is upon every beast of the earth, and upon every bird of the heaven' (Gen. ix. 2) = the dominion of the inward man. . . over the cupidities of the disposition, and over the falsities of reasoning. 986. 988^e.

987. That 'over every beast of the earth' signifies over the cupidities of the disposition, is evident from the signification of 'a beast' in the Word, wherein by 'beasts' are signified either affections, or cupidities; affections of good, by gentle, useful, and clean beasts; affections of evil, or cupidities, by fierce, useless, and unclean beasts. (Refs.) Here, because cupidities are signified, they are called 'beasts of the earth,' not beasts of the field.

1022. 'I set up My covenant. . . to bird, to beast, and to every wild beast of the earth with you' (Gen. ix. 9, 10) = the presence of the Lord in charity with. . . the intellectual things (of the regenerate spiritual man) specifically, and with his new voluntary things specifically, and his lower intellectual and voluntary things which are thence derived. 1028.

1326^e. 'No man, and no beast' (Jer. l. 3) = no good.

1361². Beasts also were representative, as all that were sacrificed; lambs and sheep represented celestial things; pigeons and turtledoves, spiritual things; rams, he-goats, bullocks, and oxen . . . lower celestial and spiritual things.

1573⁵. 'Jesus . . . was with the beasts' (Mark i. 13). Here, by 'the beasts' is signified Hell.

1702². Through the communication (of the rational man) with the Internal, man can think about celestial and spiritual things, or look upwards, which beasts cannot do. Through communication with the Exterior, man can think about worldly and bodily things, or look downwards, scarcely otherwise than beasts, which have a similar idea of earthly things. In a word, the interior, or middle man, is the real rational man, who is spiritual or celestial when he looks upwards, and animal when he looks downwards.

2015⁹. 'The beast' (Rev. xix. 19) = the goods of love profaned.

2162¹⁶. When the goods and truths of faith are perverted through natural lumen, it is described by 'the feet and hoofs of a beast, by which the waters are disturbed, and by which food is trampled under foot' (Ezek. xxxii. 2, 13).

2179³. Hence as soon as (the men of the Most Ancient Church) saw any beast, the idea occurred to them of what it signified.

2219². To man there is given a Rational above beasts, to the end . . .

2712². 'No man' (Jer. xxxiii. 10) = no celestial good; 'no inhabitant,' no spiritual good; 'no beast,' no natural good.

2781. There are various kinds of beasts which signify voluntary things that are of good, as do lambs, sheep, kids, goats, bullocks, oxen; and there are also beasts by which intellectual things that are of truth are signified; namely, horses, mules, wild asses, camels, asses, and in addition to these, birds . . .

—². They are called 'beasts of the south' (Is. xxx. 6) who are in the Knowledges of good and truth, but who make them, not of life, but of knowledge . . .

3048³. 'Beasts of the south' (Is. xxx) = those who are in the light of Knowledges, or in Knowledges, but in the life of evil.

3448⁴. 'The beast' (Rev. xix. 19) = the evils of self-love.

3519². All gentle and useful beasts which are mentioned in the Word, signify, in the genuine sense, celestial things which are of good, and spiritual things which are of truth; (Refs.) and as there are various kinds of celestial things, or goods, and consequently various kinds of spiritual things, or truths, one kind of beast has a different signification from another; thus one thing is signified by a lamb, another by a kid, another by a sheep, by a goat, by a ram, by a he-goat, by a bullock, by an ox; and another again by a horse, and by a camel; and another also by birds; and still another by the beasts of the sea, as whales, and fishes. There are more kinds of celestial and spiritual things than can be enumerated . . . Every kind of good, and every kind of truth, contain innumerable species . . . The most universal kinds of good and truth are what are represented by the animals which were offered in burnt-offerings and sacrifices . . .

3646². It is the ends which show the quality of the life of a man, and that of the life of a beast; a man can have spiritual and celestial ends . . . but a beast cannot have any other ends than natural ones; thus a man can be in the sphere of Divine ends and uses . . . but a beast cannot be in any other sphere than that of the ends and uses which are on the earth; ends are nothing but loves . . . See below, D. 3820.

—³. The reason so many men do not know how to distinguish between their own life, and the life of beasts, is that they are similar in external things, and care only for earthly, bodily, and worldly things . . . But he who believes in celestial and spiritual things, or suffers spiritual light to flow in and act . . . sees how much he is above the brute animals.

4197⁴. 'The beast from the bottomless pit,' or from Hell, 'shall kill them' (Rev. xi. 7) = the vastation of good and truth within the Church.

4224. See MAN-homo, at this ref. 7750².

4488. 'Every beast of theirs' (Gen. xxxiv. 23) = goods. 'Beast' = goods. Refs.

4545⁷. (Without communication with Heaven) the human race would become as beasts without inward and outward bonds . . .

4922⁶. The profanation of good and truth is described . . . in John; 'I saw a woman sitting upon a scarlet beast, full of names of blasphemy . . .' (Rev. xvii. 3).

5033. They see as truth . . . that a man dies like a beast . . . 5649^e.

5084⁵. It is a fallacy of sense, that man can no more live after death than a beast, because beasts also have a life which in many respects is like the life of man; man being only a more perfect animal . . . The man who thinks from the Sensual does not apprehend that man is above beasts, and has a higher life, in this respect, that he can think, not only about the causes of things, but also about the Divine, and can be conjoined with the Divine through faith and love, and that he can also receive influx thence and appropriate it to himself; thus that in man, because there exists reciprocity, there exists reception, which does not at all exist with beasts. 7352.

5198². All beasts mentioned in the Word signify affections; evil and useless beasts, evil affections, and gentle and useful ones, good affections. (Refs.) When there is conversation in Heaven about affections, beasts are represented in the World of Spirits which correspond to affections of that kind. The lives of beasts are nothing but affections, for they follow their own affection from instinct without reason. No other bodily forms are suitable to such affections without reason, hence such forms appear when there is conversation about mere affections. I have also seen strange beasts, such as do not exist on earth. They were from unknown affections, and from mixed affections. Hence it is therefore, that in the Word, by 'beasts' are signified affections.

6413. That by 'a hind' (Gen. xlix. 21) is signified natural affection, is because it is included among beasts significative of affections, which are all that are good for food and useful, as lambs, sheep, goats, kids, he-goats, as well as oxen, bullocks, and also cows; but these beasts are significative of spiritual affections, because the burnt-offerings and sacrifices were made from them; whereas hinds, not being assigned to that use, were significative of natural affections. That beasts=affections, Refs. And the reason they signify affections, is from the representatives in the World of Spirits. 7781.

[A.] 6767². 'The beasts are consumed, and the birds' (Jer.xii.4)=that goods and truths are. 8902⁶.

7250. When (these Spirits of Venus who are undergoing vastation) are in a state of despair, they cry out that they are beasts, brutes, abominations . . .

7424. 'It was louse on man and on beast' (Ex.viii.17) =that therefrom came interior and exterior evils of cupidities . . . 'Beast'=affection of good, and in the opposite sense, affection of evil, or cupidity. (Refs.) But when mention is made of 'man and beast,' by 'man' is signified interior good, and in the opposite sense, interior evil; and by 'beast,' exterior good, and in the opposite sense, exterior evil. . . The reason is, that there does not exist with beasts an Internal such as exists with man. The Internal which they have is plunged in their External, and that so completely as to be one with it; and at the same time it looks downwards, or towards the earth, without any elevation towards interior things.

7505. 'To cut off man and beast' (Ezek.xiv.21)=to vastate interior and exterior good.

7523. 'There shall be upon man and upon beast' (Ex.ix.10)=what are from interior and exterior evil. . . When 'man and beast' are mentioned, by 'man' is signified interior affection, or cupidity; and by 'beast,' exterior. The interior good, and evil, which are signified by 'man,' are those which are of the intention, or end . . . ; whereas the exterior good, and evil, which are signified by 'beast,' are those which are of the thought, and, when nothing hinders, of action. The reason what is exterior is signified by 'beast,' is that as to his outward or natural man, man is nothing but a beast; for he takes delight in similar cupidities and pleasures, and also has similar appetites and senses. E.342⁹.

7781. 'And all the first-born of beast' (Ex.xi.5)=the adulterated goods of faith. 'Beast'=affections of good, and, in the opposite sense, affections of evil. Refs. . . As beasts signify these things, by 'the first-born of beast' is signified the truth of good, here, adulterated, because pertaining to the Egyptians . . .

7785. 'From man and even unto beast' (ver.7)=not as to truth, nor yet as to good. . . 'Beast'=affection of good; thus good.

7821. To look above self is proper to man, but to look below self is proper to beasts. Hence it follows, that in proportion as a man looks below himself, or downwards, he is a beast, and also an image of Hell . . . 8604².

7872. 'From man and even to beast' (Ex.xii.12)=their evil cupidities, interior and exterior . . . By 'man' is signified affection of interior good; and by 'beast,' affection of exterior good. Hence, in the opposite sense, as here, where the first-born of the Egyptians are treated of, evil affections are signified, or interior and exterior cupidities. That 'beasts'=good affections, and, in the opposite sense, evil affections, or cupidities, Refs.

8075. 'Every opening of the offspring of a beast' (Ex.xiii.12)=all the charity which is of the new birth . . . 'The offspring of a beast'=affection of good; thus the good of charity.

8772. Natural good has only natural life in it, which life is not unlike the life of beasts, which also are in good when they are gentle; but beasts cannot receive spiritual life.

8801. 'Whether beast or man, he shall not live' (Ex.xix.13)=that good and truth would lose spiritual life. 'Beast'=affection of good. Refs.

8890. 'Thou shalt not do any work . . . nor thy beast' (Ex.xx.10)=that then there are Heaven and blessedness in each and everything which are in the Internal and the External of man . . . By 'beast' is signified affection in general.

8902⁶. 'Beasts'=goods, and affections of good. Refs.

9090². All beasts signify such things as are of any affection, or inclination. In the Spiritual World nothing is better known than this; for beasts of various kinds often appear there; as oxen, bullocks, cows, horses, mules, asses, sheep, goats, kids, lambs; also evil beasts, as tigers, panthers, bears, dogs, swine, serpents; and also beasts which are nowhere visible on the Earth; besides birds of various kinds . . .

9140. All beasts, of every genus and species, signify affections; gentle and useful beasts, good affections; and fierce and useless beasts, evil affections. Refs. When a beast is called 'a beast of burden-jumentum,' it signifies affections merely corporeal, which have little of reason in them . . .

9162. 'When a man shall give to his companion an ass, or an ox, or sheep-pecudem, or any beast, to keep' (Ex.xxii.10)=truth and good interior and exterior, and everything which belongs to the affections thereof, in the memory. . . 'Beast'=affection of good and of truth. Refs. 9276.

9190. 'Everyone that lieth with a beast' (Ex.xxii.19)=conjunction with the evils of the cupidities of self-love. . . 'Beast'=good affection with good men, and evil affection with evil men; (Refs.) thus cupidities; here, the cupidities of self-love.

9193². The beasts (of the Canaanites)=evil affections.

9231. All beasts, in the Word, signify affections and inclinations such as those which appertain to man; gentle and useful beasts, good affections and inclinations; but fierce and useless beasts, evil affections and inclinations. The reason such things are signified by beasts, is that the outward or natural man enjoys similar affections and inclinations, and also similar appetites and senses, to those of beasts. But the difference is, that man has an inward man . . . by this, man is distinguished from beasts. But the inward man (of merely sensual men) is closed towards Heaven; wherefore they do not see how to make any difference between a man and a beast, except that a man can speak.

9255³. By beasts of various kinds, in the Word, are signified such affections and inclinations as man has in common with beasts; and, in the spiritual sense, affections of good and of truth, inward and outward. (Refs.) Beasts were therefore made use of in sacrifices according to their signification. Refs. 9280, Refs.

9553³. 'The beast of the field' (Dan. iv. 12) = those who are in affections of good, and, in the opposite sense, those who are in affections of evil. Refs.

9755¹³. 'A beast out of the sea' (Rev. xiii. 1) = what is scientific destroying the truths of faith.

9937⁷. 'The wilderness' = Hell; and the beasts with which the Lord fought there, the diabolical crew.

10042². That beasts, in the Word, signify goods and evils with man, and also truths and falsities, Refs.

10132¹¹. By all the kinds of beasts which were sacrificed, something of the Church was signified.

10217⁷. By 'the beast out of the sea' (Rev. xiii) is meant the truth of the Church falsified by means of scientific things which are from the world; and by 'the beast out of the earth,' is meant the truth of the Church falsified through the literal sense of the Word being applied to favour the evils of the loves of self and of the world.

—8. 'To reckon the number of the beast' (ver. 18) = to investigate and know these falsified truths of the Church.

10227⁵. 'The beasts of the south' (Is. xxx. 6) = those who are within the Church, thus in the light of truth from the Word, but still do not read the Word, except merely for the sake of knowledge, and not for the sake of the uses of life.

10284³. What is peculiar to man above beasts, is that he can be elevated to Heaven, and to the Lord, by the Lord, and thus be led . . .

10609³. By 'the flocks and the herds' (Ps. viii. 7) are signified interior and exterior goods with men, and by 'the beasts (of the field),' affections with them.

H. 296(y). The difference between men and beasts, is that men can be elevated by the Lord to Himself, and to think of the Divine, to love it, thus be conjoined with the Lord; hence they have eternal life; but not so beasts. Refs. N. 278^e. J. 25(i).

— . Beasts are in the order of their life, and are therefore born into what is in accord with their nature . . . Refs.

435. They who have confirmed themselves to the contrary, are wont to think that beasts live and feel in a similar way (to men), and thus that they too have a Spiritual . . . But beasts have no such Spiritual as that of man; for men, but not beasts, have an Inmost, into which the Divine flows, and elevates to itself, and thereby conjoins with itself. Hence man, surpassing beasts, can think about God, and about the Divine things which are of Heaven and the Church, and can love God from them and in them, and thus be conjoined with Him, and that which can be conjoined with the Divine cannot be dissipated, but that which cannot be conjoined with the Divine is dissipated. J. 25⁵.

N. 35. By (will and understanding) man is distinguished from beasts, because the understanding of man can be elevated by the Lord, and can see Divine Truths, and in like manner the will, which can perceive Divine Goods; and thus man can be conjoined with the Lord by means of these two faculties which constitute him; but not so beasts. Refs.

J. 10². When man is entirely separated from the Divine, he no longer has spiritual life, but only natural, such as beasts have . . .

23³. Of those in the Christian World who are called intelligent, there are very many who reject from their faith the immortality of their life, believing that the soul of a man is dissipated after death equally as the soul of a beast; not perceiving the difference of life between a man and a beast; that man can think above himself, about God, Heaven, love, faith, spiritual and moral good, and the like; and thus that he can be elevated to the Divine itself, and be conjoined with Him by means of all these things; but that beasts cannot be elevated above their own Natural to think such things; consequently, that their Spiritual cannot be separated from their Natural after death, and live by itself, like the Spiritual of a man; which also is the reason why the life of a beast is dissipated with its natural life.

—(i). There is influx from the Spiritual World also into the lives of beasts, but general, and not special, as with man. Refs.

58⁷. By 'the scarlet beast' (Rev. xvii) is meant the profanation of celestial love.

S. 25. That the spiritual sense would be long unacknowledged, owing merely to those who are in falsities of doctrine . . . is meant in the Revelation by 'the beast,' and by 'the Kings of the earth,' who would make war with Him Who sat upon the white horse (xix. 19). By 'the beast' (Rev. xvii. 3) are meant the Papists, and by 'the Kings of the earth,' the Reformed, who are in falsities of doctrine. T. 207.

Life 15. The reason a man who is not spiritual can think and speak rationally . . . is that the understanding of man can be elevated into the light of Heaven . . . but the will of man cannot be similarly elevated into the heat of Heaven . . . This makes the difference between a man and a beast.

F. 60. By the first beast of the dragon (Rev. xiii) is signified faith separated from charity as to the confirmations thereof from the natural man; and by the second, is signified faith separated from charity as to the confirmations thereof from the Word, which are also falsifications of truth.

— . 'Let him that hath intelligence reckon the number of the beast' = let those who are in enlightenment make inquiry into the quality of the confirmations of that faith from the Word.

W. 65³. The middle things of the animal kingdom are called birds and beasts . . .

185². Without Knowledge of these degrees, nothing can be known . . . of any difference of life between men and beasts, or of the difference between the more perfect and the more imperfect beasts.

[W.] 240. There are two faculties from the Lord with man, by which man is distinguished from beasts . . . rationality . . . and freedom . . . P. 162.

255. What the nature of the difference is between the life of a natural man, and the life of a beast . . . The difference is, that man has three degrees of the mind . . . But beasts have not the two higher degrees, but have only the natural degrees, which, without the higher degrees, are in no capability of thinking about any civil, moral, or spiritual thing; and as their natural degrees are incapable of being opened, and of thereby being elevated into higher light, they cannot think in successive order, but only in simultaneous order, which is not thinking, but acting from knowledge corresponding to their love. And as they cannot think analytically, and see lower thought from any higher thought, they cannot speak, but can only make sounds in accordance with the knowledge of their love. Yet the sensual man is no different from a beast, except that he can fill the memory with scientifics, and think and speak therefrom, the ability to do which he derives from a faculty which is proper to every man, of understanding truth if he wills to do so. This faculty makes the distinction. Many, however, by the abuse of this faculty, have made themselves lower than beasts. M. 495.

267^e. This no beast can do, because it does not enjoy these faculties; wherefore a beast is born into the whole order of its life, and into all the knowledge of its natural love, but not so man.

345. The ultimate Spiritual cannot of itself be separated from its higher [degrees], either with beasts, or in earths . . .

351^e. They think in nature, from nature . . . the same as do they who are in Hell, differing from beasts only in having the power of rationality, that is, in being able to understand, and thus think otherwise, if they choose. R. 321.

413. By this faculty (of rationality) . . . man is distinguished from beasts.

P. 74. What rationality is and what freedom, which are proper to man, cannot be more clearly known than from a comparison of men with beasts; for the latter have no rationality, or faculty of understanding; nor any freedom, or faculty of freely willing; and thus they have no understanding and will; but instead of understanding they have knowledge, and instead of will, affection, both natural; and as they have not those two faculties, they have not thought, but instead of thought they have an inward sight, which makes one with their outward sight by correspondence.

—². In beasts there is a marriage of affection and knowledge; the affection with them is of natural good, and the knowledge is of natural truth. Now as with them affection and knowledge act entirely as one, and their affection cannot be raised above their knowledge, nor their knowledge above their affection, but if they are raised, they are both raised together; and as they have not any spiritual mind, into which, or into the light and heat of which, they can be raised; they therefore have not the faculty of understanding, or rationality; nor the faculty of freely willing, or freedom; but they have mere natural affection with its own knowledge. The natural affection which they have, is the affection of nourishing themselves, of having a dwelling-place, of having offspring, of shunning injury; with all the requisite knowledge of these things. Such being the state of their life, they are not able to think, I will this, or I do not will; I know this, or I do not know; still less, I understand this, and I love this; but they are carried along from their affection by means of their knowledge, without rationality and freedom. Their being so carried along is not from the natural, but from the Spiritual World . . .

75^e. From these two faculties it is that man can think, and, from thought, speak; in all other things they are not men, but beasts; and some, from the abuse of these faculties, are worse than beasts.

96⁴. Beasts have not these faculties (of freedom and rationality). It appears as if beasts too could will and understand, but they cannot. It is natural affection, which in itself is desire, with its mate knowledge, which alone leads and moves them to do what they do. There is indeed what is civil and moral in their knowledge, but they are not above it, because they have not a Spiritual which gives a perception of what is moral, and consequent analytical thought of it. They can indeed be taught to do something, but this is only what is natural adding itself to their knowledge, and at the same time to their affection, and is reproduced through either the sight or hearing; but never becomes a matter of thought, still less of reason with them.

136². The Internal can be compelled by the External not to speak evil against the laws of the kingdom, etc. . . . But this Internal is not an Internal properly human, but is an Internal which man has in common with beasts, which also can be compelled. The human Internal resides above this animal Internal.

233¹². When this love (of self) has confirmed such things, it then becomes so blind as not to see otherwise than that man is a beast, and that they think alike; nay, that if a beast could also speak, it would be a man under another form. If, by means of some persuasion, it should be brought to believe, that something of man lives after death, it is then so blind as to believe that a beast does so too . . .

321. He who confirms himself in the appearance that wisdom and prudence are from man and in man as his, cannot see but that otherwise he would not be a man, but either a beast, or a statue; when yet it is the other way about. Gen.art.

— . He who confirms . . . that all he thinks and does is from himself . . . becomes like a beast.

—². That he who believes that all things he thinks and does are from himself, is not unlike a beast, is evident, for he thinks from the natural mind alone, which is common to man with beasts; and not from the rational spiritual mind, which is the mind truly human . . . Wherefore also such a man knows no difference between a man and a beast, except that a man speaks, and a beast makes sounds, and he believes that both die in the same way.

324. With beasts there is only one degree of life, which is like the ultimate degree with man, which is called the Natural . . .

R. 323. 'By the beasts of the earth' (Rev.vi.8)=through concupiscences.

500. 'The beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war with them, and shall overcome them, and kill them' (Rev.xi.7)=that those who are in the internals of the doctrine concerning faith alone, will set themselves in opposition, and attack, these two essentials of the New Church, and will reject them in themselves, and, so far as they can, with others. By 'the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit' are meant those who ascended out of the bottomless pit, and were seen as locusts (Rev.ix.1-12), who were they who are in the internals of the doctrine of faith alone.

567. 'I saw a beast coming up out of the sea' (Rev.xiii.1)=laymen in the Churches of the Reformed, who are in the doctrine and faith of the dragon concerning God and salvation. . . That the subject of the dragon is here continued, is evident from these statements in this chapter; that 'the dragon gave to the beast coming up out of the sea, his power, and throne, and great Power' (ver.2); and that 'they adored the dragon, who gave Power to the beast' (ver.4). And concerning the beast out of the earth, that 'he spake as the dragon' (ver.11); and that 'he exercised all the Power of the first beast before the dragon' (ver.12). The reason it is laymen who are meant by 'the beast out of the sea,' and clergymen who are meant by 'the beast out of the earth,' is that by 'the sea' is signified the External of the Church, and by 'the earth,' its Internal . . . and laymen are in the external things of the doctrine of the Church, and clergymen are in its internal things; wherefore also the beast out of the earth is called 'the false prophet.' 594. E. 774².

—². The reason they were seen as beasts, is that a dragon is a beast, and because a beast in the Word signifies man as to his affections; harmless and useful beasts signify man as to good affections, and hurtful and useless beasts signify man as to evil affections. . . The reason is, that, in the Spiritual World, the affections of man appear at a distance as beasts. . . Moreover, beasts, regarded in themselves, are nothing but forms of natural affections; whereas men are not only forms of natural affections, but also of spiritual ones at the same time.

—³. That men as to affections are meant by beasts, III.

—⁵. Jesus was not 'with the beasts' (Mark i.13), but with Devils, who are here meant by 'the beasts.'

—⁶. By 'man and beast,' together, are signified man as to spiritual affection and as to natural affection. III.

574². By these four 'beasts' (Dan.vii) are described the successive states of the Church, from its first to its last, until it is utterly devastated as to all the good and truth of the Word. Ex.

—³. These four beasts were seen by Daniel coming up out of the sea one after another, but the first three beasts were seen by John united into one body. . . The reason is, that in Daniel the successive states of the Church are described by them, but in the Apocalypse the ultimate state of the Church is described, in which all prior ones are together. . .

578. 'The whole earth wondered after the beast' (ver.3)=that then that faith was received with joy, and made the doctrine of the whole Church; because so they were not servants under the law, but free under faith.

579. 'And they adored the dragon which gave Power unto the beast' (ver.4)=the acknowledgment of the doctrine concerning justification through faith without the works of the law, by the leaders and teachers, who made it strong through its reception by the general congregation.

580. 'And they adored the beast' (ver.4)=acknowledgment by the general congregation, that it is a holy truth, that of himself no one can do a good work, or fulfil the law.

581. 'Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to fight with him?' (Rev.xiii.4)=the superiority of that doctrine to every other, because no one can refute it. . . By 'the beast' is signified the general assemblage, thus the Church; and, abstractedly, its doctrine.

594. 'I saw another beast ascending out of the earth' (ver.11)=the clergy in the Churches of the Reformed, who are in the doctrine and faith of the dragon concerning God and salvation.

596. 'He maketh all the Power of the former beast before it' (ver.12)=that they have confirmed the dogmas which are signified by 'the dragon,' and have been received by the laity, and that, through these, they are strong.

597. 'He causeth the earth, and the inhabitants in it, to adore the former beast, whose plague of death was healed' (ver.12)=that thus it has been established by means of confirmations, that it should be acknowledged as a holy thing of the Church, that as no one can do a good work of himself, and fulfil the law, the sole means of salvation is faith in the righteousness and merit of Christ, Who has suffered for man, and thereby taken away the condemnation of the law.

600. 'He seduceth them that dwell upon the earth by means of the signs which are given him to do before the beast' (ver.14)=that, by means of attestations and proofs, they lead the men of the Church into errors. . . By 'the beast out of the sea,' before which he did the signs, is signified the faith of the dragon with laymen; and by 'the beast coming up out of the earth,' which did the signs, and is elsewhere called 'the false prophet,' is signified the faith of the dragon with clergymen.

601. 'Saying to them that dwell upon the earth, that they should make an image of the beast, which had the wound of a sword and did live' (ver.14)=that they induce the men of the Church to receive as a doctrine, that faith is the only means of salvation, because no one can do what is good from himself, except what is meritorious; and because no one can fulfil the law, and so be saved.

602. 'And it was given to him to give breath to the image of the beast, so that the image of the beast should speak' (ver.15)=that they were permitted to confirm that doctrine by means of the Word, whereby it is as it were vivified when taught.

[R.] 603. 'And causeth that whoever does not adore the image of the beast should be killed' (ver.15)=that they proclaim condemnation against those who do not acknowledge the doctrine of their faith as a holy doctrine of the Church . . . By 'the image of the beast' is signified that doctrine.

606. 'That no one should buy or sell, if he has not the mark, or the name, of the beast, or the number of his name' (ver.17)=that no one should be allowed to teach from the Word, thus not to be installed into the priesthood, be decorated with the laurel of tutorship, be invested with a doctor's cap, and be called orthodox, except he who acknowledges this doctrine, and swears to the belief and love of it; or of that which is in agreement, or of that which is not at variance, with it.

608. 'Let him that hath intelligence reckon the number of the beast' (ver.18)=that he who is in enlightenment from the Lord, is able to know what the character of the confirmations of that doctrine and faith from the Word is with them.

634. 'If anyone shall adore the beast and his image, and shall receive his mark upon the forehead and upon his hand' (Rev.xiv.9)=him who acknowledges and receives the doctrine concerning justification and salvation through faith alone, confirms it, and lives according to it. 'To adore the beast'=to acknowledge that faith; 'to adore his image,' to acknowledge and receive that doctrine; 'to receive the mark upon the forehead and upon the hand,' to receive that doctrine in love and faith, and to confirm it in the life . . .

660. 'Those who have the victory concerning the beast, and concerning his image, and concerning his mark, and concerning the number of his name' (Rev. xv.2)=those who have rejected faith alone, and its doctrine, and thus have not acknowledged and imbued themselves with its falsities, and have not falsified the Word. By 'the beast' is signified the faith of the dragon with laymen.

675. Then suddenly there appeared a monster rising out of the earth with seven heads, feet like a bear, a mouth like a lion, just like the beast described in Rev.xiii.1,2. . . This apparition took the mitre off the table, stretched out the bottom of it, and placed it on his seven heads; then the earth yawned beneath his feet, and he sank down into Hell.

679. 'On the men who had the mark of the beast, and who adored its image' (Rev.xvi.2)=with those who live faith alone, and receive the doctrine thereof.

694. 'The fifth Angel poured out his vial upon the throne of the beast' (Rev.xvi.10)=influx from the Lord into their faith. . . By 'the beast' is signified faith alone. Refs.

701. 'Out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet' (Rev.xvi.13)=something perceived from the theology founded on the doctrine of a Trinity of Persons of the Divinity, and upon the doctrine of justification through faith alone without the works of the law. . . By 'the beast out of the sea,' which is here meant, are signified the men of the external Church who are in that acknowledgment and faith; by 'the false prophet' are signified the men of the internal Church, who teach theology from those doctrines. The false prophet has not before been mentioned, but the 'beast out of the earth' is now so called. . .

723. 'I saw a woman sitting upon a scarlet beast, full of names of blasphemy' (Rev.xvii.3)=that religiosity upon the Word profaned by them. . . By 'the scarlet beast' is signified the Word; and by 'full of names of blasphemy' is signified entirely profaned.

—2. That by 'the scarlet beast' is signified the Word as to Divine celestial truth, at first thought appears far-fetched and strange, nay, absurd, because it is called 'a beast'; but by 'a beast,' in the spiritual sense, is signified natural affection, and it is predicated of the Word, of the Church, and of man. Refs. and Ill.

733. 'The beast which thou sawest was, and is not' (ver.8)=the Word with them, acknowledged as holy, and yet really not acknowledged. By 'the beast' is signified the Word.

735. 'And they that dwell upon the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the Book of Life from the foundation of the world, when they see the beast which was, and is not, and yet is' (ver.8)=the amazement of those who are of that religiosity, of all who have striven for dominion over Heaven and earth from the institution of it, that the Word, although so greatly rejected, still exists.

739. 'The beast which was and is not, he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition' (Rev.xvii.11)=that the Word, treated of before, is Divine Good itself, and that it is Divine Truth, and that it is taken away from the laity and the common people, lest the profanations and adulterations effected in it by the leading men should appear, and cause their withdrawal. By 'the beast which was and is not' is signified the Word. 740².

741. 'They receive Power as Kings one hour with the beast' (ver.12)=that the Word is strong with them, and they, through the Word, as if they were in its Divine Truths.

746. 'The ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the harlot' (ver.16)=the Word as to power from Divine Truths with the Protestants, who have completely rejected from themselves the yoke of the papal dominion.

749. 'To be of one mind, and to give their kingdom unto the beast' (Rev.xvii.17)=to judge and conclude unanimously that they would acknowledge the Word, and found the Church upon it. By 'the beast' is signified the Word.

833. 'I saw the beast, and the Kings of the earth, and their army, gathered together to make war with Him Who sat upon the horse, and with His army' (Rev.xix.19)=that all the interiorly evil, who have professed faith alone, with the leading men and their adherents, will attack the Divine Truths of the Lord in His Word, and will infest those who will be of the Lord's New Church. By 'the beast' are signified those who are in the religiosity concerning faith alone.

(Refs.) That it is only those who are interiorly evil, and have professed that religiosity, will be seen below.

834. 'The beast was taken, and with him the false prophet, who did signs before it, by which he led astray those who receive the mark of the beast, and adore its image' (Rev.xix.20)=all those who have professed faith alone, and been interiorly evil, both the laity and common people, and the clergy and learned, who, by means of reasonings and provings that faith alone is the sole means of salvation, have brought others to receive that faith, and to live according to it. By 'the beast' is here meant the beast out of the sea; and by 'the false prophet,' the beast out of the earth . . . By the beast out of the sea are meant the laity and common people who are in the religiosity concerning faith alone; and by the beast out of the earth, the clergy and the learned who are in that religiosity . . .

864. 'The Devil that deceiveth them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever' (Rev.xx.10)=those who were in evils as to life and in falsities as to doctrine, cast into Hell, where they are inwardly continually infested to eternity by the love of their own falsity, and the cupidities of their own evil. . . By 'the beast and the false prophet' are signified those who are in faith alone in both life and doctrine, both unlearned and learned; by 'the beast,' the unlearned; and by 'the false prophet,' the learned.

926. See FALSE PROPHET at this ref.

—2. I prayed to the Lord . . . and instead of the woman, I saw an image hanging in that house, whose head was like a dragon, its body like a leopard, and its feet like a bear, thus like 'the beast out of the sea.'

M. 133. Why man is not born into the knowledge of any love, while beasts and birds, both noble and ignoble, are born into the knowledges of all their loves. Ex.

—2. The natural world . . . in which there exist, not representative, but real beasts.

134⁴. (Those from the south) added, that beasts are born into natural loves, and consequently into the knowledges corresponding to them; yet still they do not at all know, think, understand, and possess wisdom from knowledges; but are carried along by their loves through them, almost as blind people are through the streets by dogs; for, as to understanding, they are blind; or rather, like sleep-walkers, who, from blind knowledge, while the understanding is put to sleep, do what they do. I.15⁷.

151a³. What news from the earth? They said, This is new, that men like beasts have been found in the woods, or beasts like men . . . from which some of the learned among us have divined, and some have formed conclusions, concerning the state of man relatively to that of beasts. . . 1. From his nature, and also from birth, a man is more senseless, and consequently is lower, than a beast. 2. He is capable of receiving instruction because he learned to make articulate sounds, and so to speak, and thereby began to bring thoughts forth . . . until at last he could educe the laws of society; many of which, however, are impressed on beasts from their birth. 3. Beasts have rationality equally with men. 4. Wherefore, if beasts could speak, they would reason on every subject as cleverly as men; a proof of which is, that they think from reason and sagacity equally with men. T.692.

230. According to the deficiency and loss of marriage love, a man approaches the nature of a beast. Gen.art.

— . In proportion as a man is in what is opposite to marriage love, he is natural, and a merely natural man is like a beast as to cupidities, appetites, and their delights; with the sole difference, that he has the capacity of elevating the understanding into the light of wisdom, and also the capacity of elevating the will into the heat of heavenly love; these capacities are taken away from no man; wherefore a merely natural man . . . lives after death.

233. The Angel replied, They are not beasts, but beast men. (Confirmers.) T.334.

350. It is known that a man is born lower than a beast. All beasts are born into the knowledges corresponding to their life's love. Des.

378. There is also a jealousy with beasts and birds. Gen.art.

I. 15. It is entirely otherwise with beasts. Gen.art.

— . Beasts have not will and understanding, but merely an image of both, which the learned call an analogue.

—2. A beast is a beast because its desires carry it along to do what it does . . . A beast is a beast by this, that its understanding is under obedience to its will.

—3. Wherefore, they who think from the lusts of the will are likened to beasts, and also, in the Spiritual World, appear at a distance as beasts. They also act in the same way, with the sole difference, that they can act otherwise if they choose.

—4. In a word, the will and understanding with beasts always cling together, and as the will in itself is blind, for it is of heat and not of light, it makes the understanding blind too; hence a beast does not know and understand what it is doing; and yet it acts, for it acts from influx out of the Spiritual World, and such action is instinct.

—5. It is believed that a beast thinks from the understanding what it does. Not one whit; it is carried into action solely from the natural love which is in it from creation, with the aid of the sense of its body.

—6. The reason beasts act according to the laws of order inscribed on their nature, and some of them, as it were morally and rationally . . . is that their understanding is blind obedience to the desires of their will; consequently, they cannot pervert these things by means of perverse reasonings, as men can. . . By the will and understanding of beasts is meant an analogue and image of these [faculties].

—8. Hence it is evident, how greatly they are deluded, who believe that beasts enjoy rationality, and only differ from men in their outward shape, and in not being able to utter the rational things they have stored up within them; from which they conclude . . . that if a man lives after death, a beast will also do so; and that if a beast does not live after death, neither will a man do so . . .

T. 13^e. (Such) not only believe themselves to be like beasts, but also become like them. Des.

34². If he then closes the highest natural degree . . . he becomes, as to love, like a beast of the earth ; but if he closes the middle natural degree . . . he becomes, as to love, like a fox, and as to understanding, like a bird of evening ; but if he also closes the ultimate natural degree as to its Spiritual, he becomes, as to love, like a wild beast, and as to the understanding of truth like a fish.

64^e. There is such a presence before both the intellectual and the bodily sight of man, because his spirit sees through his eyes ; but no beast has it, because they have not any spiritual sight.

69. In proportion as (the human mind) is carried down into the lower degrees, it is carried into the foolish light of Hell, and is not a man, but a beast . . . A beast therefore stands on its feet in a position parallel with the earth, and looks thither with its whole countenance, nor can it without difficulty raise it up to heaven.

160⁷. Although these men are styled Christians, they are neither men, nor beasts, but men beasts . . .

328. The concupiscences of the flesh . . . separated from the . . . affections . . . of the spirit, are just like the concupiscences of beasts . . . Wherefore, in proportion as anyone indulges the concupiscences of the flesh, he is a beast and a wild beast.

335. They were disputing about connate ideas, as to whether men have any, as beasts have.

—². Suddenly an angelic Spirit stood in the midst of them, and, speaking with a loud voice, said, There are not any connate ideas with men, and neither are there any ideas with beasts . . .

—³. He said, (further), You believe that beasts have connate ideas, and this you infer from the fact, that their acts appear as if they were from thought, and yet they have not one whit of thought, and what is not from thought cannot be called ideas. Examps.

—⁶. I will tell you the source of a brute's acts. Every beast, bird, fish, reptile, and insect, has its own natural sensual and corporeal love, the seat of which is in its head, and the brains within. Through the brains the Spiritual World inflows immediately into the senses of their bodies, and, through these, determines their acts ; which is the reason why the senses of their bodies are far more exquisite than human ones. This influx out of the Spiritual World is what is called instinct, being so called, because it exists without the medium of thought. There are also some accessories of instinct derived from habit. Their love, however . . . is solely for the sake of nourishment and propagation ; and not for the sake of any knowledge, intelligence, or wisdom . . .

417. There are beasts which have faces like human ones ; but these beasts enjoy no faculty of understanding, or of doing anything from understanding ; but act from instinct, which is excited by their natural love. The difference is, that a beast sounds the affections of its love, but a man speaks them . . . ; also that a beast looks to the earth with its face bent down, but a man looks to the heavens with his face erect . . .

473. It appears as if beasts also possess created life in them, but this is a similar fallacy ; for they are organs created to receive light and heat from the natural world and from the Spiritual World at the same time ; for each species is a form of some natural love, and receives light and heat from the Spiritual World mediately through Heaven and Hell ; gentle beasts, through Heaven ; and fierce ones, through Hell. Man alone receives light and heat . . . immediately from the Lord. This is the difference.

478³. There is also freedom with beasts, birds, fishes, and insects, but these are carried along by the senses of their bodies, with excitation of appetite and pleasure . . . 491.

480. I say no more than a statue, and not than a beast, because the latter breathes from natural free-will ; but man, from free-will in natural, and at the same time, in spiritual things ; for man is not born as a beast is, a beast being born with all the ideas which are attendant upon its natural love, with such as belong to nourishment and procreation . . .

502^e. Without free-will, man could not be created, nor even a beast, bird, or fish ; but beasts are solely in natural free-will . . .

504⁷. Reciprocal conjunction with God causes man to be man, and not a beast.

564². He who becomes rational and moral from the world, and not also from Heaven . . . is inwardly a beast, nay, a wild beast . . .

566. As to the natural man, man is like a beast, he receives the image of a beast through the life ; wherefore, in the Spiritual World, beasts of every kind, which are correspondences, appear around such. For, regarded in itself, the Natural of man is merely animal, but because a Spiritual is superadded to it, it can become a man, and even if it does, not, from the capability of so doing, it can counterfeit a man, but still it is a beast speaking.

574. Regarded in himself, as to his nature, a natural man does not differ one whit from the nature of beasts ; he is similarly ferine ; that is to say, as to the will. But he differs from beasts as to the understanding ; this can be raised above the concupiscences of the will, and not only see, but also govern them. Hence it is that man can think from the understanding, and, from thought, speak ; which beasts cannot do . . .

588³. Unless the understanding could be perfected separately, and the will through it, man would not be man, but a beast . . .

612. Because, as to the interiors of his mind, man is born spiritual, differently from beasts . . .

760. That on this Earth there have been, in general, four Churches . . . may be evident from Daniel, where these four Churches are described by . . . 'the four beasts coming up out of the sea' (vii). 761.

D. 27 (Index). Evil Spirits are much more insane than beasts, because, by means of reason, they act against order.

39, 40 (Index). Man is lower than a beast ; of himself he does not know the laws of order and of society, but learns them, and seizes upon falsities as truths, differently from beasts; wherefore he has to be regenerated.

167 (Index). Beasts are ruled by a general life flowing forth from the order of the activities of Spirits and Angels, consequently by influx; but every man is ruled through Spirits.

413. There are three kinds of men and of Souls. The first kind, which are the most numerous and common, are like wild beasts, that is, contrary to order. The second kind are indeed in agreement with order . . . but only from a certain lower source; they still look downwards, like the beasts of the earth; they can do works, as it were, of charity, yet have regard to worldly things; thus they are those who are not of the faith in God Messiah; gentiles of a good nature may be referred to these . . . The third kind are heavenly . . .

640^e. They are among the stars of the dragon, and should rather be called the Babylonish beast, treated of in the Apocalypse.

1269. (This spirit) was of such a character, that all the reasons which were advanced were of not the slightest avail; they did not enter into his perception, but were as nothing. Perceiving this, I perceived that he was not like a man . . . but like a beast.

1914. When those who are in Heaven perceive in the ideas of anyone what is undelightful, shocking, wicked, it is at once perceived by either a spiritual representation, or a spiritual idea; when, by a continuous spiritual representation, there is then formed therefrom, in the Spiritual World, some species of beast, wild beast, or insect, with its appropriate form, colour, size, entirely according to the representative idea which thus falls into the World of Spirits.

2209 (Index). Beasts know the way in a marvellous manner . . . and if man were in order, he would know greater things than these.

2376-2379 (Index). Man cannot live without Spirits, because he lives contrary to order; it is otherwise with beasts, all of which live according to the order of nature.

2543. The body . . . is nothing, for every beast and wild beast, nay, every small insect, has a more skilfully formed and perfect body than man, more perfect organs of smell, taste, sight, etc. Des.

2674. They can reason, and understand what is true and good, which is given to man above beasts . . .

2675. Qui sodomiae peccatores sunt, have believed . . . that they are just like beasts, and would so die, wherefore they have nothing intellectual, although they can reason. In the other life they are treated most miserably . . .

3550. They who rose up through the right foot were such as the lowest of the common people, who pass their time in the forests, hardly otherwise than wild beasts—ferae bestiae; and they would be beasts, if they were not endowed with the capability of thinking, by which alone they are distinguished from wild beasts. But those who ascended through the left foot, so cold, were also from the same sort of the lowest people, who had entirely denied the life after death, and believed that they were as beasts, and would so die . . .

3818. What the difference is between beasts and men. Gen.art.

— Whatever beasts do is natural, because their ends are terminated in natural things. It appears as if beasts derive something also from what is spiritual and celestial . . . but it is not so.

3819. Beasts are not skilled in the arts and sciences . . . still they are in them, in fact, in their deepest secrets; and from nature they know much more than man, by means of all his arts and sciences. (Spiders, bees, etc.) These are the scientifics which brutes know . . . Wherefore sciences and things of art are such things as man has in common with beasts . . . 4059, Ex.

3820. But it is the prerogative of man over beasts, to be able to think, and to view those things which are higher or more interior . . . which beasts cannot do . . . If man's ends do not have regard to those things which are of spiritual and celestial life . . . he can have no other life than that which a beast has, for the ends show the quality of the life . . . Wherefore unless the Lord took pity on them, and gave them the capability of understanding, they would be dissipated as the brutes are.

4705 (Index). Beasts in the Spiritual World are appearances from the thoughts which proceed from the reigning love.

5589^e. Speech, with men, is discrete and articulate, because they are intellectual; with beasts it is continuous. Ex.

E. 152^e. With beasts also, their interior life, which is also called their soul, exercises sensation in the same way through the external organs of the body; but with this difference, that it does not do so rationally, as with man, thus not from such an understanding and will as those of man.

1751^d. 'The beasts of the field which brought forth under the branches' (Ezek.xxxi.6) = affections of good. 1100^e.

3041^o. By 'beasts and birds' (Jer.xii.4) are signified affections of good and of truth.

3161^s. By 'the beast coming up out of the sea' (Dan.vii.) is signified self-love . . . here, the love of exercising command over Heaven and earth . . .

3291ⁱ. 'To make a covenant with the beast of the field, and with the bird of the heavens' (Hos.ii.8) = with affections of good, and with spiritual truths . . . 357³⁰.

386^o. 'To cut off man and beast' (Ezek.xiv.21) = all spiritual and natural affection. 388²⁰.

388²². In various places in the Word, 'wild beast' and 'beast' are mentioned together; by 'wild beast' is signified affection of truth; and by 'beast,' affection of good.

—³¹. When 'wild beast' and 'beast' are both mentioned . . . by 'wild beast' is signified the affection, or love, of falsity; and by 'beast,' the affection, or love, of evil; or, in the opposite sense, by 'wild beast,' the affection, or love, of truth; and by 'beast,' the affection, or love, of good. But when 'wild beast' only is mentioned, or 'beast' only, by 'wild beast' is meant affection of both falsity and evil; and, in the opposite sense, affection of both truth and good; but by 'beast,' affection of evil and consequently of falsity; and, in the opposite sense, affection of good and consequently of truth.

[E.] 403⁷. By 'beasts of the field' (Joel ii. 22) are not meant the beasts of the field, but affections of good in the natural man; hence, those with whom these affections are. 405²⁰.

418³. By the 'four beasts' (Dan. vii.) are signified evils of every kind.

433²⁵. 'To sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of men, and the seed of beast' (Jer. xxxi. 27) = to reform those who are of the new Church by means of the truths and goods which are of intelligence and affection... 'beast' = the good of affection.

503⁴. By 'beast,' and 'flocks-pecora,' (Ps. lxxviii. 48) are signified evil affections, or cupidities, originating from evil love.

507⁷. By 'beast,' in the Word, is signified affection of the natural man, and which has scientific truth for its food and nourishment.

513³. By 'the beast of the earth,' or 'of the field,' is meant the Voluntary of man; by 'the bird of the heaven,' his Intellectual; and by 'the fish of the sea,' his Scientific. III.

552. All the affections and derivative thoughts of man are represented in the Spiritual World by various beasts of the earth, and birds; and are presented to view in corresponding forms; and the beasts, there, which are represented according to the affections of the Spirits from whom they are, appear similar to the beasts in our world; but sometimes, with successive change and variety, approaching to forms made up from other beasts; besides their being clothed and decorated with various insignia...

556⁵. By 'the beast out of the sea' (Dan. vii.), is meant the love of dominion, which holy things are made to serve as means; and by the 'four beasts' are signified its successive increases. Ex. 650⁶⁸. 697⁵.

584⁴. By 'the plague of every beast' (Zech. xiv. 15) is signified the loss of every affection of good.

587¹⁷. As... without the Spiritual, man is not man, he was driven out from man, and 'became as a beast' (Dan. v. 21).

—¹⁹. The reason that idolatrous nations adored the images... of various beasts, birds, and reptiles, was that they knew from the ancients that they signified celestial and spiritual things; as that beasts signified affections; birds, thoughts therefrom; reptiles and fishes, the same in the sensual natural man.

610⁴. By the 'fourth beast' (Dan. vii. 25) is meant the evil which was about to fully vastate the Church...

617²³. As beasts signify affections; some good, and others, evil affections... some beasts were to be eaten, and others were not to be eaten. Ex.

629⁶. By 'men and beasts' (Zech. ii. 4) are meant those who are in intelligence, and in the good of life thence derived... By 'beasts' are meant those who are in the natural affection of good, and thence in the good of life.

650. 'The beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war with them' (Rev. xi. 7) = an assault by infernal love. 'Beast' = the affection of the natural man in both senses. Fully III.

—³. It is self-love which is here specifically meant by 'the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit.'

—⁴. The reason natural affections are signified by 'beasts,' is that these affections are exactly like the affections of beasts; consequently, the man who does not become imbued with spiritual affections through the goods and truths of Heaven, differs but little from beasts; for to man, above beasts, there is superadded the faculty of spiritually thinking and thence of willing... But if this faculty is not vivified through Knowledges of truth and good, and afterwards, through faith, and the life of faith, he is no better than beasts, except merely that he is able to think and speak from this higher faculty.

—⁵. As the natural affections of man are signified by beasts, when these affections are presented to view in the Spiritual World in a corresponding form of animals, they appear exactly in the forms of various beasts, as lambs, sheep, goats, kids, he-goats, bullocks, oxen, cows; and also as camels, horses, mules, asses; and again as bears, tigers, leopards, lions, besides dogs, and serpents of many kinds. But such are only appearances of affections which appertain to Spirits. When they appear, it is also known there, not only that they are from this source, but also from what Spirits. Moreover, as soon as the affections cease in them, so do the appearances.

—⁶. By 'the beasts of the fields' (Ps. viii. 7) are signified affections of the natural man. 1100⁴.

—⁹. A careful distinction is made in the Word between 'beasts' and 'wild beasts;' and by 'beasts' are signified the affections of the natural man which are of his will; and by 'wild beasts,' the affections of the natural man which are of his understanding.

—¹⁰. 'Jehovah maketh grass to germinate for the beast, and herb for the ministry of man' (Ps. civ. 14) = the instruction and nourishment of the natural and the spiritual man by means of truths from the Word... By 'grass' is signified the truth of the natural man, which is scientific truth; by 'the beast,' the affection of it which wills to be instructed and spiritually nourished.

—¹¹. That then every good affection of the natural man will remain with them, is signified by 'their beast not decreasing' (Ps. cvii. 38).

—¹². 'Praise Jehovah, whales and all deeps, wild beasts and every beast, the reptile, and every bird of wing' (Ps. cxlviii. 7, 10)... 'Wild beasts,' and 'beasts' = the affections of the natural man, both those which are of his understanding, and those which are of his will. 1100².

—¹³. 'Jehovah... Who giveth to the beast its food' (Ps. cxlvii. 9)... By 'the beasts' are signified the affections of the natural man, which long to be nourished (by Knowledges from the Word).

—¹⁵. 'Thou preservest man and beast, O Jehovah' (Ps. xxxvi. 6). By 'man and beast' are signified the interior affection which is spiritual, whence comes intelligence, and the exterior affection, which is natural, whence comes knowledge corresponding to intelligence.

—¹⁶. Like things are signified by 'man and beast' in the following passages. (Fully Ill.) In these passages, by 'man and beast' are signified the Interior, or Spiritual, and the Exterior, or Natural; thus by 'man,' the spiritual affection of truth from which comes all intelligence; and by 'beast,' natural affection corresponding to spiritual. The reason the Exterior, or Natural, is signified by 'beast,' is that as to his external or natural man, man is nothing but a beast, for he enjoys like cupidities, pleasures, appetites and senses; so that, as to these things, man is just like a beast, wherefore the natural man may be called the animal man . . .

—¹⁸. As the spiritual and the natural man are signified by 'man and beast,' it is recorded in the history of the Creation, in Genesis, that the beasts and man were created on the same, that is, the sixth day, and afterwards that to man was given dominion over the beasts . . .

—¹⁹. '(Adam) gave names to every beast, and to the bird of the heavens, and to every wild beast of the field' (Gen.ii.19). 'To give a name,' in the spiritual sense, = to know the quality of a thing; thus here, what were the qualities of all the affections, cupidities, pleasures, appetites, as well as of the thoughts and inclinations, of the natural man; and how they might be in agreement and correspondence with the affections and perceptions of the spiritual man . . .
